The crew live between decks. They are divided into messes of about twelve men each, and, by contributing a small sum out of their monthly pay, are enabled to purchase a few delicacies to add to their Government rations of salt beef or pork, with fresh beef twice a week; potatoes, flour, pilot-bread, salt, pepper, molasses, vinegar, butter, coffee and tea. On Sunday morning the crew are called to "quarters" for general inspection of person and clothing, and those who wish may attend the church services afterward. Saturdays, after the general work is done, are semi-holidays, when the men lounge about, mend their clothing, read, and otherwise pass away the time. The pay of the crew ranges from nine dollars and fifty cents for apprentice boys to twenty-six dollars per month for an "able-bodied seaman. The petty officers receive higher rates of pay. The sailors are permitted to draw monthly money, but a larger proportion of their pay is retained until the expiration of the term of enlistment.—N. Y. Evening Post.

Horace Greeley's Farm.

After the death of Horace Greeley it was intended that his farm at Chappaqua should be sold and the proceeds divided between his daughter, Gabrielle and Ida, the latter of whom was the wife of Colonel Nicholas Smith. For some reason this was not done, and when Mrs. Smith died, more than a year ago, the farm was still unsold. Colonel Smith, who had lived on the farm after Mr. Greeley's death, removed to Shelbyville, Kentucky, with his three children, and the farm was rented in part.

Miss Gabrielle M. Greeley recently brought a friendly suit for the sale of the farm, and it was ordered to be sold. The time of sale was fixed for yesterday noon in front of the post-office on Main street, Chappaqua. The post-office consists of a little shed jutting out on the end of a piazza which runs along the front of a country feed store. It is set with small glass panes bearing the numbers of the letter-boxes, so that a person driving past can see if he has letters without alighting.

At noon about twenty of the villagers, farmers and storekeepers who chanced to be in the neighborhood gathered on the stoop and retailed old stories about Mr. Greeley. A few hundred yards down the road could be seen the gate of the Greeley farm, and immediately in front of the post-office was the swamp on which Mr. Greeley expended so much money in his effort to convert it into good ground. Presently the auctioneer, John A. Haight, appeared. He owns a pickle factory in the town, and is an old resident. He is a small man, with a florid complexion and stiff gray moustache and hair. No one came up on the trains from the city except reporters.

Soon after twelve o'clock Miss Greeley drove up alone in a top buggy, with a spirited bay horse. Miss Greeley was dressed in deep mourning for her sister. Her brown hair was brushed down plainly over her forehead, and the healthful color in her cheeks showed how well her stay for several weeks past had agreed with her. At her feet was a large bunch of brightly colored leaves. She reined up the horse opposite to the auctioneer, and spoke to her lawyer, Mr. Porter.

Auctioneer Haight stood on the highest of the three steps of the stoop and said the sale would begin. A dozen urchins deserted their play and stood near his feet. Mr. Haight read the long legal description of the property, which said that the farm consisted of about seventy-seven acres, orchard, meadow and woodland.

"What am I offered for the property?

Miss Greeley leaned out of the side of the buggy toward the auctioneer, and said in a clear, musical voice: "Ten thousand dollars."

"Thank you," said Mr. Haight.

"That settles it," said half a dozen voices: "no one will bid against her."

No one did bid. The auctioneer pleaded for $500 advance, $200, $100, $50 and $25, but no one made a sign. He dilated on the value of the farm, said it was going dirt cheap, and called on the bystanders by name to bid higher, but there was no response. Then he took a short recess, and again offered the property.

"I will take $10 advance," he said, who will bid $10,100. Wont you, Dr.—?"

The Doctor addressed examined his pockets in a spirit of humor and declined to bid.

"Ten thousand dollars once; fair warning. Ten thousand dollars twice. Ten thousand dollars third and last time. Gone. Sold to Gabrielle M. Greeley for $10,000."

Miss Greeley smiled pleasantly, and said she was glad, as she did not want the old farm to go out of the family. She had no plans regarding it just at present, but would put it in repair and probably move there next year.

There are two houses on the farm, one near the gate and the other on the hill. The latter is unoccupied.—N. Y. Sun.

The Prodigal.

Yesterday forenoon a way-worn looking man, having a shirt or two tied up in a ragged handkerchief, made his way up Fort street east. Some folks could have seen from his general air that while he knew exactly where he was going, he couldn't tell within forty rods of what his reception would be. He walked like a man who doubted, and he looked around him like one who felt anxious. He finally turned in and mounted the steps of a modest house, and his knock at the door was finally answered. The door was pulled open about an inch, and a shrill voice exclaimed:

"Go away from here."

"I'll never do it!" answered the man.

The door was closed with a bang, but he stood right there and kept his eyes on the knob. After three or four minutes it was opened again and a voice cried out:

"Go away or I'll call the police!"

"I'll never go away from my darling!"

"Who's your darling?

"You are!"

The door banged again. The man was prepared for it, and he maintained his place for full five minutes without becoming discouraged. At last it opened and a voice piped out:

"You have been gone two months!"

"Exactly, my darling."

"And you didn't send me a single cent!"

"How could I when I never struck a job? Darling, I've returned to thee."

"Go away—I've got a divorce!"

"Oh, but I know better! Darling, bid your long-absent husband welcome home."

"Never!" and bang went the door.

This time he coolly sat down and began to whistle. She went to an upper window and looked down upon him, and finally returned to the door and carefully opened it and said:

"You deserted me for two whole months, and I had to take in boarders! Go away! I've no further use for you!"

"Katie, do you mean it?"

"Y-yes."

"Then it only remains for me to die. I'll hang myself with that piece of rope to this tree. Katie, darling, good-bye!"

She banged the door and he proceeded to affix a piece of clothes line to a limb and make ready the fatal noose. He had everything nicely arranged when she suddenly rushed out with:

"And it's more trouble you'd make for your poor, weak wife, is it?" and she fell upon him and flung him over a bush and jammed him into a flower bed and shoved him into the house with the remark:

"The prodigal has returned, but all the fatted calf he gets will be laid on with a club."—Detroit Free Press.

—The true American poet, who has been looked for so long, has arrived, and her abode—during the fashionable season—is at Newport. She has written many tender and touching things, and one has become extremely popular among the New York dudes. It commences:

Pretty lips, sweeter than cherry or plum,
Always look smiling and never look glum,
Seem to say
Come away,
Kissy, come! come!
N'yum, n'yum, n'yum,
N'yum, n'yum n'yum.

Although the tone is somewhat fleshy, the logic is irresistible, and the poem will go thundering down the ages as one of which the nation may be proud.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

A Kitten's Perplexity.

A pet kitten, owned by some children in a house on North Green Street, came to grief yesterday, very much after the manner of the legendary dog, which seeing the reflection of itself and the bone which it carried in a brook, dropped and lost the actual in a greedy effort to secure the possession of an imaginary morsel. It was the proverbial curiosity of the cat added to an unusual belligerence that sealed the downfall of the kitten in question. Its owners had been playing with it, and to elude one of them the kitten jumped up on a dresser, opposite to which was a large mirror. Its own image was reflected, seeing which it manifested great delight at meeting what it doubtless supposed to be an actual member of its own species and not merely a representation. Purring softly, it stood for a moment looking intently at the shadow. Then, as if pleased with the appearance of a new-found brother, and desirous of entering upon more intimate relations, it strutted about, seemingly trying by various maneuvres to attract the greater attention to points upon which in its superlative vanity it considered nearest to feline perfection. Noticing that its supposititious acquaintance conducted itself in a similar manner, the kitten must have come to the conclusion that the desired friendship might be established without difficulty, for at this juncture it advanced with a kind of I-know-I'm-handsome-but-I-can't-help-it way, and tried to rub the side of its head against its comrade. The contact with the glass had instantly a marked effect. The kitten sprang back quickly, arched its back, raised its tail stiffly, extended its claws, and emitted a long-drawn howl expressive of astonishment, fear, wounded vanity, contempt and anger. But after watching the mirror closely it became convinced that its mythical opponent was a timid, unmartial creature, deserving of castigation for conducting itself so cowardly. As confidence in its own prowess increased and its fear diminished, it was not long in making an attack. Hissing savagely, it raised its paw and struck at the head in the glass. Again it showed astonishment. It glared at the mirror and mewed; then gyrated around as if uncertain as to the future. Finally it sprang from the dresser with both front feet extended and mouth open, and struck squarely in the head its reflection in the glass.

This last abortive effort at battle was more than the kitten's spirit could stand, and thoroughly frightened at the strangeness of its reception and hopeless of ultimate success, it hung its head, lowered its tail, and, trembling in every limb, withdrew from the room. Ten minutes later the dainty kitten, for which the softest bed had been scarce soft enough, was found crouching tremulously in the coal bin, its fur ruffled and blackened and its beauty spoiled. When brought into the room containing the mirror, it repeatedly ran out as fast as its legs could carry it, never once looking at the glass, but showing in every motion its extreme terror. It refused to be carressed by the children with whom it formerly played, and exhibited an inclination for repose in the quietude and gloom in cellar corners. Late in the afternoon it timidly walked of its own accord up to the dresser and peered sadly into the glass, then slowly turned and left the room, once again seeking the solitude of the cellar. During the remainder of the day it kept away from the living rooms of the house, and when taken its usual meal of bread and milk it left the dish untasted. The shock to the kitten has had altogether such bad effects that its little playmates manifest much concern lest its queerness be the precursor of its death, and additional testimony thus be given of the plausible proposition that curiosity killed a cat.—Chicago Times.

Rag Weed.

Rag-weed is one of the most abundant weeds. It springs up in every stubble field and fallow and covers acres of meadows and roadsides. It is a very bad weed. When it gets into the hay or is eaten by the cattle it makes the milk bitter and spoils the butter. Moreover, it is now said to cause hay fever by its dusty acrid pollen. This, however, does not so much concern farmers because they have not time to have hay fever, at least of this kind, and cannot stop even to sneeze in this busy season. But this weed is no doubt pernicious to cattle and causes disease and death more frequently than is supposed. It is strongly aromatic and very indigestible and astringent. When eaten largely it has the effect of packing the stomach with dry, undigested matter, and of poisoning the blood. The disease thus produced is commonly called dry murrain and is a fatal disorder. It is quite prevalent just now, and always in those places where good herbage is scarce and this and other coarse weeds are abundant, and at the same time water is bad or fails altogether, and cattle suffer from thirst, which is made intense by this dry, woody acrid weed. The remedy is simple to speak of, but unfortunately difficult to put in practice. It is to have no rag-weed; or, indeed, any others in the fields. But while this is impossible to carry into effect at once, it is by no means impossible to begin to do it. And no farmer should need to be instructed how this should be done. It is an annual weed, and if mowed down or plowed under before it seeds there is an end of it so far. If this course is pursued in time there will be an end of it altogether. It is curious that so disagreeable a weed should be called ambrosia, which means "food for the gods," or it may reflect somewhat upon the "gods," whose sometimes disagreeable characters might be accounted for if they had nothing better than rag-weed to feed upon.—N. Y. Tribune.

—The Boston Star says: "The bigger a newspaper is, the more bustle there is about it." What it means is, the bigger a bustle is the more newspaper there is about it.—Rochester Post-Express.

—The affections are like lightning, you can not tell where they will strike till they have fallen.—Chicago Journal.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

—The silk manufacturers of Paterson, N. J., declare they will soon be able to rival Lyons in that industry.—Newark Register.

—The New York & New England Railroad has a contrivance which successfully uses up the smoke and cinders of the locomotive.—Boston Post.

—It is now thoroughly demonstrated that flowing wells, large enough to bring under cultivation thousands of acres of land, can be had at a cost within the reach of all in Salt Lake Valley.—Denver Tribune.

—In a paper read before the Academy of Science, at Paris, M. Peyrusson has demonstrated very clearly that germs of typhoid fever, cholera, and other contagious diseases may be preserved and communicated by the slightest crack in china or crockery tableware.

An Albany firm have utilized tin scraps. They make wrought plate dovetails for stove legs, and utilize from six to eight tons of scraps every month for this purpose. The articles made are small pieces of tin of peculiar shape, which are used by stove-menders to make a perfect dovetail on stove bottoms.—Albany (N. Y.) Journal.

—A rose farm is a new Georgia industry. Two gardeners in the vicinity of Savannah planted three acres in rose trees. This year they sold 22,000 trees to parties in the North, and had orders for 50,000 which they could not fill. The trees meet with a ready sale at from $10 to $20 per 100. Over half a million trees are annually imported into this country from France, England and Holland, and the Savannah News says it has been demonstrated that Georgia has a better climate for the cultivation of rose trees than that of the South of France.

—A French physician has been making some interesting experiments on the effect of condiments used with food. They show, among other things, that in cooking meat only an ounce of salt should be used with from six to twelve pounds of meat. If more is employed it will do one or two things: it will modify the structure of a portion of the muscular fibre so as to render it more resistant to the action of the gastric juice, or it will itself check and retard the peptic fermentation, the very groundwork of digestion. It follows that salted and smoked meats are more indigestible than fresh.

—Charles R. King, of Hartford, Conn., may be said to be the most multifarious tradesman in the State of Connecticut, having mastered no less than twenty-two distinct trades, and being, what is still more strange, a first-class workman in every one of them. He is not yet seventy years old, and is vigorous and hale and able to do a man's work any day. Here are the vocations he has learned: Blacksmith, house carpenter, cabinet-maker, ship-joiner, ship-carpenter, glass cutting and grinding, shoe-making, harness-making, wheelwright, wood machinist, mathematical instrument making, wood-carving, pattern-making, clock-making, cooper, carriage maker, gardener and florist, molder, patent-office model-maker, plumbing and locksmith.—New Haven Register.

PITH AND POINT.

—Official reports state that the British census embraces 17,000,000 women. Who wouldn't be a census.—Chicago Tribune.

—"Is that gentleman a friend of yours," asked a newly-introduced lady of another at a reception. "Oh, no, he's my husband," was the innocent reply.—Merchant Traveler.

—"Misfortunes never come singly." They couldn't. It would be singular if they could. One misfortune might, but Lindley Murray forbids the plural number from acting that way.—Golden Days.

—So many people are dying in all parts of the country just now, at the advanced age of 105 years, that a man under eighty-five feels kind of bashful about going into a barber shop.—Burlington Hawkeye.

—Longfellow said: "In this world a man must be either anvil or hammer." Longfellow was wrong, however. Lots of men are neither the active hammer nor the sturdy anvil. They are nothing but bellows.—Boston Post.

—Of the rich newspaper men James Gordon Bennett runs two yachts and four-in-hands; Robert Bonner is the owner of one hundred and seventy horses: Charles A. Dana keeps a Pullman parlor-car, while we are putting in a foundation for a barn.—Marlboro' Times.

—It was a happy thought on the part of our Government to purchase the Yellowstone country and convert it into a national park. It belongs to all the people of the United States, the poor as well as the rich, and all it costs for a man living inside of civilization to go there and return is a thousand dollars or two—and perhaps his scalp.—Norristown Herald.

—"Is this train to stop at Neponset?" a passenger asked a conductor of the Old Colony Road the other forenoon. "No, sir," was the reply; "no stops between South Braintree and Boston." "Why, how's that?" said the surprised inquirer; "you used to stop there; you did the last time I came up." The conductor was puzzled. "Guess you are wrong," he said, "but when was that time?" "Well," replied his passenger, "I can't say exactly." And after a moment's thought, he continued: "It was when I built my barn some time during the war."—Boston Transcript.

—"James!" he began, as he called the clerk into the private office, "your conduct is such that I can no longer retain you in my employ. You do not hesitate to lie and cheat, and you are drunk at least twice a week." "All right," responded the clerk. "I got news yesterday of a legacy of $75,000, and I guess I wont go to the poor-house." "Seventy-five thousand dollars!" "To a cent." "Cash money?" "All cash." "Then I'll sell you a partnership interest in the business, and we'll make things hum! Ha! Let me congratulate you! Just such a partner as I'd pick among a thousand!"—Wall Street News.

TRUNKS VALISES, AND SATCHELS.

We offer to our patrons a stock of over 200 Trunks and as many Satchels, Companions and Valises. We offer Trunks from 75c to $8 each; Satchels and Valises from the cheapest Goods up to extra Leather, price all the way from 60c to $5.

16—ZINC—Barrel top, tray with bonnet box parasol box and lid, partition in top, full length strips with clamps, iron center band broad iron bands at each end, hasp lock and patent fastenings, wrought iron rollers, stitched handles. A good trunk.

28 inch 4 50 · 34 inch 6 00 · 30 inch 5 00
36 inch 6 50 · 32 inch 5 50

LADIES' BLACK RUBBER SATCHELS.

Jap, frame, top lock, outside pocket, square

9 inch 60 · 12 inch 75 · 10 inch 65
11 inch 80 · 13 inch 85

Better Grade, Ladies' Black Rubber Satchel.

9 inch 75 · 12 inch 00 · 10 inch 80
11 inch 1 00 · 13 inch 85

BLACK GRAIN LEATHER LADY'S SATCHEL.

Jap, frame nickle top lock, centennial linning, outside pocket, square ends, nickle name plate, full nickle trimmed.

9 inch	1 40	12 inch	2 15
10 inch	1 65	13 inch	2 40
11 inch	1 90	14 inch	2 65

GENT'S RUBBER VALISES.

Full imitation leather, strong lock, two catches on ends, lined, with partition, name plate, and eight bumpers on bottom.

14 inch 86 · 20 inch 1 10 · 16 inch 00
22 inch 1 20 · 18 inch 1 00

Black Leather Valise, Soft bag with straps all double jad, frame, good lock, linen lined. From a $1 75 to $2 50. ☞ We have many other kinds, but have not space to describe them.

Good substantial Wood Trunks with strong locks, two straps, strong hand holds on each end, cast iron rollers, full tray and [illegible] back stays:

22 inch	75	30 inch	1 75
24 inch	1 00	32 inch	2 00
26 inch	1 25	34 inch	2 25
28 inch	1 50	36 inch	2 50

LADIES' round top, iron bound, long hard wood strips, spring lock, patent fastening wrought iron rollers, iron stay, deep setup tray, reaching to the top, with bonnet box.

28 inch	1 85	32 inch	2 35
30 inch	2 10	34 inch	2 60

ZINC—Barrel top, wide iron band at each end, iron stay, wrought iron rollers, long strips with clamps, tray with bonnet box and lid, fall-in top, hasp lock and patent fastening, jap ends.

28 inch	3 50	32 inch	4 30
32 inch	3 90	34 inch	4 70

Above picture of Trunks is same as foregoing, only in wood, at 75c less than the zinc, making 28 inch at $2 75, and so on.

ZINC—Raised top, set-up tray, with covered till at each end, wide iron bands, jap ends, long strips with clamps, wrought iron rollers, spring lock, patent fastening, and iron stay,

28 inch	2 75	32 inch	3 35
30 inch	3 05	34 inch	3 66

Boots and Shoes

Every person buying Boots and Shoes should

SEE OUR STOCK

Before parting with their money, as we claim that we can sell the Best and Solidest goods for the LEAST MONEY.

As we don't have to depend on Boots and Shoes alone for our support, and can naturally sell Solid Boots and Shoes at Less Money than regular Shoe dealers, especially when

BUYING A BILL OF OTHER goods. In order to Sell Farmers Their Entire Bill of Goods

We frequently put in their Boots and Shoes at about

WHOLESALE PRICE.

No. 202.

BOYS' & CHILDREN'S Overcoats

Style of the above cut, of Dark Gray Overcoating, fully four-fifths wool, for age 4 to 8, at $2 50 each; for age 9 to 12, $3 each; for age 13 to 17, $3 50 each; men's at $4 each.

Boys' Suits of same material, age 4 to 8, just Pants and Coat, at $2 75; age 9 to 12, long Pants, Coat & Vest, at $3 75; age 13 to 17, at $4 75.

We have a full line of Boys', Children's and Youths' Suits, from the best material down to the cheapest material made.

Parties buying Clothing of us will be told precisely what kind of goods they are buying, as we regard it to our interest to do so

No. 175.

The above cut, No. 175, represents the style and pattern of our Business Suits,

In various grades and materials, ranging in price from $6 50 to $8 per Suit. Also have same style and cut in our Fine English Worsted Suits, at $11 to $13 We are Turning Out Thousands of Full Suits.

And making every effort to get goods that will Suit Our Customers in both PTICE AND MATERIAL.

No. 174.

The above, No. 174, is our Elegant

DOUBLE-BREASTED SUIT,

In Black Worsted, with Elegant Binding and Spring Bottom Pants, equal to any Custom Tailor Work, and fine Farmer's Satin Lining Sewed and stiched with silk. It has been an excellent seller, and no custom-made suit will make any Better Appearance

And none are of better workmanship.

Price, $14.

Having over Three Thousand Full Suits in our stock, at Any Price and Grade up to $22 a Suit.

No. 196.

This cut (No. 196) represents our

REVERSIBLE OVERCOATS,

That we challenge the world to beat, It is a lot of sixty-three coats that we purchased of a Rochester, New York Clothing manufacturer at just 65 cts. on the dollar. This is a Brown-mix Cassimere on one side, and a Fancy Plaid on the other. It would be cheap at $10, but, as a rule, in order to increase our trade, we have put the price on this cut at $6. And we have the same cut and style Reversible Coat at $8 and up to $15. We offer one lot of Chinsilla Overcoats at $4; next lot, better garde, at $5, which Beats any Pice Ever Named on Oercoats.

We have over One Thousand Overcoats, ranging in price from $3 25 up to $16.

Just received 10 bales, over 200 bolts of Standard Sheeting, Special Bargains. Heavy Sheeting; at 8c by the bolt, 1-2c. less. One bale fine Sheeting at 6 1-4c, actually worth 8 cents. One lot of coarse Sheeting at 6c. Lighter Muslin in same proportion.

Parties buying Fall Goods can not fail to visit our Mammoth stock of all kinds of goods. We have a house of over 16,000 Square Feet of Floor, packed and jammed with all kinds and grades of Goods, from the finest to the ordinary. See future Price and Adver't

COLTER'S Mammoth Cheap Cash Store, Rising Sun, Ind.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL, Proprietors.

BURLINGTON, KY. OCT. 17 1883.

ADVERTISING RATES.

1 Column	1 year	$80
1 "	½ "	40
1 "	¼ "	20
½ "	1 "	20
½ "	½ "	10
½ "	¼ "	6

For announcing candidates, $5. Obituary poetry, 5 cents per line. Obituary notices 20 lines free; over that number (excepting the announcement of the death) 3 cents per line.

Tributes of respect from lodges, &c., $1 50

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One year	$1 50
Six months	75
Three months	40

IT begins to look as though there are a few Democrats in Ohio.

THERE are now several empty barrels in Ohio.

IT is Hoadley's time for a boom for the Presidency.

IT begins look as though the Democrats are approaching the White House, and they must be careful to make no skip or breaks.

WE give it up. Ohio deceived us along with thousands of others, and will only be too glad to have her do the same thing again next fall.

THE Enquirer is boasting about being vindicated by the result of the election in Hamilton county, while the News Journal boasts of the rebuke given it by the same election. Those two journals extract consolation from the same result. There's nothing like being able to make the best of results.

THE American Bankers Association in session in Louisville last week resolved that the interest of the country demands the speedy enactment by Congress of some regulation of commerce among the States, equivalent to a National Bankrupt law, equitable in its provisions for both debtor and creditor in all parts of the country. The association also demanded the suspension of the coining of the silver dollar.

CRAFT was hung at Grayson, Carter county, last Friday. A day or two before the execution he was baptized by immersion in the little Sandy river in the pesence of several hundred people. While at the water's edge he declared that he was innocent of the awful crime with which he was charged The execution was witnessed by an immense crowd, and the condemned man died protesting his innocence.

Mrs. Mary Lizzie Ryle, daughter of John J. Ryle, and wife of Wade H. Ryle, died at the family residence in this county, October 10, 1883. Sister Ryle was a kind and congenial companion, a gentle and loving mother, a good neighbor and a noble christian woman. She was 39 years of age, and had been a church member about 16 years. Her death was rather sudden and was heard with sadness by a large circle of friends. She left a father, husband, four children and many other relatives and friends to lament their loss: but their loss is her eternal gain. She rests from her labors and her works do follow her. Let her friends all emulate her virtues, copy her christian zeal, and strive to meet her in heaven where parting will be no more. E. N. D.

MISSOURI LETTER.

BUTLER, Mo., October 10, 1883.

To the Editors of the Recorder:

Pursuant to promise made to a number of friends left in old Boone, I will give a few items gathered by the way on our trip here, as well as speak of the present prospects of this part of the mundane sphere.

We left Lawrenceburg on the 8:20 train. Our first halt of any length was at Holden, Missouri, where we were entertained over night by Mr. Murray, son-in-law of Mrs. R. M. Johnson, who accompanied us that far, Holden being her home.

Aunt America Scott, who accompanied us to Holden, stood the trip remarkably well for one of her age. She intends making her home with her daughter, Mrs. Johnson.

In Holden we met Zack Baker and Tom I. Jonson.

We arrived in Butler on Thursday, and are stopping there for the present. Now, as to the present prospects of Bates county. In my short tours through the county since my arrival I find the agricultural production simply immense. The county has an enormous crop of corn, while the meadows are as spotted as a young fawn, with great stacks and ricks of hay, all of which leads us to the conclusion that the outlook for those who desire engaging in the live stock business is extremely flattering and entirely satisfactory. As to the future prospects of Bates county, we refer you to the Bates County Democrat of the 11th, inst., in which appears a notice of "Butler's Boom." You can read the article and draw your own inference. I have subscribed for the Democrat and ordered it to your address, so you may know what progress we are making in the next twelve months.

We are all well, and the health of the community is good.

WILLIAM WALTON.

[We are under many obligations to our friend for his kindness, and upon examination of the Democrat, we return the following verdict: The people of Bates county are an enterprising people; that the county is necessarily very prosperous, and the natural advantages claimed by the Democrat are very great, and will be fully developed at an early day.—EDS.]

THE last issue of the Rising Sun Recorder contains an article under the head of "Boone County," which starts out by saying:

"The citizens of Boone county are in a mild state of indignation in regard to the condition of the road funds applicable to this year's work."

It then proceeds to pay its respects to the collector. as well as the late grand jury, which it said showed a disposition to discipline the road supervisors till it found the fault was none of theirs, when the investigation was abandoned.

The writer says: "In regard to minor offenses against law and order the average grand juror displays a wonderful aptitude for investigation; but when it comes to official delinquencies like defalcation or other official crimes or misdemeanors, his evident admiration of such acts blots out their every appearance of evil."

The author is very much disatisfied with the results of the late grand jury, and according to his statements he is in possession of facts with which that body should have been acquainted. If offenses of which he complains have been committed, he should have gone before the grand jury and made his complaint.

A SALE of Kentucky mules amounting to $14,000 was made in Louisville a few days since. These animals were to be shipped to Central America, and will be the first mules ever seen there.

Subscribe for the RECORDER.

Doctors and Doctrines.

Whatever Cruel Creeds May Say, Truth is Always Orthodox.

"You know the old saying, Doctor, Ubi tres mediei, duo athei,—where there are three doctors there are two atheists," laughed Rev. Apollo Creamcheese, the other day, to his friend, Dr. Senna, who had dropped in for a bit of a talk.

"Yes, I've heard it, and I'll bet a box of pills against your dry inkstand that some priest said it. They always pattered bad Latin when they had a bigger lie than common to get rid of," answered the Doctor, lighting his pipe. "I tell you, Dominie you're 'way off when you think our profession isn't doing as good work in this world as yours is. They've both been more'n half barbarous for centuries, but we're several lengths ahead of you on the home-stretch."

"But, Doctor, said Rev. Mr. Creamcheese, "don't you think your fraternity shows a tendency to materialistic——?"

"Bah!" interrupted Dr. Senna, "we show a tendency to human charity and common sense. The fences are all down. Why, within the past week I've had a letter from my old friend, Dr. W. V. Haddox, of Pine Hill, Alabama, saying that he is using, with great success, PARKER'S TONIC, in his practice, and finds it the best thing for Coughs Lung, Kidney and Liver troubles, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, and so on, he ever struck; and another friend of mine, Dr. J. J. Oatman, of carrolltown, Pa., says substantially the same thing. He's a big specialist, too, in chronic diseases, and knows what he is talking about every time."

Dr. Senna's statement as to PARKER'S TONIC, are supported by genuine testimonials from Drs. Haddox and Oatman, who write to Messrs. Hiscox & Co., of New York—the proprietors—in terms of the highest commendation concerning this great restorative remedy; and letters from the profession generally confirm the opinion of these physicians. Price, 50 cents and $1 per bottle.

County Directory.

OFFICERS.

Assessor—G. M. Riley.
County Surveyor—W. E. Vest.
School Commissioner—D. M. Snyder.
Coroner.—Dr. A. A. Murat, Constance.

COURTS.

CIRCUIT COURT meets the 2d Monday in April and first Monday in October, P. U. Major, Judge; W. L. Riddell, Clerk A. G. DeJarnette, Commonwealths Attorney; W. L. Riddell, Trustee Jury Fund.

COUNTY COURT meets the first Monday in every month. L. H. Dills, Judge; S. W. Tolin, County Attorney. M. T. Garnett, Clerk; J. R. Clutterbuck, Sheriff, T. W. Finch, Deputy Sheriff.

QUARTERLY COURT meets the first Monday in March, June, September and December. The officers of the County Court preside.

COURT OF CLAIMS meets the first Monday in November.

MAGISTRATES' COURTS are held in March, June, September and December, as follows:

Bellevue—M. B Green, first Saturday, and T. H. Sutton, third Monday. J. M. Moody, Constable.

Burlington—E. H. Baker, Thursday after first Monday, and Oscar Gaines, fourth Monday. R. H. Sandford, Constable.

Carlton A. G. McConnell, Wednesday after second Monday, and B. B. Ryle, Saturday after third Monday. Constable.

Petersburg—Jos. Hensley, Wednesday after first Monday, and L. A. Loder fourth Saturday. Geo. Comer, Constable.

Union—M. C. Norman, Thursday after third Monday, and H. Bannister, Thursday after second Monday. A. D. Riley, Constable.

Beaver—W. M. Rouse, Friday after the third Monday, and

REPORT OF THE CONDITION OF THE Farmers & Traders National Bank AT COVINGTON,

In the State of Kentucky, at the close of business, October 2d, 1883.

RESOURCES.

Loans and discounts		$579,247 75
Overdrafts		969 39
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation 4 per cent		50,000 00
Due from approved reserve agents		48,991 83
Due from other National banks	3,584 33
Due from State banks and bankers	2,459 97	6,044 30
Real estate, furniture and fixtures		4,668 91
Current expenses and taxes paid		2,994 80
Premiums paid		8,000 00
Checks and other cash items		1,432 60
Bills of other Banks		10,135 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and pennies		56 54
Specie		12,015 00
Legal tender notes		22,000 00
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer (5 per cent of circulation)		2,250 00
Total		$761,806 12

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in		$300,000 00
Surplus fund		2,500 00
Undivided profits		21,367 99
National bank notes outstanding		45,000 00
Individual deposits subject to check	368,774 66
Due to other National Banks	14,722 25
Due to State Banks and bankers	9,441 29	392,938 13
Total		$761,806 12

State of Kentucky, County of Kenton, ss: I, John L. Sandford, Cashier of the above-named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

J. L. SANDFORD, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 8th day of Oct., 1883. GEO. H. DAVISON, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest:

E. J. HICKEY,
J. H. MERSMAN,
L. C. STEPHENS, } Directors.

E. E. IGOE, Resident Dentist, Rising Sun, Ind. WITH J. P. Ulrey. Monday and Tuesday at Rising Sun. Ind

W. J. RICE, CARPENTER & BUILDER, BULLITSVILLE, KY.

Is prepared Raise or Move EITHER LOG or FRAME BUILDINGS On Short Notice, And at the Lowest Possible Figures.

33-tf Your orders respectfully solicited

LOOK HERE! when you go to Lawrenceburg, call on

Winegardner

He has a large assortment of

Wall Paper!

And is daily receiving additions to his stock. Call and examine before purchasing.

Inks, Pens and Stationar constantly on hand.

Headquaters in Lotton House.

LUMBER.

Goe. M. Bedinger & Co., Erlanger, - - Ky.

We keep constantly on hand all kinds of Lumber, Laths and Shingles. Also Builder's supplies of all kinds.

—Come and see Us.—

may 9-tf

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM

A beneficial dressing preferred to similar articles because of its purity and rich perfume. It Restores to Gray Hair the Youthful Color & prevents dandruff and falling of the hair. 50c. & $1. Hiscox & Co., N.Y.

FLORESTON

Exceeds the finest flower extracts in richness. Delicate, very lasting. No odor like it. Be sure you get FLORESTON Cologne, signature of Hiscox & Co., N. Y., on every label. 25 and 75 cts., at druggists and dealers in perfumes.

COLOGNE

AYER'S Ague Cure

IS WARRANTED to cure all cases of malarial disease, such as Fever and Ague, Intermittent or Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Bilious Fever, and Liver Complaint. In case of failure, after due trial, dealers are authorized, by our circular of July 1st, 1882, to refund the money.

Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by all Druggists.

INCORPORATED UNDER THE LAWS OF MISSOURI.

CENTRAL MEDICAL & SURGICAL INSTITUTE OF ST. LOUIS, MO.

SUCCESSORS TO DR. BUTTS' DISPENSARY. OFFICE & ROOMS, No. 920 LOCUST ST.

CHAS. L. LaBARGE, M.D., Pres't & Physician in Charge. NELSON CHESMAN, Treas. & Business Manager.

This Institute has ample facilities and an experienced Faculty. While it succeeds to a large business, which has been established for years, it will aim to extend its medical and surgical practice, giving skillful and scientific treatment to

CHRONIC DISEASES of the Head, Spine, Lungs and Air Passages, Heart, Liver, Stomach and Bowels, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Consumption and Asthma.

BLOOD IMPURITIES, Inherited or caused by impure association, Scrofula, Fever Sores, Ulcers, etc.

DEFORMITIES of the Limbs, Spinal Curvature, Wry-Neck, Diseases of the Joints, Piles, Fistula, Rupture, etc.

WEAKNESS and wasting diseases in old and young men, also all diseases of the genito-urinary organs.

FEMALE irregularities and weaknesses, causing pain in the back or side, etc.

Personal interviews with patients are always preferred. Those unable to visit the Institute will be furnished with blank lists of questions that will aid them in making a full statement of their cases and if not requiring a surgical operation they can be successfully treated by correspondence, and medicines sent by mail or express. To enable us to send proper list of questions applicants should give a brief statement of their trouble.

(The Treasurer of the corporation is of Nelson Chesman & Co., Advertising Agents, and refers to the publisher of this or any other newspaper in the United States or Canada regarding responsibility.)

Consultation at Office or by mail free and invited

VIGOROUS HEALTH FOR MEN

THE PASTILLE CURE FOR NERVOUS DEBILITY. TRADE MARK

TESTED FOR 5 YEARS by use in thousands of cases. Founded on scientific medical principles, it has been growing in favor and reputation while its numerous competitors have invariably failed. The direct application of this remedy to the seat of the disease makes its specific influence felt without delay. The natural functions of the human organism are restored. The animating elements of life which have been wasted are given back. The buoyant energy of the brain and muscular system renders the patient cheerful; he gains strength with rapidity.

NERVOUS DEBILITY, organic weakness, and numerous obscure diseases, baffling the skill of best physicians, result for youthful indiscretion, too free indulgence, and over brain work.

Do not temporize while such enemies lurk in your system. Take a remedy that has cured thousands, and does not interfere with you attention to business or cause any pain or inconvenience.

(Send for a Descriptive Pamphlet giving Anatomical Illustrations, which will convince the most sceptical that they can be restored to perfect manhood, and fitted for the duties of life, same as if never affected. Sent free to any one. Remedy sold ONLY by the

HARRIS REMEDY CO. MF'G. CHEMISTS. 306½ N. 10th. St. ST. LOUIS, MO.

One Month's treatment $3. two months $5. three months $7

TUTT'S PILLS

TORPID BOWELS, DISORDERED LIVER, and MALARIA.

From these sources arise three-fourths of the diseases of the human race. These symptoms indicate their existence: Loss of Appetite, Bowels costive, Sick Headache, fullness after eating, aversion to exertion of body or mind, Eructation of food, Irritability of temper, Low spirits, A feeling of having neglected some duty, Dizziness, Fluttering at the Heart, Dots before the eyes, highly colored Urine, CONSTIPATION, and demand the use of a remedy that acts directly on the Liver. As a Liver medicine TUTT'S PILLS have no equal. Their action on the Kidneys and Skin is also prompt; removing all impurities through these three "scavengers of the system," producing appetite, sound digestion, regular stools, a clear skin and a vigorous body. TUTT'S PILLS cause no nausea or griping nor interfere with daily work and are a perfect

ANTIDOTE TO MALARIA.

Sold everywhere, 25c. Office, 44 Murray St., N.Y.

TUTT'S HAIR DYE.

GRAY HAIR OR WHISKERS changed instantly to a GLOSSY BLACK by a single application of this DYE. Sold by Druggists, or sent by express on receipt of $1.

Office, 44 Murray Street, New York.

TUTT'S MANUAL OF USEFUL RECEIPTS FREE.

INJECTION SANTINELI

Cures all recent and chronic secret diseases of the Urinary passages in both sexes. Directions in all languages. $1.00 a bottle Druggists, or sent by express on receipt of price secure from observation Fairmount Chemical Co. Cincinnati, Ohio, U.S.A. Sold by W. F. McKim,

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me. HORACE FAIRBROTHER."

Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours, MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."

159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."

Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN."

Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."

Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

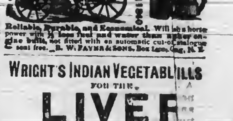
No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

PREPARED BY

Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by all Druggists.

Paynes' AUTOMATIC Engines. 2 to 100 Horse Power



Reliable, Durable, and Economical. Will [illegible] a horse power with [illegible] less fuel and water than any other engine built, not fitted with an automatic cut-off. Catalogue sent free. B. W. PAYNE & SONS. Box [illegible], Corning, N. Y.

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS FOR THE LIVER And all Bilious Complaints

Safe to take, being purely vegetable; no griping. Price 25 cts. All Druggists.

FREE RELIABLE SELF-CURE.

NEVER-FAIL

A favorite prescription of one of the most noted and successful specialists in the U. S. (now retired) for the cure of Nervous Debility, Lost Manhood, Weakness and Decay. Sent in plain sealed envelope free. Druggists can fill it. Address DR. WARD & CO., Louisiana, Mo.

PAYSON'S INDELIBLE INK

Is the BEST. No preparation. Used with any clean pen for marking any fabric. Popular for decorative work on linen. Received Centennial MEDAL & Diploma. Established 50 years. Sold by all Druggists, Stationers & News Agents.

Cut This Out & Return to us with TEN CTS. Silver, & you'll get by mail, a GOLDEN BOX OF GOODS that will bring you in MORE MONEY in One Month than anything else in America. Absolute Certainty. Need no capital. M. Young, 173 Greenwich St. N. York.

NAVAL Agents Wanted for Ancient & Modern BATTLES. New and graphic Pictorial History of the great Sea fights of the World. By Medical Director SHIPPEN, U. S. N. J. C. McCURDY & CO., 130 W. Fourth St., Cincinnati.

AGENTS Wanted for handsome illustrated standard works of character; great variety; Books & Bibles low in price; selling fast; needed everywhere; Liberal terms. Wm. Garretson & Co., [illegible] College St., Nashville, Tenn.

Local News.

The rains revived the saw mills.

Now is the time to go hickorynutting.

The wheat sown this fall is looking nice.

Buy your flour and salt of Dudley Rouse.

Read the new advertisement of the Petersbuag Drug Store.

Robert Clore returned Saturday from the Germantown Fair.

It will pay you to go miles to trade at the Petersburg Drug Store.

It takes the prince of liars to go to a man's house and lie him out of a bed.

Dame Rumor is on the qui vive in anticipation of a wedding in Burlington.

Henceforth the effusions of our Plattsburg reporter will receive an additional amount of spice.

The wire fence put up about W. E. Piper's yard by G. C. Graddy attracts much attention.

We welcome Colonel Crisler to our town. We are always glad to have such men locate here.

The feather renovating fraud is the latest, and has been very successfully practiced in Boone.

John W. Rice, of Bellevue, has contracted the western fever. He wants a Kansas or Nebraska farm.

Burlington Lodge No. 264, F. & A. M. is represented at the Grand Lodge in Louisville, this week, by Everett Walton.

So far as we know all the public schools in the county are in progress, and the fall has been very good for the little ones to attend.

Mr. Michael Clore was in town the other day, conveying to the Bellevue Christian Church the lot on which the church edifice is erected.

Those having claims against the estate of John A. Kendall can receive 28 per cent thereof by calling on the undersigned. W. L. Riddell.

We hear the following land trades mentioned in the Bellevue neighborhood: Solon Rice sells out to Michael Clore, and buys Jno. W. Rice's farm.

W. R. Terrill's nag that he drives took a kicking spree last Saturday, and made things lively for a little while, breaking a pair of shafts and bruising its legs some.

Mex Cleveland, of Kenton county, and Miss Nichols, of Georgetown, are to be married to day at Georgetown. Mex, here is to you and your good lady, may you live long and prosper.

The attendance at Mr. Gallagher's school increases each week, and he has provided his school room with comfortable and well arranged desks much to the delight of the scholars and to the credit of the professor.

Another excursion of Burlington hogs visited that garden of ours the other night. The excursionists had a royal time, till assailed with brick-bats and clubs, when they decamped, leaving the garden wearing a forlorn look.

Nice tombstones or monuments at the graves of the departed, are marks of respect which should not be neglected. Hurschart & Co., Lawrenceburg, Ind., have just what you want. John Beall, of Hebron, is their agent.

Henry Clore, Wm. Clore, Jessie Kelley, Samuel Pope and Joshua Rice each are minus a feather bed on the feather renovating fraud, and it would be the next thing to suicide for a fellow to go into that neighborhood now to solicit feathers to renovate.

A boy about 16 or 17 years old arrived in town last Thursday evening. His mental faculties are impaired and his tongue resteth not. He says his parents live near Ravenwood, West Va. He was kept in jail a day or two after which he was sent to the Poor-house.

Wib Rice was one of the judges at Mabley's big pumpkin show last Saturday. The heaviest pumpkin weighed 120 pounds, and the largest measured 74½ inches in circumference. Three hundred pumpkins were on exhibition and all the prizes went to Ohio and Indiana.

A. W. Smith will, in a few days check his baggage for Florida. This is the best season, the year to visit that country as the cooler weather will have a tendency to lessen the annoyance of the ticks, fleas, mosquitoes, gallinippers, gnats, jumping spiders, rattle snakes, lizards, centipedes, &c., &c.

Mr. S. P. Brady and wife returned, last Thursday evening, after an extended and very pleasant bridal tour through Illinois, Canada, and the eastern states and large cities. They will become citizens of our town in a few days occupying the house purchased of the estate of John P. Scott, deceased.

A letter from Wm. Walton and family last week, announced their safe arrival at Butler, Mo., where they have taken up their residence for the present being unable to get possession of the residence on their farm. Paulie has a position in a business house in that town, and much pleased with his situation.

J. Frank Grant leaves for Stanford, Ky., via Louisville and Lebanon Friday, the 19th inst., to attend the annual session of the Grand Lodge of Odd Fellows which assembles in Stanford, Tuesday, Oct., 23d. J. Frank is a promising candidate for Grand Master of Ky., with excellent prospects of election. He has our best wishes for success.

Mr. Wm. Walton, from Boone county, Ky., paid the Democrat a visit on Monday and subscribed for two papers to send back to Ky. He likes Bates so well that he has purchased the John Steele farm southeast of Butler, containing 645 acres. He intends to settle here and farm on a large scale. Mr. Walton is a business man, just the kind we want to fill up the county.—Bates county, (Mo.) Democrat.

When Jack Frost made his unexpected visit in September, the anticipation of an early winter created quite a commotion among the farming community and here it is now the middle of October, and everything has the appearance of the early summer. The pastures, which a few weeks since looked crisped and parched, are growing nicely and are again affording a reasonable amount of food for stock, which has relieved the anxiety so prevalent among the farmers but a few short weeks since.

It is our pleasure this week to record the marriage of our worthy Plattsburg correspondent, Mr. James Tolin, and Miss Mollie Sullivan. The event that united the two hearts that beat as but one, was celebrated at the residence of Elder Stephens, last Wednesday, in the presence of quite a number of friends who accompanied them thither. We have known the groom for, lo, these many years, and always believed that it would fall to his lot to make some good lady happy, and now we join the host of friends in wishing him and his bride all the happiness this life affords.

Pass this Around.

The county along the East Bend road was canvassed during Circuit Court by two men with large wagons, they representing to the unsuspecting people that they had rented a house in Burlington, and were engaged renovating old feathers. They would agree to take a bed and renovate it for 25c, payable when the bed was returned, and in this way succeeded in capturing quite a number of beds which they loaded into their wagons and drove off with. The day for delivering the beds has returned but neither the beds nor the renovaters have put in their appearance. These frauds stopped in Burlington and bargained for a house but never took possession of it, the renting only being a scheme to more perfectly conceal their rascality and afford them more time in which to escape. We learn that the Hebron neighborhood was also visited by the same scamps who took several beds to renovate.

Just as they were commencing the song before the close of the services at the Baptist church Sunday night, the floor in the northeast corner of the church gave away, going down with a crash that sent visions of a falling building flitting across the minds of many of those in the large congregation that crowded the house. Windows were thrown up and some made their exit through them, but the body of the crowd pressed toward the door through which excitement and a general demoralization made the passage very difficult, but fortunately no one was trampled down and hurt, and before the crowd could pass out the cause of the alarm was discovered to be rather insignificant, and the excitement at once subsided. Several persons in the congregation were aware that that portion of the floor was weak and liable to go down, and they were prepared to account for the crash, which, in a great measure, prevented a much greater and general alarm among those present.

Look Before You Leap.

The colored folks at this place and vicinity are associating themselves together for the purpose of opening a grocery and general supply store in Burlington. The company has been incorporated by the County court. The articles of incorporation limit the capital stock to $5,000, being divided into 1,000 shares at $5 each, which is to be paid before one can become a member. A colored man representing that he hails from Covington is at the head of the move, and collected several dollars from the darkies when here last, at which time he left an appointment for another visit in a few days, when he is to make another collection of funds. He has secured the confidence of the negroes and they are making great calculations on the benefits to be derived from their anticipated store. Our advice to our colored citizens is to know exactly where they are going to light before they leap, and be careful that they make no bad investment of their hard earned money.

Kentucky at St. Louis Fair.

The following Kentuckians took premiums at the St. Louis Fair, the list having been carefully compiled for the Kentuckians. W. S. Talbott says the Kentuckians were treated loyally:

Atkins & Adams, Lexington, $75 on saddle stallion and $100 on park horse.

John T. Hughes, Fayette, took $75 on saddle mare, $40 on saddle gelding, $200 on pair geldings or mares for carriage, $100 on pair geldings or mares for coach purposes, $25 on model mare or gelding.

Russell Railey, Woodford, $40 on saddle stallion, $50 on model horse. $50 on stallion 4 years, $75 on park horse.

J. C. Graves, Woodford, $100 on gelding 5 years, $50 on road horse.

W. W. Adams, Lexington, $50 on jack, $25 on jennet.

W. H. Wilson, Cynthiana, $100 Lady DeJarnett as best roadster, $150 on same as best 5-year-old, $50 on same as best light buggy mare.

Riddell & Norris, of Petersburg, $10 for roadster in harness.

Spencer Bros., Pine Grove, $75 on carriage horses, $25 on horses for all work, $50 on roadster mare 4 years, $25 on gelding 5 years.

N. H. Bayless, Paris, $50 on mares 4 years.

J. B. Curran, Mercer, $200 on mare 5 years, $25 on light buggy horse.

A. J. Coleman, Harrodsburg, $30 on mare 4 years.

Frank Vanness, Lexington, $250 on stallion 5 years, $500 on trotting stallion $100 on stallion that has never taken a premium.

T. D. Martin, Eminence, $100 on saddle gelding.

Personal Mentions.

[If you have friends from a distance visiting you or expect to be away from home on business or pleasure, let us have the item for this column.]

Everett Walton's family are spending the week with Mr. and Mrs. Ben Rouse.

Mr. Price, of Colorado, is visiting his brother-in-law, Jno. W. Rice, of Bellevue.

Mr. Maley Green and family, of Cincinnati, are visiting their relatives near here.

W. T. Hogan and family, of Florence spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Smith.

Miss Alice Souther, of Florence X-Roads, will make Burlington her home for the furture, living with her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Ben Rouse.

Circuit Court.

In the case of T. M. Sims vs. L. J. Setters, Sims got a judgment for $85.

Wood Sullivan vs J. W. Gaines, judgment in favor of Sullivan for $40.

The suit of W. E. Anderson vs J. S. Anderson, &c., for $5,000 for injuries received while working at the saw mill, was continued.

W. C. Maxley vs W. L. Norman, judgment for plaintiff for $50.

The Grant-Gaines slander suit attracted considerable attention and kept a large array of witnesses on hand for 4 days, was continued, the pleadings not being made up.

The petit jurors were on duty 9 days and tried a great many cases, making a verdict in every instance except one.

Three $5,000 damage suits were continued till next term.

Judge Major adjourned court last Friday morning about 6 o'clock.

Sheriff Clutterbuck and deputy sheriff German escorted Boone's two delegates to Frankfort, last Saturday, where they registered John Daisley one year for grand larceny, and John F. Patmore two years for forgery.

Read the Petersburg Drug Store's new advertisement.

Our Beaver Lick communication was to late for this issue.

Court has come and gone and the town has relapsed into its usual quietude.

NGEIHBORHOOD NEWS.

Rabbit Hash.

Ben Wilson is having an addition built to his store house.

E. T. Gleason will leave for the Sunny South in a week or ten days.

John L. Acra's wife is very sick at this writing.

Charles Riggs and others left Saturday night for New Orleans, on Daily & McConnells potatoe boat.

Mrs. John Clore, of Bellevue, and Mrs. Murray Ryle, of East Bend, were visiting at John P. Ryles, Sunday.

Scattersville.

We are having fine growing weather at present and everything looks as fresh as spring time.

The farmers are through sowing their wheat, and are now busy clearing up their farms, getting ready for another crop.

Tobacco in this part of the neighborhood is curing up very nice at present.

John Rue is about 15 inches taller, it is a fine boy.

Jas. Horton has been very sick, but, is better at this writing.

Mrs. Jury, of Scott county, is visiting her sister, Mrs. O. P. Conner.

Bullittsville.

A walk through the autumnal forest presents to the lover of nature a panoramic beauty unexcelled by that of the work of man.

J. L. Riley has added another industry to our quiet hamlet, a steam grist mill.

Crit Gerdon is teaching in our neighboring city, Franciaville.

The Christians had a basket meeting last Sunday. We understand they will continue services all this week.

Temp Graves has sufficiently recovered to be able to haul hay again.

Fletcher Clore made a visit to Saline county, Mo. He says our friends who lately left here, seem perfectly at home there.

Temp Gaines and wife were well pleased with their trip to Louisville. They report that Steve Gaines is sick with fever.

Tobacco is reported as having been house burned.

W. P. Cropper has sold his entire crop of tobacco at $17 per hundred.

Miss Belle Kendall, of Louisville is visiting her sister, Mrs. Alice Watts.

Milton Gaines is quite sick with malaria.

The Grangers had a big meeting last Saturday, and will hold another on the 4th Saturday at 10 o'clock a. m.

Quillersville.

It has been some time since I have seen anything from our town in the way of news which at present is very scarce.

Everybody is done housing tobacco, and some are now planting their winter crop, and one follow has already got out seven acres, while some others are setting. This winter crop commenced early. The right way to commence is to wait till the warm days of spring, and then go to the sunny side of some nice woods and clear you a piece of ground. Be sure and leave all the nice shade trees and large bushes. Plow your ground well, mark off wide, making all point rows run towards shade tree or house. Then sow in grass or rent to somebody who will tend it. The nicest way to get tobacco from the field to the barn is to pile five or six sticks together and loop a chain around the pile and drag them in. It does not hurt more than four or five bottom sticks.

Crops generally good. Wheat mostly sown and is coming up nicely.

With the exception of some slight attacks of scarlet fever health is generally good.

Born—To J. G. Crisler and wife, a boy. To F. Underhill and wife, a girl. To H. Baker and wife, a son. To J. J. Hudson and wife a son. To Harris, and wife a son. To Geo. W. Sleet and wife, a BOY. Well, this was a dry year anyhow.

Florence X-Roads.

A few days since A. F. Crigler lost a horse from the effects of a snag. He has a very sick mule at this time.

Sam Crutchar and Joe Souther have shaken the dust of the town from their No. 10's. Sam has gone to Cincinnati and Joe to Danville, Ky.

George Clare says he has a fine boy at his house.

Monday afternoon the hands at the saw mill were on a strike. Cause—a dance that night at the proprietor's house.

Our suspension bridge has been repaired and is in use again.

Jerry Delph and family were visiting his father-in-law, in Indiana, last week.

The serenaders hald a called meeting the other night to seranade a young man near here, but rumor misled them. Look out for them this week.

Martin L. Aylor fell through the ediging frame at the saw mill last week, and a rail near ¾ of an inch long caught in the flesh of his leg, making an ugly wound which was attended to by Dr. Furnish.

Abram Anderson has made his appearance in this country again, and is building foundation walls.

Florence.

The Florence jail is now a fixed fact. By the importunities of the good citizens and the urgent necessity for such a building, the town council have at last negotiated for a lot and specifications have been drawn for the work. We would recommend that the committee, before building, visit the Burlington jail so as to get the advantage of the architecture of same and be better prepared to do a good job. When once completed, woe unto ye sabbath breakers, drunkards and tiger-fighters.

Dr. Guerrant, Presbyterian evangelist for Ky., will hold a series of meetings, beginning Tuesday evening, Oct., 16th, at the Florence church, preaching morning and evening. The Dr. is an eloquent and earnest worker, and richly deserves a liberal attendance.

The funeral sermon of Mrs. Brown whose death was announced in last weeks issue, was preached at the Florence Baptist church, Sunday, Octr, 14th, by Rev. Potts, pastor of the church, to a crowded house of friends and relatives of deceased. The text was from Heb. 2-10 latter clause—"Made perfect through suffering." The sermon was delivered in a pathetic style, and was full of instruction and consolation.

Mr. Geo. Hamilton, brother of Milton, paid our town a brief visit last week to see his sister, and also the spot made dear to him by his boyhood association. I don't know when we have been so pleasantly entertained as during his short stay. George has fine conversational powers and was in one of his talking moods. The fact of his being upon the play ground of his youthful days seemed to electrify him and his words burned as he spoke. He is an expert in book-keeping and has served in many first-class positions. He told us all. He descanted upon the banking system through all its intricacies, took up the mercantile buisness, gave the grounds for success and the cause of failure, compared telegraphic and telephonic science with the old mud-bespattered mail coaches of former years. He rode on the railroads all over the land, attended all the fairs and expositions, gave the population and square miles of every state and city in the Union. He devoured the poets both ancient and modern, quoted from Virgil, Dante, Milton, Homer, Chauncer, Sheakspeare, Byron, Long Fellow, Tennyson, Mrs. Herman, &c. The gong struck for dinner, he heeded it not. Uncle Joe Sullivan kept company while the rest dined When we returned Joe's pulse registered 120. Our friend next discoursed upon elocution, repeated the hymn, "Am I a soldier of the Cross," as it should be, several other pieces from the second reader, took up the scriptures, and gave the history of the cleansing of Naaman, the Leper, by the prophet Elisha. His thoughts next turned to the site of the old school-house on the border of town, which had been the scene of so many happy hours in his earlier days. He spoke of his games of marbles, townball and soldier, compared with the present base-ball, croquet, &c., and when he recalled his old school mates and how they were nearly all gone, we noticed memory's tear start, when the cry, "ho for Erlanger," broke the spell. He told us good bye as he started for Princeton, Ky., where he takes the position as cashier of the Farmers Bank.

Gas Ometer.

10

Rheumatism, disordered blood, general debility, and many chronic diseases pronounced incurable, are often relieved by Brown's Iron Bitters.

Huntsville, Ala.—Dr. J. C. Spotswood says; "I highly recommend Brown's Iron Bitters for dyspepsia, rheumatism, and general debility."

Fairfield, Iowa.—Dr. J. L. Meyers says: "Brown's Iron Bitters is the best iron preparation I have ever known in my thirty years of practice."

Farm for Sale!

35 acres of good rolling bottom land, 3½ miles below Aurora ferry, ½ mile from Bellevue and ¼ mile from the Ohio river, being part of the Warren Rogers farm. For particulars call on or address T. H. Sutton, Grant P. O., Ky., or at this office. 44-2-m

Farm for Sale.

I am offering for sale my farm, lying 3 miles south of Burlington on the Big Bone road, containing 55½ acres, a part of the Mason Crisler farm. The land lays well and is conveniently located, the improvments are a good brick house and all necessary out buildings, and a variety of good fruit. Any person desirous of purchasing a nice farm will do well to come and examine the premises and learn terms. Title good. Mrs. Oscar Crisler.

INSURE AT HOME

The Farmers' Mutual Fire

INSURANCE COMPANY

Of Boone County

Is now completely organized and receiving applications for insurance.

Its Rates are Lower

Than those of any other Company, and it gives the farmers of Boone County a

HITHERTO UNKNOWN ADVANTAGE

In keeping their property insured.

EVERY FARMER IN THE COUNTY

should take a policy at once.

N. S. WALTON, President, Petersburg, Ky.

J. H. WALTON, Secretary, Constance, Ky.

R. RANDALL, Treasury.

DIRECTORS.

Legran Gaines, Jeff Utz, Jno. M. Moody.

J. W. KIRKPATRICK & SON,

—BURLINGTON, KY.—

UNDERTAKERS

—AND—

EMBALMERS,

Will furnish nice Hearse any reasonable distance for $10.

ROBERT B. REED

Attorney at Law.

OFFICE AT - UNION, KY.

F. RIDDELL,

ATTORNEY at LAW

BURLINGTON, KY.

Office over Dudley Rouse's Store.

ALBERT W. GAINES,

Attorney and Counselor at Law,

LAWRENCEBURG, - - - IND.

Will practice in the courts of Boone county, Ky., Cincinnati, Ohio, Dearborn and adjoining counties, Ind. dec-6-82

W. E. VEST,

COUNTY SURVEYOR

WALTON, KY.

Is prepared to do all kinds of surveying. All orders sent him through the mail to Walton, will receive his prompt attention.

FANNIE G. RICE,

—TEACHER OF—

PIANO & ORGAN.

Lessons given at my residence,

Burlington, - - Ky.

L. C. NORMAN. H. J. STEPHENS.

NORMAN and STEPHENS,

ATTORNEYS at LAW,

UNION, BOONE CO., KY.

Will practice in the Courts of Boone Kenton and adjoining counties. Collections solicited and made throughout the State. 24 tf 81

DR. A. B. HARRY AN

RESIDENT DENTIST.

Aurora, Indiana.

(Office Over Postoffice)

With J P. ULREY.

Dr. ULREY'S days, Wednesday and Saturday. Office open at all hours. 8-1y

J. J. Landram. G. G. Hughes.

LANDRAM & HUGHES,

ATTORNEYS at LAW.

Will practice in the Boone Circuit Cour and the Court of Appeals. Prompt attention given to Collections, on application t G. G. Hughes, Burlington, Ky.

S. W. TOLIN,

ATTORNEY AT LAW

BURLINGTON, Y

Office in Court-house on 2d floor.

Will manage litigation in any of the Courts of the State, contracts and other legal instruments drawn up at reasonable rates. Aprompt an studious attention given to business intrusted to my care. A trial solicited. 12-1y

H. KASSEN & CO.

(Formerly of Covington.)

—Dealers in Fine—

BOOTS AND SHOES,

106 W. 5th Street,

CINCINNATI, - - - OHIO.

Custom made work a Specialty. A perfect Fit Guaranteed. dec. 20-1y

BOONE HOUSE,

BURLINGTON, KY.

C. L. CRISLER, Prop'r.

No pains spared in the accommodation of guests. The table supplied with the delicacies of the season. Stock well cared for. dec. 20-1y

AURORA MARBLE AND GRANITE WORKS, Aurora, Ind

Will have constantly on hand

Marble and Granite Monuments,

Italian & American Headstones, &c.

I am ready to do all kinds of Stone Work on short notice and at low prices Hoping to receive the patronage of Boone County, I am respectfully,

F. W. KASSEBAUM.

We Have

J. SCHOFIELD & SON'S

JEANS, BLANKETS AND YARNS.

THE JEANS IS BLUE WARP, THE PRICE IS

45 Cents.

Those parties that wanted to get a corner on Schofield's Goods are badly disappointed as they see they can't get 60 cents a yard for the Madison Jeans when we propose to stir matters up a little.

COLTER, Rising Sun, Ind

Just From New York

WITH A

Full LINE of FALL SUITINGS,

— AND —

OVERCOATS.

The above stock was carefully selected, and consists of all the NEW STYLES of FALL GOODS, and you can not fail to be pleased with the Goods and Prices.

H. F. BLASE,

540 Madison St, - COVINGTON, KY.

Stop! Don't Read This.

S. C BUCHANAN takes this method of notifying his patrons that he has enlarged his room and now has the best and most complete stock of Drugs in the county, consisting of Drugs and Medicines, Standard Patent Medicines, &c.

Notions and Fancy Goods, Combs, Brushes, Toilet Powders Perfumery, Toilet and Medicated Soaps.

Also Spices of all kinds, Flavoring Extracts in bulk, Horse and Cattle Powders and many other things that we have not the room to mention here. If you call for anything not in Stock we wi'l get it for you at the regular price, if it takes all the profit.

When in need of anything give us a call, at the Petersburg Duru Store, and be convinced that our Prices are as Low or Lower than can be found.

Don't Read Any Further.

M. L. SWETNAM. HUBERT NEED.

SWETNAM & NEAD,

(SUCCESSOR TO ALONZO GRAVES)

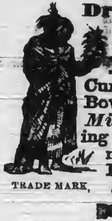
LIVERY AND BOARDING STABLE

AND TRANSFER LINE.

79 Pike Street, Covington, Ky.

Horses Kept by the Day, Week or Month.
Horses and Buggies for Hire.
Stock of all kinds Bought and Sold.
Best Care Taken of Horses entrusted to our Keeping.

All Orders for Hauling Promptly Attended to.



TRADE MARK,

Dr. CLARK JOHNSON'S

Indian Blood Syrup

Cures all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys, Skin and Blood. Millions testify to its efficacy in healing the above named diseases, and pronounce it to be the BEST REMEDY KNOWN TO MAN. Guaranteed to cure Dyspepsia.

AGENTS WANTED.

Laboratory 77 W. 3d St., New York City. Druggists sell it.

D. Clark Johnson:— This certifies that your Indian Blood Syrup is the best medicine I ever used in my family. My wife has been greatly benefited by it. L. E. McCamic, Seaville, Ky. mar. 15, '83

JAMES S. WAYNE, President. JNO. L. SANDFORD, Cashier

CAPITAL $300,000.

FARMERS AND TRADERS

NATIONAL BANK.

Covington, Kentucky.

DIRECTORS.

James S. Wayne, J. S. Matson, M. C. Moteb, J. H. Mersman, Sam Hind, J. L. Sandford, L. C. Stephens, E. J. Hickey, L. H Dills, E. J. Green, F. P. Helm,

The general operations transacted upon the most favorable terms. Collections made on all points in the United States.

The Business and Accounts of Farmers are Especially Solicited by this Bank. dec. 20-6m

City Flouring Mills

RISING SUN, INDIANA.

FLOUR EXCHANGED FOR WHEAT OR CASH. THE HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR GOOD WHEAT.

mar7-tf23 J. W. Talbott.

UNDERTAKING.

We keep Constantly on Hand all sizes of

Burial Cases and Caskets.

And having just received a beautiful

NEW HEARSE,

Which can be had at a reasonable price when desired.

PRICES GUARANTEED LESS THAN CITY PRICES.

DAVIS BROS., HEBRON, KY.

Subscribe for the Recorder

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL, Publishers.

BURLINGTON, : : KENTUCKY.

The Way of the Transgressor is Hard.

The civil war and the rapid development of the territory now comprised in the newer of the Western States of the Union bred the material and afforded the opportunity for that class of criminals known as highwaymen. Never before, perhaps, in the history of modern civilization has there been such a conjunction of circumstances calculated to engender and feed that particular phase of lawlessness which found its victims on the highways of Western travel and in the thronged streets of towns and villages. It is, therefore, not strange that the plunderers and roughriders were for a season, both numerous and audacious. Never was the prospect to murderers and robbers more seductive and never was a more ruthless and bloody brood of the enemies of society precipitated on any generation. For twenty years these agents of the road levied their heartless tribute. In all the qualities of unshrinking physical courage, relentless greed, cruel brutality, brought to the greatest perfection in the school of danger, the highwaymen of the Southwest in the past twenty years have never been equaled in any age. But a period of twenty years has served to bring them all to the dust. The James brothers, one in his grave and the other in a prison cell, illustrate the fate of those who have dared to ply their once apparently prosperous vocations of robbery and murder. The doom of the younger, who fell by the hand of an assassin trained by himself, was horrible, but was to any dispassionate judgment less to be dreaded than that of his elder now struggling to escape ignominious death by the hangman's halter. These were the princes of their clans with chances a hundred-fold more favorable than others on account of the inability or indisposition of hundreds who knew them as border partisans to draw a line between the point where internecine strife ended and war on society began. The penalty which the justice of mankind has adjudged to be due to those who take booty at the expense of blood is death. And death or worse than death has overtaken almost the last of the one-time gay and reckless riders who turned their hands against society. Such remnants of the defiant gangs as dyed their hands in blood and steeped their souls in murder rather than return to ways of peace and honesty now supplicate for the privilege to be allowed to earn their bread by the labor they lately despised. In the prime of manhood they find themselves broken in health, poor in purse, their lives hanging by threads so slender that a breath might land them in felons' graves. Such is the lesson of an era of lawlessness which afforded more opportunities to those whose evil propensities led them into its sinister paths than were ever elsewhere opened up before weak and wicked men. The truth of those terrible words was never more fearfully vindicated, "that the way of the transgressor is hard." The lesson loses much of its force and value because the hideous careers and the particular phase of crime from which it is drawn may now be regarded as of the past.—St. Louis Republican.

Dog Oil and Cats' Skins.

"We skins the horses and the dogs. Sometimes we skins the cats. Then we bile 'em all up together and make that and these here out of 'em." The speaker was bloody from neck to boots, and the "that and these here" were two piles of black stuff, the odor from which was somewhat off color. The place was one of the four or five carrion-rendering establishments which dot the river banks a quarter of a mile below Bridesburg. The cats and dogs referred to were the twenty or thirty barrels of these animals received each week from the city dog-pound and the "cat home" on Lombard street, below Thirteenth. Here also are taken all the dead carrion which can be begged or purchased in the city. In the darkest hours of night great covered wagons make their mysterious way through the byways of Philadelphia. These lumbering vehicles are large enough to carry two dead horses, and no matter how long the carrion they may find has been dead, if it will hold together it is gathered up and the wagons' march resumed until their rounds have been completed, and they dump their repulsive loads at the establishments on the river bank.

"Sometimes," said the man in charge, "we gets a big supply in the way of a fire. After the Knickerbocker Ice Company's fire we had all we could do for some time. In the ordinary run we gets here about thirty horses and mules and twenty barrels of dead cats and dogs every week. What do we do with 'em? Well, you see, they goes three or four ways. We cuts 'em up, bones and all, and tosses 'em into that big biler over yonder. When that has biled away for twenty-four or more hours we get out the bones and they go to the boneyard to make phosphate. We press the oil out on the balance, and that goes mostly to make lubrication [lubricating] oil or to soap-makers. The other stuff is put in the sun and dried, and we make phosphate out of it ourselves."

The skins, the men said, were sold to the tanners. In the winter and early summer the cats are skinned and the hide is used in the lining of winter circulars for ladies. Two curious uses are, however, frequently made of the dogs. Their fat is carefully taken off and manufactured into "dog oil," which among superstitious persons, especially the colored people, possesses almost miraculous virtue in the cure of various diseases, but chiefly of rheumatism. In all localities where the colored population is large this oil is for sale, and always sells for a good price. It is also in demand for consumptives. Very frequently people who have been pronounced incurable go to the establishment and beg the people there to sell them some of the oil obtained from the dog fat. Occasionally persons will bring dogs which they have killed themselves and have the oil manufactured from them.

Some of the rendering establishments along the river do an enormous business, receiving their supplies not only from the city but from abroad by the car load. Some of them use the intestines and refuse matter from the slaughter-house and abattoirs.—Philadelphia Record.

—Mrs. Alice A. Flavell, of New York City, brings unique reasons for a divorce from her husband. He compelled her to bake pies, and to get up in the dead of night to play on the piano and sing for the entertainment of his maudlin friends. The pie business would indicate insanity on the [illegible] part.—N. Y. Sun.

HOME AND FARM.

—The proboscis of the bee must be inserted into 500 clover tubes before one grain of sugar can be obtained.—Prairie Farmer.

—It is now held by scientific men that a dead branch exhausts the vitality of the tree as much as though alive. The dead canes on raspberry bushes would appear to affect them in like manner. Bushes not cleared of old canes produce small, defective, crumbling specimens.

—The longest-lived tree is to be obtained by planting seeds where the tree is to grow and grafting it there without ever removing it, but it will be too long coming into bearing; this with apples and pears, but with the peach it is the way to insure the greatest possible hardiness with any given variety.—Ohio Farmer.

—Beans are not eaten whole by any kind of stock excepting sheep. But, by grinding and mixing with corn or oatmeal, beans unfit for sale may be profitably fed to cattle, horses and pigs. They are very strong food, and as stock become used to them the proportion of bean-meal may be increased.—Rural New Yorker.

—Candied Fruits. Boil peaches, plums, pears, apricots, or almost any fruit, dressed in a thick syrup, made with a tea-cupful of water to each pound of sugar, until tender—no longer. Let them remain two days in the sirup; then take them out, drain them, and sprinkle sugar over each separately. Dry them slowly in the sun, or in an oven not too warm.—N. Y. Times.

—It is a common thing for farmers to burn a pile of brush spring and fall. Instead of burning suppose you try it as a mulch for fruit trees. It would benefit any kind of tree, but would not be ornamental on a lawn. Spread it in a ring extending from within two feet of the trunk to several feet beyond the most outspreading branches. In a dry season it retains moisture, and as it rots fertilizes the ground.—N. Y. Herald.

—Hon. Rufus Prince, President of the Main State Agricultural Society, writes the Maine Farmer: "I am no horse doctor, but I will give you a very simple but effective cure for 'scratches' given me by one that had had the care of horses for a long time and which has never failed with him. It is this: Wind a woolen rag around the horse's ankle and fasten it on and let it be until it wears off. No matter if you drive your horse in the mud, do not take off the rag, and before you think of it the scratches will be cured."

—A favorite way to cook potatoes now is to boil them in their jackets until they are tender, and then dry them off in a hot oven. Sweet potatoes are excellent also cooked in this way. Of course care must be taken to remove the potatoes from the boiling water as soon as they are tender. There is no vegetable that gains more by being prepared with due attention than the potato, and the difference between a soggy, water-soaked potato and one that is properly cooked is greater than many women seem to know.—N. Y. Post.

The Potato Rot.

The rotting of the potatoes is caused by a microscopic fungus, Peronospora infestans, which infests the potato plant. By fungus is understood a plant of a very low order, the more familiar members of which are the toadstools, mushrooms, mildews, and moulds. Some of the fungi live only on decaying organic matter, and are comparatively harmless; in fact, are often helpful in hastening decay and preparing substances for future usefulness. Other species of fungi are parasitic, growing upon living things. The bread mould is a familiar illustration of a small fungus which feeds upon dead matter, while the potato rot fungus is an equally striking example of one thriving upon a living plant. The mildew of the grape, which has caused great damage in many vineyards, is a close relative of the potato rot. They both belong to the same genus (Peronospora), a genus which contains a large number of species, and all are destructive to the host plants.

The potato rot fungus consists of long filaments or threads, which grow through the substance of the potato plant, and rob it of juices and induce a rapid decay. The fungus usually makes its first appearance upon the under side of the leaves as frost-like patches, soon causing the foliage to curl and turn brown. This frost-like appearance is due to a multitude of spores which have formed upon the ends of fungus threads protruding from the breathing pores of the leaf. There are many thousand stomata or breathing pores to the square inch, and a dozen or more threads may come out at each opening. Each of these threads forms branches, and each branch bears a spore. This helps to give an idea of the vast number of spores formed upon a single affected leaf. These spores germinate quickly and in a peculiar manner—each spore giving rise to several smaller spores provided with hair-like appendages (cilia) by means of which they move quickly around. This is a most admirable provision for the rapid and perfect spreading of the disease when it has once "struck" a potato field.

After the foliage has become affected the disease passes into the stems and down to the tubers, when the most destructive work is done. The farmer should be on the watch for this fatal pest of his potato field. Like most fungi this Peronospora thrives best in warm, rainy or "muggy" weather. In one of the recent press reports it was stated that the decay was caused by the wet weather which has prevailed in many parts of the country. The weather was only a favoring condition for the rot plant, as much so as the rains are aids to the profitable development of the various field crops.

It has been shown that disease is first seen upon the leaves. When the foliage begins to curl and turn brown, the potatoes should be dug at once, and in this way prevent the fungus from reaching the tubers. The potatoes should then be placed in a cool dry place—the conditions least favorable for the further growth of the fungus should it be present. All affected tubers should be thrown out and gathered with the vines and burned. This destroys multitudes of spores which might otherwise live through the winter and be ready to propagate the rot the following season.

There has been a great deal said about "rot-proof" varieties of potatoes, but they do not exist. Some sorts are more susceptible than others, probably from constitutional weakness. Many prizes have been offered in England for the finding of the best sorts to withstand the attacks of the rot fungus, but without any satisfactory results. Knowing that this disease is caused by a parasitic fungus, the rapid developement of which is favored by moist, warm weather, there is little hope of finding a variety of potatoes so abnormal as to be "rot-proof."—Scientific American.

Substitute for Gutta-percha.

A perfect substitute for gutta-percha, which claims to be far cheaper than that useful material, has been patented by a German chemist. The process of manufacture may be briefly described as follows: Powdered gum-copal and sulphur are mixed with about double their bulk of oil of turpentine or petroleum, and are well heated and thoroughly stirred. After being allowed to cool to a certain temperature, the mass has added to it casein in weak ammonia. Once more it is heated to its former temperature, and is then boiled in a solution of nut-gall or catechu. After some hours' boiling, the product is cooled, washed in cold water, kneaded in hot water, rolled out, and finally dried. If, as stated, the manufactured article cannot be detected from real gutta-percha, and will answer the same purposes, it will have wide application, if only for the insulation of electric wires and cables, and for the making of golf balls.—Chambers Journal.

The Champion Kicker.

The mule, which has so long held the palm as the champion kicker of the world, will soon have to take a back seat. The ostrich is now coming to the front as the champion at a 2:10 gait, and is liable to make a record which will not be beaten by mule or ant. As it is necessary when plucking an ostrich to keep a covering over the head of the bird in order to blind him, a doctor, who had charge of an ostrich farm at Anaheim, Cal., tried to perform the work with a stocking, and was getting along finely when he happened to move the aforesaid stocking from the bird's eyes. He saw his blunder and went head first out of the pen, leaving the plume to be carried off by some other knight-errant. As he tumbled over the fence the coming kicker let fly a kick, but instead of hitting the fortunate doctor, struck a fence-board, making tooth-picks of a valuable panel length.

The Monotonous Roar.

She had a little boy with her as she sat down in the street car beside a lady acquaintance, and drawled out:

"Oh, you don't know how glad I am to get home again. We were away seven weeks."

"So long as that!"

"Yes, indeed. You don't know how monotonous the roar of the sea becomes after a week or two."

"I've heard so."

"Ma, what sea are you talking about?" suddenly put in the boy.

"Hush, child."

"But Uncle George lives up in the woods in Isabella County, and it was all woods and mosquitoes and snakes, and such old beds and poor living that you cried to come home. Is that the kind of a roar you heard?"

The other lady was awful good. She looked out of the car window and began to talk about the weather.—Detroit Free Press.

A Long Time Between Smokes.

Nearly forty years ago, E. D. Baker, a New York State editor, with a company of friends, spent a day on an island in Lake George, in fishing and other sports. After they had satisfied their appetite for fishing they indulged in a song and story, ending with a smoke. The newspaper man, before retiring for the night, laid his pipe in the hollow of a tree near the ground, and forgetting about the circumstance, came away the next morning without his faithful friend. About ten years ago, as the editor was passing the spot on a boat, the incident above related flashed on his memory, and he said to a companion: "I'll go ashore and get my pipe." The pipe was found in the same identical place where he had left it twenty years before. He filled his pipe, took a smoke, and returned it again to its resting place. The other day the place was again visited and the pipe found in good order.—Buffalo Courier.

—Birmingham, Ala., known as the Magic City, has had a growth not less remarkable than that of some of the famous Western towns. In 1873 it was a ragged village of 2,500 inhabitants. In that year it was nearly depopulated by a cholera epidemic. An era of railroad building set in the State, and the intersection of two lines there brought Birmingham's population up to 4,000 in 1880. A census just completed gives the city in 1883 11,348 inhabitants. The assessed value of property has increased in three years from $3,000,000 to 8,300,000. The growth of the town is due to the development of the iron mines in the vicinity.—Chicago Tribune.

—Mr. Moody's niece is as apt at Scripture illustration as her famous uncle. The little tot has an older sister who has a very fine doll, which is not for general use in the nursery. On one occasion the little one secured it and was busily teaching it geography, when, hearing steps on the stairs, she fled to the bed and, standing in the center, hugged closely the prize and shouted out to the incomer: "If God be for me, who can be against me?"—Chicago News.

THE MARKETS.

CINCINNATI, October 12, 1883.

LIVE STOCK—Cattle—common	$1 75	@ 2 75
Choice butchers	4 00	@ 4 75
HOGS—Common	4 00	@ 4 50
Good packers	4 50	@ 4 90
SHEEP	3 75	@ 4 50
FLOUR—Family	5 25	@ 6 00
GRAIN—Wheat—Long berry red	1 07	@
No. 2 red	1 04	@ 1 05
Corn—No. 2 mixed	51½	@
Oats—No. 2 mixed	29½	@ 30
Rye—No. 2	56½	@
HAY—Timothy No. 1	10 50	@ 11 75
HEMP—Double dressed	8½	@
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	11 25	@ 11 50
Lard—Current make	7.40	@
BUTTER—Fancy Dairy	17	@ 18
Prime Creamery	20	@ 23
FRUIT AND VEGETABLES—
Potatoes per bar. from store	1 25	@ 1 30
Apples, prime, per barrel	2 50	@ 3 00
NEW YORK.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 35	@ 3 65
Good to choice	4 40	@ 7 00
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 spring	1 02½	@
No. 2 red	1 08½	@ 1 09
Corn—No. 2 mixed—new	59	@
Oats—mixed	32	@ 35
PORK—Mess	11 62	@ 11 65
CHICAGO.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 50	@ 4 25
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 00½	@
Corn—No. 2	48½	@
Oats—No. 2	27½	@ 27¾
Rye	51	@
PORK—Mess	10 75	@ 11 00
LARD—Steam	7-85	@
BALTIMORE.
FLOUR—Family	$5 00	@ 6 00
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 05¼	@ 1 05⅜
Corn—mixed	58½	@
Oats—mixed	34½	@
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	13 00	@
Lard—Refined	10½	@
LOUISVILLE.
FLOUR—A No. 1	$4 00	@ 4 50
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red, new	1 00	@
Corn—mixed	49	@
Oats—mixed	29	@ 30
PORK—MESS	12 00	@
INDIANAPOLIS.
WHEAT—No. 2 red, new	$1 01	@
CORN—mixed	47½	@
OATS—mixed	27	@
LIVE STOCK—Cattle—
Butchers' stock	3 75	@
Shipping cattle	5 25	@

A Miraculous Plant.

The discovery of a plant of great therapeutic virtue is said to have been made at Tonquin. The bark of this plant, it appears, is even "more medicinal than that moly that Hermes once to wise Ulysses gave," as it not only cures hydrophobia, but leprosy and the bite of reptiles. Wherever it has been applied in cases of the above mentioned diseases, the cure has been almost immediate, but, on the other hand, it has proved a violent poison in cases where it was not applicable. The healing virtues of the Hoanghan, as the plant is called in the Anamite language, were until a short time ago only known to a single native family. But after they were converted to Christianity the secret was communicated to the French. The plant and its miraculous qualities are described at length in a work by M. Lesserteur, formerly a missionary in Tonquin, and now Director of Foreign Missions at Paris.—Pall Mall Gazette.

—In Boston: "Ma, I really think I shall marry Mr. Perkins." "Well, my dear, if you must, you must, I suppose." "I can't see, ma, why you should object. Mr. Perkins is rich, he is actually a narobert, ma." "A what, my dear?" "A narobert, ma; you wouldn't have me make use of that vulgar word nabob, would you, ma?"—Indianapolis Journal.

Rescued From Agonizing Death.

NEW YORK.—Mr. James White, 1552 Broadway, formerly chief instructor in Dickel's Riding School, in this city, said to a newspaper reporter: "I broke my shoulder, arm and elbow, splitting the socket in four parts. Rheumatism set in and I employed the best physician. He tried everything, but I grew worse, and at last he said: 'I have one more thing to try and if that fails nothing can give you relief, and that is St. Jacobs Oil.' I used this great pain-reliever, and am able to use my arm, free from all rheumatic trouble. I have also recommended the remedy to a number of people, and in every case they have been speedily and effectually cured."

KEELY says his motor can not make its trial trip this winter because of a miscalculation in the "chromatic scales of the vibrator."

Advice to Consumptives.

On the appearance of the first symptoms—as general debility, loss of appetite, pallor, chilly sensations, followed by night sweats and cough, prompt measures of relief should be taken. Consumption is scrofulous disease of the lungs; therefore use the great anti-scrofulous or blood-purifier and strength-restorer, Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery." Superior to Cod liver oil as a nutritive, and unsurpassed as a pectoral. For weak lungs, spitting of blood, and kindred affections it has no equal. Sold by druggists. For Dr. Pierce's treatise on consumption send two stamps. WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y.

HOME-BOUND—The bed-ridden patient.—N. Y. News.

ONLY TWO BOTTLES.—Messrs. Johnston, Holloway & Co., wholesale druggists of Philadelphia, Pa., report that some time ago a gentleman handed them a dollar, with a request to send a good catarrh cure to two army officers in Arizona. Recently the same gentleman told them that both the officers and the wife of a well-known U. S. A. General had been cured of catarrh by the two bottles of Ely's Cream Balm.

A STRING BAND—A lynching party.—Baltimore Every Saturday.

The Weaker Sex

Are immensely strengthened by the use of Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription," which cures all female derangements, and gives tone to the system. Sold by druggists.

A TENOR singer can always secure a hell easier than a basso, because he can go higher.

YOUNG and middle-aged men, suffering from nervous debility and kindred affections, as loss of memory and hypochondria, should inclose three stamps for Part VII of World's Dispensary Dime Series of pamphlets. Address WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y.

WAGON tracks are the royal road, for are they not prints of tire?—Cincinnati Traveler.

THE FATHER OF FISH-CULTURE.

Seth Green's Ideas About the Finny Tribe and Some of His Varied Experiences.

[Turf, Field and Farm.]

"How did you ever come to devise this scheme?"

"I have been working at it ever since I was large enough to bend a pin."

The above remark was addressed to Mr. Seth Green, the veteran fish culturist, who is known to the entire world, and his reply indicates the extent of his labors.

"When I was quite young," he continued, "I would lie on the limbs of trees that reached out over the water entire afternoons watching the movements of the fish and studying their habits. In this way I discovered many characteristics which were before unknown. I saw, as every observer must see, the destructive elements that are warring against fish, and I realized that unless something were done, the life in the streams of this country would become extinct. To counteract this disastrous end became my life work, and I am happy to say I have seen its accomplishment."

"Were you successful on the start?"

"No, indeed. Up to that time all artificial attempts to hatch and raise fish from the spawn had failed, and I was compelled to experiment in an entirely new manner. The work was a careful and tedious one, but I finally succeeded, and to-day I am able to hatch and raise fully seventy-five per cent. of all spawn."

"Enormous! Why, that is a larger percentage than either the vegetable or animal kingdoms produce in a natural condition."

"I know it, but we exercise the greatest care in the start, and guard the little fellows until they become able to care for themselves."

The foregoing conversation occurred at Caledonia, where the representative of this paper was paying a visit to the State Fish Hatcheries. It has been his privilege to report very many interesting sights within the past twenty-five years, but the view presented here exceeds in interest anything ever before attempted.

"How many fish are there in those ponds, Mr. Green?"

"As we have never attempted to count them it will be impossible to say. They extend way up into the millions though. We shipped over three millions out of the ponds this year, and there seemed to be as many afterward as before. We have nearly every variety of the trout family and many hybrids."

"You speak of hybrids, Mr. Green. What do you mean by that?"

"I have experimented for years in crossing the breed of the various fish, and am still working upon it. We cross the female salmon trout with the male brook trout, and thus produce a hybrid. Then we cross the hybrid with the brook trout, which gives us three-quarter brook trout and one quarter salmon trout. This makes one of the finest fishes in the world. It has all the habits of the brook trout, lives in both streams and lakes, develops vermilion spots on his sides, rises readily to a fly, is far more vigorous and fully one-third larger than ordinary brook trout of the same age. The possibilities of development in the fish world are great, and we are rapidly ascertaining what they are."

As the man of news watched the countenance of Mr. Green while he was giving the above account, he could not but feel that he was in the presence of one of the few investigators who, from a rich and life-long experience, bring great benefit to the world. Let the reader imagine a strong and stalwart frame, surmounted by a head strongly resembling that of Secrates, and covered with a white, silky beard and luxuriant gray hair. Seth Green, the father of fish culture, is a picture of health, and the reporter could not help remarking so.

"If you had seen me the last winter and spring, young man, you might have thought differently," said the veteran.

"How is that? One would think, to look at you, that sickness was something of which you knew nothing."

"And so it was until last winter. I went down into Florida in the fall to see what kind of fish they had in that State and study their habits, and was attacked with malaria in its severest form, and when I came home I realized for the first time in my life that I was sick. My symptoms were terrible. I had dull aching pains in my head, limbs and around my back. My appetite was wholly gone, and I felt a lack of energy such as I had often heard described but had never experienced. Any one who has ever had a severe attack of malaria can appreciate my condition. I went to bed and remained there all the spring, and if there ever was a sick man I was the one."

"It seems hardly possible. How did you come to recover so completely?"

"My brother, who had been afflicted by a severe kidney trouble and threatened with Bright's disease, was completely cured by a remedy in which I had great confidence. I therefore tried the same remedy for my malaria and am happy to say I am a well man to-day and through the instrumentality of Warner's Safe Cure, which I believe to be one of the most valuable of medicines. Indeed, I see it is endorsed by the United States Medical College of New York, and that Dr. Gunn, dean of that institution, has written a long article concerning its value."

"And are you now as well as formerly?"

"Apparently so. I keep the remedy on hand all the while though, and do not hesitate to recommend it to others."

"One question more: How many ponds of fish have you here and how are they divided?"

"Well, we have 43 ponds, which are divided up as follows: Twenty-two ponds of brook trout, 2 ponds of salmon trout, 4 of McCloud river or rainbow trout, 2 ponds of German trout, 3 of California mountain trout, 2 ponds of hybrids, 4 of one-quarter salmon and three-quarters brook trout, 2 ponds of gold fish, and 1 pond of Carp. Then we have what we call the Centennial pond or 'happy family,' consisting of crosses of different fish, including Kennebec salmon, Land Locked salmon, California salmon, brook trout, salmon trout and hybrids. These fish range in size from minnows to 18-pounders, and in age from one-and-one-half months to eleven years. I forgot to say, also, that we have a 'hospital' pond, which is entirely empty, which speaks pretty well for a community of many millions. Indeed the whole secret of the fish culture can be summed up in four things. Impregnation—using no water. Plenty of food. Plenty of pure water and cleanliness."

The numerous fish exhibitions which are taking place in all parts of Europe and the unusual interest which is being manifested in this subject throughout the world, all owe their origin to the process above described as originated and conducted by Seth Green. It is certainly cause for congratulation to every American that this country produces so many men whose genius brings value to the world, and it is proof positive of the greatest merit that a remedy even with such high standing as Warner's Safe Cure is known to have should be so strongly endorsed and recommended by one so reputable and reliable as Seth Green.

AN invaluable strengthener for the nerves, muscles and digestive organs, producing strength and appetite, is Brown's Iron Bitters.

HALF a loaf is, no doubt, better than none, but a newspaper man never gets a chance to loaf at all.—Rochester Post-Express.

FLORENCE, GA.—Dr. W. B. Prather says: "Brown's Iron Bitters has given satisfaction in every instance I have known it used."

THE prominent man in the city is the street sweeper. He fills the public eye.—The Judge.

REV. W. B. SMITH, Grafton, Mass., says: "I have derived benefit from using Brown's Iron Bitters for a low state of blood."

THE dude proper parts his hair, his watch-chain and his name in the middle.—Philadelphia News.

"Mother Swan's Worm Syrup," for feverishness, restlessness, worms. Tasteless.

REDDING'S Russia Salve, best family salve in the world, and excellent for stable use. 25cts.

"Buchu-paiba." Complete cure, all annoying Kidney Diseases, irritation. $1.

IN 1850 "Brown's Bronchial Troches" were introduced, and their success as a cure for Colds, Coughs, Asthma and Bronchitis has been unparalleled.

SWIFT'S SPECIFIC (S. S. S.) has cured me of hereditary Scrofula of the worst type. The medicine is more than you claim for it, and I hope any who doubt will write to me. E. C. HAWES, JR., Clarksville, Ga.

Skinny Men. "Wells' Health Renewer" restores health and vigor, cures Dyspepsia.

IF afflicted with Sore Eyes, use Dr. Isaac Thompson's Eye Water. Druggists sell it. 25c.

Wells' "Rough on Corns." 15c. Ask for it. Complete, permanent cure. Corns, bunions.

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer

Is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from dandruff, restore gray hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which Sulphur, Sugar of Lead and Nitrate of Silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. JOHN D. PARK & SONS, Wholesale Agents, Cincinnati, Ohio, and C. N. CRITTENTON, New York.

I USED Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) for a bad case of Blood Poison from Malaria, and am satisfied that it saved my life, as I was given up to die. C. G. SPENCER, Sup't Gas Works, Rome, Ga.

"Rough on Rats." Clears out rats, mice, flies, roaches, bed-bugs, ants, vermin. 15c.

STRAIGHTEN old boots and shoes with Lyon's Patent Heel Stiffeners, and wear them again.

FOR burns, scalds, bruises, chapped hands, sores or piles, use St. Patrick's Salve.

ST. JACOBS OIL

(1)

THE GREAT GERMAN REMEDY FOR PAIN.

CURES

Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica

Lumbago, Backache, Headache, Toothache, Sore Throat, Swellings, Sprains, Bruises, Burns, Scalds, Frost Bites, And All Other BODILY PAINS and ACHES. Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere. Fifty Cents a bottle. Directions in 11 Languages.

THE CHARLES A. VOGELER CO., (Successors to A. VOGELER & CO.) Baltimore, Md., U. S. A.

CATARRH ELY'S CREAM BALM

when applied by the finger into the nostrils, will be absorbed, effectually cleansing the head of catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions. It allays inflammation, protects the membrane of the nasal passages from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores taste and smell. A few applications relieve. A thorough treatment will positively cure. Agreeable to use.

HAY-FEVER

Send for circular. Price 50 cents by mail or at druggists. Ely Brothers, Druggists, Owego, N. Y.

Sure Cure Epilepsy or Fits in 24 hours. Free to poor. DR. KRUSE, 2844 Arsenal St., St. Louis, Mo.

$66 A WEEK in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. Addr's H. Hallett & Co., Portland, Me.

A WOMAN'S AFFAIR.

MRS. N. H. SMALL, the wife of the popular Deputy Sheriff and Assessor of Topsham, Me., writes us on May 15, 1883: "That she had been severely afflicted during several years with kidney and liver disease, accompanied with severe pains and backache. Having tried many so-called cures, and medicines, and doctor's prescriptions, without receiving any benefit, and while seeking for a cure, she noticed the advertisement of Hunt's Remedy and decided to try it. Having bought a bottle at Mr. Johnson's drug store, commenced using it with such flattering results that she continued its use, and after using only five bottles the improvement in her health is so marked that she wishes all who are afflicted in like manner to know of this most valuable and reliable medicine; and she most cheerfully recommends Hunt's Remedy to all, and especially to females who are troubled with the complaints peculiar to the sex."

A FAMILY BLESSING.

Under date of May 10, 1883, we have received the following information from Mr. Lorenzo Lombard, of 18 Chase street, Portland, Me. Mr. Lombard says: "For several years past I have been troubled with severe backache and pains in the side, and when I would lie down I could not rest well, as it seemed impossible for me to get into an easy position; and my aches and pains increased constantly to such an extent that I became convinced that I had a disease of the kidneys fastened to me, and after having used doctors' prescriptions and many of the so-called cures without getting any benefit, I was persuaded by a near neighbor, Mr. Jones, to try Hunt's Remedy, as himself and wife had been greatly benefited by its use, and many others of our acquaintances spoke of its merits in the highest terms. I decided to try it, and purchased a bottle at Nichol's drug store, and as soon as I had taken a few doses of it the pains in my back were relieved, and after taking three bottles my sideache and lame back are cured, and I can truly testify that Hunt's Remedy is an article of great merit, and will do all that is claimed for it, and I know of many other people in Portland who have found a cure in Hunt's Remedy after all others failed to do any good, and I recommend it to all who have kidney or liver disease, hoping that this may be the means of relieving some sufferer who does not know of its merits of Hunt's Remedy."

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED

STOMACH BITTERS

In chronic dyspepsia and liver complaint, and in chronic constipation and other obstinate diseases Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is beyond all comparison the best remedy that can be taken. As a means of restoring the strength and vital energy of persons who are sinking under the debilitating effects of painful disorders, this standard vegetable invigorant is confessedly unequaled. For sale by all Druggists and Dealers generally.

$60 5-TON

Iron Levers, Steel Bearings, Brass Tare Beam, JONES, HE PAYS THE FREIGHT. Sold on trial. Warrants 5 years. All sizes as low. For free book, address JONES OF BINGHAMTON, BINGHAMTON, N. Y.

ROOFING, TIN PLATES, SHEET IRON, Sheet Copper, and Brass Wire, Rivets, &c. Fine Solder and Genuine Babbitt Metal. Full information about qualities given. MERCHANT & CO., 521 Cherry Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

"THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST." SAW MILLS, ENGINES, THRESHERS, Horse Powers, (For all sections and purposes.) Write for Free Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

DYKE'S BEARD ELIXIR Forces luxuriant Mustache, Whiskers or hair on bald heads in 20 to 30 days. No injury. Easily used. [illegible] L. L. SMITH & CO., Agents, Palatine, Ill.

Lady Agents can secure permanent employment and good salary selling Queen City Skirt and Stocking Supporters, etc. Sample outfit Free. Address Queen City Suspender Co., Cincinnati, O.

PATENTS NO PATENT, NO PAY! R. S. & A. P. LACEY, Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C. Full instructions and Hand-Book of Patents sent free.

CHICAGO SCALE CO. 151 South Jefferson Street, Chicago, Ill. 2-Ton Wagon Scale, $40; 4-Ton $60; "Little Detective," $3. Send for Price List.

$1,000 PER YEAR! NO PEDDLING. Agents wanted everywhere to manage BRANCH OFFICE. Terms and prospectus for 10c (silver). INTERNATIONAL AG'Y, Box 174, Chatham, Ont.

LADIES, Try it. Robb's Family Physician, the leading medical book. We offer Agents special terms for 60 days. ROBB & CO., Chicago, Ill.

HAIR Wholesale and retail. Send for price-list. Goods sent C. O. D. Wigs made to order. E. BURNHAM, 71 State Street, Chicago.

Good Pay for Agents. $100 to $200 per mo. made selling our fine Books & Bibles. Write to J. C. McCurdy & Co., Cincinnati, O.

Young Men learn TELEGRAPHY here and we will give you a situation. Circulars free. VALENTINE BROS., Janesville, Wis.

OPIUM and WHISKY HABITS cured at home without pain. Book of particulars sent free. B. M. WOOLLEY, M. D., Atlanta, Ga.

AGENTS Coin Money by selling Dr. Chase's Family Physician and Second Receipt Book. $2. Address A. W. HAMILTON & CO., Ann Arbor, Mich.

$4,444 a Year at home. Terms and costly outfit free. Address H. A. ELLS & Co., Chicago.

$250 A MONTH. Agents Wanted. 90 best selling articles in the world. 1 sample FREE. Address JAY BRONSON, DETROIT, MICH.

AGENTS make money selling our Family Medicines; no capital required. STANDARD CURE CO., 197 Pearl St., New York.

WANTED—Agents for an article in general use; $3 to $5 per day made easy; send 10c for sample and circular. Address J. F. DAVIS, Fall River, Mass.

AGENTS WANTED. Fastest selling books. Largest profits to canvassers. Circulars free. COBURN & NEWMAN, Publish'g Co., CHICAGO.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STINSON & Co., Portland, Me.

Vital Questions!!

Ask the most eminent physician

Of any school, what is the best thing in the world for quieting and allaying all irritation of the nerves and curing all forms of nervous complaints, giving natural, child-like refreshing sleep always?

And they will tell you unhesitatingly

"Some form of Hops!"

CHAPTER I.

Ask any or all of the most eminent physicians:

"What is the best and only remedy that can be relied on to cure all diseases of the kidneys and urinary organs; such as Bright's disease, diabetes, retention or inability to retain urine, and all the diseases and ailments peculiar to Women"—

"And they will tell you explicitly and emphatically "Buchu."

"Ask the same physicians

"What is the most reliable and surest cure for all liver disease or dyspepsia, constipation, indigestion, biliousness, malarial fever, ague, &c.," and they will tell you:

"Mandrake! or Dandelion!"

Hence, when these remedies are combined with others equally valuable

And compounded into Hop Bitters, such a wonderful and mysterious curative power is developed which is so varied in its operations that no disease or ill health can possibly exist or resist its power, and yet it is Harmless for the most frail woman, weakest invalid or smallest child to use.

CHAPTER II.

"Patients

"Almost dead or nearly dying"

For years, and given up by physicians of Bright's and other kidney diseases, liver complaints, severe coughs called consumption, have been cured.

Women gone nearly crazy!

From agony of neuralgia, nervousness, wakefulness and various diseases peculiar to women.

People drawn out of shape from excruciating pangs of rheumatism,

Inflammatory and chronic, or suffering from scrofula!

Erysipelas!

Salt rheum, blood poisoning, dyspepsia, indigestion, and in fact almost all diseases frail

Nature is heir to

Have been cured by Hop Bitters, proof of which can be found in every neighborhood in the known world.

WEBSTER'S UNABRIDGED.

In Sheep, Russia and Turkey Bindings.

THE STANDARD.

GET THE BEST

Webster—it has 118,000 Words, 3000 Engravings, and a New Biographical Dictionary.

Standard in Gov't Printing Office. 32,000 copies in Public Schools. Sale 20 to 1 of any other series.

Aid to make a Family intelligent. Best help for SCHOLARS, TEACHERS and SCHOOLS.

Webster is Standard Authority with the U. S. Supreme Court. Recommended by the State Sup'ts of Schools of 36 States.

"A LIBRARY IN ITSELF."

The latest edition, in the quantity of matter it contains, is believed to be the largest volume published. It has 3000 more Words in its vocabulary than are found in any other Am. Dict'y, and nearly 3 times the number of Engravings.

The Unabridged is now supplied, at a small additional cost, with DENISON'S PATENT REFERENCE INDEX.

"The greatest improvement in book-making that has been made in a hundred years."

G. & C. MERRIAM & CO., Pub'rs, Springfield, Mass.

Swift's Specific

Is a complete antidote to all kinds of Blood Poison and Skin Humor.

INHERITED IT.—My family all have Scrofula—some mildly, but my case was of the worst type, and resisted all treatment until I used Swift's Specific, which cured me sound and well by forcing all the poison out through the pores of the skin. It is the greatest medicine in the world, and I hope any who doubt will write me here.

E. C. HAWES, JR., Clarksville, Ga.

After suffering twenty-five years with a painful Dry Tetter, and trying many physicians, I was at last relieved by the use of Swift's Specific, and I cheerfully commend it to all similarly afflicted.

REV. L. B. BRANHAM, Macon, Ga.

Our treatise on Blood and Skin Diseases mailed free to applicants. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Drawer 3, ATLANTA, GA.

CANCER INSTITUTE. AURORA ILL. Established, 1872; Incorporated, 1880. For the Cure of Cancers, Tumors, Ulcers, Scrofula and SKIN DISEASES, without the use of knife or LOSS OF BLOOD, and little pain. For INFORMATION, CIRCULARS AND REFERENCES, address DR. F. L. POND, Aurora, Kane Co., Ill.

AGENTS WANTED EVERYWHERE to sell the best Family Knitting Machine ever invented. Will knit a pair of stockings with HEEL and TOE complete in twenty minutes. It will also knit a great variety of fancy-work for which there is always a ready market. Send for circular and terms to the Twombly Knitting Machine Co., 163 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

$65 A MONTH and BOARD for three live Young Men or Ladies, in each county. Address P. W. ZIEGLER & Co., Philadelphia.

FREE By return mail. Full Description Moody's New Tailor System of Dress Cutting MOODY & CO, Cincinnati, O.

PARSONS' PURGATIVE PILLS

MAKE NEW RICH BLOOD

And will completely change the blood in the entire system in three months. Any person who will take ONE PILL EACH NIGHT FROM ONE TO TWELVE WEEKS, may be restored to sound health, if such a thing be possible. For curing Female Complaints these Pills have no equal. Physicians use them in their practice. Sold everywhere, or sent by mail for 25 cents in stamps. Send for pamphlet. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

Three Particular Points.

Point the First.—BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is not an intoxicating compound. It is a tonic medicine, not a drink. It is a skillfully compounded preparation made to restore strength and health; not a beverage to be sold in bar-rooms and taverns.

Point the Second.—BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is free from everything injurious. The most delicate ladies and the most enfeebled infants may use it with perfect safety and with great advantage. While it is powerful in its remedial agency, it is gentle in its operation, restoring wasted strength and imparting robust health in the most efficient manner.

Point the Third.—BROWN'S IRON BITTERS is made by the Brown Chemical Company of Baltimore, a long-established house, whose reputation is well-known to the business world and the general community. There is no risk in buying such a medicine. 6

For Two Generations

The good and staunch old stand-by, MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT, has done more to assuage pain, relieve suffering, and save the lives of men and beasts than all other liniments put together. Why? Because the Mustang penetrates through skin and flesh to the very bone, driving out all pain and soreness and morbid secretions, and restoring the afflicted part to sound and supple health.

Mason & Hamlin Organs.

New Illustrated Catalogue, (40 pp. 4to) for season of 1883-4, including many new styles; best assortment of the best and most attractive organs we have ever offered, and at lowest prices, $22 to $600, for cash, easy payments or rented. Sent free.

MASON & HAMLIN ORGAN & PIANO CO.

Boston, 154 Tremont St.; New York, 46 East 14th St.; Chicago, 149 Wabash Ave.

PORTABLE & STATIONARY Steam Engines and STEAM BOILERS, smaller sizes adapted to Farm and Plantation Use! $200 We make six sizes, capacity from 3 to 50,000 ft. per day, with one saw, for our No. 1 Plantation Saw Mill. LANE BODLEY CO., John and Water Sts., Cincinnati, Ohio. Illustrated catalogue free.

PILES "Anakesis" gives instant relief, and is an infallible cure for Piles. Price $1 from druggists, or sent prepaid by mail. Samples free. Ad. "ANAKESIS" Makers, Box 2416, New York.

$72 A WEEK. $12 a day at home easily made. Costly outfit free. Address True & Co., Augusta, Me.

A. N. K.—E. 947

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOLUME VIII. BURLINGTON, KY., WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 24, 1883. NUMBER 52.

CONSTANCY.

HE SAID:

And leaned as he spoke on the pasture bars,
That he vowed by the heavens blue—
By the silvery moon and the shining stars—
To ever prove teal and true.

"Men change, 'tis true," he said, "but oh!
Believe me, my own true love,
Affection like mine, as time will show,
Has a strength that no power can move."

SHE SAID:

"No fear or doubts, beloved, have I,
For deep in this heart of mine
Is a love that will never dim or die,
But will last for aye—like thine!"

He gave her a ring and a fond caress,
While her tears like a torrent fell;
As with falt'ring words and in sore distress,
He bade her a long farewell.

But the man in the moon, who had oft viewed
Such tender scenes, I ween,
Winked knowingly then, as the lovers stoo
Beneath, in the silvery sheen.

* * * * * * *

Two summers with blossom and bug w gone,
Two winters with frost and snow;
And again the man in the moon looked do
On the whirling world below.

And what did he see? Why, the lover had w
A widow with wealth galore,
While the maiden had wedded, that v morn,
The clerk of a dry-goods store.

Quoth the man in the moon: "It's exa now
As it was when the world began,
No weaker thing than a woman's vow,
Excepting the vows of a man."

These things have given the man in the m
Such cynical views of life
That this is the reason he lives alone,
And never has taken a wife.

—P. H. Converse, in Philadelphia Ca

THE MOQUI SNAKE DANCE.

A Legend and Solemn Religious Ceremo of the Moqui Indians of Arizona.

THE LEGEND.

In the country of Tusayan, an anci province of Northern Arizona, th lived a people—the remote ancestors the present Moquis. An enterpris youth of this people, desiring to cover the sources of rain, constructe raft and ascended a great river u the banks and cliffs seemed to ro the heavens. The youth was kin received by the people of that regi and he married a wife and remai there several years. After this he turned to his own country, accompan by his wife. His own people were joiced to see him and gave his wi most flattering reception and kin treatment. This kindness aroused jealousy of the Moqui maidens caused her to be an object of envy persecution among them. The kept her troubles to herself, but, the course of time, gave birth t great serpent which made war on tribe as enemies of his mother, drove them into another region country, where he met another ser which killed him. The victorious pent welcomed the fugitive peopl his own country and bade them ren in it. They did so and that is present country and people know the Moqui-Pueblos, and this leg gave rise to

THE SNAKE DANCE.

This dance was instituted and is potuated in honor of the serpent teotor of the tribe, and to insu supply of rain. At first the s dance was solemnized every This caused too much rain, and country was inundated with fl Afterwards the dance was solem once in seven years. The co was then afflicted with drought famine. The rule now is to per the snake dance once in two y This is supposed to induce the pr amount of rain. Among these pe the snake is looked upon as the sacred object in existence, and, o account must a snake of any so killed or injured.

Some ten years ago Major J Powell, of the Colorado exploring pedition spent a winter at Wolpi of the principal Moqui towns, bu had no opportunity to witness snake dance, though he made language and religion of the p special subjects of study. And thought that not more than ten dozen white men now living have nessed this dangerous and solemn mony.

The last biennial snake dance o Moquis took place in the town of W during the month of July the pr summer, and was witnessed by eight white men, among whom Professor W. B. Powell, broth Major J. W. Powell, who made a of ninety miles and return, on back, in order to witness this d interesting ceremony. During Powell's visit in Junction City week we listened to a verbal descri of the dance, and the tradition o objects and origin, which are sub tially as here stated.

Eight days prior to the dance spent in preparations, collecting s and in secret ceremonies in the " fas," or lodge rooms. Two days to the dance were spent in strict fa by the dancers. When the day ar there had been collected about one dred and fifty snakes. About t fourths of them were rattlesnakes. snakes were kept in a "snake sha a place of confinement adjoining dance ground, shaded from the The door of the snake shade was c with a long curtain, the lower en which rested upon the ground. T were about fifty-six dancers, men boys. When the ceremonies menced the dancers made five ro dancing to the time of a solemn c while the priests and their assis sprinkled them with sacred and holy water. At the of the first series of rounds dancers divided into two compa The company which was to form the active and dangerous consisted of twenty-eight men, ra in the form of fourteen couples. dance was then resumed by these teen couples only, while the other pany stood in an assigned positi After a given number of rounds, to the same monotonous chant, great solemnity pictured on every the left hand man of one pair o dancers disappeared behind the cu into the snake shade. When he eme he had a snake crosswise in his m with the tail toward the left and head toward the right hand man. dance was, all this time, kept up in most continuous, solemn and ca manner; and it was the business of ght hand man, with a small wand in the right hand and his left hand resting on the neck of his partner, by close attention and quick motions and gesticulations to engage the attention of the snake, and prevent it from doing injury. Then the left hand man of another couple disappeared into the snake shade, and in due time emerged as his predecessor had done, with a snake in his mouth as above described. This process was kept up until the left hand men of the entire fourteen couples were dancing around the circle with one snake each in their mouths. Then the left hand man of the first couple again disappeared into the snake shade and emerged as before; but this time he had two snakes in his mouth, and this process was continued until the left hand men of the entire fourteen couples were dancing around the circle with two snakes each in their mouths. There was now some danger of snakes being dropped and escaping. This was closely watched and the fallen snakes, if any, were immediately captured by the priests and assistants and restored to the men who dropped them, or to one of the dancers in the company that was standing idle. When the left hand men had each acquired two snakes, then the disappearance into the snake shade began again and was continued as before until each left hand man of the fourteen couples had acquired a third snake. Then the excitement and solemnity was intense and earnest, and the dropping of snakes more frequent. The snakes were then unloaded into a consecrated circle drawn on the ground. The space of this circle was divided into four quarters by two marks drawn across it through the center at right angles to each other, and this circle was carefully sprinkled with sacred meal and holy water. The same processes of dancing, disappearances, reappearances, etc., were continued until all the snakes were removed from the snake shade and deposited in the consecrated circle. The snakes were then all gathered up by the dancers and the priests and their assistants, and carefully, but in great haste, carried down the declivity of the mesa into the surrounding valleys, and deposited unharmed in their former homes. The dancers then hurried back into the village and retired into the estufas, or lodge rooms, where they were caused to vomit and were anointed by the priests in the most solemn manner. This done, waiters and assistants appeared with soups, and afterward with other food, and the snake dance ended with a feast. Many of the dancers had been bitten, some of them dangerously, but death seldom occurs. The Moquis claim that, to them, the snake is holy and not poisonous, but two years ago one death resulted from the bites.

We have in the Tribune office a large photo of the village of Wolpi, taken by the J. W. Powell exploring party some years ago. It shows the east side of the town and mesa, with the sheep and goat corrals near the top of the declivity, and the flat dancing floor on the summit of the broad, flat rock on which the village stands. In this photo Prof. Powell is able to distinguish the tall standing rock around which the dance occurred, and from this he is able to locate the position of the snake shade, the spectators and other points of interest. We think this short, imperfect sketch may prove intelligible, and, perhaps, interesting to our readers, and we will add that we have succeeded in obtaining a promise from Prof. Powell, that, when he reaches home and procures from his trunk the copious notes taken by him on the occasion, he will prepare for one of the monthly magazines a full and detailed account of this dangerous and solemn snake dance of the Rattlesnake Moquis. This dance is properly reckoned the most thrilling and wonderful aboriginal ceremony which is now known to be practiced. After making all due allowances for the skill in management by hands that have been accustomed to snake training and snake handling for twenty generations or more, for the soothing, stupefying and healing qualities which, probably, are possessed by the secret (sacred?) ointments, meal and water which are freely used on the dancers and the snakes, the fact still remains that to the Moqui snake dance attaches an interest and wonderful mystery seldom equaled among the religious ceremonies of men. As a single example of the power of skill and judgment, we understand that a skilled snake handler will never touch a rattlesnake when coiled up. The coil is the striking and biting position. With a stick, or otherwise, quietly and gently straighten out the snake, and it then may be grasped with impunity. Other points of management well known to experienced men are, doubtless, equally important; yet, after all allowances are made, this wonderful, dangerous ceremony is capable of staggering the credulity of most men who have not witnessed it, and exciting the profoundest wonder in the minds of those who have.

HISTORICAL SKETCH.

The Moquis are a tribe of Pueblo, or town building Indians, whose manners and customs remain unchanged, or nearly so, by contact with Europeans. It is supposed that they were visited by the Spaniards about the time of the Spanish conquest of Mexico, and in this way they probably acquired donkeys, sheep and goats; or, these animals may have been acquired subsequently through the Zunis and other Indians who were visited by the Spaniards. But the Moquis appear to have been so inaccessible on the remote and elevated mesas, and so poor that they did not tempt the cupidity of the conquering Spaniards; and they now, probably, exhibit very fair examples of aboriginal life and character which reaches back into the ages prior to the discovery of America. At one time the Franciscan monks attempted to establish missions among them, but in 1680 the Moquis killed or expelled the missionaries. In 1748 another attempt was made by the Franciscans to establish missions, but with only local and temporary success. In 1723 the Viceroy of Mexico attempted to conquer the Moquis, but failed. At times they have suffered much from the attacks of the Apaches and Navajos. They are formed into a number of small tribes or families, with one supreme chief. They are strictly an agricultural people, raising grain, vegetables, fruits and cotton. They also have donkeys, sheep, and goats. They live in seven towns, located on mesas, or bluffs, from two hundred to seven hundred feet above the adjacent valleys. Their houses are of adobe brick or stone laid in mortar, several stories high, in terraces. The roofs are of poles, rushes and clay. The floors are of earth, sometimes covered with rushes. The Moquis knit, weave and spin their native wools and cotton and trade a portion of the products with other tribes. The men wear blankets with leggings of dressed skins. The women wear shawls and other garments made of cotton and wool.

When the country first passed into the jurisdiction of the United States the Moquis numbered about 8,000 persons; but, in 1855-6 they were almost destroyed by small-pox. Their total number now is about 1,600, distributed in seven villages. Three villages were represented in the snake dance witnessed by Prof. Powell. These villages were, probably, all that contained families of the Rattlesnake tribe. Other tribes are known as Deer, Water, Sand, Prairie Wolf, Tobacco and other names; but all are under one chief. The Moquis resemble the Zunis in many respects.—Junction City Tribune.

Settled by Wire.

A lady entered the office of a law firm on Montague street and consulted Mr. P., the junior partner, as to how she should act in a difficulty. She had rented part of her house to Mr. W., who had cleared out, owing her $200 for rent. He had removed with the intention of going to Bridgeport, and his furniture was on the way to the boat, which was to leave shortly for the Connecticut town. Mr. P. immediately prepared the necessary papers and got an attachment. A clerk was dispatched to New York with directions to put the attachment in the hands of the Sheriff at once and to search the river front for the furniture. The lady departed, and Mr. P. awaited developments. An hour later Mr. W. entered the lawyer's office. He wore a nonchalant air. He carried his hands in his pockets and a cigar in his mouth.

"I understand," said he to Mr. P., "that you are trying to seize my property."

"You are the man, I suppose," Mr. P. answered, "who hired Mrs. Blank's house and quitted without paying the rent, and are removing your furniture to Connecticut?"

"That's about the size of it," Mr. W. said, "and I thought I would just step in and ask whether you had got my property yet?" Then he laughed gaily, as one who had made a pleasant joke. At that moment there came a ring at the telephone. Mr. P. jumped up and responded with the usual "Hello."

"Who's that?" came back. "I—P.," was the answer, Mr. P. recognizing the voice of his clerk who had gone over the river with the attachment.

"We've hunted everywhere," came through the telephone, "and can't find the furniture."

Mr. P. turned to Mr. W. and said: "What are you going to do about it?"

"In the first place," Mr. W. replied, "I want to know whether you've got my furniture—ha, ha!"

"Tell the Sheriff," said Mr. P., with his lips to the telephone, "to take the furniture off the boat and put it in a storehouse."

"Hold, there," Mr. W. exclaimed, his tone of jubilant banter changed to one of genuine alarm; "I don't want the furniture taken off the boat."

"Well, what shall we do?" Mr. P. said; "you hear my orders?"

The telephone bell rang violently. Mr. P. put his ear to the funnel and heard these words delivered with great distinctness and emphasis: "I-tell-you-we-haven't-got-the-furniture-we-can't-find-it."

"I don't care if the sheriff's fees are $50," Mr. P. shouted in return through the instrument; "the defendant has to foot the bill. Store the furniture at once."

"Look here, Mr. P.," the defendant said in a tone of supplication, "what's the best I can do?"

The bell rang again furiously. Mr. P. put his ear to the tube and the speaker said in tones which Mr. P. recognized as those of a clerk in the sheriff's office: "Blank, blank you, what do you mean? Are you crazy? Don't you hear? We haven't got the bank, blank furniture, and we don't know where it is."

"Just so," replied Mr. P. "Do the best you can, and damage it as little as possible. The defendant will have to stand the expenses."

"Now don't be severe," Mr. W. said, almost in despair; "tell me what you demand."

"Pay the full amount due," replied Mr. P., "and we'll throw off the costs and expenses."

The bell rang again with louder tones than before. Mr. P. listened. The voice that last answered said: "I'll be blank blanked if I ever came across such stupidity. Hold on and I'll spell it out to you."

And then carefully, letter by letter, the voice spelled out: "We haven't been able to find the furniture."

The defendant by this time had got out his pocket book and was counting out the bills. When he had paid the $200 Mr. P. went to the telephone and called up the sheriff's office once more.

"Now then, stupid, what's the matter?" was the reply. "Give the sheriff directions to let the furniture go," Mr. P. said.

Then he sat down and wrote a receipt. The bell went off again like mad. Mr. P. cooly placed his mouth to the telephone and said: "Say, tell the sheriff to let the furniture go and send on his bill for his fees."

Then Mr. P., with a smile on his face, listened for a reply. "Blank blank you, you thick-headed ass," came over the wires into Mr. P.'s ear "we haven't got the property."

Then Mr. W. quitted the office. Mr. P. rang up the sheriff's, and received a complimentary reply. Then it was Mr. P.'s turn. "While you were bellowing over the wires," he said, "the defendant was by my side, and I had to make the proper answers to bring him to terms. Anything stupid or like an ass in that? Send over your bill, the suit's settled."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Religious.

HE CARETH.

"Oh! ye of little faith!"
Dear Lord, I know it: little faith have I—
Thy lilies of the field are clothed with care
In garments of a far more glorious dye
Than even kingly Solomon might wear.
"Consider these, my lilies,"
My Lord has said to me,
"Though they take no thought for clothing,
They are clothed most royally."

"Oh! ye of little faith!"
Dear Lord, I know it; shalt not Thou, my King,
Thou who hast clothed Thy lilies, care for me?
If one small flower hath need of no good thing,
What can Thy children ask too great for Thee?
Thou clothest well Thy lilies—
Thou hast laid Thy glory down,
To lead me to Thy Kingdom—
To win for me a crown.

"Oh! ye of little faith!"
Dear Lord, I know it; trembling faith and small,
Though frail they are, and worthless to our mind,
Thou feed'st Thy little sparrows when they call;
They never doubt or count Thee as unkind.
"Behold these little sparrows!"
My Lord has said to me,
"Though they have no barn or storehouse,
They are fed abundantly."

"Oh! ye of little faith!"
Dear Lord, I know it; shalt not Thou, my God—
Thou who dost feed Thy sparrows, give me food?
If one small bird may range the world abroad,
Wilt Thou deny me any needful good?
Thou feedest well Thy sparrows—
Thou hast left Thy Father's side
That I might share Thy glory,
And my soul be purified.

"Oh! ye of little faith!"
Dear Lord, I know it; if with royal hand
Thine Heavenly Father feedeth such as these,
He knoweth surely all our needs, who stand
And wait upon His bounty with our pleas.
Our Heavenly Father knoweth
Our longings and our care,
And His ear is ever ready
To hear the weakest prayer.

"Oh! ye of little faith!"
Dear Saviour, if the Father spared not Thee,
But gave Thee freely for the life of all
His well-beloved—shall not this love-gift be
A covenant for all things great and small?
If Thou hast given, oh! Father—
The greatest Gift and best—
Shall we not like little children
Trust Thee wholly for the rest?

—N. Y. Observer.

Was Thaddeus Stevens a Skeptic.

The following incidents will show that the claim of Thadeus Stevens as a skeptic is of very doubtful propriety. In the year 1829 the Pennsylvania Bible Society, through her auxiliaries, resolved to explore and supply the destitute families of the State with copies of the Holy Scriptures. Mr. Stevens at that time resided in Gettysburg. Meeting a student one day in the street, he said to him: "Young man, are you a student?" "Yes, sir." "Well, what are you going to do during vacation?" "I don't know; perhaps will visit York, my old home." "Would you like to have a job whereby you could earn something?" "Yes, certainly." "Well, I have a job for you." "What is it?" "Why, the Bible Society has resolved to have this county visited and have all the destitute families supplied with Bibles, and I have promised to have one township explored and supplied, and if you will undertake it I will furnish you a horse and pay you a dollar a day." "Well," I replied, "I will." So in a day or two I got Stevens' horse and borrowed a pair of saddle-bags and started out on my mission. When I was about to start Stevens gave me five dollars as a donation to begin with. I explored the township west of the college and Stevens footed the bill.

Some months previous to Mr. Stevens' death it was reported that he was very sick, likely to die. Rev. I. H. Torrence, being in Washington City, took occasion to call at the residence of Mr. Stevens on a Sunday afternoon. The housekeeper informed him that Mr. Stevens could not be seen, but, sending his card with a request to see Mr. Stevens if agreeable, he heard the voice of the old Commoner distinctly say: "Admit him; tell him to come up." On entering the room, after passing the courtesies of the day and remarking that it had been announced that Mr. Stevens was dead, he replied: "Yes; and I have no doubt but some people would be very glad if it were true; but I yet live." Mr. Torrence then remarked: "It is no idle-curiosity that has led me to make this call. I desire to communicate with you on the subject of religion. Anything you may say will be considered strictly confidential, if you desire it;" to which he replied: "I have nothing to conceal on that subject." I then asked him: "Should this sickness result in your decease, what shall we say about your belief in the Bible?" He raised himself up in bed, drew his mantle around him, adjusted his cap, and said: "The Bible? Take that away and there is nothing left." I then said: "What about the atonement?" To which he replied: "I don't know what effect the death of a man eighteen hundred years ago could have on me to-day." To which I replied: "Nor do I understand the mystery of redemption. But suppose it could be made out that redemption through Christ is a fact, what then?" He answered: "I should be compelled to believe it." "I propose, Mr. Stevens, to give you the opinion of a friend of yours, a member of your profession, a lawyer who, I think you will admit, was well circumstanced to understand the facts in the case." "To whom do you refer?" said Mr. Stevens. I replied: "St. Paul." "Ah," said he, "that's very ingenious. What does he say?" I referred him to the tenth chapter of Hebrews and tenth verse: "By the which will we are sanctified through the offering of the body of Jesus Christ once for all." "This proves that the atonement is God's plan for saving the world. Whether we accept it or reject it, it is for us to determine." Mr. Stevens replied that if he were to say that he was a Christian he would consider himself an arrogant hypocrite, but remarked with a great deal of feeling, subdued tone and softened eye: "My old Baptist mother had it, and I believe in my mother." The interview was continued at considerable length as to what constituted a genuine Christian life and faith. Mr. Torrence placed his finger on the marble stand by the bedside and said: "This is a sensation which we call cold, which is the absence of heat. This is proven through the medium of the senses and may be considered a physical fact demonstrative through the nervous system, but there are other facts which do not partake of the nature of physical form that are equally true." Mr. Stevens replied: "What are they?" To which Mr. Torrence answered: "Twice two is four. This is purely intellectual and yet a veritable fact; so likewise is Christian faith. The fact of the atonement being settled, its acceptance becomes a matter of faith and therefore a truth." Butler's "Analogy of Religion" was referred to, the evidences of the truth and genuineness of the disciples as given by legal writers, to all which Mr. Stevens gave a ready assent to the force of the arguments. Mr. Stevens did not die from that attack of serious illness, but lived for months afterwards, and these incidents are given now illustrative of his general character.—Irvin H. Torrence, in Philadelphia Times.

Two Christians.

In no place, perhaps, do the small defects and virtues of men and women come to the light more distinctly than in the hotels and boarding-houses which are places of summer resort. The guests have left home to gain health, or to enjoy pleasure, and with this fixed purpose in view they are apt to show a selfishness and ill-manner which would be impossible to them in their own homes. On the contrary, nowhere are the gentleness, courtesy and sympathy of a religious man or woman more effective than in this mixed society of strangers. An example of this was offered last season in a summering-house on the Allegheny Mountains. A middle-aged, unmarried lady arrived one evening, who was reputed to be "Miss Blank, Home Missionary." Unasked, she said grace in a loud tone at the public table, and the same evening entered the parlor where some young people were arranging charades, and talked loudly against their "criminal folly," proposing a prayer-meeting instead. As she failed to touch or interest the girls, they giggled and behaved irreverently during the prayers that followed.

The next day she lectured the fishermen on their "cruelty," and whenever she could she took every prettily-dressed woman to task for her "wicked vanity," even denouncing the crochet-work with which two or three old ladies amused themselves, as a "sinful waste of time."

Of course Miss Blank became the bugbear of the whole house, and much of the ridicule which her grim face, and limp, untidy gown called forth fell on the Bible which she professd to love, and the hymns which she sang unceasingly in a loud key.

"If that is religion, Heaven forbid that I should ever accept it!" said a gay, pretty woman to whom she had talked for two hours.

A day or two later, a gentle, gray-haired old man came to the house without any introduction He was quiet and unobtrusive. There was no mistaking the simplicity and fine courtesy of a thoroughbred gentleman, but the distinguished trait in him was his quick sympathy with others. Before a week had passed the old people had confided their ailments to him, the girls consulted him as to the details of a picnic, the boys discovered him to be an authority on kites, boats and home-made telephones. Wherever he went the children and babies crowded about him.

When Sunday came, and the guests of the hotel repaired to the parlor to hear a sermon, what was their surprise to find that the quiet old man, whom they had already learned to love, was the famous Dr. ——, from New York, whose eloquence has not won so many souls to his Master's service as has his pure and noble life. If ever a sermon was listened to attentively, that sermon was. Its simply told and impressive truths will be remembered, and must always be associated with the genial, kindly man, who seemed to be the very embodiment of its spirit of "good-will" to men.

It is not enough that the light which God has given us should shine; it should so shine that it should guide the feet of others to Him—not drive them away.—Youth's Companion.

Gems of Thought.

—Purity, sincerity, obedience and self-surrender are the marble steps that lead to the spiritual temple.—Bradford.

—Man is not born to solve the problem of the universe, but to find out what he has to do, and to restrain himself within the limits of his comprehension.—Goethe.

—If We Only Knew.—

"And so, through this weary world we go,
Bearing a burden of needless woe,
Carrying hearts that are heavy and slow
Under their load of care;
When, O! if we only, only knew,
That God is tender, and strong, and true,
And that He loves us through and through,
Our hearts would be lighter than air!"

—As the sun does not wait for prayers and incantations before he rises, but straightway shines forth, and is hailed of all; so do not wait to do good for applause and noise and praise, but do it of your own desire; and, like the sun, you will be loved.—Epictetus.

—Cloudy days are many; bright days are few. We must catch each ray of sunlight as it comes. The clouds gather, and as they roll they hide the distant shores from our sight. The clouds that hide our future never lift. Blessed shadow! Who would wish to see one step along the way? An unseen Hand will guide us safely to the other side if we take firm hold and cast our care on Him. It is better to trust than to see. —Exchange.

—In every land of earth and in every age of the world, every man who has become unfolded into pre-eminent manhood has passed through the noble ordeal of self-sacrifice. He has renounced his own individual preferences in the interest of universal principles. He has been just in reverence for justice, true for truth's sake, and manly for the sake of that magnificent manhood which is so royal in its full grandeur as to seem to partake of the very majesty of God. In short, the way up into that eminent domain of character where in eternal principles rule is a way of self-surrender for infinite good.—A. M. Weeks.

Our Young Folks.

A CATASTROPHE.

Once seven ancient ladies sat, serenely taking tea,
Each with cap and kerchief white, knitting on her knee;
Each with cup and saucer quaint, sipping with a smile,
Chatting, chatting, busily, cozily, the while.

To complete the picture, in front of each a cat,
Purring, drowsily content, plump and peaceful, sat.
Hark! a tiny, scratching noise! Each cat cocks her ear;
Each dame drops her teacup—holds her breath to hear.

Tempted by the silence, forth timid mousie stole
Softly out; but wished herself back within her hole.
Seven beasts with glaring eyes, tails erect in air!
Seven dames that, screaming, hop each upon her chair!

Spell-bound at the dreadful sight, trembling mousie stands;
Ancient ladies weep and moan, wringing of their hands;
Peaceful tabbies turn and flee, overcome with fear.
Of them all, which do you think was frightened most my dear?—Golden Days.

A LECTURE ON MANNERS.

When the audience in Barn Hall had taken their seats, Superintendent Dick arose and asked them to kindly excuse Lecturer John Spicer for lateness, as he was waiting to hear his cousin Nell describe one other kind of bad manners. Superintendent Dick said he believed that Lecturer Spicer had heard of either five or six kinds of bad manners, he was not sure which; and while the audience were waiting, he himself would tell them something he had heard his grandmother say about manners. His grandmother said that when her mother was a little girl, children in the country who were out-doors playing or walking, used to make bows and courtesies to people who were riding past. The boys made bows and the girls made courtesies. and doing this was called "making their manners." Superintendent Dick said that if the girls present did not know how to make a courtesy, he would show them; and then he bobbed down and up in a very funny way.

He then asked the audience to rise and make their manners, upon which they rose with much noise and quickness, and the boys made each one his own kind of a bow, and the girls each one her own kind of a courtesy, and the whole effect was so funny that Superintendent Dick could not help laughing, and neither could the boys and girls themselves. In the midst of the merriment Lecturer Spicer entered, and the audience seated themselves as quietly as they were able to. Lecturer Spicer then took his stand in front, and after making his manners, which is to say, his bow, he began as follows:

Ladies and gentlemen, manner means way, and a manner is a way, and manners mean ways. The ways you do things are your manners. The ways you look, the ways you speak, the ways you act, the ways you move, the ways you eat, are your manners. What you do with your hat is a part of your manners. I do not mean hanging it up. I mean taking it off or keeping it on. Everybody has to have some kind of manners, because everybody has to have some kind of ways to do things. There are two kinds of manners; I will mention them. Good ones and bad ones. Your face looks better when you are having good manners than it looks when you are having bad ones. I have heard of six kinds of bad manners, and one more. I will mention them. Pig manners, one; Bear manners, two; Donkey manners, three; Post manners, four; Cock-a-doodle-doo manners, five; Cow-in-the-parlor manners, six.

First. Pig manners; and if you want to know what they are, go look in the pigs' pen when their dinner is being put into their trough. Every piggy hurries to get the most, and get the best. Every piggy looks out for itself, and does not care about the other ones. Children that have pig manners are the kind that want to be helped first at meal times, and want the best things for themselves, and the biggest pieces. They look out for themselves and do not care about other people getting anything good.

Second. Bear manners. Children that have bear manners are the kind that are gruff, and glum, and growly. They have cross-looking faces and sometimes stick their lips out, and snarl, and growl, and are most always a-grumbling and a-growling about something they want to do or they don't want to do. They talk in this way: "Find my hat!" "I want to go out!" "Open the door!" "I want something to eat!" and never think of a please or a thank you, and they get cross very often, and look cross.

Third. Donkey manners. Children that have donkey manners are the kind that want to do just what they want to and nothing else, no matter how much you may ask them and coax them. If you ask them to move, they stay still. If you ask them to stay still, they move. If you ask them to keep quiet, they make a noise. If you ask them to make a noise, they keep quiet. If you ask them to go of an errand, they say: "Don't want to!" or, "I ain't a-going to!" and the worst kind say: "I will!" and "I won't!" When they are playing, they never will do what the others want to, but only what they themselves want to.

Fourth. Post manners. Children that have post manners are the kind that do not answer when they are spoken to, any more than a post would. If a visitor says: "How do you do?" or; "Do you like to play tag?" or; "Do you like pictures?" or butterflies, or anything, they stand still as a post and do not speak; but may be if you should ask them if they liked candy, they would speak one word, and I guess it would be yes.

Fifth. Cock-a-doodle-doo manners. The children that have cock-a-doodle-doo manners are the kind that feel big and act so. When a rooster struts round among hens he acts as if he felt so big he did not know what to do, and sometimes he seems to feel so big that he has to get up on a fence and clap his wings, and crow, "Cock-a-doodle-doo!" Sometimes there'll be a lot of fellows playing, and a cock-a-doodle-doo fellow will come there, and he'll act as if he thought he knew more than all the rest, and thought he knew the right way to do everything better than everybody, and he'll give them the rules, and he'll strut round like a rooster, and in his house he does the same way to his mother and the other grown up ones, and ones that are not grown up. That kind of a fellow ought to stand up on the fence and clap his wings—no, I mean, his elbows—and crow, "Cock-a-doodle-doo! I know better than you!"

Sixth. Cow-in-the-parlor manners. Children that have Cow-in-the-parlor manners are the kind that are always getting in somebody's way, or pushing themselves in between people, or going in front of people, or stepping on somebody's feet, or on bottoms of ladies' clothes, or leaning against people, or tipping their own chairs over, or knocking down a vase, or a work-basket, or a tumbler of water. They are as clumsy as a cow in the parlor, and do not mind what they are about any more than a cow in the parlor would what she is about.

Besides these kinds there is another kind I heard of, called the Interrupters. Interrupters are the kind that begin to talk while other people are speaking; no matter who may be speaking; no matter if 'tis their father, or their mother, or company, the Interrupters do not wait for anybody to stop talking, but break right in and say what they want to.

I suppose that a boy or a girl or any other person might have two kinds of bad manners both at once. Some of the people at my house talked about this. My cousin said that if a boy should have pig manners and bear manners both he would be bad to live with and so would a girl if she should. My big brother said that if a boy should have three, pig manners, and bear manners, and donkey manners, he would want to keep him in a room by himself, and so he would a girl if she should have them; and said that if a boy and a girl should have pig manners, and bear manners, and donkey manners, and post manners, and cock-a-doodle-doo manners, all five, he would want to chain them up in cages: and said that if they should have all six kinds, pig manners, and bear manners, and donkey manners, and post manners, and cock-a-doodle-doo manners, and cow-in-the parlor manners, and be Interrupters besides, he would want to put each of them under a barrel and stop up the bungholes. I do not believe he would stop up the bungholes, for then they could not get air to breathe. My mother does not believe anybody could have so many kinds of bad manners and be alive. Once my mother went somewhere to stay and she had to come away because the children had such manners she could not stay. They had bear manners and some of the other kinds. I think it is very hard to have good manners all the time until you get used to having them.—Mrs. A. M. Diaz, in Wide Awake.

The Wonderful Gopher.

Four business men sat in a Third avenue car on their way down town yesterday. Looking up from his newspaper, one of them said:

"Here's an item that says gopher holes make horseback riding dangerous on the plains. Now, I would like to know what a gopher is, anyway," looking around inquiringly.

"A gopher is a striped squirrel," said a tall man, in a tone of quiet assurance.

"You're mistaken, sir," said his neighbor. "A gopher is a land turtle that burrows."

"I shall have to differ from you, gentlemen, interposed the fourth man. "A gopher is neither a striped squirrel nor a turtle. It is a kind of a rat."

A man on the opposite seat, who had listened to the conversation with evident interest, said:

"Excuse me, gentlemen, but you are all mistaken. A gopher is a snake. I've killed lots of 'em, and I know what I'm talking about."

"Are you willing to back your opinion?" asked the gopher-squirrel man, taking a roll of bills from his pocket.

"Certainly, sir. Here's five that says a gopher is a snake."

The money was put into the hands of the gentleman who started the discussion. He accepted it under protest, saying he was positive that a gopher was a gray burrowing squirrel. He had often seen them. A heated discussion followed, in which the words gopher, snake, squirrel, rat and turtle figured prominently. The money in the stakeholder's hand soon amounted to twenty-five dollars. It was agreed that Webster should settle the dispute. The gentleman alighted from the car, went into a hotel, and a copy of the "Unabridged" was procured.

"Gol-gop-p-p-gopher—here it is, said the stakeholder, as he ran his finger down the page:

Gopher—An animal of several different species. The name was originally given by French settlers to many burrowing animals from their honeycombing the earth. In Canada and Illinois the name was given to a gray burrowing squirrel; west of the Mississippi and in Wisconsin to a striped squirrel. In Missouri, a common species is a pouched rat of a reddish or chestnut brown color, with broad, mole-like fore feet. In Georgia a snake is called by the same name, and in Florida a turtle.

As the stakeholder refunded the money, he said: "Gentlemen, it appears that we are all right and all wrong. But we have, at least, learned something."—N. Y. Sun.

A Modern Fable.

A dog, on a warm summer day, lay down in the shade, and soon fell asleep. He was awakened by the noise of a huge bull approaching his shady resting-place.

"Get up," said the bull, "and let me lie down there!"

"No," replied the dog, "you have no right to the place; I was here first."

"Well," said the bull, looking innocently at the dog, but with a ferocious twinkle in his left eye, which made the dogs spinal column run cold and his lower jaw give way, "let us toss up for it."

"Thank you," said the dog, politely, "I never gamble," and he walked away.

Moral—Virtue has its own reward.—Life.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL,
Proprietors.

BURLINGTON, KY. OCT 24. 1883.

ADVERTISING RATES.

1 Column	1 year	$80
½ "	½ "	40
½	¼ "	20
¼ "	1 "	20
¼ "	½ "	10
¼ "	¼ "	6

For announcing candidates, $5. Obituary poetry, 5 cents per line. Obituary notices 20 lines free; over that number (excepting the announcement of the death) 3 cents per line.

Tributes of respect from lodges, &c., $1 50

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One year	$1 50
Six months	75
Three months	40

WITH this issue of the RECORDER closes the eighth year of its existence. While its patronage during that time has not been sufficient to make the editor a millionaire, the paper has been self sustaining, and during the past eight months the subscription list has had a steady and healthy growth, which induces us to believe that our efforts are appreciated by the people.

To those who have furnished us news from their respective neighborhoods, we are under many and lasting obligations, and trust that they may never tire in their well-doing.

There are very many persons who are and have been for a long time, constant readers of the RECORDER, but never have subscribed for it. We submit that in justice to themselves and the paper in particular that they should stand off no longer, but come bravely forward and hand in a year's subscription and see what peace of mind they will enjoy for the next twelve months. You can do us good and we will do you good. The benefits arising from the patronizing of your county paper are reciprocal.

The RECORDER is the best medium through which to reach the people of Boone county, and those wanting to lay their business before the county should avail themselves of the use of these columns.

In conclusion we say to all those whose names we have not but ought to have on our list, to come in and subscribe without further delay, and you will be doing only that which your county pride has repeatedly indicated to you is your duty.

CHOLERA has reappeared in Egypt.

OHIO Democrats have been jolifying ever since the election over there.

GOLD has been discovered in Dakota, and great excitement prevails there.

CRAPS is a very good game for getting up killings among worthless negroes.

THE salary of the Superintendent of the Cincinnati Chamber of Commerce is $5,000 a year.

IT is said that Little Phil Thompson will be a candidate for reelection to Congress in his district.

GEN. JAMES B. STEEDMAN, the soldier, editor and politician, died in Toledo, Ohio, last Thursday.

THE town marshal of Sadieville was shot and killed the other night by a ruffian he was trying to quiet.

THE vote for the Reform Democrat ticket in Hamilton county did not reach two thousand, except for one candidate.

THE colored people in some places are holding indignation meetings because of the recent decision in regard to the Civil Rights law.

THE jurors summoned here on last Thursday in the Tafferty-Geisler trial were mostly men of few smiles on that particular day. They were not disposed to lose the day.

THREE of the finest colts that ever left the State were sold by Mr. Harper, of Woodford county, to Morris & Patton, of St. Louis, Mo., for $18,000. They were all yearlings.

THE colored citizens of Louisville held an indignation meeting, last Saturday night, as they say "for the purpose of denouncing the most infamous decision affecting the rights of American citizens yet made."

ADVANCE sheets of Dr. Gale's annual report of the Central Kentucky Lunatic Asylum shows that during the year ending September 30th, 180 patients have been admitted and 110 discharged as cured.

THE officers in Lexington claim that since Governor Knott's inauguration there are not many pistols carried in that town. The Governor's reference in his inaugural address to the practice of carrying concealed weapons had a good effect in Lexington, at least.

THE prominent colored Republicans are somewhat indignant at the Supreme Court for deciding that the Civil Rights Law is unconstitutional. They say that the decision will have a very bad effect on the progress their race has been making for the past few years, and seem to consider that the anchor of their hope has been destroyed.

GOV. KNOTT'S refusal to send the state guards to Grayson to see Ellis Craft executed meets with hearty approval from all sections of the state. He understands that civil authorities have some power in this land, and that it is their duty to exercise it when necessary and not call upon the military on all occasions, before attempting to assert itself.

AMONG the legatees in Mrs. Lucinda Tousey's will are Owen Kirtley, $1,000; Betsy Leathers and Kate Kirtley, $1,500 each; Almeda Dollins and Carrie Gaines, $500 each; John Kirtley, $3,000; Southeastern Indiana Conference M. E. Church $2,000 for superanuated ministers and indigent children of deceased ministers; O. T. Porter, library and books.

THE Louisville courts are fining the gamblers of that city heavily, and thus far Gov. Knott has not interfered with his remissions, and the knights of the green cloth are feeling very uncomfortable under the circumstances. During Blackburn's administration the Louisville gamblers paid no attention to the courts, but now they will probably have to pay a few fines.

THE Lexington Transcript says: "If Neal can get a venue to this city he will, by the time of his trial so create a sympathy for him through the medium of tender-hearted jailors and reporters, his fellow-prisoners, and many of the State Guards who were with him through his trial, that it will be almost impossible to find a jury here who will hang him, though they may send him to the penitentiary for life.

IN Owen County John M. Palmer and Ben Crutchlon were neighbors until last Thursday, when they met, and Palmer accused Crutchlon of stealing his corn. Palmer was armed with a shot gun and Crutchlon unarmed, gathered a large stone. Palmer fired and Crutchlon threw the stone. Crutchlon is dead and Palmer has a very dangerous fracture of the skull, the rock hitting him in the top of the head.

TWO Morman preachers have made their appearance in Franklin county, Indiana, where two of the same faith were tarred and feathered, and say they came for the purpose of taking away with them twenty of the best looking young ladies in that section, and who have been partially converted to their faith. They wanted to stay over night with a gentleman who refused them, and upon their persisting he brought to his assistance a corn-knife, and rather than be made mince-meat of, they departed.

ONE of Ellis Craft's brothers relates the following dream he had a few nights since: "I dreamt I saw my brother in the heavenly world. He was a central figure of a group, and clad in white raiment. Around him stood men whom he accused in this life of swearing his life away, with the addition of the son of a certain rich man, and he stood with bloody garments just before brother Ellis, who was pointing his finger at him." Mr. Craft says he is still convinced that his brother was an innocent man.

AN exchange makes the following good suggestion:

"The season of the year is fast approaching when fires are generally the most numerous. Careful investigation has proven that a large number of the fires are due to the carelessness or negligence of the owners of the property. From one year to another, in many instances, no attention is paid to the condition of chimneys and of the building, and, consequently, no protection is placed against the destructive element. It is not enough to know that the building was secure when it was built, or even a few years ago, but the question, is it secure? should present itself to every property owner."

"Then many are carless in the storeing of combustibles, and in many instances the prudent housewife thoughtlessly empties the ash bucket in a barrel or box, which is situated in close proximity to the house, and the chances are that that little act of carelessness will cost a home. Many other acts which are practiced every day by hundreds of people are of this same character, and certainly endangers property."

"A little attention paid to this subject may be the means of saving your home or your building. A little wise forethought will overbalance a vast amount of after-thought."

THE St. Louis Globe-Democrat of recent date says: They had a highly interesting contest in Philadelphia a few days ago between two negroes, who, with their hands tied behind their backs, butted eachother's heads for half an hour, until one cried "enough." Why can't editors Halstead and McLean, of Cincinnati, settle their difference in that manly way? It is true that McLean, being a Democrat, would naturally have an advantage in hardness of head, but Halstead could butt with that part of his head with which he supported the Greeley ticket in 1872. Our friend Joseph Medill, of the Chicago Tribune, would act as umpire.

THE October corn report of the Department of Agriculture shows that the general average condition is seventy-five, a falling off of nine per cent. since September 1. The product of the year will be close to sixteen hundred million bushels, with more soft corn than last year, mostly in a region that consume their entire crop. The wheat will exceed four hundred million bushels and may reach four hundred and twenty million. The yield of oats is a full average and the quality average ninety-eight. The crop will aggregate five hundred million bushels. Barley will average between one and two bushels per acre more than last year. Potatoes are in better condition than any year since 1875. The tobacco yield will be below the average.

THE St. Louis Republican sums up the situation thusly: The last two years has made wide and ragged gaps in the Republican lines. Of the thirty-eight States in the Union only twelve have Republican Governors—Illinois, Indiana, Iowa, Maine, Minnesota, Nebraska, New Hampsire, Ohio, Oregon, Rhode Island, Vermont and Wisconsin; and last Thursday's work will take Ohio out of the little group and reduce it to eleven. Eleven Republican States only out of thirty-eight! And these Republican States have altogether only 95 votes out of 401. It is a hopeless looking prospect, certainly; and it is even probably more desperate than it looks, for the Republicans are more likely to lose some of the eleven States than they are to gain any of the twenty-seven.

THE politics of Virginia are growing very interesting. In the present contest Mahon's weight in the next Republican convention will be determined. If he is successful in the next Virginia election, his influence will be courted by the numerous candidates for the Republican nomination. But if he should lose his grip on the politics of his State, he will be regarded as a small potato in the national convention, and he understands the situation. In Virginia there are several new elements, the effects of which can not as yet be estimated with any certainty. The capitation tax has been abolished, which will create a very large number of new votes, which the Democrats consider will be to their advantage. The Democrats have accepted the decision of the Supreme Court sustaining the Riddleberger bill, which renders the State debt question no longer an issue in the politics of the State. Both parties have rolled out their bar'ls, and money is plentiful in the Old Dominion now.

CINCINNATI has been thronged, this fall, with the light-fingered and oily-tongued gentry. Scarcely a day has passed that they have not duped some unsuspecting country fellow. In some instances the scamps have been arrested, but seldom, if ever, has any one of them been successfully prosecuted. Indeed such feeble assistance has been tendered those imposed upon by the thieves and confidence men in that city, that some persons firmly believe that officers whose duty it is to ferret out and arrest rogues and other doubtful characters, are in sympathy with them and profit by their thieving depredations. The business men of Cincinnati will not be benefitted by the treatment given the unfortunate country man by their officials when he has fallen a prey to one of the army of sharpers that a lax enforcement of their laws allows to infest their city. The honest country farmer will not go where he is constantly in danger of being robbed, and then made sport of by the officials when informed of his misfortune. Thieves frequent cities where their work meets the least opposition, and the fact that Cincinnati has been overrun by them for months is a strong proof that they are not dilligently persued, and properly punished when captured. A few arrests and vigorous prosecutions would start the thieves out of Cincinnati like rats leaving a burning barn.

Wheat has a downward tendency.

HOADLEY'S 12,500 majority for Governor of Ohio, is being played as the card with which to win him the Democratic nomination for the Presidency in '84.

THE Courier-Journal has cast its political eye over the field, and selects McDonald, of Indiana, as the man for the Democrats to nominate for the presidency in 1884.

THE jury in the trial of Hooker Stivers for the murder of Burt Scully, at Paris, some time since, found Stivers guilty of voluntary manslaughter, and fixed his punishment at ten years confinement in the penitentiary. The defense sent to the clerk of the Circuit Court of this county and obtained a copy of the instructions of the court given the jury for the defense in the Terrell case.

AN old hunter and trapper in Indiana gives the following reasons for believing this winter is going to be a mild one:

When the sun crossed the line the wind blew mild from the southeast; the shucks are thin this year; the ground-hog hasn't yet carried a leaf or a twig to his hole; the 'coons have not began to gnaw the corn and the woodpeckers have not yet commenced to drum and make holes in the trees for storing nuts for winter use.

About Newspapers.

The Chicago Herald editorial and reportorial force consists of twenty-five persons; the Inter-Ocean has twenty-nine; the News thirty-two; the Times, twenty-nine; and the Tribune forty-seven, and six hundred special correspondents. The St. Louis Globe-Democrat has thirty-seven editorial writers and reporters and 642 correspondents and employes 102 men; the Republican has twenty-six writers and about four hundred correspondents; the Post-Dispatch has twenty-nine writers, and the Chronicle, fourteen. The Louisville Courier-Journal employes twenty-seven writers; the New Orleans Picayune, twenty-five; the Baltimore Herald, twenty-five, and the Boston Globe, thirty-four.

News Notes.

There were 303,678 pensioners on the rolls at the end of the fiscal year.

A train of cars was blown from the tract last week by a Texas cyclone.

An Ironton, Ohio, bank cashier is missing, and so are $17,000 of the bank's money.

Fitch, the Warren, Ohio, defaulting bank cashier has been apprehended and lodged in jail.

Gov. Crittenden testified before the St. Louis grand jury last week in the police and gambling cases.

An English syndicate is negotiating for a large body of land in the coal regions in the eastern part of this State.

The whole number of post-offices in the United States, at the end of June last, was 47,863; increase during the year, 1,632.

At Dayton, Ohio, a man was entombed alive by the caving in of a well, fifty-feet deep, and 24 hours afterwards taken out alive.

Wm. Bracken and Jas. Holmes, alleged Irish-Americans, have been arrested at Halifax. Large quantities of dynamite were discovered in their room.

On the 3d of October Attata, Mexico, was swept by a cyclone, and a greater part of the town damaged. The deaths from yellow fever have averaged twenty a day.

Mrs. McMichael, whose husband, conductor McMichael, was killed in in the frightful explosion at Winchester a short while since, has sued the Cheaspeake and Ohio and the Kentucky Central railroads for $40,000.

At Joilet, Ill., October, 18, masked men entered the house of Edward McLaughlin and tortured the farmer and his wife until they disclosed the hiding place of $1,000 in gold and departed, leaving the victims very nearly dead.

James Mumfert, cold., in jail at Owenton, Ky., charged with stealing attempted suicide by strangling himself with his hankerchief. When found by the jailer he was lying on the floor unconscious, and it required the vigorous efforts of a physician to resuscitate him. A few minutes more would have ended him.

Subscribe for the RECORDER.

11

SHOULD you be a sufferer from dyspepsia, indigestion, malaria, or weakness, you can be cured by Brown's Iron Bitters.

TOCCOA CITY, GA.—Dr. J. P. Newman says: "Brown's Iron Bitters are very popular, and their use always results satisfactorily."

BALTIMORE, MD.—Rev. W. H. Chapman says: "I deem Brown's Iron Bitters a most valuable tonic for general ill-health."

HOGGISH—Select butchers and heavy shippers, $4 75@5 00; fair to good packers, at $4 40@4 80; fair to good light, $4 50@4 85; common, $3 85@4 35; culls, $3 00@3 80; stock hogs, $3 50@4 50.

STATE NEWS.

—Three hundred convicts have been put to work on the Kentucky Union railroad at Hedges.

—The Times reports the wheat crop in Barren county as seriously damaged by grasshoppers.

—The old jail at Mt. Sterling is being converted into a public library, city hall and engine house.

—As a result of wearing a tight boot Geo. Thompson, of Paducah, has suffened amputation of a foot.

—Fifty-five murders have occurred in Logan county in eighteen years, 8 of them within the las ten months.

—An old gentleman living in Logan county claims that he has read the New Testament through 160 times since 1862.

—In Henry county, Charlie Doroney is reported to have killed thirty-one snakes of the spread-head viper species, within a radius of thirty feet. They were not in his boots.

Doctors and Doctrines.

Whatever Cruel Creeds May Say, Truth is Always Orthodox.

"You know the old saying, Doctor, Ubi tres medici, duo athei,—where there are three doctors there are two atheists," laughed Rev. Apollo Creamcheese, the other day, to his friend, Dr. Senna, who had dropped in for a bit of a talk.

"Yes, I've heard it, and I'll bet a box of pills against your dry inkstand that some priest said it. They always pattered bad Latin when they had a bigger lie than common to get rid of," answered the Doctor, lighting his pipe. "I tell you, Dominie you're 'way off when you think our profession isn't doing as good work in this world as yours is. They've both been more'n half barbarous for centuries, but we're several lengths ahead of you on the home-stretch."

"But, Doctor, said Rev. Mr. Creamcheese, "don't you think your fraternity shows a tendency to materialistic——?"

"Bah!" interrupted Dr. Senna, "we show a tendency to human charity and common sense. The fences are all down. Why, within the past week I've had a letter from my old friend, Dr. W. V. Haddox, of Pine Hill, Alabama, saying that he is using, with great success, PARKER'S TONIC, in his practice, and finds it the best thing for Coughs Lung, Kidney and Liver troubles, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, and so on, he ever struck; and another friend of mine, Dr. J. J. Oatman, of Carrolltown, Pa., says substantially the same thing. He's a big specialist, too, in chronic diseases, and knows what he is talking about every time."

Dr. Senna's statement as to PARKER'S TONIC, are supported by genuine testimonials from Drs. Haddox and Oatman, who write to Messrs. Hiscox & Co., of New York—the proprietors—in terms of the highest commendation concerning this great restorative remedy; and letters from the profession generally confirm the opinion of these physicians. Price, 50 cents and $1 per bottle.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION
OF THE
Farmers & Traders National Bank
AT COVINGTON,

In the State of Kentucky, at the close of business, October 2d, 1883.

RESOURCES.

Loans and discounts		$579,247 75
Overdrafts		969 39
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation 4 per cent		50,000 00
Due from approved reserve agents		43,991 83
Due from other National banks	3,584 33
Due from State banks and bankers	2,459 97	—6,044 30
Real estate, furniture and fixtures		4,668 91
Current expenses and taxes paid		2,994 80
Premiums paid		8,000 00
Checks and other cash items		1,432 60
Bills of other Banks		10,135 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and pennies		56 54
Specie		12 015 00
Legal tender notes		22,000 00
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer (5 per cent of circulation)		2,250 00
Total		$761,806 12

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in		$300,000 00
Surplus fund		2,500 00
Undivided profits		—21,367 99
National bank notes outstanding		45,000 00
Individual deposits subject to check	368,774 08
Due to other National Banks	14,722 85
Due to State Banks and bankers	9,441 20	—392,938 13
Total		$761,806 12

State of Kentucky, County of Kenton, ss: I, John L. Sandford, Cashier of the above-named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

J. L. SANDFORD, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 8th day of Oct., 1883. GEO. H. DAVISON, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest:
E. J. HICKEY,
J. H. MERSMAN,
L. C. STEPHENS, } Directors.

INSURE AT HOME

The Farmers' Mutual Fire

INSURANCE COMPANY

Of Boone County

Is now completely organized and receiving applications for insurance.

Its Rates are Lower

Than those of any other Company, and it gives the farmers of Boone County a

HITHERTO UNKNOWN ADVANTAGE

In keeping their property insured.

EVERY FARMER IN THE COUNTY

should take a policy at once.

N. S. WALTON, President, Petersburg, Ky.
J. H. WALTON, Secretary, Constance, Ky.
R. RANDALL, Treasury.

DIRECTORS.
LEOBAN GAINES, JEFF UTZ,
JNO. M. MOODY.

NAVAL Agents Wanted for Ancient & Modern BATTLES. New and graphic Pictorial History of the great Sea fights of the World. By Medical Director SHIPPEN, U. S. N. Address J. C. McCURDY & CO., 180 W. Fourth St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

AGENTS Wanted for handsome illustrated standard works of character; great variety; Books & Bibles low in price; selling fast; needed everywhere; Liberal terms. Wm. Garretson & Co., 30 College St., Nashville, Tenn.

County Directory.

OFFICERS.

Assessor—G. M. Riley.
County Surveyor—W. E. Vest.
School Commissioner—D. M. Snyder.
Coroner.—Dr. A. A. Murat, Constance.

COURTS.

CIRCUIT COURT meets the 2d Monday in April and first Monday in October. P. U. Major, Judge; W. L. Riddell, Clerk A. G. DeJarnette, Commonwealths Attorney; W. L. Riddell, Trustee Jury Fund.

COUNTY COURT meets the first Monday in every month. L. H. Dills, Judge; S. W. Tolin, County Attorney. M. T. Garnett, Clerk; J. K. Clutterbuck, Sheriff, T. W. Fitch, Deputy Sheriff.

QUARTERLY COURT meets the first Monday in March, June, September and December. The officers of the County Court preside.

COURT OF CLAIMS meets the first Monday in November.

MAGISTRATES' COURTS are held in March, June, September and December, as follows:

Bellevue—M. B. Green, first Saturday, and T. H. Sutton, third Monday. J. M. Moody, Constable.

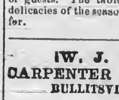
Burlington—E. H. Baker, Thursday after first Monday, and Oscar Gaines, fourth Monday. R. H. Sandford, Constable.

Carlton A. G. McConnell, Wednesday after second Monday, and B. H. Ryle, Saturday after third Monday. Constable.

Petersburg—Jos. Hensley, Wednesday after 3rd Monday, and L. A. Lodor fourth Saturday. Geo. Comer, Constable.

Union—M. C. Norman, Thursday after third Monday, and H. Bannister, Thursday after second Monday. A. D. Riley, Constable.

Beever—W. M. Rouse, Friday after the third Monday, and



E. E. IGOE,
Resident Dentist,
Rising Sun, Ind.
WITH
J. P. Ulrey.
Monday and Tuesday at Rising Sun, Ind.

BOONE HOUSE,
BURLINGTON, KY.
C. L. CRISLER, Prop'r.

No pains spared in the accommodation of guests. The table supplied with the delicacies of the season. Stock well cared for. dec. 20-1y

W. J. RICE,
CARPENTER & BUILDER,
BULLITSVILLE, KY.

Is prepared Raise or Move
EITHER LOG or FRAME BUILDINGS
On Short Notice,
And at the Lowest Possible Figures.
33-tf Your orders respectfully solicited

LOOK HERE!
when you go to Lawrenceburg, call on Winegardner
He has a large assortment of
Wall Paper!
And is daily receiving additions to his stock. Call and examine before purchasing.
Inks, Pens and Stationar constantly on hand.
Headquaters in Lotton House.

LUMBER.
Goe. M. Bedinger & Co.,
Erlanger, - - Ky.
We keep constantly on hand all kinds of Lumber, Laths and Shingles. Also Builder's supplies of all kinds.
—Come and see Us.—
may 9-tf

Farm for Sale!
35 acres of good rolling bottom land. 3½ miles below Aurora ferry, ½ mile from Bellevue and ½ mile from the Ohio river, being part of the Warren Rogers farm. For particulars call on or address T. H. SUTTON, Grant P. O., Ky., or at this office. 44-2 m

Farm for Sale.
I am offering for sale my farm, lying 3 miles south of Burlington on the Big Bone road, containing 55½ acres, a part of the Mason Crisler farm. The land lays well and is conveniently located, the improvements are a good brick house and all necessary out buildings, and a variety of good fruit. Any person desirous of purchasing a nice farm will do well to come and examine the premises and learn terms. Title good. MRS. OSCAR CRISLER.

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS
FOR THE LIVER
And all Billous Complaints
Safe to take, being purely vegetable; no griping. Price 25 cts. All Druggists.

NEVER FAILS
FREE!
RELIABLE SELF-CURE.
A favorite prescription of one of the most noted and successful specialists in the U. S. (now retired) for the cure of Nervous Debility, Lost Manhood, Weakness and Decay. Sent in plain sealed envelope free. Druggists can fill it. Address DR. WARD & CO., Louisiana, Mo.

Cut This Out & Return to us with TEN CTS. Silver, & you'll get by mail, a GOLDEN BOX OF GOODS that will bring you in MORE MONEY in One Month than anything else in America. Absolute Certainty. Either Sex. No capital. M. Young, 173 Greenwich St., N. York.

AYER'S
Sarsaparilla
res Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic out, General Debility, Catarrh, and all orders caused by a thin and impoverished, corrupted, condition of the blood; expelling blood-poisons from the system, enriching l renewing the blood, and restoring its vitalng power.
During a long period of unparalleled usefuls, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has proven its fect adaptation to the cure of all diseases ginating in poor blood and a weakened vitality. a highly concentrated extract of Sarsalla and other blood-purifying roots, bined with Iodide of Potassium and n, and is the safest, most reliable, and most omical blood-purifier and blood-food that be used.
Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured.
AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has cured me of the mmatory Rheumatism, with which I have red for many years. W. H. MOORE." rham, Ia., March 2, 1882.
ight years ago I had an attack of Rheumaso severe that I could not move from the bed, ess, without help. I tried several remedies out much if any relief, until I took AYER'S SARILLA, by the use of two bottles of I was completely cured. I have not been ed with the Rheumatism since. Have sold quantities of your SARSAPARILLA, and it tains its wonderful popularity. The many e cures it has effected in this vicinity conme that it is the best blood medicine ever d to the public. E. F. HARRIS." r St., Buckland, Mass., May 13, 1882.
at March I was so weak from general dethat I could not walk without help. Fol the advice of a friend, I commenced taking 's SARSAPARILLA, and before I had used bottles I felt as well as I ever did in my life. been at work now for two months, and your SARSAPARILLA the greatest blood e in the world. JAMES MAYNARD." West 42d St., New York, July 19, 1882.
's SARSAPARILLA cures Scrofula and rofulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Ecs Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Boils, rs, and Eruptions of the Skin. It clears d of all impurities, aids digestion, stimue action of the bowels, and thus restores y and strengthens the whole system.
PREPARED BY
. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
by all Druggists; price $1, six bottles, $5.

INCORPORATED UNDER THE LAWS OF MISSOURI.
CENTRAL MEDICAL & SURGICAL NSTITUTE
OF ST. LOUIS, MO.
CCESSORS TO TS' DISPENSARY. OFFICE & ROOMS, No. 920 LOCUST ST.
. LaBARGE, M.D., Pres't & Physician in Charge. LSON CHESMAN, Treas. & Business Manager.
Institute has ample facilities and an exced Faculty. While it succeeds to a large which has been established for years, it n to extend its medical and surgical pracfiving skillful and scientific treatment to ONIC DISEASES of the Head, Spine, Lungs and Air Passleart, Liver, Stomach and Bowels, Rheumae Dyspepsia, Consumption and Asthma.
D IMPURITIES, Inherited or caused by impure associaerofula, Fever Sores, Ulcers, etc.
RMITIES of the Limbs, Spinal Curvature, Wry-Neck, Diseases Joints, Piles, Fistula, Rupture, etc.
KNESS and wasting diseases in old and young men, also all diseases of illo-urinary organs.
ALE Irregularities and weaknesses, causing pain in the back or side, etc.
nal interviews with patients are always fed. Those unable to visit the Institute will ished with blank lists of questions that will in making a full statement of their cases not requiring a surgical operation they can cessfully treated by correspondence, and es sent by mail or express. To enable us proper list of questions applicants should brief statement of their trouble.
Treasurer of the corporation is of Nelson & Co., Advertising Agents, and refers to lisher of this or any other newspaper in the States or Canadas regarding responsibility.
ation at Office or by mail free and Invited

UTT'S PILLS
TORPID BOWELS, ORDERED LIVER, and MALARIA.
these sources arise three-fourths of eases of the human race. These ms indicate their existence: Loss of ite, Bowels costive, Sick Headdullness after eating, aversion to on of body or mind, Eructation d, Irritability of temper, Low , A feeling of having neglected duty, Dizziness, Fluttering at the Dots before the eyes, highly colUrine, CONSTIPATION, and dee use of a remedy that acts directly Liver. As a Liver medicine TUTT'S have no equal. Their action on the and Skin is also prompt; removing urities through these three "scavof the system," producing append digestion, regular stools, a clear a vigorous body. TUTT'S PILLS no nausea or griping nor interfere ly work and are a perfect
ADOTE TO MALARIA.
ywhere, 25c. Office, 44 Murray St., N.Y.

TT'S HAIR DYE.
HAIR OR WHISKERS changed into a GLOSSY BLACK by a single apn of this DYE. Sold by Druggists, by express on receipt of $1. Co, 44 Murray Street, New York.
MANUAL OF USEFUL RECEIPTS FREE.

ROUS HEALTH FOR MEN
PASTILLE CURE TRADE MARK FOR US DEBILITY
TESTED FOR 5 YEARS
by use in thousands of cases. Founded on scientific medical principles, it has been growing in favor and reputation whilst numerous competitors have invariably failed. The direct application of this remedy to the the disease makes its specific influence felt without delay. The natural functions of the human organism are restored. The animating elements of life which have been wasted are given back, buoyant energy of the brain and muscular power renders the patient cheerful; he gains strength rapidly.
US DEBILITY, organic weakness, and numerous obscure diseases, baffling the skill of physicians, result for youthful indiscretion, too indulgence, and over brain work. Temporise while such enemies lurk in your system. Take a remedy that has cured thousands, does not interfere with your attention to business or cause any pain or inconvenience. A Descriptive Pamphlet giving Anatomical illustrations, which will convince the most sceptical can be restored to perfect manhood, and the duties of life, same as if never effected. to any one. Remedy sold ONLY by the HS REMEDY CO. MF'G. CHEMISTS. 10th St. ST. LOUIS, MO.
One treatment $3. two months $5. three months $7

PARKER'S AIR BALSAM
A beneficial dressing preferred to similar articles because of its purity and rich perfume. It Restores to Gray Hair the Youthful Color & prevents dandruff and falling of the hair. 50c. & $1. Hiscox & Co., N.Y.

ORESTON OLOGNE
the finest flower extracts in richness. Delicate, ing. No odor like it. Be sure you get FLORESogne, signature of Hiscox & Co., N. Y., on every and 75 cts. at druggists and dealers in perfumes.

INJECTION ANTINELI.
Recent and chronic secret diseases of the Urinary organs in both sexes. Directions in all languages. $1.00 a bottle Druggists, or sent, by express on receipt of price secure from observation. Fairmount Chemical Co. Cincinnati, O. A. Sold by W. F. McKim.

SON'S INDELIBLE INK Is the BEST. No preparation. Used with any clean pen for marking any fabric. Popular for decorative work on linen. Received Centennial MEDAL & Diploma. Established 50 years. Sold by all Druggists, Stationers & News Ag'ts.

Local News.

Personal Mentions.

[If you have friends from a distance visiting you or expect to be away from home on business or pleasure, let us have the item for this column.]

Mr. John H. Sebree's brother, of Salt Lake City, was visiting him last week.

Mrs. Tousey and daughter, Miss Julia of Visalia, Kenton county, are visiting friends at this place.

Everett Walton and family leave today (Wednesday) to join his father and family at Butler, Missouri.

Miss Maud Kirkpatrick is assisting Pro. Gallagher with his school, which now has a very large attendance.

W. J. Rice has commenced building James Smith a fine residence on the Petersburg pike near Viola Park.

John Hall and Col. O'Neal's son of Covington, were out here, Sunday, on a rabbit and quail hunting expedition.

H. B. Riddell and a Mr. DeKamp, of Cincinnati, came out Monday, and are taking in some of the Boone county game.

Herman Carpenter and Miss Sallie Carpenter, of Sparta, Gallatin county, were married at the Crawford House in Cincinnati last Thursday.

Sunday was a sombre day.

The richest thing in type—Gold.

The early boy gets the hickory nut.

New Sorghum molasses at Dudley Rouses'.

Happy Jack is out on the current of life again.

The town hogs have become experts at opening gates.

Read the new advertisement of the Petersbuag Drug Store.

We received several communications to late for use last week.

It will pay you to go miles to trade at the Petersburg Drug Store.

The time of year for punctuating grates has put in its appearance.

The man that has not got the finest tobacco he ever saw is hard to find.

The water courses have resumed business, after their summer's vacation.

Florence is going to have a jail, and it is said that Burlington needs one.

W. F. McKim has employed a fine druggist. He commenced Tuesday.

Rabbits and quails are abundant, and the roar of the huntsmen's artillery is heard.

So far as we have heard of tobacco being sold this fall, good prices have prevailed.

Oyster suppers have taken the place of festivals. Each season has its delicacies.

Tobacco buyers are being inquired for by the farmers, who have tobacco for sale.

Several of our citizens were bathing in the Ohio last Friday. They had a sein with them.

Headache, Costiveness, and Piles are easily and thoroughly cured by a judicious use of Ayer's Pills.

The case of Christian Schittenheim's admrx. vs. the L. & N. R. R. was affirmed by the Court of Appeals last week.

A good crowd attended the sale of the personal property of Benjamin Craven, deceased, last Saturday. Things sold well.

The floor in the Baptist chruch was taken out last week, when the joist and sleepers were found to be very badly decayed.

J. W. Kirkpatrick & Son have added a new hearse to their undertaking outfit, and will conduct funerals in as good style as any firm in the city.

M. S. Rice and J. W. Duncan were engaged, one day last week, setting off dower to Mrs. Erastus Garrison, under an order off the County Court.

Those having claims against the estate of John A. Kendall can receive 28 per cent thereof by calling on the undersigned. W. L. Riddell.

Richard Gordon, the handsome and gentlemanly manager of the Boones, was off on a visit last week to the Southern Exposition and the Mammoth Cave.

It's not ever time you can get rid of a sack of cats by emptying the sack on your neighbor's premises. For a full explanation of this call on Field Crisler.

The report of the Trustee of Jury Fund shows that it took $120 to pay the grand jurors and $416 to pay the the petit jurors at the last term of the Circuit Court.

Attorney Tolin was called to Rabbit Hash a few days since to prosecute two young fellows charged with highway robbery. The accused proved an alibi and were discharged.

Quite a number of the young folks of town gathered at the residence of Mr. S. A. Palmer, last Thursday evening, and passed off the hours very pleasantly with instrumental and chin music.

The lumber for putting a new floor in the Baptist church has arrived, and the brethren will soon have their building in repair again. A strong force of the brethren is engaged putting in a floor.

The Burlington and Florence turnpike road company has had bad luck with its bridges the past year. One was built new and the other two large ones were repaired at a considerable expense.

Leonard Clore has purchased of the heirs of J. H. Aikin. decd., the 20 acres of land owned by Akin at the time of his death. The land is located just below Bellevue, on the river, and was sold for $2,300.

Our druggist, W. F. McKim, advertised in one of the Cincinnati daily papers, last week, for a clerk, and received 120 letters in answer to the advertisement. Out of 120 he surely ought to get a good one.

The Bullittsville and Covington 'bus passed through Burlington Sunday morning with a cargo of colored base-ball material, en route for Bellevue, where a game was to be played with another colored club.

F. P. Walton desiring a portable fence different from any he had seen, put his ingenuity to work and invented a fence that is simple in construction, and can be built at a cost not to exceed that of an ordinary plank fence.

Nice tombstones or monuments at the graves of the departed, are marks of respect which should not be neglected. Hurschart & Co., Lawrenceburg, Ind., have just what you want. John Beall of Hebron, is their agent.

We don't think that Burlington has a young lady simple enough to have her hair cut in the Langtry style, which is having the hair clipped from the forehead to the crown of the head, the remainder of the hair being long.

Mr. A. G. Winston is having a large pond made in his field near town. If that pond were on other premises as near the town, we would suggest that this would be an interesting place for the coroner to spend the summer.

W. E. Piper and Everett Walton took in the big Exp. at Louisville last week. They consider it a show of the first magnitude, and are glad that they are living in an age capable of getting up such wonderful displays of art, &c.

The Tafferty-Geisler case was called for trial by the County Court in special session last Thursday, when it was continued for the defendant till the 8th day of next month. This case has now had two trials and two continuances.

H.C.Botts, of Bellevue, passed through town, Monday, on his way home from Bourbon county, where he was engaged for about three months superintending the prizing of a large purchase of tobacco belonging to a Cincinnati firm.

W. T. Smith returned from his visit to Virginia, last Thursday, where he again trod the soil on which his youthful feet did duty. He visited a subtaranean cavern while there, and traversed it two and a half miles, viewing numerous interesting scenes.

When hunters are about where stock is kept, they should exercise great care, lest they bring trouble upon themselves by shooting and wounding domestic animals. Careless and reckless use of fire-arms on the part of sportsmen is the sole cause of many of the farmers' prejudice against them.

The dogs are getting in their murderous work on the sheep, and in the last few days have killed several in the Union district, and down on Gunpowder Creek. Next County Court day the sheep raisers will hold a meeting for the purpose of devising means for the better protection of their sheep.

The protracted silence of our Plattsburg correspondent was growing painful, but remembering that he has been having his first experience putting down carpets, placing furniture, adjusting stove pipes and chopping and carrying in stove wood, we excuse him, and especially when he makes as good showing as he has this week.

Colonel Crisler has gotten his shop furniture moved to town, and we notice that he has a fine lot of good looking material for making wagons and other farming implements, in which he has acquired a reputation. No doubt he will build up a good trade in his line of business, and the farmers herabout will give him their patronage.

The Steamer Little Queen that plied the Ohio between Lawrenceburg and Rising Sun, Ind., and owned by Capt. B. B. Bradley, of Petersburg, burned to the waters edge while at the wharf at the latter place, last Tuesday morning. The boat was valued at $2,500, and Mr. B. had just put about $800 worth of new machinery on it. Cause of the fire is not known.

County Attorney Tolin was called to Walton last Wednesday to prosecute one negro for shooting another. The shootist was acquitted on the ground of self defense. The negro who was shot was proven to be a desperate fellow. The ball entered his right breast near the nipple, passing through the lung and lodging in the back near the surface. The physician D. M. Bagby thinks the wounded man will recover.

Base-ball.

Last Saturday the Batavia, Ohio, ball tossers came down to Bullittsville and played a return game. The weather was too cool for playing ball, but both teams did good playing. The Boones turned themselves loose at the bats, and surprised both themselves and the spectators, while their work in the field was remarkable good. Fowler's throwing was fine, while Quick's catching and throwing to second was almost perfection. The basemen clamped everything that was sent them, and base running had to be done on safe hits. The Buckeye boys proved themselves a strong club, but the Boones secured the victory the first time they went to the bats. On account of the cool weather, only five innings were played, and the score stood 18 to 4 in favor of the Boones. Esquire Whitlock umpired the game.

A. W. Smith is now on his way to Florida. When he left he was undecided as to whether he would invest in Florida land or spend his time while there, with dog and gun, exploring the swamps, exterminating the festive alligators, and feasting on the delicious meats of such wild game as he may be able to take. We hope Webb will have a pleasant trip, and should he buy real estate, that he may make a profitable investment.

Died—At her home in Union, Ky., after a long and painful illness, on Saturday, September 29th, 1883, Mrs. S. Ella Blanton in the 41st year of her age.

To offer an appropriate tribute to the memory of one possessing so many noble traits of character, so useful in her sphere, so dear to her family and friends and so true to her God, is a task no more easily accomplished than to use words of consolation to ease the crushed and broken hearts of her desolated home where she was loved and appreciated by a truly devoted husband, respectful loving sons and a tender hearted daughter. Her life, although unassuming, and marked by the becoming modesty of a true woman, was prominent for her intelligence and her congenial, friendly, warm-hearted associations, which were always extended to her hosts of warm friends in the wide circle of her acquaintance, and those who knew her best, her frank, open character, her unfaltering devotion to the objects of her affections, her true regard for the highest principles of human dignity, bounteous benevolence, strict and untiring attention to the sick and afflicted, can best know the loss sustained by society and the members of her refined hospitable home. Her last sad, painful illness, borne with so much patience and fortitude, touched the tenderest heart-strings of her anxious friends, who ministered to her every want as she had often been wont to do when some worn and weary soul most needed a cheering word and a tender care. Her pillow was smoothed by willing hands, each hour gladly checked off time by burdened hearts that the next might bring more hope, but, when sunshine only could break through the clouded house, it grew darker to all but her, and when called upon, scarcely before her sun had begun its descent, when her family was most endearing and her home most pleasant, though with the regrets of a constant wife and sweet mother, there was the willingness and submission of a faithful christian who never knew a reproach Conscious to the last, grateful for every attention, at peace with God, she calmly and sweetly slept, as the sleeping flower, to gain new life, closes its petals to the starry heavens to reappear on the morrow in renewed grandeur. Yes, she lives again, exalted and beautiful as Sharon's rose is beautiful. • • •

NGEIHBORHOOD NEWS.

Scattersville.

Hunting rabbits and hickory nuts is the order of the day with us ruralists.

Prof. Bell and wife are boarding at O. P. Conner's. Mrs. Bell will teach Owen's children at home this winter.

E. H. Baker bought John and Ferdinand Rue's tobacco at $12 50 per hundred all around.

J. M. Conner was in our town the other day driving a double team, a bay and Dr. J. M. Grant. Jim walked and drove the team, which, at times, was very nearly unmanagable, occasionally attempting to leave the road with the buggy. Conner gave up the drive for a bad job, borrowed a good and true horse from a friend, took the doctor in the buggy and started home, leading the other member of the team behind his buggy.

Waterloo.

The recent rains have improved the appearances in this vicinity. Everything looks as green as in the spring of the year.

Farmers are about done seeding and cutting corn in this neighborhood.

Mr. Joseph Satchel and wife, of Carroll county, were visiting Mr. Samuel H. Marshall and wife, of this place, last week.

Miss Turley and Miss Ringo, of Gallatin county were visiting Mr. Waller Marshall and wife last week.

A. J. Barker and family will move to his father-in-law's, Wade Ryles this week, where he expects to make his future home.

Robbie Kelley, son of Mrs. Jimmie Kelley, died October 18th after several days illness. His remains were interred in the family burying ground near this place. The family has the sympathy of the community.

Hebron.

Notwithstanding the dry weather our crop of saur kraut will be large.

James Utz has contracted for stone and gravel for building a pike from the drugstore to the church.

Mike Clore and wife are visiting Mrs. Clore's father's at Jeffersonville, Ind.

Since the 19th inst., there have been 6,000 bushels of Irish potatoes hauled through this place to the city.

A drove of 284 head of cattle went through this place, the other day, enroute for Petersburg.

Within the last ten days, about 200 tons of hay have been taken from this section to market.

Married, October 17th, 1883, by the Rev. E. Stephens, John Tanner to Miss Ella Quick, of this place. We congratulate them and wish them all the joys of life.

Miss Sudie Young, of Jackson county, Indiana, is visiting Miss Ada Wilhoit.

James M. Utz has been selling his fine thinrine pigs at $10 each.

Petersburg.

Frank Cox, formerly of this place, but now salesman in the large dry goods and grocery house of Robt. Mabin, of Aurora, was visiting his friends here last Sunday.

Robt. Hubble, of Carroll county, Mo., who has been here for several days shaking hands with old acquaintances, left for home last Tuesday evening.

A. M. Snyder, government store keeper, is assigned at the distillery here for the this and next month.

The distillery, at this place, began operation last Friday week. Hence many idle men at work.

E. Y. Chapin has moved into his new building, corner Tanner and First streets.

Dr. W. H. Torrill and wife were visiting friends in Indiana, a few days last week.

B. R. Gaines was here last week paying all the cost which had accrued against him in his case which has been in court for sometime.

An infant child of Capt. H. B. Fenton, was buried last Thursday.

The distillery received about 800 head of cattle, which are to be fed on slop this season.

Mr. Friberg, one of the proprietors of the distillery, made a flying visit here last Wednesday.

Randall and Cave are stripping their tobacco, and say it is plenty dry.

Roosters were only worth 60 cents a dozen a few days since, all on account of the election in Ohio—that is the roosters on the Enquirer.

James Bronson, our tonsorial artist, has located here permanently.

J. C. Stott, of Aurora, spent Sunday here.

Major Anderson, of Rising Sun, passed through town last Tuesday. Maj. is a good checker player—so said.

Rev. Moore, of Newport, delivered a lecture on temperance to quite a large audience on last Tuesday evening, at this place.

The Grand Lodge of Sons of Temperance met here last week and elected the following officers: F A Stine, of Newport, W. P.; Mr. Richardson, of Newport, W. A.; Mr. Maginnis, G. S.; W. R. Gorden, of Petersburg, Grand Conductor.

Florence.

The series of meetings held by Dr. Guerrant, of the Presbyterian Church, concluded last Sunday night with a large and appreciative audience, and three confessions. The meetings, which at the first, were rather sparely attended, owing to the inclement weather and the non-publicity of the coming of the Dr.; but as they progressed the interest increased, and the news of the eloquent speaker was heraled to the adjoining counties, which brought in a throng of anxious and attentive listeners eager to hear the Words of Life as they fell from the lips of the earnest speaker. The Dr. stood high as an officer and soldier in the confederate services, and the few men here who stood by him on the tented field, sat close to him as he spoke of Jesus. The same men that had faced death unflinchingly amid the thundering artillery, the roar of musketry, and the carnage of battle, we thought we could see waver as he told the simple story of the Cross. The sacrament of the supper was administered at the morning service on Sunday, and when meeting closed at night the different representatives of the churches united in extending their congratulations to the Dr. with a hearty good bye, so suggestive of his own charitable nature.

Bro. Froh, of the Methodist church, held his first meeting since conference on Saturday night, and Sunday night he was assisted by Elder Taylor, of Newport, and a good meeting was the result.

Found dead—Sunday morning the 21st. Johnny Hunt, of Hunt's Hotel, Florence, went into the stable at the rear of the house, and found what he supposed to be a man asleep. Upon a closer examination he was horrified to find the man dead. It proved to be Wm. Carey, above sixty years of age, son of Capt. Carey, deceased, an old soldier and well known in this county. The Coroner not being convenient, Esq. Wagstaff empaneled a jury and had an investigation of the case. Mr. Carey, as is supposed, had contracted disease by his intemperate habits, which resulted in death under these sad circumstances. The Coroner's jury returned the following verdict: "Came to his death from general debility." The body was conveyed to Union by friends, who will attend to the interment.

Plattsburg

Fall pastures are fine.

Messrs. Editor your Florence ink slinger is a good one.

A little child of Lister Smith, died of flux week before last.

James Foster, of Sagamon county, Ill., was here several days ago, visiting relatives and friends.

Mont Balsly raised 2,000 bushels of potatoes off 12 acres of ground.

John Smith fell and broke his wrist one day last week, while roofing a barn.

Mr. John Terrill, who was in bad health some time ago, has entirely recovered and is looking hale and hearty.

Your scribe now occupies the house lately occupied by Samuel Hensley, Mr. Hensley having moved to Ludlow.

Dr. J. E. Terrill, of Petersburg, one of the cleverest men in the county, made our town a very pleasant call not long since.

Gov. Stith has sold his crop of tobacco to Capt. Geo, Terrill for $12 all around.

Bessie G., J. Frank Grant's fast trotter, is now at home in his stable at Petersburg.

Frank Cason, of Bromley, has rented John Rucker's farm and will take charge of it in the spring. John goes to the Wilson Harper farm on the river hill.

While digging a cistern the other day Geo. Voshell found an old pistol marked 1812. It was about 3 feet under ground. Geo. is talking of starting a museum.

The few remaining members of the old bacholors' association held a meeting last Wednesday night, and elected the following officers: W H Sebree, President; S W Tolin, Vice-President; O Snyder, Secretary. Henry Jarrell being on hand so long was given the bounce, he being over 50.

Some time since our Waterloo man said he would like to see us name the corporate limits of our burg. The limits of our town extend to the village of Waterloo and beyond if there is any news for us to gather in that direction.

The Comets defeated the Garrisons by score of 9 to 6, last Saturday on Piatt's bar.

The dogs made a raid on John E. Botts' sheep one night last week, and killed 23 and crippled 6 more so that they died.

The crossing at the Woolper bridge is dangerous, and it is not safe for any lady to start in this direction alone. Some one will get hurt if travel is continued and the crossing left in this condition.

Sidney Gaines has a very interesting school at the Terrill school-house. Miss Ada Hensley is teaching at Ashbyfork.

Fred Pfalzgraf lost a valuable alderney cow one day last week, valued at $100.

We are making preparations for gardening on a large scale next season, and will come to your town in a few days and view that garden of yours and patern after it, as you had such good luck this season. Probably you didn't put enough sugar in your sweet potatoe hills to give them the right flavor.—[Our tater hills had too much hog nose in them.—Ed.]

On Tuesday, the 13th of next month, Rev. S. P. Carlton, Universalist, will commence a series of meetings at this place, and which will be continued over Sunday.

J. W. KIRKPATRICK & SON,

—BURLINGTON, KY.—

UNDERTAKERS

We have purchased a nice new hearse, and are prepared to attend funerals in regular city style, at the lowest prices.

ROBERT B. REED

Attorney at Law.

OFFICE AT - - UNION, KY.

F. RIDDELL,

ATTORNEY at LAW

BURLINGTON, KY.

Office over Dudley Rouse's Store.

ALBERT W. GAINES,

Attorney and Counselor at-Law,

LAWRENCEBURG, - - - IND.

Will practice in the courts of Boone county, ky., Cincinnati, Ohio, Dearborn and adjoining counties, Ind. dec-6-82

W. E. VEST,

COUNTY SURVEYOR

WALTON, KY.

Is prepared to do all kinds of surveying. All orders sent him through the mail to Walton, will receive his prompt attention.

FANNIE G. RICE,

—TEACHER OF—

PIANO & ORGAN.

Lessons given at my residence,

Burlington, - - Ky.

L. C. NORMAN. [illegible]

NORMAN and STEPHENS,

ATTORNEYS at LAW,

UNION, BOONE CO., KY.

Will practice in the Courts of Boone Kenton and adjoining counties. Collections solicited and made throughout the State. 24 tf 81

DR. A. B. HARRY AN

RESIDENT DENTIST.

Aurora, Indiana.

(Office Over Postoffice)

With J P. ULREY.

Dr. ULREY'S days, Wednesday and Saturday. Office open at all hours. 8-1y

---

J. J. Landram. G. G. Hughes.

LANDRAM & HUGHES,

ATTORNEYS at LAW.

Will practice in the Boone Circuit Cour and the Court of Appeals. Prompt attention given to Collections, on application t G. G. Hughes, Burlington, Ky.

S. W. TOLIN.

ATTORNEY AT LAW

BURLINGTON, - - Y

Office in Court-house on 2d floor.

Will manage litigation in any of the Courts of the State, contracts and other legal instruments drawn up at reasonable rates. A prompt an studious attention given to business intrusted to my care. A trial solicited. 12-1y

---

H. KASSEN & CO.

(Formerly of Covington.)

—Dealers in Fine—

BOOTS AND SHOES,

106 W. 5th Street,

CINCINNATI, - - - OHIO.

Custom made work a Specialty. A perfect Fit Guaranteed. dec. 20-1y

---

AURORA MARBLE AND GRANITE WORKS,

Aurora, Ind

Will have constantly on hand

Marble and Granite Monuments,

Italian & American Headstones, &c.

I am ready to do all kinds of Stone Work on short notice and at low prices Hoping to receive the patronage of Boone County, I am respectfully,

F. W. KASSEBAUM.

We Have

J. SCHOFIELD & SON'S

JEANS, BLANKETS AND YARNS.

THE JEANS IS BLUE WARP, THE PRICE IS

45 Cents.

Those parties that wanted to get a corner on Schofield's Goods are badly disappointed as they see they can't get 60 cents a yard for the Madison Jeans when we propose to stir matters up a little.

COLTER, Rising Sun, Ind

FALL FALL FALL AND Winter Clothi'g

Clothing of the best goods, well trimmed, in the latest styles, made under my direct supervision and sold at lower prices than are asked for badly made, shoddy goods at other places. Call and be assured.

A splendid line of Suitings. Suits MADE to order on short notice.

H. F. Blase,

540 Madison St, - COVINGTON, KY.

Stop! Don't Read This.

S. C BUCHANAN takes this method of notifying his patrons that he has enlarged his room and now has the best and most complete stock of Drugs in the county, consisting of Drugs and Medicines, Standard Patent Medicines, &c.

Notions and Fancy Goods, Combs, Brushes, Toilet Powders Perfumery, Toilet and Medicated Soaps.

Also Spices of all kinds, Flavoring Extracts in bulk, Horse and Cattle Powders and many other things that we have not the room to mention here. If you call for anything not in Stock we will get it for you at the regular price, if it takes all the profit.

When in need of anything give us a call, at the Petersburg Duru Store, and be convinced that our Prices are as Low or Lower than can be found.

Don't Read Any Further.

M.L. SWETNAM. HUBERT NEED.

SWETNAM & NEAD,

(SUCCESSOR TO ALONZO GRAVES)

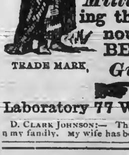
LIVERY AND BOARDING STABLE

AND TRANSFER LINE.

79 Pike Street, Covington, Ky.

Horses Kept by the Day, Week or Month.
Horses and Buggies for Hire.
Stock of all kinds Bought and Sold.
Best Care Taken of Horses entrusted to our Keeping.

All Orders for Hauling Promptly Attended to.



TRADE MARK.

Dr. CLARK JOHNSON'S

Indian Blood Syrup

Cures all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys, Skin and Blood. Millions testify to its efficacy in healing the above named diseases, and pronounce it to be the

BEST REMEDY KNOWN TO MAN.

Guaranteed to cure Dyspepsia.

AGENTS WANTED.

Laboratory 77 W. 3d St., New York City. Druggists sell it

D. Clark Johnson:— This certifies that your Indian Blood Syrup is the best medicine I ever used n my family. My wife has been greatly benefited by it. L. E. McCamc, Seaville, Ky. Mar. 15, '83

JAMES S. WAYNE, President. JNO. L. SANDFORD, Cashier

CAPITAL $300,000.

FARMERS AND TRADERS

NATIONAL BANK.

Covington, Kentucky.

DIRECTORS.

James S. Wayne,	M. C. Motch,	Sam Hind,	E. J. Hickey,	E. J. Greer,
J. S. Matson,	J. H. Mersman,	J. L. Sandford,	L. H Dills,	[illegible]
		L. C. Stephens.

The general operations of banking transacted upon the most favorable terms. Collections made on all points in the United States.

The Business and Accounts of Farmers are Especially Solicited by this Bank. dec. 20-6m

---

City Flouring Mills

RISING SUN, INDIANA.

FLOUR EXCHANGED FOR WHEAT OR CASH. THE HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR GOOD WHEAT.

mar7-tf23

J. W. Talbott.

UNDERTAKING.

We keep Constantly on Hand all sizes of

Burial Cases and Caske

And having just received a beautiful

NEW HEA

Which can be had at a reasonable pri

PRICES GUARANTEED LESS TH

DAVIS BROS.,

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL, Publishers.

BURLINGTON, : : KENTUCKY.

Malaria.

The prevalent disease of the age is malaria, developed from microscopic germs bred in swampy portions of the earth's surface. Some of the most picturesque countries in the world are rendered uninhabitable by it. Malaria is a terrible foe to human health and happiness, and assumes a great variety of forms in different individuals. It is, however, well established that it does not prevail in towns that are well sewered and paved, nor in a country where the swamps are drained and the soil highly cultivated. For many generations, the Campagna in the neighborhood of Rome, Italy, has been the home of malarial poisons. To sleep over night in the tainted atmosphere was certain to bring on an attack of a dangerous fever. But the long line of Popes never interfered with the reign of the malaria fiend. It was known that a colony of Benedictine monks, who cultivated their ground, were exempt from the fevers and agues of the Campagna, but the hint was not acted upon until the new Italian government took the matter in hand. It was noticed that where the population was sparse in Rome, malarial disease was frequent, while in the crowded Jewish Ghetto it was unknown. The government thereupon notified the great land-owners that they must either cultivate their malarial soils or surrender them. Hence there is now a prospect that the Campagna, famous through ages for its disease-producing atmosphere, will again become as healthy as it was when tilled by the ancient Roman and Volscian peasants. The work of regeneration is actively going on, and before the close of the century it is promised that the environs of Rome will be as wholesome as the suburbs of Paris or London. The depopulation of Ireland which is now going on, and the conversion of old farms into cattle ranges, will, it is believed, create the conditions which made the Campagna so dangerous to health and life. Thorough cultivation of the soil, deep plowing, and draining will free any country in time from the horrors of malaria.—Demorest's Monthly.

A New Telephone.

A new telephone has been invented by Mr. Arthur St. George, an Englishman, who has received a patent upon it before Mr. Edison could get in his work. The Pall Mall Gazette, in describing it, says that supplementary to the telephone itself is a contrivance which will not only record every description of conversation carried on through the instrument, but will produce the words at any future time. A circular plate of glass is coated with collodion and made sensitive as a photographic plate. This is placed in a dark box, in which is a slit to admit a ray of light. In front of the glass is the telephone diaphragm, which, by its vibrations, opens and closes a small shutter, through which a beam of light is constantly passing and imprinting a dark line on the glass. Vibrations of the shutter cause the dark line to vary in thickness according to the tones of the voice. The glass plate revolves by clock-work, and the conversation, as it leaves the telephone, is recorded on the sensitive plate, the words spoken being fixed as is done in photography. The plate can be brought forward afterward, and when replaced in the machine and connected with a distant telephone will, when set in motion, give back the original conversation.

The Asiatic Floating Gardens.

Among the most remarkable illustrations of human energy are certainly the floating gardens of Kashmir in Eastern Asia, the more so that they are the work of an essentially indolent population. For their creation an expanse of water about nine miles in circumference has been utilized, on which masses of weeds, grasses and aquatic plants grow and become intertwined and entangled. These form the soil, as it were, on which cultivation is carried on. Divisions are made in them, they are cut level with the surface of the water and then banked over with river mud. Properly prepared for the purpose this soil is sown with melons and cucumber plants, and a crop is raised which is unequaled in any country in quantity and quality. These melons and cucumbers are sold in a good season at the rate of ten or twenty for two cents; in dear seasons they bring two cents apiece. Floating gardens in Mexico are upon much the same plan, but are usually devoted to the culture of flowers.—Cor. N. Y. Times.

—A beautiful blonde heiress of Brooklyn, Susannah Bash met Louis Hirsch, and after a well-conducted courtship of three weeks, married him. The other night he went home late, thought he would frighten his bride, and clambering in at the parlor window went to the piano and commenced a vigorous and sudden attack on that unoffending instrument. The bride of three weeks appeared on the scene, lectured Mr. Hirsch, and began to smite him with the piano stool. Then Mr. Hirsch got mad and left the house, saying as he went something about his intent on to drink the East River before he returned, and after twenty-four hours, as he had not quaffed the stream alluded to Mrs. Hirsch took her fine furniture home to her father's, Wednesday, and Mr. Hirsch is henceforth to her as if he was not.—Brooklyn Eagle.

—It happened at Philadelphia that a little boy, in a mirthful spirit, struck Richard Carmine on the neck with a piece of custard pie. Dick grabbed the boy, but Mrs. Carmine, mere, interfered to prevent violence. At that juncture a man, William McGonagh by name, began kicking Carmine from the rear. One kick struck in the abdomen, producing a fit. He was taken to the hospital, and there showed symptoms of insanity, necessitating his removal to a more secluded place. The moral of this is that little boys should not throw custard pies at people.—Philadelphia Press.

[illegible] old sea Captain is preparing to [illegible] a fortune by running into South [illegible] with an ice-making machine that [illegible] out four tons of congealed [illegible] will locate in East Lon[illegible] [illegible]orted ice sells for sixty-[illegible] [illegible] a pound, and will refer[illegible] that attended the p[illegible] of a man weapons[illegible] parched [illegible]ador, son, at lea[illegible]

FOREIGN GOSSIP.

—The free night schools of Paris are attended by 14,000 pupils.

—A ball was recently bowled against a young English cricketer's forehead, killing him instantly.

—It is estimated that 120,000 deaths occur annually in England because of the defective sewage system in the cities.

—San Clemente, an island near Venice, has a lunatic asylum containing 1,000 women, the majority of whom were brought there by unhappy love.

—The ancient custom of ringing the curfew bell has been resumed at Stratford-on-Avon. It may interest Shakespearean admirers to know that the curfew is rung upon the bell that was tolled at the poet's funeral —The third wedding in St. Paul's Church, London, since 1758 took place recently, a daughter of Lord Mayor Knight being united to Mr. Aitkin. The great bell was rung for the first time for a marriage. Three hundred guests were present at the wedding breakfast.

—An impulsive youth was fined twenty shillings or ten days' hard labor, in a London court, the other day, for kissing a young woman against her will. Being all out of sovereigns, he decided to go to prison. His offense was bad enough, but how shall his excuse be characterized? "I was under the influence of liquor," he said, "or I should not have dreamed of doing it."

—The Princess Dolgoronki is still in deep mourning for her lover, the late Czar of Russia. They threw her out of St. Petersburg, and her royal gripsack after her, but they couldn't deprive her of her loyalty to the memory of the stern old monarch she loved. History may accord her a prominence, but the romance of the future may more than do the unfortunate creature justice.

—In the City of Jerusalem three Sundays are observed every week. The Mohammedans observe Friday, not by closing their shops and resting, but by going to the mosque at certain hours and reciting prayers. The Jews observe Saturday, being very strict as to their conformity to ancient custom and ordinance. They close their shops and are not often on the streets until after noon. Then they appear in their best clothes. Sunday is observed by the Christians of various denominations. On that day the flags fly from the Consulates of the Christian nations.

—The Tartars of the Crimea have their own peculiar ways of doing things. When two of them want to fight a duel they measure off eight paces, bend their heads forward and at the word fire, or its equivalent, rush at each other like two billy goats. They then continue until one is knocked out. Neither hands nor feet are allowed to take part in the battle. In a fight recently witnessed by some travelers the blood streamed from the foreheads of both the semi-savages; nevertheless they continued butting at each other with ferocious passion, until at length one of them fell exhausted to the earth. He gathered up all his remaining strength to draw his knife from his girdle, and with one determined stroke he then cut a wide gash across his throat.

Hagar's Well.

The London Lancet contains a letter from Dr. E. Frankland, the well-known English expert in water analysis, giving an account of the results of his examination of specimens from Hagar's well in Mecca, the water of which is regarded as especially holy, large quantities being annually sent to all Mussulman countries. The following is an extract:

"The water is slightly turbid and has a saline taste; 10,000 parts of it contain in solution the very large proportion of 828.24 parts of solid matter, of which a considerable amount is organic and of animal origin. The water also contains an enormous quantity of nitrate—the usual product of the decomposition of animal excreta. The previous animal contamination calculated from the proportion of nitrogen as nitrates and nitrites shows that the liquid supplying this well contains in a given volume nearly six times as much animal matter as is found in the same volume of strong London sewage. This conclusion is confirmed by the presence of a very large proportion of common salt, one of the chief constituents of urine. The suspended matter in the water consists chiefly of dead bacteria.

"In answer to my inquiries as to the surroundings of the well, and the authenticity of the sample, Mr. Zohrab writes me as follows: 'In reply to your note regarding the water from Hagar's well brought home by me, I beg to state it is authentic. It was brought to me last January from Mecca by a Mohammedan gentleman in whose good faith I have implicit confidence. I may also state that several Mussulmans at Jeddah, who had frequently tasted the water at the well itself, and to whom I showed what I had, assured me it was genuine. There is no difficulty whatever for a person at Jeddah to get any quantity of the water, as the well at Mecca is free to all, and any one may carry away as much as he pleases.' I am not at all surprised at the water being heavily charged with excrementitious matter, and the reason, as I will now show, is evident. The City of Mecca, lying in a basin, contains a permanent population of about 40,000 souls, and annually during the Hadji (pilgrimage) from 100,000 to 150,000 pilgrims, who become residents for periods varying from one week to three months, crowd into it. This vast influx of strangers finds accommodation where it can; the well-to-do rent rooms, the poor live in the streets. The houses in Mecca are generally built in flats to accommodate pilgrims; each flat is provided with one or two badly-constructed latrines, and there are from six to twelve of these in each house. The latrines empty themselves into pits dug outside the houses. When these get filled they are emptied into other pits, which are made in the streets or any other convenient spot, and then covered over with earth. For the poor, latrines on the same principle are made in and outside the town, and the same method of emptying them is employed. This system of burying foul matter in every direction has been pursued for centuries; it is not, therefore, surprising that the ground in and around Mecca is surcharged with excrementitious matter, which rains (these are frequent in Mecca) carry by filtration into the wells. Hagar's well is not a spring, but its water is supplied by filtration—that is, by rainwater passing down through the underlying mass of foul matter. But there is yet another cause for the pollution of Hagar's well; this is the thousands of pilgrims, diseased or sound, who daily wash beside it, the water they use naturally finding its way back into the well.

"Such being the surroundings of this holy well and the composition of its water, there can be no doubt that here is a most potent source of cholera poison, for the evidence is most conclusive that cholera is propagated by a specific poison contained in the alvine discharge of persons suffering from the disease. Hagar's well therefore must, according to Mr. Zohrab's description, constitute an efficient collector of the poison, and it would scarcely be possible to devise a more effective means for the diffusion of this poison throughout Mohammedan countries.

"I presume that it would be quite impossible to get this well closed; but in the interests of the health of Europe and Asia efforts ought to be made to guard the water from this abominable and dangerous pollution. In the whole course of my experience I have never met with a sample of drinking water making even a distant approach to the degree of pollution exhibited by the water of Hagar's well."

Courtship.

Governor Tom Reynolds, of Missouri, married two sisters, who died, and asked the father for permission to address the third, which was granted, the old man remarking: "Yes, Reynolds, I suppose you can have her, but don't for God's sake, when I'm dead and gone, come after the old woman!" He was nearly as bad as the Scotch clergyman who one day drove five young women to church. After the service he courted and married one of his fair companions. She died, and as fortune had it, when in search of a second wife he alighted on another who had favored him with her company that day. And so fortune moved until all five became, sooner or later, his wives. William Drummond, the poet, wooed and won Miss Cunningham, who died on the wedding day. This melancholy event so overwhelmed the poet that daily he wept at her grave. Life often seemed to him "a nought, a thought, a masquerade of dreams." He was a bachelor until forty-seven, when he married a Miss Lyon, because he thought she looked like his first betrothed. Rev. Joseph Gilbert was so charmed with the writings of Miss Ann Taylor and the eulogium of her merits by those who knew her that, without wishing to see her, he addressed her a letter asking if any peremptory reason existed which might lead him to conclude that a journey undertaken with a purpose of soliciting her heart and hand could not possibly be successful. They married.

The celebrated George Whitfield had a queer way of courting. When he was in America, in charge of the Orphan's Home in Savannah, he wanted a helpmate, and had in his mind a young lady whom he had seen in England. He wrote her parents, saying he wanted a wife to help him in the management of his increasing family: "This letter comes like Abraham's servant to Rebekah's relatives, to know whether your daughter, Miss E——, is a proper person to engage in such an undertaking, and, if so, whether you will be pleased to give me leave to propose marriage to her. You need not be afraid of sending me a refusal; please God, if I know anything of my own heart, I am free from that foolish passion which the world calls love." He also wrote the young lady, but the parents were not overly anxious to send their daughter on such an adventure, so the Reverend George did not succeed, but later he wooed and won a widow.

Another divine, Rev. Richard Hooker, when he had been ordained, went to preach at St. Paul's Cross. He arrived, wet and damp, and was taken to the house of a Mrs. Cunningham, who, by good nursing cured him of his distemper and cold so that he got through his services in admirable style. "You are a tender young man," she said, "and your delicate constitution needs a nurse all the time. You should get married." The clergyman agreed, and the scheming Mrs. Cunningham, in looking for a wife for him, began at home, and recommended her daughter Joan. They married, or rather the old woman fixed it up; but it was a sorry wife she made him; for he soon discovered that "she was shrewish and sharp, and had a tongue that was conveniently hung in the middle; from morning till night it rung." Sir Hugh Smithson was rejected by a famous belle of private rank and modest fortune. The only daughter and heiress of Algernon Seymour, Duke of Somerset, heard of it, and publicly said "that the disdainful beauty was a fool, and no other woman in England would be guilty of like folly." The result can be imagined. The celebrated Dr. Abernethy had a business method of courtship. He said to a lady: "I am too busy to make love, but if you can entertain my proposition without further preliminaries let me know at the end of a week."—Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Sage and the Mourners—A Modern Fable.

A Sage who was on his weary journey to Wisconsin, came upon a crowd one day and observed a general sadness in all faces:

"Why this gloom?" queried the old man, as he laid down his bundle and felt for the front end of his plug of tobacco.

"Oh, Sage, we mourn the death of a good man," was the reply.

"Was he honored?"

"He was."

"Sober, upright, charitable and given to peace?"

"He was."

"Who of you praised and encouraged him in life?" asked the old man, as he looked around him.

A hush fell upon the crowd, and no one replied.

"Praise that comes after death," whispered the sage, "does not even cut down the undertaker's bills. Better squander your time sawing wood for his widow."

MORAL: The widow will be expected to take in plain sewing to support herself.—Detroit Free Press.

—A Pennsylvania Judge has recently put a stop to the curious method of evading the Liquor law in the petroleum regions of that State. The sellers have been openly retailing without license, under the sign of "Bottling works," and claiming the right to do so by virtue of a statute that bottlers of ale, porter or beer, not otherwise engaged in the sale of intoxicating liquors, shall be allowed to sell the same by the bottle, provided it is not drank on the premises. Judge Elwell decides that this law was repealed by a subsequent enactment.—N. Y. Sun.

—New Tacoma, the western terminus of the Northern Pacific Railroad, has a population of 4,000. Situated on an arm of Puget Sound, it possesses a magnificent harbor four miles in width, which is too deep, however, for vessels to anchor in. Town lots sell at fabulous prices, ranging from $40,000 downward. Mount Ranier, plainly discernible sixty-five miles to the southeast, towers to the height of 14,000 feet, and is crowned by perpetual snows, which the foot of man has never trod.—Chicago Herald.

A New Electrical Miracle.

One of the most interesting exhibits at the Vienna Electrical Exhibition is Gentilli's glossograph, a little instrument by which speech is automatically reproduced as soon as it is uttered. A small apparatus is placed in the mouth of the speaker—in contact with the roof of his mouth, his tongue and lips—and on being connected with an electro-magnetic registrating apparatus the sounds are committed to paper. It is constructed in such a manner as not to cause any inconvenience to the speaker; neither is it necessary that the voice should be raised, as it produces a whisper as exactly as a shout; the only condition is a correct and distinct articulation. According to the inventor's calculation, it will be possible to write four or five times as fast by means of the glossograph as has hitherto been possible even by the quickest writer. At first sight it appears as if this invention was but an improvement upon Edison's photograph; it is, however, of a much older date. It rests, unlike the former, on an acoustic principle, and does not reproduce the sounds in a microscopical form. The chief obstacles to the introduction of the glossograph will be the difficulty in deciphering the characters, but it is not impossible that with the help of a second automatic apparatus the characters produced by the glossograph may be translated into our common type-writing. The orthography would doubtless appear strange, but in these days of phonetic spelling this might not long be a hindrance.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Gold by the Ton.

One of the richest strikes known in the mining history of California was made three miles south of this place last Saturday. A pocket of quartz of almost unparalleled richness was found less than one hundred feet from the surface, in which was contained from $75,000 to $100,000, and about two tons in quantity. Much of this might be termed chunks of gold instead of gold-bearing quartz. Some of these pieces of solid gold were about as heavy as a man could lift from the ground. The largest piece was an oval, sixteen by twenty-two inches, and six or seven inches thick. This gold is almost black and of the same character as the former rich strikes found in the same mine. We have no doubt that this is the richest find of gold ever known in the United States at one time.

During Friday a ton of this gold-weighted metal was taken out. It is not so rich as the gold streak taken out some time ago, but there is vastly more of it. The value of this bonanza is estimated at from $50,000 to $100,000. The ledge is five feet wide, and the whole face of it was held together, as it were, by spikes of solid gold. Altogether 3,000 pounds have been taken from this bunch of ore, and the end is not yet. The very rich streak from which this mass of free gold has been taken ranges from an inch or so up to twenty inches in width. The previous seam varied from the thickness of a knife blade to three inches.—Amador (Cal.) Dispatch.

—Sixteen shots were fired at a cowboy on the streets of Salt Lake City the other night, but they didn't "wing" him, and he got away. It is supposed that he is a descendant of the only original "Sixteen-String Jack," and that by pulling the strings in the right way he managed to walk off with an unperforated hide.—Chicago Tribune.

—Two horses bitten by rattlesnakes at Billings, Montana, have been cured by puncturing the skin around the wound enough to make the blood flow, and applying soda liberally, renewing the application from time to time, and alternating it with ammonia.

Advance Step In Dentistry.

HAVANA, CUBA.—The most popular dentist of this city, Dr. D. Francisco Garcia, member of the Royal University, states that in all cases of troublesome neuralgia, arising from the teeth, his patrons are recommended to use St. Jacobs Oil, and the most satisfactory cures have followed. It is a specific for toothache, earache, bodily pains, and proof against household accidents.

FASHION hints to ladies—To make your summer bonnet pass through the fall toss it out of the third story window.—Boston Post.

I CHEERFULLY ADD my testimony to the value of Ely's Cream Balm as a specific in the case of one in our family, who has been seriously debilitated with Catarrh for the past eight years, having tried ineffectually other medicines and several specialty doctors in Boston. She improved at once under this discovery, and has gained her health and hearing, which had been considered incurable. ROBERT W. MERRILL, Secretary of the Phoenix Manufacturing Co., Grand Haven, Mich.

TO BE really fashionable the lady who owns a pug dog should wear a pug nose.—Exchange.

Epilepsy (Fits) successfully treated. Pamphlet of particulars one stamp. Address WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N.Y.

WHEN a poet prepares a long-winded poem, does he measure it by the gas meter? That would be a good way to get in the "words that burn."—The Judge.

THE MARKETS.

CINCINNATI, October 18, 1883.

LIVE STOCK—Cattle—common	$1 75	@ 2 75
Choice butchers	4 00	@ 4 75
HOGS—Common	4 00	@ 4 50
Good packers	4 50	@ 4 90
SHEEP	3 75	@ 4 50
FLOUR—Family	5 25	@ 6 00
GRAIN—Wheat—Long berry red	1 08½	@
No. 2 red	1 04	@
Corn—No. 2 mixed	51	@
Oats—No. 2 mixed	30½	@ 30¾
Rye—No. 2	58	@
HAY—Timothy No. 1	10 50	@ 11 75
HEMP—Double dressed	8½	@
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	11 25	@ 11 50
Lard—Current make	7·27½	@
BUTTER—Fancy Dairy	17	@ 18
Prime Creamery	20	@ 23
FRUIT AND VEGETABLES—
Potatoes per bar. from store	1 25	@ 1 30
Apples, prime, per barrel	2 50	@ 2 75
NEW YORK
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 15	@ 3 65
Good to choice	4 40	@ 7 00
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 spring	1 02½	@
No. 2 red	1 06	@ 1 09
Corn—No. 2 mixed—new	58¾	@ 59
Oats—mixed	35	@ 38
PORK—Mess	11 30	@ 12 12
CHICAGO.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 50	@ 4 25
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	99	@ 1 00
Corn—No. 2	47¼	@
Oats—No. 2	27¾	@
Rye	55	@
PORK—Mess	10 25	@ 10 35
LARD—Steam	7·85	@
BALTIMORE.
FLOUR—Family	$5 00	@ 6 00
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 06¾	@ 1 07
Corn—mixed	58¼	@ 58¼
Oats—mixed	35	@ 36
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	13 00	@
Lard—Refined	9¾	@
LOUISVILLE.
FLOUR—A No. 1	$4 00	@ 4 50
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red, new	1 02	@
Corn—mixed	53	@
Oats—mixed	30	@ 31
PORK—MESS	13 00	@
INDIANAPOLIS.
WHEAT—No. 2 red, new	$1 01	@
CORN—mixed	47½	@
OATS—mixed	28	@
LIVE STOCK—Cattle—
Butchers' stock	3 75	@
Shipping cattle	5 25	@

Beautiful Women

are made pallid and unattractive by functional irregularities, disorders and weaknesses that are perfectly cured by following the suggestions given in an illustrated treatise (with colored plates) sent for three letter postage stamps. Address WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL A'TION, Buffalo, N.Y.

THE hotel cook should be given a wide range.—N. Y. Picayune.

A DETECTIVE'S EXPERIENCE.

His Successful Undertaking and Escape from an Impending Fate.

(Buffalo, N. Y., News.)

One morning several years ago, just as the dull gray light was beginning to show itself in the East, a small band of men might have been seen deployed about a house on Ferry street, in Buffalo. There was nothing special either in the dress or appearance of the men to indicate their intention, but it was plain that they had business of importance on hand. Suddenly a man appeared at one of the windows, took in the situation at a glance, and, swinging himself outward with wonderful quickness, scaled the roof of the house. This man was Tom Ballard, the notorious counterfeiter; and, armed to the teeth and fully realizing his situation, he defied justice and the officials below him. Some of the officers, knowing the desperate character of the man, proposed to shoot him until he was killed, but one of the number promptly protested, and declared that if his brother officers would assist him to ascend he would capture the man alive. Accordingly he began the difficult and dangerous task, and succeeded in bringing his prisoner to the ground in safety.

The man who accomplished this task was Mr. Thomas Curtin, the present Superintendent of City Police of Buffalo, N. Y. Mr. Curtin is a man who is known by every prominent detective and policeman in America, and he stands pre-eminently in the front rank of his profession. Quiet and gentlemanly in appearance and manners, he possesses a courage, combined with marked physical powers, that make him the terror of evil-doers and the pride of law-abiding citizens. Few people can realize, however, the trials, exposures, and even privations, to which the members of every municipal police and fire department are exposed. Compelled to be on duty at uncertain hours, subjected to the most inclement weather, and often necessitated by the nature of their duties to protracted undertakings, they endure a nervous and physical strain that is terrible. Such was the experience of Mr. Curtin in former days; and it is not surprising that he found himself suffering from a mysterious physical trouble. In relating his experience to a representative of this paper, he said:

"At times when I was on duty I would feel an unaccountable weariness and lack of energy. My appetite was also uncertain, and my head seemed dull and heavy. I did not fully understand these troubles, but supposed, as most people suppose, that I was suffering from malaria. I tried to throw off the feeling, but it would not go. I thought I might overcome it, but found I was mistaken, and I finally became so badly off that it was almost impossible to attend to my duties. I have known any number of men in the police and fire departments of this country who have been afflicted as I was, and I doubt not there are to-day hundreds similarly troubled who, like myself, did not know the cause, or really what ailed them."

"Your present appearance, Mr. Curtin, does not indicate much physical debility," said the interviewer as he looked at the 220 pounds of bone and muscle standing nearly five feet eleven inches in height before him.

"O, no; that is altogether a thing of the past, and I am happy to say that for more than a year I have enjoyed almost perfect health, although I now realize that I was on the road to certain death by Bright's disease of the kidneys and traveling at a very rapid pace."

"How did you come to recover so completely?"

"That is just what I want to tell you, for I believe it may be of great service to many others in my profession, who may possibly hear of it. I began the use of a popular remedy at the earnest solicitation of a number of friends in this city, and found to my great gratification that I began feeling better. This feeling continued, and I gained in strength and vigor until now I am perfectly well—and wholly through the instrumentality of Warner's Safe Cure, which I believe to be the best medicine for policemen, firemen, railroad men or any other class of people exposed to danger or a change of weather, ever discovered. Since my recovery I have recommended it everywhere, and never knew a case where it failed either to cure or benefit. I would not be without it under any consideration, and I am positive it is a wonderfully valuable and at the same time entirely harmless remedy. Indeed, I see that Dr. Gunn, dean of the United States Medical College of New York, indorses it in the highest terms."

"So you experience little difficulty in the execution of your duties now, Mr. Curtin, do you?"

"None whatever. Our department was never in better condition than at present."

"And do you never have any fear of some of the desperadoes whom you have been the means of bringing to justice?"

"Not in the least. Such men do not try to retaliate, partially because they have not the courage, but oftener because they respect an officer who does his duty."

The policemen, firemen, letter-carriers and other public employes in this country have a particularly trying life. When, therefore, a simple and pure remedy that can restore and sustain the health of all such men is found, it should be cause for great congratulation, especially when recommended by such men as Superintendent Thomas Curtin, of Buffalo.

YOUNG and middle aged men suffering from nervous debility, premature old age, loss of memory, and kindred symptoms, should send three stamps for Part VII of pamphlets issued by World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

PRESSED for time—A mummy.—N. Y. Advertiser.

IREDELL COUNTY, N. C.—The Ex-Sheriff, Mr. W. F. Wasson, says: "Brown's Iron Bitters has improved my digestion and general health."

SOMNAMBULISM is believed to be an unconscious trance-action.—Somerville Journal.

AN enricher of the blood and purifier of the system; cures lassitude and lack of energy; such is Brown's Iron Bitters.

NOT what it is cracked up to be—A worm-eaten nut.—N. Y. Journal.

KEYSER, W. VA.—Dr. W. D. Ewin says: "Many esteem Brown's Iron Bitters as an excellent tonic."

GOOD town for a bare-headed man—Hatfield, Me.

FOR RELIEVING THROAT TROUBLES AND COUGHS, "Brown's Bronchial Troches" have a wide reputation. Sold only in boxes.

AFTER long Mercury and Potash treatment, I found myself a cripple from Mercurial Rheumatism. Tried Hot Springs two years without relief, and was finally cured sound and well by the use of Swift's Specific (S. S. S.)
CHAS. BERG,
Hot Springs, Ark.

25c. buys a pair of Lyon's Patent Heel Stiffeners and make a boot or shoe last twice as long.

St. Jacobs Oil

THE GREAT GERMAN REMEDY

For Pain!

Relieves and cures

RHEUMATISM,
Neuralgia,
SCIATICA, LUMBAGO,
BACKACHE,
Headache, Toothache,
SORE THROAT,
QUINSY, SWELLINGS,
SPRAINS,
Soreness, Cuts, Bruises,
FROSTBITES,
BURNS, SCALDS,
And all other bodily aches and pains.

FIFTY CENTS A BOTTLE.

Sold by all Druggists and Dealers. Directions in 11 languages.

The Charles A. Vogeler Co.
(Successors to A. VOGELER & CO.)
Baltimore, Md., U. S. A.

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer

Is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from dandruff, restore gray hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which Sulphur, Sugar of Lead and Nitrate of Silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. JOHN D. PARK & SONS, Wholesale Agents, Cincinnati, Ohio, and C. N. CRITTENTON, New York.

SWIFT'S Specific (S. S. S.) has relieved me of an obstinate case of Dry Tetter, which had troubled me for twenty-five years, and had baffled all sorts of treatment.
REV. I. R. BRANHAM, Macon, Ga.

A WIFE'S TROUBLE.

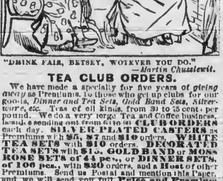
For a number of years my wife has been troubled with chronic rheumatism, it being in some portion of her body constantly (except perhaps in the very warmest weather in summer). Last Christmas she contracted a very severe cold, and a diseased condition of the kidneys became manifest, which subjected her to excessive suffering, as the symptoms of gravel became more prominent, her urine being colored, accompanied by a heavy brick-dust sediment.

After trying several remedies without relief, I procured for her a bottle of Hunt's Remedy, which she commenced taking, and before three days had passed she became much better. She continued using the medicine until she had used six bottles, and now feels entirely cured of both rheumatism and kidney complaint. She believes her present excellent health due solely to the use of Hunt's Remedy.
WILLIAM C. CLEAVELAND.
NORWICH, CONN., May 5, 1883.

GRATIFYING RESULTS

Under date of May 14, Mr. E. A. Thomson, the well-known grocer and provision dealer, of 3 Green street, New Haven, Conn., writes follows: "Several weeks since I was taken very ill with kidney disorders, and an examination of my urine showed a very diseased condition of my kidneys, and I had also symptoms of a diseased state of my liver. The passing of my urine was accompanied with severe pains in the small of my back and loins, followed by a burning sensation, and after having stood awhile in the vessel, the urine showed a very heavy deposit of a sediment similar to ground brick-dust, and, in short, I found that I was in such a diseased condition as to require immediate medical treatment, and as I was anxious to obtain the best and most speedy remedy, I looked and inquired carefully, and became satisfied that Hunt's Remedy was an article of excellent merit, and therefore I concluded to give it a trial, and commenced taking it, and before I had taken one bottle I found such a great improvement that I decided to continue its use; and by taking only two bottles the result has been most gratifying in giving me restored health.

"I have ordered a supply of Hunt's Remedy for my store, and shall hereafter have it for sale, as I consider it an excellent article for diseases of the liver and kidneys."



"DRINK FAIR, BETSEY, WOTEVER YOU DO."
—Martin Chuzzlewit.

TEA CLUB ORDERS.

We have made a specialty for five years of giving away as Premiums, to those who get up clubs for our goods, Dinner and Tea Sets, Gold Band Sets, Silverware, etc. Teas of all kinds, from 30 to 75 cents per pound. We do a very large Tea and Coffee business, besides sending out from 60 to 90 CLUB ORDERS each day. SILVER-PLATED CASTERS as Premiums with $5, $7 and $10 orders. WHITE TEA SETS with $10 orders. DECORATED TEA SETS with $15. GOLD BAND or MOSS ROSE SETS of 44 pcs., or DINNER SETS, of 106 pcs., with $20 orders, and a Host of other Premiums. Send us Postal and mention this Paper, and we will send you full Price and Premium List. Freight Charges average 75 cents per 100 lbs. to points West. GREAT LONDON TEA CO., 808 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

$15 VALUE FOR $1.50
BALCH'S HAND-BOOK,
Combining a Dictionary and Encyclopedia of Social and Business Forms, Etiquette, Housekeeping, Farming, Family Medicine, and other subjects in daily use. Contains the cream of 50 standard works. 700 pages for $1.50. Agents Wanted to send twenty-five cents and secure Outfit and Agency. Sells everywhere to everybody.
FORSHEE & MACKIN, Cincinnati, O.

REDPATH'S WEEKLY.
BEST STORY PAPER IN AMERICA.
Sample copy Free. Address REDPATH'S WEEKLY, 8 Park Place, New York.

DYKE'S BEARD ELIXIR
Forces luxuriant Mustache, Whiskers or hair on bald heads in 20 to 30 days. No injury. Easily used. Beats the world. 3 or 4 Pkgs. does the work. Will prove it or forfeit $100.00. Price per Package with directions sealed and postpaid 25 cts. 3 for 50 cts. stamps or silver. L. A. L. SMITH & CO., Agents, Palatine, Ill.

CANCER AND TUMORS Treated scientifically and cured without the knife. Book on treatment sent free. Drs. Gratigny & Norris 204 W. 4th St., Cincinnati, O.

PATENTS NO PATENT, NO PAY! R. S. & A. P. LACEY, Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C. Full Instructions and Hand-Book of Patents sent free.

HAIR Wigs & Waves sent C.O.D. anywhere. Wholesale & Retail. Price-list free. Goods guaranteed. B.C. STREHL, 157 Wabash-av., Chicago.

AGENTS make money selling our Family Medicines; no capital required. STANDARD CURE CO., 197 Pearl St., New York.

WANTED—Agents for an article in general use; $3 to $5 per day made easy; send 10c for sample and circular. Address J. F. DAVIS, Fall River, Mass.

$66 A WEEK in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. Addr's H. Hallett & Co., Portland, Me.

AGENTS WANTED. Fastest selling books. Largest profits to canvassers. Circulars free. COBURN & NEWMAN, Publish'g Co., Chicago.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STINSON & Co., Portland, Me.

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS

In chronic dyspepsia and liver complaint, and in chronic constipation and other obstinate diseases Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is beyond all comparison the best remedy that can be taken. As a means of restoring the strength and vital energy of persons who are sinking under the debilitating effects of painful disorders, this standard vegetable invigorant is confessedly unequaled. For sale by all Druggists and Dealers generally.

CATARRH ELY'S CREAM BALM CURES COLD IN HEAD CATARRH ROSE-COLD HAY-FEVER DEAFNESS HEADACHE PRICE 50 CENTS ELY'S CREAM BALM CO. OWEGO N.Y. U.S.A. HAY-FEVER

ELY'S CREAM BALM when applied by the finger into the nostrils, will be absorbed, effectually cleansing the head of catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions. It allays inflammation, protects the membrane of the nasal passages from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores taste and smell. A few applications relieve. A thorough treatment will positively cure. Agreeable to use. Send for circular. Price 50 cents by mail or at druggists. Ely Brothers, Druggists, Owego, N.Y.

Mason & Hamlin Organs.

New Illustrated Catalogue, (40 pp. 4to) for season of 1883–4, including many new styles; best assortment of the best and most attractive organs we have ever offered, and at lowest prices, $22 to $600, for cash, easy payments or rented. Sent free.

MASON & HAMLIN ORGAN & PIANO CO.
Boston, 154 Tremont St.; New York, 46 East 14th St.; Chicago, 149 Wabash Ave.

Sawing Made Easy
Monarch Lightning Sawing Machine!
Sent on 30 Days Test Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

A boy 16 years old can saw logs FAST and EASY. MILES MURRAY, Portage, Mich., writes: "Am much pleased with the MONARCH LIGHTNING SAWING MACHINE. I sawed off a 30 inch log in 3 minutes." For sawing logs into suitable lengths for family stove-wood, and all sorts of log-cutting, it is peerless and unrivaled. Illustrated Catalogue, Free. AGENTS WANTED. Mention this paper. Address MONARCH MANUFACTURING CO., 163 E. Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

CHICAGO SCALE CO.
3 TON WAGON SCALE, $40. 4 TON, $50.
4 Ton $60, Beam Box Included.
240 lb. FARMER'S SCALE, $5.
The "Little Detective," ¼ oz. to 25 lb. $3.
300 OTHER SIZES. Reduced PRICE LIST FREE.
FORGES, TOOLS, &c.
BEST FORGE MADE FOR LIGHT WORK, $10.
40 lb. Anvil and Kit of Tools, $10.
Farmers save time and money doing odd jobs.
Blowers, Anvils, Vices & Other Articles
AT LOWEST PRICES, WHOLESALE & RETAIL.

PORTABLE AND STATIONARY
STEAM ENGINES
and STEAM BOILERS, smaller sizes adapted to
Farm and Plantation Use.
$200 FOR OUR NO. 1 PLANTATION SAW MILL. WE MAKE SIX SIZES, CAPACITY FROM 3 TO 50,000 FT. PER DAY, WITH ONE SAW.
Lane & Bodley Co., JOHN AND WATER STS., Cincinnati, Ohio.
(Illustrated catalogue free.)

ST. PATRICK'S SALVE
TRY IT USE IT
It relieves at once Burns, Piles, Chapped Hands or Lips, Corns, Bunions, Scalds, Bruises, Soreness of feet, hands, eyes, etc.; Itching from any cause. 25c. Ask your druggist, or send to 92 Fulton Street, N. Y.

Texas Send at once for Maps, Pamphlets, Land-folders, etc., describing the marvelous growth and wonderful resources of the Great South-west. Address N. R. WARWICK, 131 Vine Street, Cincinnati, O.

DR. HORNE'S ELECTRIC BELT
DR. HORNE'S ELECTRIC BELT
Cures Nervousness, Rheumatism, Paralysis, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Kidney, Spine and Liver diseases, Gout, Asthma, Heart Disease, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Erysipelas, Catarrh, Piles, Epilepsy, Impotency, Prolapsus Uteri, etc. Only Scientific Belt that sends the Electricity and Magnetism through the body, and can be recharged in an instant by the patient. Send for Circular. Dr. W. J. HORNE, Inventor, 191 Wabash Av. Chicago, Ill.

"THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST."
SAW MILLS, ENGINES THRESHERS, Horse Powers,
(For all sections and purposes.) Write for Free Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

Lady Agents can secure permanent employment and good salary selling Queen City Skirt and Stocking Supporters, etc. Sample outfit Free. Address Queen City Suspender Co., Cincinnati, O.

COLEMAN BUSINESS COLLEGE, Newark, N. J. Terms $40. Positions for graduates; write for circular.

$72 A WEEK. $12 a day at home easily made. Costly outfit free. Address True & Co., Augusta, Me.

$4,444 a Year at home. Terms and costly outfit free. Address H. A. ELLS & Co., Chicago.

DIPHTHERIA
CROUP, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, Neuralgia, Rheumatism. JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT (for Internal and External Use) will instantly relieve these terrible diseases, and will positively cure nine cases out of ten. Information that will save many lives sent free by mail. Don't delay a moment. Prevention is better than cure. JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT CURES Influenza, Hoarseness, Hacking Cough, Whooping Cough, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Cholera Morbus, Kidney Troubles, and Lame Back. Sold everywhere. Circulars sent FREE. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

What Dyspepsia Does.
It causes grievous pains by day and frightful dreams by night.
It destroys the pleasure of a good dinner.
It sours the disposition and makes its victim cross and petulant.
It makes the breath bad, the eyes leaden, and the skin sallow.
It makes the appetite capricious and unreasonable.
It causes constant grumbling and complaining.

What "Brown's Iron Bitters" Does.
It invigorates the weakened stomach, and enables it to digest
It promotes the enjoyment of a hearty meal.
It enriches the blood, improves the liver, and cheers the mind.
It purifies the breath, clears the eyesight, and makes the skin natural.
It brings a regular and healthy desire for food at proper times.
Your DRUGGIST sells BROWN'S IRON BITTERS. 7

LIST OF DISEASES
ALWAYS CURABLE BY USING MEXICAN MUSTANG
LINIMENT.

OF HUMAN FLESH.
Rheumatism,
Burns and Scalds,
Stings and Bites,
Cuts and Bruises,
Sprains & Stitches,
Contracted Muscles,
Stiff Joints,
Backache,
Eruptions,
Frost Bites,

OF ANIMALS
Scratches,
Sores and Galls,
Spavin, Cracks,
Screw Worm, Grub,
Foot Rot, Hoof Ail,
Lameness,
Swinny, Founders,
Sprains, Strains,
Sore Feet,
Stiffness,

and all external diseases, and every hurt or accident.
For general use in family, stable and stock-yard, it is
THE BEST OF ALL
LINIMENTS

S.S.S. The Chief Blood Purifier
For full Particulars write The Swift Specific Co. Atlanta Ga.

One gentleman who had been confined to his bed six weeks with Mercurial Rheumatism has been cured entirely, and speaks in the highest praise of S. S. S.
CHILES & BERRY, Chattanooga, Tenn.
A negro was cured of a violent case of Rheumatism by S. S. S. Without the remedy he would have died.
W. B. SMITH, M. D., Tumbling Shoals, S. C.
Swift's Specific cured me of Mercurial Rheumatism after I had tried everything.
C. R. GUINN, Hot Springs, Ark.
$1,000 REWARD will be paid to any Chemist who will find, on analysis of 100 bottles of S. S. S., one particle of Mercury, Iodide Potassium, or any poisonous substance.
THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Drawer 3, Atlanta, Ga.
Our treatise on Blood and Skin Diseases mailed free to applicants.

PILES "Anakesis" gives instant relief, and is an infallible cure for Piles. Price $1 from druggists, or sent prepaid by mail. Samples free. Ad. "ANAKESIS" Makers, Box 2416, New York.

$250 A MONTH. Agents Wanted. 90 best selling articles in the world. 1 sample FREE. Address JAY BRONSON, Detroit, Mich.

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOLUME IX. BURLINGTON, KY., WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 31, 1883. NUMBER 1.

THE LITTLE BLACK TEA-POT.

When the sky darkens down on a cold winter's day;
When waiting for the sunshine to come and to stay;
When the angry wind rages, and down from each cloud
Comes the drift that envelops all things in a shroud—
To warm me and cheer me I have something at hand,
In the little black tea-pot that smokes on the stand.

And this tea-pot, though tiny, is handsome and bright,
With its mate, the small creamer, gold-bordered and white;
Then the sugar-dish has on its handle a bird,
And it makes as shrill whistling as boy ever heard,
And "forget-me-not;" this is its golden command,
Both to me and the tea-pot that smokes on the stand.

While a pile of cream crackers suffice for a lunch—
I've no longing for wines—am a stranger to punch;
And I never am called on for bills at the bar,
So my credit is good and my paper at par.
When I thirst I've a beverage ready at hand,
In the little black tea-pot that smokes on the stand.

Let them pile on their silver, their service of plate;
Let them sit at Delmonico's table in state;
Let them quaff at the capital Europe's rich wines,
And wring the life-blood from the foreigner's vines;
I'm content—while I envy no lord in the land—
With the little black tea-pot that smokes on the stand.

—Philadelphia Press.

POMPEII.

There can be no place in the world so full of suggestion as that rich plain which stretches inland from the beautiful Bay of Naples, under the slopes of Vesuvius. One does not know which thought to offer first, so thick is the very air with memories. If one approaches from Sorrento, one sees the landscape slowly grow less magnificent and luxuriant, but perhaps more fertile—as the gorgeous flowers which give a tropical splendor to the rocky road gradually yield to fields and vineyards, where peasants drive their plow oxen just as Virgil saw them, and irrigate their land by methods as primitive as their plows. On the other side of the bay, just above the Grotto of Pozzuoli, is Virgil's Tomb. Farther away, round the Cape of Posilippo, is Pozzuoli. It was called Puteoli when Saint Paul came unto its little harbor, on board the ship whose sign was Castor and Pollux; and his feet must have trodden the great rough stones which pave the Appian Way. Farther off still are Lake Avernus and the cave of that Cumæan Sibyl, whose dark saying set Augustus to build an altar "to the First-born God." Lastly, there is the Cape of Misenum, where Pliny the Elder lay with his fleet on the day that Pompeii was destroyed.

As we turn inland we pass a few houses—an inn, a church—and become every moment more and more aware of the awful nearness of the Burning Mountain, which now seems to tower threateningly above the fields. The fields rise a little above the road, the grass grows high, and there is a perfect blaze of poppies. When you walk in these fields you are walking on the grave of Pompeii.

As one comes to the excavation parts, and goes down into the narrow streets—where the Roman chariot-wheels have worn deep ruts in the great paving-stones—one realizes the past, and the changing fortunes of empires, and the immortality of human deeds, as one never did before. Down there, in those long-buried streets, it is easy to realize that God shall bring every work to remembrance, when the Books are opened, and the Judgment is set.

In some sort, the books are opened already in Pompeii. Eighteen hundred years ago life there was suddenly stopped. As in the days before the Flood, so here in Pompeii, they were eating and drinking, and knew not until the Flood came. It was a gay city, the Scarborough or Biarritz of Rome—perhaps one might rather call it the Ostend, for it was less genteel than Herculaneum, as is shown by the more meretricious taste of the decorations. Sixteen years before, an earthquake had done so much mischief that the ruin was not yet quite restored; but the mountain had been quiet ever since, and people soon grow used even to a volcano, so transitory a passion is fear. It was a hot August day—a day when the parched fields made all the air dusty and dry, and the beautiful white city of Naples (called Neapolis, the new town), lying all round the head of the bay, looked a dusky yellow through the sultry, heavy air. Most of the people were in the amphitheater, at a wild-beast fight, when they saw a strange cloud rise from Vesuvius. It seemed like a pine-tree; the trunk rose up high into the heavens, and then spread out in branches—some white, some dull and spotted, until, slowly detaching themselves from the parent trunk, they began to darken the whole sky.

Pliny the Elder, over at Misenum, was reading in his study when his sister came in to tell him of this strange cloud. He ordered a light galley to be got ready, and asked his nephew if he would come with him; but young Pliny said he would rather study, especially as his uncle had just given him some writing to do. As the Admiral was coming out, with his tablets in his hand, ready to note down all he saw, the mariners belonging to the galleys at Retina came up to implore of him to go to their help. By the time Pliny got there with his galleys the ashes were falling thick on his decks, hotter and thicker every instant. Then came broken and blackened stones and pummice. Vast fragments were rolling down the mountain, and the sea had suddenly retreated. No wonder the pilot was for putting back! But the undaunted old philosopher-Admiral would not go back. "Fortune," he said, "favors the brave."

Everybody knows something about the rest, and how the poor old gentleman, being weakly and asthmatic, was suffocated by a sudden outburst of flames and sulphur fumes. In that awful darkness, when the sudden rush of flames was the only light which pierced the dense smoke, the fields were full of terrified people, fleeing they knew not whither—from the land to the sea, and back from the sea to the land. In the midst of that fiery rain many imagined that they saw the shadowy forms of the Titans—the Giants of old, whom Jupiter had chained below Mount Etna—looming awfully through the smoke, and thought that they heard the clang of trumpets, announcing the end of the world and the return to chaos.

Thinking of all this, in the warm, clear sunshine, as we wander through the house—where the paintings are yet bright on the walls, and we may walk round their gardens, and see their dried-up fountains—one seems to hear all the Book of Revelation sounding in one's ears, and a voice saying: "Behold, I make all things new!"

In these deserted streets life suddenly stopped eighteen hundred years ago. It is true that the destruction was not instantaneous; and a great number of the inhabitants saved their lives, and even took away a good deal of their treasure. But enough was left to show us every detail of Roman life. The old world is set before us with all its good and its evil, its glories and its shame. We know what manner of men and women they must have been, and what their daily lives were like, almost as well as if we had actually dwelt among them.

These old Pompeiians were very modern. There is nothing new under the sun. They had folding doors and hot-water-urns; they put gratings to their windows and made rockeries in their gardens; their steel-yards are exactly like those your own cheesemonger uses to weigh his Cheddars and Glosters. Their children had toys like ours—bears, lions, pigs, cats, dogs, made of clay, and sometimes serving as jugs also. Poor children! poor mothers! How did they fare in those three days of darkness and dismay?

People wrote on walls and cut their names on seats, just as we do now. They kept birds in cages. In Naples to-day, as you walk along the Chiaja, you may find yourself in the midst of a herd of goats, with bells round their necks, exactly like those in the Museum. They gave tokens at the doors of their places of entertainment—the people in the gallery had pigeons made of a sort of terra-cotta. They put lamps inside the hollow eyes of the masks that adorned their fountains. They even made grottos of shells—vulgarity itself is ancient.

They ate sausages, and hung up strings of onions. They had stands for public vehicles, and the schoolmaster used a birch to the dunces. They put stepping stones across the roads, that dainty young patrician gentlemen and the pursy old senators might not soil their gilded sandals. It was never cold enough for their pipes to burst, but they turned their water on and off with taps; and their cook-shops had marble counters. They clapped their offenders into the stocks—two gladiators were kept there eighteen hundred years!

When their crockery broke, they riveted it. At Herculaneum there is a huge wine jar half buried in the earth. It has been badly broken, but is so neatly riveted with many rivets—that it no doubt held the wine as well as ever. Those rivets have lasted eighteen hundred years! It is a strange thing to think about. What would the housewife have said if some one had told her that her cracked pot would outlast the Roman Empire?

The view is very wide from those Pompeiian streets—I do not mean the view seen by the bodily eye—though Vesuvius' and the plain of Stabia can be seen at every turn—but the view of the kingdoms of this world, and of the dealings of God with them. That first year of the Emperor Titus is become the year of our Lord 79.

Thinking of all which has happened while Pompeii lay buried, one comes upon the Temple of Isis. Its name carries us back to an antiquity compared to which Rome is of yesterday. Isis—the symbol of the fertile earth, the Bride of the Sun, the Mother of all living—was worshipped beside the mysterious Nile long before Joseph was sold into Egypt, or Abraham went down thither. This temple was one of the buildings which suffered in the great earthquake of A. D. 63. Numerius Popidius rebuilt it in the name of his little son Selsinus, then but six years old, as appears from the inscription above the temple door, where his name stands recorded among the decurions, in gratitude for this munificence. Did little Selsinus escape, or are his bones among the skeletons found in the House of Diomede?

This temple of Isis had a money-box at the door for the offerings of the faithful. And in one of the rooms attached to the building there was found the skeleton of a priest, trying to break through the wall with an ax. Think of it—how he found he was buried alive and seized the ax and hewed away for dear life, till the sulphurous fumes overpowered him—1,800 years ago!

In the Museum there are some impressions of skeletons. One can see their dying agony so plain that, after eighteen hundred years, one can not bear to look on them. There is a poor dog among them—he was chained up with a handsome chain and collar. The poor beast was choked, and died in a convulsion—it is terrible to see even now.

But Death came for the most part then, as he comes now—in slower, gentler fashion.

Just outside the Herculaneum Gate begins the Street of Tombs. A few people had villas there, but the street was chiefly inhabited by the dead. Some of the inscriptions yet remain—there is one of a father to his son. The son was a popular magistrate, who had a public funeral voted him by the decurions. There is a child's tomb—two women are shown performing the last rites. And Nævoleia Tyche, freedwoman of Julia Tyche, erected a monument for her own freedmen and freedwomen and those of Caius Munatius Faustus. Who was he? And what was the relationship between him and Nævoleia? We do not know—all that the inscriptions tell us is, that Munatius was decreed the bisellium, with the consent of the people (here sounds the last echo of the Roman Republic!) and a ship with rowers carved on the tomb perhaps hints that he did his business in the great waters of the Mediterranean—unless the sails just being furled and the ship coming into harbor mean only that the voyage of life was over.

Very near here is that House of Diomede, of which we have all read, and which is as familiar to us as though we had ourselves called there on poor Julia, when Pompeii was in her glory.

There is a tomb erected by a grateful freedman to his master—he used to give a funeral banquet here on the anniversary of his dear master's death. And a wife whose name was Servilia, in her epitaph to her husband, calls him "the friend of her soul."

With these ancient echoes of human love ringing in our ears, let us come up out of the grave of Pompeii into the nineteenth century.—Sunday at Home.

The Elephant Seal.

Almost the first voyagers who sailed into the then unknown seas surrounding the south pole took back to Europe stories about a gigantic seal much larger than the elephant, and, like that animal, furnished with a trunk. But the people had begun to doubt the stories of travelers, and consequently not much reliance was placed on those various accounts.

When the real Robinson Crusoe, whose name was Alexander Selkirk, was found on his island of Juan Fernandez and taken home to England, he also told about the giant seal, and gave such minute particulars concerning it that its existence was no longer doubted. Still, it was not until a century later, when the report of Captain Cook's voyages was published, that any real interest was manifested in the sea elephant, or elephant seal. This report said that the oil and skin furnished by the animal were valuable, and that statement was hint enough for one or two enterprising merchants. Without more ado they fitted out a few whaling ships, and sent them to the southern seas to procure the oil and skins of the hapless creatures.

Among these ships the trimmest and swiftest was the "Mary Ann."

How many elephant-seals were slaughtered by the crew of the "Mary Ann" is not known; but it is recorded that, within twenty-five years of her visit to Georgia Island, there were killed on that island alone over one million two hundred thousand animals, or about one thousand every day during the season. How many millions were killed altogether can never be known, but it is certain that the killing did not cease until the elephant-seal was almost exterminated. It will interest you to know that two young elephant-seals are now to be seen in the Zoological Gardens at Philadelphia.

The young sea-elephant is as big as a small man when it is born, and in eight days it will grow four feet longer and one hundred pounds heavier. That is pretty quick growth; but to reach a circumference of eighteen feet and a length of thirty feet in three years, it has need to grow quickly.

Penrose, in his account of the elephant-seal, says that his sailors used to mount upon the backs of the animals as they were in the water, and race with each other, making the animals swim by spurring them with their knives. This story is not precisely doubted, but it is not believed either. The elephant-seal always comes ashore, if possible, when about to die, which seems somewhat odd, when the water is the element in which it is most at home. There it is surprisingly swift and agile, and, indeed, it is so comfortable there that it sleeps on the rocking waves as quietly as on shore.—John R. Coryell, in St. Nicholas.

Quaint Auction Scenes in Bremen.

Although the free Hanseatic City of Bremen has gradually done away with many of her traditional prerogatives, yet does she cling to some of them to this day. The Senators no longer wear Spanish cloaks or wigs, but the so-called Council messengers still appear on solemn occasions in flaming red coats, knee-breeches, white stockings, and side-swords. The gates are no longer closed at night, nor are the bells rung on the outbreak of a fire; but the "Rathskeller" is punctually closed at 10:30 p. m., and nobody is allowed to enter the sacred precincts after that hour. With remarkable tenacity, however, the good Bremeners adhere to the ancient custom of the so-called "burning candle," by the light of which all peremptory sales of real estate take place to this day, as may be seen every Friday in a hall over the old Exchange. At one end of a long table is seated a Judge and scribe, at the other stands the City Crier, and by his side a Council messenger in flaming red dress, holding a stable lantern. In his hand he has a box filled with ends of small candles that can burn but a few minutes, and of which he has to light one after the other until no other bid is made before the candle goes out, in which case the last and of course highest bidder becomes the owner of the estate. As late as the beginning of this century every person who overbid another while the candle was still burning, thereby putting up the price, received a gratification of a so-called "fine third," equal to about two marks. Frequently some porters or errand-men would come in and bid in order to turn an honest penny by going for the "fine third," although they ran the risk of some weeks' imprisonment, if by chance the candle went out and they thus remained the last bidders without being able to pay for the property knocked down to them on account. It is a comical sight to enter the hall just at the moment when one bidder has silenced a competitor. All eyes turn to the bit of candle in the lantern, which grows smaller and smaller; hardly a breath is drawn; the company looks as if they were petrified. Suddenly there comes another bid, another candle is lighted, and the comedy is repeated until finally the extinction of a candle has fastened the sale upon the last bidder. This custom of the "burning candle" may be justly termed one of the traditional peculiarities of Bremen, there being but few, if any, other German cities or towns in which this ancient custom still obtains.—Paris American Register.

—The story is told in the White Mountains that Mr. Vanderbilt went into one of the big hotels one day last summer and, instead of being shown to the elaborate table prepared for him, was ushered to an obscure seat by the head waiter, who didn't recognize him. The guest quietly partook of a bowl of crackers and milk, gave the sub-waiter a five-dollar tip, and went out. And that head waiter has felt like kicking himself ever since.—N. Y. Times.

Religious.

CONSOLATION.

"Suffer the little ones to come to me!"
O mother, bending o'er the silent form,
Remember that from toil and sin 'tis free,
Free from earth's gold, and sorrow's blighting storm.

And yet it is so hard to put away
The golden hair, the eyes so full of light,
And long to see them every passing day,
And weary grow from this ere comes the night;

Yet all the while, where God's fair kingdom is,
The sunny hair grows brighter, and the eyes
Grow wiser, deeper, than they could in this,
Our earthly life, with light of Paradise;

And all the while, a little angel hand
You may not see or feel is very near,
And a bright presence by your side doth stand,
And whispers dim-heard words of love and cheer.

God is a loving Father; He will hold,
At its true worth, this treasure you have given;
Brighter and purer will He make the gold
Of love that waits you at the gate of Heaven.

So while your tears the cold, still face baptize,
Remember, death but leads us up to Him
Whose care is boundless, and whose loving eyes
No pain or trouble can make cold or dim.

Fold the white hands upon the silent breast,
And on the little mouth press earth's last kiss,
And think, while doing so, from death's short rest
The sinless soul will waken to God's bliss.

Take the last look at the bright, sunny hair,
And the closed eyes that were so full of love,
But think Heaven's glory will make both more fair,
And no mad crime a blight to them can prove.

O mother-love, so tender and so true,
While you are waiting here, some radiant soul,
Whose child now shares this restless life with you,
Holds your lost darling in her fond control.

I do not bid you sorrow not, nor weep—
All vain such words when death's stern visits come!
But think that God will your great treasure keep Within His mansions, till you, too, "come home."

Think of the tenderness of Him who said:
"Suffer the little ones to come to me."
And know your darling is not cold and dead,
But "gone before," your messenger to be.
—Thomas S. Collier, in Youth's Companion.

Sunday-School Lessons.

FOURTH QUARTER.

Oct. 28—Saul Chosen King	1 Sam. 10:17-27
Nov. 4—Samuel's Farewell Address	1 Sam. 12:13-25
Nov. 11—Saul Rejected	1 Sam. 15:12-26
Nov. 18—David Anointed	1 Sam. 16: 1-13
Nov. 25—David and Goliath	1 Sam. 17:38-51
Dec. 2—David's Enemy—Saul	1 Sam. 18: 1- 6
Dec. 9—David's Friend—Jonathan	1 Sam. 20:32-42
Dec. 16—David Sparing His Enemy	1 Sam. 24: 1-17
Dec. 23—Death of Saul and Jonathan	1 Sam. 31: 1-13
Dec. 30—Review.

Christian Example.

A holy life is an example of what Christianity can do for men which sufficiently proves its Divinity. There is an inherent and silent power for good over others in a godly example which not only convinces them of the truth of Christianity, but is more potent than anything else, save the omnipotent Spirit, in leading them to Christ. So great is this power that many a man has been won to Christ by simply "seeing the good works" of one who has never spoken a word to him. Often, where oral preaching of the Gospel and personal entreaty, rebuke and exhortation have failed, Christians have been instrumental in reclaiming men by living the Gospel, by the subtle, silent, attractive influence of a holy example. Because of the inherent power of example, Christ said: "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works," not hear your good words merely, and "glorify your Father who is in Heaven."

* * * *

No class of men are more closely watched, or more exposed to public scrutiny, than professing Christians. They are known and read of all men. They are as a city set upon a hill, which can not be hid. They are the representatives of Christ on earth. Their conduct, and not their professions, shape irreligious men's opinions of the Christian religion. It is their high calling to show by their example the excellence, the divinity, the saving power of Christianity. As representatives of Christ, they must be Christlike; must have the mind, the spirit that was in Him. It is the character of Christ in Christians that is to evangelize the world. This is the meaning of His declaration: "And I, if I be lifted up from the earth, will draw all men unto Me." It is "Christ in you, the hope of glory," purifying the heart and the life, and shining out in a godly example, that attracts men to Him. Without this all other agencies for the world's redemption are inefficient. Every man by his example exerts an influence for the weal or woe of his fellow-men. This influence may be unconsciously exerted, yet it is none the less real and efficient. It does not cease with the life of the one who originates it, nor is it limited to his immediate circle of friends, but is as wide as humanity, and continues to be a factor among the moral forces of the world long after his name is forgotten. If these things are so; if the influence of example is so wide and enduring; and if Christian example is so important, that upon it depends the salvation of men, "what manner of persons ought we to be in all holy conversation and godliness?" We are in daily contact with people whose eternal destiny, whether of happiness or misery, may be determined by our example; for the influence of a bad example is as powerful and lasting as that of a good one. They may be of our own household whose eternal future may be less blessed or positively miserable in consequence of an evil example. How great, then, is our responsibility! The apochryphal Gospel of St. Bartholomew contains this text: "If the neighbor of an elect person sin, half the guilt of the sin belongs to the elect person, for if he had displayed before him the beauty of holiness he would not have sinned." "If," says a commentator on this text, "we could but thoroughly reflect the purity and excellence that belongs to the Christian character, we should be as suns in the sky of moral night. The light of Christ's life in us would then so shine forth that all men, seeing it, would be led to glorify God."—N. W. Christian Advocate.

Without God and Without Hope.

Doubt and unbelief make sad havoc with the prospects and hopes of those who come under their influence. The ruinous results of skepticism are everywhere manifest in the wicked and godless lives of men, who having rid themselves of all faith in religion, have cast off all restraint and surrendered themselves to the freest indulgence of every form of folly and sin.

There are many who are controlled by moral and religious influences even while they refuse to acknowledge the source of the power that holds them in check. The early education and social surroundings of many keep them up to habits of life against which they would otherwise revolt, and not a few who scoff at religion are indebted to its silent influences for their good principles and their advantageous positions.

In the case of the great mass of irreligious people, however, these restraints are not felt, and their demoralization is almost without mitigation. Reared in an atmosphere of doubt, and without the helps of religious privileges and association, they are wholly given up to selfish gratification, and are found living "without God and without hope in the world;" knowing and caring for nothing beyond the present. To them religion is only a myth, they know no God, they have no faith in a hereafter, and they feel no care except for the things that are "seen and temporal."

"Ah! but they say now there is no God!" was the sad remark made by a shop-woman of Rome to the Rev. Dr. Taylor, who, upon leaving her store, said: "The peace of God be with this house." And in every case where this fearful denial of God takes possession of the heart the benediction of His peace becomes only a solemn mockery.—Baptist Weekly.

Fretful Christians.

Consider the lilies of the field. They toil not, neither do they spin, and yet, even Solomon, in all his glory, was not arrayed like one of these. How much more will God clothe you. Therefore, take no thought of the morrow, but seek the kingdom, and these things shall be added. That is, go along placidly in the performance of your duties, and do not fret yourself about the future; and this is consummate practical wisdom and philosophy. But the precept extends beyond the material to the spiritual future. The lily does not trouble itself for fear that it may not reach its pearly perfections. It drinks the rain and the dew and the sunshine and takes its rest by night, and God attends to its development. But what a lot of fretful and yearning and self-distressing Christians there are. I am not so perfect as I ought to be. I want to be an angel, and with the angels stand, a crown upon my forehead, and a harp within my hand. I yearn for more gifts and graces. Well, what good does all this do you? The child would like the pot of gold at the end of the rainbow. You will not be an angel by wishing to be one, and you will not stand in the angelic ranks till you are sent for. Take no thought for the morrow. God clothed the lilies, and shall he not much more clothe you? If you will go along performing your duties of all kinds to the best of your ability you will have no time for whipping yourself with these useless dissatisfactions and longings. When duties are done for the day you will feel like resting, thanking God and going to sleep. Never mind about the raiment. The robe of righteousness is all ready, and will be girded round you when the work is all done, and you are washed up and ready to wear it. Fret not thyself.—Chicago Interior.

Wise Sayings.

—Never leave your way to seek a cross, nor go out of your way to avoid one; appointed crosses are real blessings.—Young Christian's Pocket-Book.

—Lead Me!—

Oh, lead me, Lord, that I may lead
The wandering and the wavering feet;
Oh, feed me, Lord, that I may feed
Thy hungering ones with manna sweet.
Oh, strengthen me, that while I stand
Firm on the Rock, and strong in Thee,
I may stretch out a loving hand
To wrestlers with a troubled sea.

—God can make the grief a grace, the burden a blessing, and light up the disappointment so that it becomes the torch of hope. The rod itself shall bud and blossom and bring forth almonds, so that the very thing that chastens us shall present beauty and fruit.—N. Y. Observer.

—Man needs the certainties and not the uncertainties of Christian belief. He injures the cause who tells the people what he is not clear about. There are truths enough about which he is certain, and the world will find all the opportunities to doubt that are needful.—Golden Rule.

—The Sunday-School Teacher thinks that "Christians ought not to meet in elegant places of worship, occupy comfortable seats, keep Sunday-schools for a select few, and virtually say: 'I thank God I am not as other men,' and leave the world around lying in wickedness, with little or no effort to save it. 'Who hath made thee to differ from another, and what hast thou that thou hast not received?'"

—The New York Sun reports some remarks made by Felix Adler at the funeral of one of the members of his "Society for Ethical Culture." What can be more dreary and hopeless than this: "In what words of comfort shall I speak to you? I can not speak to you concerning the meeting in another world. That problem is too much surrounded with difficulties. The mystery that envelops human existence is too dense and deep for mortal eye to penetrate."

—Promises and threatenings, cursings and blessings go together. There is no act but carries its fruit with it. The young should be taught that God's law is strict and curses and blesses. It is God's law in Nature as well as Revelation. One who eats proper food is nourished; one who eats poison must die. Human law protects those who obey it and sets the alternative of punishment before those who disobey. It will not do to resist the threatenings. They are for our good. They can not be escaped except by obedience. In that way they can be escaped, and in that way is the only true liberty and happiness.—Exchange.

Our Young Folks.

TRY AGAIN.

Margy with the flaxen hair
Sat the picture of despair.
"Five times six and eight times seven,
Add results, and by eleven
Multiply—or divide—
And I don't know what beside.
Oh, this horrid, horrid sum!
Right I cannot make it come."
So said Margy, with a sigh,
Crying: "'Tis no use to try."

Gray-haired grandma, sitting near,
Heard the sigh and saw the tear.
"Margy darling, hither come;
Let me see thy 'horrid sum.'"
Scanning all the work she saw
Here a slip and there a flaw.
"Ah, my Margy, plain to see
Why the figures don't agree.
Little maid, thy sore distress
Is the fruit of heedlessness."

"Oh, but grandma, I have tried
Just as hard!" poor Margy cried;
"But the naughty figures go
Somehow always wrong, you know."
Then, to her supreme dismay,
Grandma sponged the work away,
And, for Margy's eyes to read,
Wrote in letters large and plain:
"If at first you don't succeed,
Try, and try, and try again."

When the wise old saw she read,
"Thank you, grandma dear," she said.
Then with bright and cheerful air
Worked the sum with double care,
And the answer—happy sight!—
Came at last exactly right.
"Now," the little maiden cried,
Laughing, in her girlish pride,
"When my naughty sums go wrong,
'Try again' shall be my song."
—Harper's Young People.

ANDY'S WISH.

Andy was in disgrace, and in a very bad humor as well. Ordinarily he was such a pleasant, bright-faced boy that one would hardly believe that the little, cross-looking chap with the deep scowl over his eyes could be he.

When mamma went off to the sea-shore for a few weeks of change and quiet rest, her only trouble had been about Andy. Susie and the baby, nurse could take care of, she knew; but Andy, since he had grown up to the dignity of a school-boy, was not as tractable in the nursery as he once was, and nurse had more patience with babies and little girls than she had for a noisy, restless school-boy of eleven. However, the doctor said mamma must go, and leave them all at home. So papa had carried her off, almost against her will.

Andy made so many promises to be good and mind nurse that she was persuaded that he meant to keep his word. And so he did. But nurse was unreasonable, and no boy likes to be called off from making a kite to run errands. Such "confounded" long ones, too (the adjective is Andy's own—I should have said very long). Then, upon his return, when he was only making paste for the beloved kite, to have it snatched away from him!

True, he was mixing it in a cut-glass goblet: but what matter? One glass was as good as another; indeed, if it had been handy, he would have preferred a tin cup.

Altogether he was a much-abused boy! If it were not for mamma he would have serious thoughts of running away. What a lark it would be to have old nursey flying around, with her cap-strings floating in the air, drumming up neighbors to hunt for Master Andy!

"I wish I was not a boy. Boys have the hardest time of anything in creation! I don't want to be a miniry, pimiry, fol-de-rol of a girl either! I wish I were a bird; they don't have to mind. Yes, I'd even like to be a hornet! Look at that chap, hunting flies over there! He has no nurse, and I'll bet does just as he has a mind to."

These words, uttered aloud, were scarcely out of the little boy's mouth, when, wonderful to relate, the very hornet he had been envying flew up to him and said:

"Would you really like to be one of us? Remember a hornet's life is not one of idleness. He must work hard for his living, like all the rest of the Master's creatures. Think before you decide."

"Do you have nurses?"

"No."

"Then I'll be a hornet!"

How strange! At once he felt himself growing smaller and smaller. Now—yes, he could fly. It was a delightful sensation to feel himself floating through the air.

"Buzz! buzz!" went the other hornet. So it would have sounded the day before. Now Andy knew he said: "Come with me, and I'll introduce you to the other hornets."

So, off they went, further down toward the peach orchard. There the family had built themselves a very curious house. It served as a temporary lodging-house for themselves, and was the place where eggs were deposited, whence the hornets of the future sprang into life.

Andy remembered looking at this house, from a distance, only a day or two before. Now, to fly right into it was very funny! All the hornets came to look at him. All buzzed and talked so fast that he could scarcely understand a word they said.

He was offered a blue-bottle fly for refreshment, and as he shrank from the proffered dainty, they all buzzed louder than ever.

Later his friend took him to a peach-tree, and they regaled themselves on a ripe peach, which was much more to Andy's taste.

That night he slept on a limb of the same tree—it seemed so stuffy in the hornet house.

The next day all assembled in their house, and each received orders from the head of the colony. Each had to kill so many flies and bring them home, to be stored up for the next generation of hornets. Some remained at home, to put the finishing layer to their house.

Andy was put among the latter, to learn their trade. Hard work, too, it was. Beginning at early dawn to chew up paper, moisten it with glue, and smooth it on the outside of the hornet-house, was no joke. All day long he worked. No rest, except two or three short visits to the peach-tree, to refresh himself.

Then to see all the other hornets come home, each laden with a fly, sometimes only half dead, still struggling in the grasp of its captor, was to Andy disgusting in the extreme.

Three or four days dragged wearily on, and he was beginning to wish that he could be a boy again, and run errands when one morning Andy was sent out with the others, to catch flies.

He flew with his old friend a little way, and then they separated. Andy saw a large fly on a window, and made after it. The fly took refuge in the house, and he flew in also.

How familiar that room looked! It was the nursery—yes, to-be-sure it was! There was the baby in the crib. Just then Susie said:

"Oh, nurse! a horrid hornet!"

Nurse was after him. Oh, dear! he should be killed right in his own home!

"Buzz! Buzz!" Would they never understand?

"Get out of this, you rascal!" cried nurse.

"I'll catch him, nurse, in my apron, and then kill him."

"He'll sting you, Susie!"

"Buzz! Buzz!" No, he wouldn't. He'd rather die than sting his own sister.

Just then, nurse made a dab with her apron.

He screamed:

"Don't you know me?" and awoke to find nurse really standing over him, under the peach tree.

"Why, Master Andy, did you ever go to sleep on the grass? I'm afraid you've caught your death of cold. Come with me, and let me give you something hot."

"Why, nurse," Andy tries to explain, "I've been a hornet. I've been down in the orchard, sleeping in a tree over their nest."

Nurse tells him that she has been hunting for him for hours, and was in despair when he was discovered in the peach orchard.

Andy goes slowly home, too relieved to be a boy again to argue the matter with nurse.

"To-be-sure," he adds to himself, "boys do have a hard time, but hornets have a harder."

And he believes he would not change places with any other of God's creatures, but stay on a boy till time changes him into a man.—Golden Days.

The Boy and the Man.

Many years ago a poor shepherd-boy, clad in an old plaid mantle, went into a book-store in Edinburgh and asked for a second-hand Greek Testament, being unable to buy a new one. The bookseller having handed him one, the boy asked the price.

"For whom do you want it?" asked the bookseller.

"For myself," answered the boy.

"Can you read Greek?"

"Yes, sir," modestly replied the boy.

"Then," said the bookseller, "if you will read and translate a few sentences I will give you the book."

The boy, highly pleased with the proposal, read the Greek text and then translated it into English.

"Take the book, my boy," said the bookseller; "you are welcome to it."

The boy thanked him, clapped the book under his arm and walked off in triumph to the pasture to attend the sheep.

Many years afterward that same boy (ah! he had become a man now) stepped into the same book-store, entered into conversation with the bookseller and asked him if he remembered giving a second-hand Greek Testament to a poor shepherd-boy one morning.

"Yes, I remember it well," said the bookseller, "and I should like to know what became of that boy, for I am certain he has risen to eminence in some profession or other."

"Sir," said the man, "you see him before you."

Now, who do you think he was? Rev. John Brown, of Haddington, one of the most eminent authors and commentators of the Scriptures the world has ever produced.

It is a well-known fact that the children of parents in humble circumstances often succeed better than the children of the rich; and their greater success must arise from their being stimulated by their scanty means to improve to the utmost the talents which God has given them.

To the sons of the poor man, then, I say, in the words of Solomon: "The hand of the diligent shall bear rule; but the slothful shall be under tribute." Be industrious, be frugal and attentive to every duty. To the sons of the rich I would say: "He that loveth pleasure shall be a poor man; and seest thou a man diligent in business, he shall stand before kings; he shall not stand before mean men."—N. Y. Observer.

Carrier-Pigeon vs. Pony.

When at its ordinary speed a carrier-pigeon is supposed to fly somewhat faster than an express train. The experiment which was tried some time ago of a race from Dover to London between a pigeon and the Continental Mail resulted triumphantly for the bird by somewhere about half an hour; but then it must be remembered that a pigeon can take a perfectly straight line across country from one point t another, thus effecting a considerabl shortening of distances as compare with the curves and deviations in rail roads and ordinary highways. To rac a pony against a pigeon would, o course, be a foregone conclusion in favo of the latter; but it has just been shown by a race which has taken place at Bed worth, that a pigeon can fly rathe more than double as fast as a pony While the four-footed creature was en gaged in galloping half a mile, th pigeon completed a mile with eight yards to spare. It will be generall thought that the pony should have mad better time; but, of course, it is difficu to organize a race of this sort so as t call forth all the speed possessed by th animal, who never runs so quickly whe there is nothing in sight to compet with. It was the pace at which the fly, as well as their small size, whic commended pigeons to the Frenc during the siege of Paris, as a means taking messages out of the city into th provinces; and at the present moment regular "arm" of the German milita establishment is a service of train pigeons, kept in readiness at all t great Teutonic fortresses. The pige has, in fact, solved the great proble of flying in a given direction in a state of the wind, a secret which utterly beyond the reach of balloon and inventors of aerial machines.—L don Telegraph.

HEYN & BRO. RISING SUN,

OVERCOATS, OVERCOATS, OVERCOATS, OVECOATS,

For Young Men, Youths, Boys and Children in Great Varieties, and Low Prices. All goods sold by us guaranteed. Also a Big Line of Ready Made Clothing on hand.

A full Stock of seasonable Dress Goods, with the latest Novelties in trimmings. Ladies and Gents' Underwear, Hosiery and Gloves.

Heyn & Bro., Rising Sun, Indiana.

Genuine Schofield Blankets, Jeans, Flannels and Yarns, Prices Lower than any other store.

No Misrepresentation Practiced to Effect Sales. We invite Everybody to inspect our Goods.

Heyn & Bro., Rising Sun, Indiana.

Cloaks, Dolmans, Circulars and Jackets, for Ladies, Misses, and Children, in all colors and grade, latest styles.

Heyn & Bro., Rising Sun, Indiana.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL,
Proprietors.

BURLINGTON, KY. NOV. 1. 1883.

ADVERTISING [illegible]ES.

1 Column	1 year	$80
1 "	½ "	40
1 "	¼ "	20
½ "	1 "	20
¼ "	¼ "	10
⅛ "	⅛ "	6

For announcing candidates, $5. Obituary poetry, 5 cents per line. Obituary notices 20 lines free; over that number (excepting the announcement of the death) 3 cents per line.
Tributes of respect from lodges, &c., $1 50

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One year	$1 50
Six months	75
Three months	40

OHIO is giving to the world a few bloody murders this month.

THE Democrat says that ten school districts in Carroll county have voted a property tax for school purposes.

THE deaths from cholera in Alexandria are averaging eight to ten a day, and the fatal cases occur chiefly among the Europeans.

THE record indicates that Justice Harlan of the Supreme Court has now been on both sides of the civil rights bill.

IT is presumed that the President in his next message to congress will recommend the abolition of the Internal Revenue tax.

THE President has appointed the 29th inst., as a day for thanksgiving and turkey dinners. We are ready to receive bids, either sealed or open.

THE Republican State Central Committee in Ohio is calling for contributions with which to settle up the expense of this fall's campaign, about $8,000.

DURING last week there were 13,905 head of stock received at the Covington Stockyards, as follow: Hogs, 9,977; sheep, 2,422; cattle, 1,384; horses and mules, 188.

THE Butler boom has struck California, and it is said that six hundred shoemakers of San Francisco have organized a Democratic club to work for his nomination for President.

THE Franklin county grand jury says, "The jail is a stench in the nostrils of christianity." This is a worse charge than the Boone county grand jury brought in against the Boone county jail.

IN next month State elections will be held in Maryland, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Nebraska, New Jersey, New York and Pennsylvania. Connecticut, Mississippi and Virginia will elect members of the Legislature.

THE Norvell-Cecil suit has been withdrawn, but the public knows that there is a willful lie out about what took place in regard to the Register's office at the Louisville Convention, and the proof shows pretty plainly who lied.

THE Ohio Republican State Central Committee has resolved that the result in the late election in that State fully justifies the belief that upon the purely National issues Ohio still remains as ever securely Republican.

A REPORT comes from Kansas that a sealed tin can containing $30,000 in gold, silver and greenbacks has been discovered on the farm where the Benders formerly lived. The owner of the farm wants to keep the money, but his claim will be contested by the friends of several of the victims of the Bender family.

THERE is a good deal of open talk about gambling houses in Louisville, but the true reason for the cleaning up of such places may be found in the fact that Proctor Knott is Governor of Kentucky.—Yeoman.

Certainly the Yeoman does not intend to reflect on Blackburn's administration, does it?

THE Huntington Journal says: An old criminal once asked what was the first step that led to his ruin, when he answered: "The first step was cheating a printer out of two years subscription—when I had done that the devil got such a grip on me that I could never shake him off."

FINE FARR, Governor Crittenden's Private Secretary, has brought suit in the St. Louis Circuit Court against the Globe-Democrat for $50,000 damages for an article recently published in that paper connecting him with certain disreputable criminal acts being investigated by the grand jury.

THE salary of the County Judge and County Attorney for the past year was estimated by the board of Magistrates, Monday, to be worth $225 each. This is $105 in advance of last year, and there is no doubt but what they earned and deserved it.—Warsaw Independent.

ST. LOUIS is in a fever of excitement over Governor Crittenden's refusal to remove the Police Commissioner and Coal Oil Inspector. It is charged that he has reasons other than those he has given for not acceding to the demands of the indignant people. Governor Crittenden it is considered has been too intimate with the gamblers of that city.

SENATOR BECK does not consider that the result in Ohio makes it a Democratic State, and thinks that it will be a great mistake to base calculations on its electoral vote. But he considers that Ohio is transferred from the list of reliable Republican States to the doubtful column. He says Ohio will be an October State next year.

THE District of Columbia Commissioners have been asked by Secretary Chandler if they see any objection to adopting, on and after the 18th of next month, the time of the 75th meridian as the local time of Washington, making the time eight minutes and twelve seconds faster. Reckon the saloons in Washington are too slow about opening of a morning to suit the Secretary.

KENTUCKY justice is sometimes almost as swift as the New Jersey article. Judge Perkins opened Court in Bracken county Friday morning, heard the Smith murder trial, sentenced the defendant to the Penitentiary for life, heard arguments for a new trial in the Brockman case, overruled the motion, confirmed the severe sentence, previously pronounced, and adjourned Court in time for an early dinner. In Frankfort two colored men were placed on trial at 2 p. m. for housebreaking. At 4 o'clock they were being put at work in the penitentiary.—Ex.

A COMMITTEE has been revising the school law, and when the legislature meets some very important changes in that law will be submitted for consideration. The committee will favor amending the present law so that the amount of public money received by a district will be determined by the number of pupils that attend the public school and not by the number of pupils reported by the district census. This change contemplates a more liberal attendance at school, making it to the interest of the trustees and teachers to encourage a class who are now receiving no benefit of the public schools, to attend.

NEW YORK LETTER.

But two weeks more separate us from election day in this State, and that the Democrats will make good use of their time is to be presumed from the excellence of their choice for the County and Senatorial offices, and the harmonious manner in which all the factions work toward securing the common aim. The New York County Democratic ticket according to the estimate of men well informed is good for at least 50,000 majority, while that of the State ticket will probably exceed it by 10,000. The Republican State Committee feeling no doubt that it is useless to fight such odds, is devoting itself exclusively almost to the interior of the State. But even if the inward counties carry the Republican ticket, the solid Democratic majority that will meet them at the Harlem Bridge will overthrow them.

Such demoralization as one meets generally in Republican ranks is remarkable A well known New Yorker expressed the reason for this very happily. Said he: "We are too far removed from the civil war that the Republicans can make a live issue of it, and they have neither the sense nor skill, nor the political honesty to get up anything practical with which to go before the country."

Said I to a prominent Massachusetts Democrat: "They say that Butler will be beaten, because the Democratic ticket is all head and no tail." He replied: "I defy any one comparing the two tickets to show in what way our candidates are less worthy of public confidence than the Republicans. So far as Governor Butler is concerned he has knocked the cold supercilious pretentions of the blue blood into a cocked hat, and they stand before the people hollow, selfish pretenders, bedraggled with the soap suds of ridicule. I tell you, the people are thoroughly disgusted with these would-be aristocrats who would 'educate' the people. Why what are all? Washburn is nothing but a pail maker, Rice a paper maker, Claflin a tanner, Talbot who started in life as a poor Irish boy and so on. All honor to them for the industry with which they have advanced themselves, but because they have been successful, they should not look down upon others who have failed in the battle of life."

The Republicans of New York are raking up Leon Abbott's legislative record with a fine tooth comb to bring up evidence in support of their statments that he has always been in favor of the railroads as against the people at large. But so far whatever alleged facts they have secured have fallen to the ground when confronted with the man against whom they have been made.

A cyclone in Burbon county, Ky., Sunday evening, did $50,000 worth of damage in and about Paris.

HOGGISH—Select butchers and heavy shippers, $4 60@4 80; fair to good packers, at $4 40@4 50; fair to good light, $4 45@4 75; common, $3 85@4 35; culls, $3 00@3 80: stock hogs, $3 50@4 25.

JUDGE HOLMAN says that he has no Presidential bee buzzing in his hat, and thinks if Tilden concludes to accept that he and Hendricks will be the Democratic Presidential ticket, and that there will be no doubt of their election.

A newsboy on the Southern road fell off the train at Walton Monday morning, and the train ran over his head crushing it, death resulting instantly. In the afternoon at the Shortline depot in Walton a man tried to get on a train when it was moving, and fell, the train mashing his hip and pulverizing one of his ankles.

The 1883 Tobacco Crop.

Despite the general fears felt, frost has not occurred in October, though the temperature the past few days, in this region, has not been far removed from the freezing point. This fact has contributed to improve crop prospects, though there is little in the fields now to be affected, the remnant in the fields having been cut in the past two weeks, whether ripe or not.

But still the avoidance of frost is fortunate, as the great quantities of green tobacco held in the barns would be almost as susceptible inside as outside to its influence.

With the curing now depends all further improvements. There is hardly a doubt, though, that the general crop will be considerable short, while one or two varieties, as Seed Leaf and Burley, may turn out more abundant than the other varieties. "Brights" will undoubtedly be very scarce. while export. both stripping and manufacturing, will not be much better.

High prices are prevailing all over a sure indication that there is virtue in the claim s of planters regarding the short crop.—[Western Tobacco Journal.

Subscribe for the RECORDER.

12

THE best cure for diseases of the nerves, brain, and muscles is Brown's Iron Bitters.

MARION, MASS.—Dr. N. S. Ruggles says: "I recommend Brown's Iron Bitters as a valued tonic for enriching the blood and removing all dyspeptic symptoms. It does not hurt the teeth."

HUNTSVILLE, ALA.—Dr. J. T. Ridley says: "Brown's Iron Bitters is a good appetizer and merits attention from sufferers."

County Directory.

OFFICERS.

Assessor—G. M. Riley.
County Surveyor—W. E. Vest.
School Commissioner—D. M. Snyder.
Coroner.—Dr. A. A. Murat, Constance.

COURTS.

CIRCUIT COURT meets the 2d Monday in April and first Monday in October, P. U. Major, Judge; W. L. Riddell, Clerk A. G. DeJarnette, Commonwealths Attorney; W. L. Riddell, Trustee Jury Fund.

COUNTY COURT meets the first Monday in every month. L. H. Dills, Judge; S. W. Tolin, County Attorney. M. T. Garnett, Clerk; J. R. Clutterbuck, Sheriff, T. W. Finch and W. T. German, Deputy Sheriffs.

QUARTERLY COURT meets the first Monday in March, June, September and December. The officers of the County Court preside.

COURT OF CLAIMS meets the first Monday in November.

MAGISTRATES' COURTS are held in March, June, September and December, as follows:

Bellevue—M. B. Green, first Saturday, and T. H. Sutton, third Monday. J. M. Moody, Constable.

Burlington—E. H. Baker, Thursday after first Monday, and Oscar Gaines, fourth Monday. R. H. Sandford, Constable.

Carlton A. G. McConnell, Wednesday after second Monday, and B. H. Ryle, Saturday after third Monday. Walter Ryle, Cornstable.

Petersburg—Jos. Hensley, Wednesday after first Monday, and L. A. Loder fourth Saturday. Geo. Comer, Constable.

Union—M. C. Norman, Thursday after third Monday, and H. Bannister, Thursday after second Monday. A. D. Riley, Constable.

Beever—W. M. Rouse, Friday after the third Monday, and

Posted.

We the undersigned hereby give notice that our farms are posted against hunters:

Templeton Gaines,	J C Jenkins,
J E Duncan,	Oscar Gaines,
G C Gaddy,	Ben Clore,
Noah Craven,	Wm. Clore,
C S Balsly,	A S Gaines,
George Gaines,	C S Gaines.

BOONE HOUSE,
BURLINGTON, KY.
C. L. CRISLER, Prop'r.

No pains spared in the accommodation of guests. The table supplied with the delicacies of the season. Stock well cared for. dec. 20-1y

Doctors and Doctrines.

Whatever Cruel Creeds May Say, Truth is Always Orthodox.

"You know the old saying, Doctor, Ubi tres medici, duo athei,—where there are three doctors there are two atheists," laughed Rev. Apollo Creamcheese, the other day, to his friend, Dr. Senna, who had dropped in for a bit of a talk.

"Yes, I've heard it, and I'll bet a box of pills against your dry inkstand that some priest said it. They always pattered bad Latin when they had a bigger lie than common to get rid of," answered the Doctor, lighting his pipe. "I tell you, Dominie you're 'way off when you think our profession isn't doing as good work in this world as yours is. They've both been more'n half barbarous for centuries, but we're several lengths ahead of you on the home-stretch."

"But, Doctor, said Rev. Mr. Creamcheese, "don't you think your fraternity shows a tendency to materialistic——?"

"Bah!" interrupted Dr. Senna, "we show a tendency to human charity and common sense. The fences are all down. Why, within the past week I've had a letter from my old friend, Dr. W. V. Haddox, of Pine Hill, Alabama, saying that he is using, with great success, PARKER'S TONIC, in his practice, and finds it the best thing for Coughs Lung, Kidney and Liver troubles, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, and so on, he ever struck; and another friend of mine, Dr. J. J. Oatman, of carrolltown, Pa., says substantially the same thing. He's a hig specialist, too, in chronic diseases, and knows what he is talking about every time."

Dr. Senna's statement as to PARKER'S TONIC, are supported by genuine testimonials from Drs. Haddox and Oatman, who write to Messrs. Hiscox & Co., of New York—the proprietors—in terms of the highest commendation concerning this great restorative remedy; and letters from the profession generally confirm the opinion of these physicians. Price, 50 cents and $1 per bottle.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION
OF THE
Farmers & Traders National Bank
AT COVINGTON,

In the State of Kentucky, at the close of business, October 2d, 1883.

RESOURCES.

Loans and discounts		$579,247 75
Overdrafts		969 39
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation 4 per cent		50,000 00
Due from approved reserve agents		43,991 83
Due from other National banks	3,584 33
Due from State banks and bankers	2,459 97	—6,044 30
Real estate, furniture and fixtures		4,668 91
Current expenses and taxes paid		2,994 80
Premiums paid		8,000 00
Checks and other cash items		1,432 60
Bills of other Banks		10,135 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and pennies		56 54
Specie		12,015 00
Legal tender notes		22,000 00
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer (5 per cent of circulation)		2,250 00
Total		$761,806 12

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in		$300,000 00
Surplus fund		2,500 00
Undivided profits		—21,367 99
National bank notes outstanding		45,000 00
Individual deposits subject to check	368,774 08
Due to other National Banks	14,722 85
Due to State Banks and bankers	9,441 20	—392,938 13
Total		$761,806 12

State of Kentucky, County of Kenton, ss: I, John L. Sandford, Cashier of the above-named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

J. L. SANDFORD, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 8th day of Oct., 1883. GEO. H. DAVISON, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest:
E. J. HICKEY,
J. H. MERSMAN,
L. C. STEPHENS,
Directors.

INSURE AT HOME

The Farmers' Mutual Fire
INSURANCE COMPANY
Of Boone County

Is now completely organized and receiving applications for insurance.

Its Rates are Lower

Than those of any other Company, and it gives the farmers of Boone County a

HITHERTO UNKNOWN ADVANTAGE

In keeping their property insured.

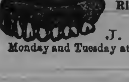
EVERY FARMER IN THE COUNTY

should take a policy at once.

N. S. WALTON, President, Petersburg, Ky.
J. H. WALTON, Secretary, Constance, Ky.
R. RANDALL, Treasury.

DIRECTORS.
LEGRAN GAINES, Jeff Utz,
JNO. M. MOODY.

E. E. IGOE,



Resident Dentist,
Rising Sun, Ind.
WITH
J. P. Ulrey.
Monday and Tuesday at Rising Sun, Ind.

AYER'S PILLS.

A large proportion of the diseases which cause human suffering result from derangement of the stomach, bowels, and liver. AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS act directly upon these organs, and are especially designed to cure the diseases caused by their derangement, including Constipation, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Headache, Dysentery, and a host of other ailments, for all of which they are a safe, sure, prompt, and pleasant remedy. The extensive use of these PILLS by eminent physicians in regular practice, shows unmistakably the estimation in which they are held by the medical profession.

These PILLS are compounded of vegetable substances only, and are absolutely free from calomel or any other injurious ingredient.

A Sufferer from Headache writes:

"AYER'S PILLS are invaluable to me, and are my constant companion. I have been a severe sufferer from Headache, and your PILLS are the only thing I could look to for relief. One dose will quickly move my bowels and free my head from pain. They are the most effective and the easiest physic I have ever found. It is a pleasure to me to speak in their praise, and I always do so when occasion offers.

W. L. PAGE, of W. L. Page & Bro."
Franklin St., Richmond, Va., June 3, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S PILLS in numberless instances as recommended by you, and have never known them to fail to accomplish the desired result. We constantly keep them on hand at our home, and prize them as a pleasant, safe, and reliable family medicine. FOR DYSPEPSIA they are invaluable. J. T. HAYES."
Mexia, Texas, June 17, 1882.

The REV. FRANCIS B. HARLOWE, writing from Atlanta, Ga., says: "For some years past I have been subject to constipation, from which, in spite of the use of medicines of various kinds, I suffered increasing inconvenience, until some months ago I began taking AYER'S PILLS. They have entirely corrected the costive habit, and have vastly improved my general health."

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS correct irregularities of the bowels, stimulate the appetite and digestion, and by their prompt and thorough action give tone and vigor to the whole physical economy.

PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists.

YOUNG, OLD, AND MIDDLE-AGED.

All experience the wonderful beneficial effects of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Children with Sore Eyes, Sore Ears, or any scrofulous or syphilitic taint, may be made healthy and strong by its use.

Sold by all Druggists; $1, six bottles for $5.

W. J. RICE,
CARPENTER & BUILDER,
BULLITSVILLE, KY.

Is prepared Raise or Move
EITHER LOG or FRAME BUILDINGS
On Short Notice.

And at the Lowest Possible Figures.
33-tf Your orders respectfully solicited

LUMBER.

Goe. M. Bedinger & Co.,
Erlanger, - - Ky.

We keep constantly on hand all kinds of Lumber, Laths and Shingles. Also Builder's supplies of all kinds.

—Come and see Us.—
may 9-tf

Farm for Sale!

35 acres of good rolling bottom land, 8½ miles below Aurora ferry, ½ mile from Bellevue and ¼ mile from the Ohio river, being part of the Warren Rogers farm. For particulars call on or address T. H. SUTTON, Grant P. O., Ky., or at this office. 44-2-m

Farm for Sale.

I am offering for sale my farm, lying 8 miles south of Burlington on the Big Bone road, containing 55¼ acres, a part of the Mason Crisler farm. The land lays well and is conveniently located, the improvements are a good brick house and all necessary out buildings, and a variety of good fruit. Any person desirous of purchasing a nice farm will do well to come and examine the premises and learn terms. Title good. MRS. OSCAR CRISLER.

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS
FOR THE LIVER
And all Bilious Complaints

Safe to take, being purely vegetable; no griping. Price 25 cts. All Druggists.

Cut This Out & Return to us with TEN CTS. Silver, & you'll get by mail a GOLDEN BOX OF GOODS that will bring you in MORE MONEY in One Month than anything else in America. Absolute Certainty. Either Sex. No capital. M. Young, 173 Greenwich St. N. York.

NAVAL Agents Wanted for Ancient & Modern BATTLES. New and graphic Pictorial History of the great Sea fights of the World. By Medical Director SHIPPEN, U. S. N. Address J. C. McCURDY & Co., 102 W. Fourth St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

AGENTS Wanted for handsome illustrated standard works of character; great variety; Books & Bibles low in price; selling fast; needed everywhere; Liberal terms. Wm. Garretson & Co., 30 College St., Nashville, Tenn.

INCORPORATED UNDER THE LAWS OF MISSOURI.

CENTRAL MEDICAL & SURGICAL INSTITUTE
OF ST. LOUIS, MO.

SUCCESSORS TO DR. BUTTS' DISPENSARY.
OFFICE & ROOMS, NO. 920 LOCUST ST.
CHAS. L. LaBARJE, M.D., Pres't & Physician in Charge.
NELSON CHESMAN, Treas. & Business Manager.

This Institute has ample facilities and an experienced Faculty. While it succeeds to a large business, which has been established for years, it will aim to extend its medical and surgical practice, giving skillful and scientific treatment to CHRONIC DISEASES of the Head, Spine, Lungs and Air Passages, Heart, Liver, Stomach and Bowels, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Consumption and Asthma. BLOOD IMPURITIES, inherited or caused by impure association, Scrofula, Fever Sores, Ulcers, etc. DEFORMITIES of the Limbs, Spinal Curvature, Wry-Neck, Diseases of the Joints, Piles, Fistula, Rupture, etc. WEAKNESS and wasting diseases in old and young men, also all diseases of the genito-urinary organs. FEMALE irregularities and weaknesses, causing pain in the back or side, etc.

Personal interviews with patients are always preferred. Those unable to visit the Institute will be furnished with blank lists of questions that will aid them in making a full statement of their cases and if not requiring a surgical operation they can be successfully treated by correspondence, and medicines sent by mail or express. To enable us to send proper list of questions applicants should give a brief statement of their trouble.

(The Treasurer of the corporation is of Nelson Chesman & Co., Advertising Agents, and refers to the publisher of this or any other newspaper in the United States or Canada regarding responsibility.)

Consultation at Office or by mail free and invited

TUTT'S PILLS

TORPID BOWELS, DISORDERED LIVER, and MALARIA.

From these sources arise three-fourths of the diseases of the human race. These symptoms indicate their existence: Loss of Appetite, Bowels costive, Sick Headache, fullness after eating, aversion to exertion of body or mind, Eructation of food, Irritability of temper, Low spirits, A feeling of having neglected some duty, Dizziness, Fluttering at the Heart, Dots before the eyes, highly colored Urine, CONSTIPATION, and demand the use of a remedy that acts directly on the Liver. As a Liver medicine TUTT'S PILLS have no equal. Their action on the Kidneys and Skin is also prompt; removing all impurities through these three "scavengers of the system," producing appetite, sound digestion, regular stools, a clear skin and a vigorous body. TUTT'S PILLS cause no nausea or griping nor interfere with daily work and are a perfect

ANTIDOTE TO MALARIA.
Sold everywhere, 25c. Office, 44 Murray St., N.Y.

TUTT'S HAIR DYE.

GRAY HAIR OR WHISKERS changed instantly to a GLOSSY BLACK by a single application of this DYE. Sold by Druggists, or sent by express on receipt of $1.
Office, 44 Murray Street, New York.
TUTT'S MANUAL OF USEFUL RECEIPTS FREE.

VIGOROUS HEALTH FOR MEN

THE PASTILLE CURE TRADE MARK FOR NERVOUS DEBILITY.

TESTED FOR 5 YEARS by use in thousands of cases. Founded on scientific medical principles, it has been growing in favor and reputation while its numerous competitors have invariably failed. The direct application of this remedy to the seat of the disease makes its specific influence felt without delay. The natural functions of the human organism are restored. The animating elements of life which have been wasted are given back. The buoyant energy of the brain and muscular system renders the patient cheerful; he gains strength with rapidity.

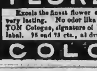
NERVOUS DEBILITY, organic weakness, and numerous obscure diseases, baffling the skill of best physicians, result from youthful indiscretion, too free indulgence, and over brain work.

Do not temporize while such enemies lurk in your system. Take a remedy that has cured thousands, and does not interfere with you attention to business or cause any pain or inconvenience.

(Send for a Descriptive Pamphlet giving Anatomical Illustrations, which will convince the most sceptical that they can be restored to perfect manhood, and fitted for the duties of life, same as if never affected. Sent free to any one. Remedy sold ONLY by the

HARRIS REMEDY CO. MF'G. CHEMISTS.
306½ N. 10th. St. ST. LOUIS, MO.
One Month's treatment $3. two months $5. three months $7

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM



A beneficial dressing preferred to similar articles because of its purity and rich perfume. It Restores to Gray Hair the Youthful Color & prevents dandruff and falling of the hair. 50c. & $1. Hiscox & Co., N.Y.

FLORESTON COLOGNE

Excels the finest flower extracts in richness. Delicate, very lasting. No odor like it. Be sure you get FLORESTON Cologne, signature of Hiscox & Co., N. Y., on every label. 25 and 75 cts., at druggists and dealers in perfumes.

INJECTION SANTINELI

Cures all recent and chronic secret diseases of the Urinary passages in both sexes. Directions in all languages. $1.00 a bottle Druggists, or sent by express on receipt of price secure from observation Fairmount Chemical Co. Cincinnati, Ohio, U. S. A. Sold by W. F. McKim.

PAYSON'S INDELIBLE INK is the BEST. No preparation. Used with any clean pen for marking any fabric. Popular for decorative work on linen. Received Centennial MEDAL & Diploma. Established 50 years. Sold by all Druggists, Stationers & News Agt's.

NEVER FAILS

FREE! RELIABLE SELF-CURE.

A favorite prescription of one of the most noted and successful specialists in the U. S. (now retired) for the cure of Nervous Debility, Lost Manhood, Weakness and Decay. Sent in plain sealed envelope free. Druggists can fill it. Address DR. WARD & CO., Louisiana, Mo.

Local News.

Wheat looks well.

The rains descend and the winds blow

Flowers have gone into winter quarters.

New Sorghum molasses at Dudley Rouse's.

A maltese squash is on exhibition at Rouse's store.

The Baptist Church building is again ready for use.

Next Monday the court of claims holds its fall session.

Schofield Blankets at Heyn's, Rising Sun, Ind., at $5 a pair.

Straw hats, linen coats and low shoes have been called in again.

Schofield's Jeans at 40c. per yard at Heyn's, Rising Sun, Ind.

Joe Rusche has sold the five mile house on the Lexington pike.

A fine lot of rain fell Monday, and the water courses all got high.

Heyn's, Rising Sun, Ind., is the place to get a nice Cloak or Dolman.

Berry S. Hardin, a prominent citizen of Covington, died Sunday.

A fine Union Casemere Overcoat for $1 50, at Heyn's, Rising Sun, Ind.

The magestic gobbler is getting nervous as thanksgiving day approaches.

Irwin Balsly, of North Bend, raised an immense crop of Irish potatoes this year.

Gloves, Hosiery, Corsets, Shawls, etc. in great variety at Heyn's, Rising Sun, Indiana.

Heyn & Bro., Rising Sun, Ind., is the boss place to trade, as they deal fair and square.

The rains the past week have just come in time to take the produce boats out of the Ohio.

The baptizing appointed for last Sunday by the Universalist church at this place was postponed.

Saturday morning John Mitchell caught a very large fox after an exciting chase of three hours.

Many of the hickory nuts are worthless after being dried, the kernel shrinking and becoming tasteless.

G. M. Riley is loading a boat with potatoes at his landing. He intends shipping direct to New Orleans.

Its unfailing power entitles Ayer's Sarsaparilla to be considered the only sure specific for blood disorders.

A postal received from Web Smith announces his arrival in Jacksonville, Florida, after a very pleasant trip.

The large Maple tree in the southeast corner of the Court-house yard has all the delicate tints the fall of the year can bestow.

The Postoffice Department has advertised for bids for carrying two mails a day on the Erlanger and Burlington mail route.

Capt. Felix Moses passed through town the other day with a large manifest of rags, bought of the clever grangers in this locality.

Mrs. Sarah A. Rice, daughter of Noah Surface, was adjudged a lunatic one day last week, and taken to the asylum at Anchorage.

A thunder storm visited this locality Sunday morning, and in the afternoon a wind storm paid its respects to this section of the country.

The farmers say that the sap in the corn disappears very slowly this fall, and many who commenced gathering before this time last fall have not began yet.

The abundance of small game has thronged the country with hunters, and the farmers say they never heard such a constant roar of small arms in time of peace.

We noticed a cargo of fine cabbage being unloaded at the Boone House the other day. Guess Joe Reed is going to make up a lot of saur kraut according to his recipe.

On the night of the 7th inst., a ball will be given in the Hebron Hall by William Rouse, Mart Farrell, George Moore and George Knap. A nice time is anticipated.

Monday J. F. Blythe shot and crippled a bird that is evidently a stranger in this land. It had a very long, slender bill, long, gray, thick feathers and a small head.

Monday morning two males and one female tramp passed through town, the males propelling hand-carts which appeared pretty well loaded. They said they were bound for Lexington.

J. L. Johnson, of Hamilton, was in town the other day, and having a wound on one of his hands from a dog bite, had O. P. Tanner to apply his mad stone, which refused to adhere.

D. M. Ferry is evidently of the opinion that the gardening season has ended in this section, and last week his young man was around settling up with the boys and taking in the sheckles.

Capt. Bef. Bradley has put another boat in the Rising Sun and Cincinnati trade. The boat is called the Mountain Boy, and is considerably larger than the one recently burned at Rising Sun.

Mr. A. Blythe had a valuable milch cow to die the other day after several days illness. A post mortem developed the food she had taken previous to her taking sick, in an undigested condition.

WANTED.—At this office two copies of the RECORDER of the 17th of October. We will consider it a favor on the part of any friend sending us a copy of that date.

Mr. William Rouse brought us a peculiar looking and a very fine tasting cabbage, the other day. It is particularly adapted to making slaw. Its name is—is—we knew we would forget it.

Nice tombstones or monuments at the graves of the departed, are marks of respect which should not be neglected. Hurschart & Co., Lawrenceburg, Ind., have just what you want. John Beall of Hebron, is their agent.

After the next letting of the mails Union will have a daily mail receiving it from Florence. The Gunpowder office will come in for an increase of service, which will be of great benefit to that part of the country.

George Hughes knows how hickory nuts look to a man up a tree, as he climbed several shell-bark trees one day last week. We know of no one that envied George the pleasant sensation sure to follow such exercise.

Esq. Baker has been looking at considerable of the new crop of tobacco this fall, and pronounces it the finest crop raised in the county since the burley tobacco was introduced, and what it lacks in pounds is amply made up in quality.

The Woolper Turnpike bridge across Asbyfork cost the company $317. It is a wooden bridge, with a span over sixty feet long between the piers. It was built by W. J. Rice. That road will soon be in shape to commence collecting toll again.

On the 6th of next month, all the personal property belonging to the estate of Mrs. Nancy Snyder, deceased, consisting of horses, hogs, cows, corn, wheat and household and kitchen furniture, will be sold publicly at the late residence of the deceased.

A hat was found somewhere in the Florence X-Roads neighborhood, the other day, and the report reached town that one of the citizens out there had also come up missing, but before our messenger arrived in the neighborhood he learned it was a hoax.

Sheriff Clutterbuck has had notices of the time he or one of his deputies will be in the respective districts, for collecting taxes, printed, and will post them at various places in each district, so the best thing you can do when he comes to your district is to waltz up and pay your taxes like a man and avoid the penalties which the law imposes on the derelict.

Mr. L. J. Setters, accompanied by another gentleman, was in our office last Friday and had with them a sample of very long and nicely colored tobacco. Mr. S. has about 50,000 pounds of tobacco on his farm, all nicely cured and for which he will evidently realize the top of the market. He is one of the most extensive tobacco growers in the county.

The Kentucky Grand Lodge of Odd-Fellows in session at Standford, last week, elected our esteemed friend J. Frank Grant, of Petersburg, Grand Master for the present year. It is a high compliment well bestowed. Next Friday evening Morning Star Lodge of which Frank is a member, will give him a reception in honor of the position now held by him.

H. C. Botts, of Grant, Ky., as foreman, assisted by James Herron, Mike Handrall, Ralph Creekbaum and Harris Lindenberne have prised 240 hogsheads of tobacco here since August 6th, and shipped it to the Planters' warehouse in Cincinnati. They are a genteel, well behaved set of young men, and our people wish them success.—Kentuckian North Middleton, Item.

A fine sow belonging to John. G. Gaines and the mother of a litter of small pigs was shot and killed by a negro boy who was out hunting one day last week. As an excuse for the killing the negro says the sow was after his dog. Mr. Gaines has not been able to be out of his house for several days, and it is said when he gets well he will make it rather interesting for the negro who did the shooting.

Real Estate Conveyances.

John Snyder to Mary E. Snyder, his interest in Nancy Snyder's estate.

Martin Staley to Susan Williamson, 1 a and 29 poles near the mouth of Middle Creek—$118.

V Finnell to Mattie Griffith, 35 a 3 r 2 p near Verona.

Sallie Akin, &c, to Leonard Clore, 20 acres near Bellevue—$2,300.

C C Talbott &c, to L M Rouse, 81 p near Union—$200.

George Giblin to D C Alcorn, lot in Petersburg—$500.

Ezekiel Rice to Scott Rice, all his interest in 100 acres just above Bellevue, —$1 and other considerations.

James T Grubbs to W B Grubbs, 295 acres less 10 and the house near Taylorport—$1 and love and affection.

Scott Rice to John E Walton, lots 6 and 7 in division of E T Green's land—$320.

J M Conner to R S Crisler, house and lot in Burlington—$750.

J C Jenkins to O T Porter, small parcel of land near Petersburg—$35 25.

Paschal Rucker to James T Gaines, 203½ acres near Bullittsburg church—$8,000 love and affection.

Matthias Floyd to L E Rouse, 87½ a near Union—$3,000.

Charles E White to Mary E White, 44 acres near Burlington—$1 and other consideration.

E W Rice to John T Londen, 7 a 1 r 8p on Middle Creek—$175.

W H Stamper to Henrietta Huey a small parcel of land on Gunpoder—$50.

Personal Mentions.

[If you have friends from a distance visiting you or expect to be away from home on business or pleasure, let us have the item for this column.]

Constable Sandford was on the sick list last week.

Judge Riddell is being entertained by the rheumatism this fall.

Mrs. Webber, of Cincinnati, is visiting Mrs. Nicholas Carpenter.

Mr. Alfred Cason was visiting relatives in Harrison county last week.

Capt. Mote Christy, of Petersburg, rounded-to in Burlington Saturday.

John A. Parks, attorney, of Aurora, Ind., was in town on legal business last week.

Mr. Hendrix and sister, of Kansas, are the guests of Hon. J. A. Gaines and family.

Dr. Luther Terrill, of Hebron, was in town the other day chaproning Harry Pease, the dramatist.

Harry Monroe Pfeiffer, one of the "lightning jerkers," at Erlanger, made Burlington a flying visit last Friday.

J. A. Davis of the firm of Davis Bros. of Hebron, was in town Monday, and reports business in his town as being brisk.

Mrs. John S. Huey and daughter, Miss Belle, of Bellevue, spent the day in town last Friday, the guests of Mrs. Huey's sister.

Mr. S. S. Westbay and wife, of Brinkley, Ark., and Mr. J. G. McGarvey and family, of Cincinnati, Ohio, were visiting their brother and sister at this place Sunday and Monday.

R. H. Sandford's cow died Monday, of Texas fever supposed.

Len Sandford's horse got its leg broken by a kick from one of Wood Sullivan's horses, and had to be killed.

NGEIHBORHOOD NEWS.

Hebron.

Mike Clore was very well pleased with his new clerk.

Married, Oct., 18th, by Elder E. Stephen, E. W. Rouse and Miss Martha Hood. We wish them all the joys of life.

Rev. Shafer, of Springfield, Ohio, will preach at this place next Sunday morning and night.

Hebron has a hat renovating shop now.

John Dollahi has moved to Covington.

Farmers are not done digging potatoes.

Rabbit Hash.

People of this vicinity are enjoying good health.

W. H. Nelson and family will move to Rising Sun in a few days.

E. S. Acra is in the neighborhood, staying with his brother, helping him to finish his house.

Willard Gleeson will leave next week for the Sunny South with his father on a potato boat.

Miss Belle Holbert was the guest of her cousin Mollie Acra, last week.

An oyster supper was given the young folks, last Thursday evening, by Mr. and Mrs Ben Wilson, but Cal don't like oysters.

Uncle Billy Steele is able to be out again.

Mr. Mock has commenced to rebuild his store house again.

Petersburg.

J. C. Jenkins shipped a fine lot of hogs to market last week.

Joseph Ferris spent last Wednesday in Cincinnati, in the interest of the stock market.

W. H. Torrill, who has been sick with malaria, is somewhat improved at this writing.

J. F. Grant and J. W Berkshire are each loading a cellar with potatoes at 30 and 35 cents a bushel. As pilots are scarce for running such loads, we suppose they will have to keep them here for come consumption.

Mr. Ezekiel Workum, Jr., member of the the firm of Freiburg & Workum, was here on business last Wednesday.

James Thomason is as good as a herd book. He has the pedigrees of all kinds of stock in his head, and don't you forget it.

Fred Appleton and family, of Texas, are visiting friends here.

Chas. Kien has the typhoid fever and is quite sick.

Mrs. Chas. House is quite sick with the rheumatism,

John W. Berkshire purchased a fine horse in Carroll county last week.

Mr. Butcher, we will take a little pork and sausage, if you please, at this season of the year.

Dr. Ed Terrill had a canary bird shipped him from Germany, last week. It is what they call a Hartz Mountain.

Maj. Stott has the name of being the most liberal man in town. He says he intends to divide his patronage between the Minnie and Mountain Boy. Opposition is the life of trade.

It you want steam boat wind come to Pete.

Will Snyder and Lon Yerkes have returned from the south.

Joseph Weindel has the typhoid fever.

Mrs. T. H, Green has gone to live with her daughter, Mrs. Carpenter, of near Burlington.

Thos. Cox has moved in the house lately occupied by Mrs. T. H. Geeen.

Judge Shepherd is talking of moving to Lawrenceburg, Ind., or Louisville, Ky.

Union.

Miss Alice Buckner, the very handsome and elegant daughter of Hub Buckner, of Kenton county, has just been the guest of Miss Sallie Blanton.

Phillip Taliaferro, our genial druggist, has returned home from Winchester, where he has been visiting a sick sister. In the mean time the handsome and obliging William T. held the drug fort as efficient clerk and kept the fort full of smoke from the proprietors finest Havana's, and full of pretty girls chewing gum, and himself, being the chief attractions.

Mrs. L. B. Stephens has just returned from the Louisville Exposition and from visiting her daughter, Mrs. James Shouse, of Henry county, Kentucky.

Cattle of Henry county, are dying from the poisoning of the Green river tick.

Mrs. Laura Harter, of South Carolina, is the guest of Miss Lallie Norman.

Quails and Rabbits have been duly slaughtered since the 20th inst., by J. L. Frazier and other nimrods of Union. Lynn is conceded to be the Bogardus of the boys.

Miss Florence Clements has a new organ and is making fine progress under the instruction of Miss Lillie Rouse.

Mr. Everett Bannister, of Elliston, Ky., was the guest of his parents Sunday last. Everett has made thorough progress in merchandising and telegraphy and has thus rendered himself indispensable to his employer,

T. A. Huey will enter the grocery business in Covington in partnership with his father-in-law, Jim Miller.

The infant son of Mrs. Sallie Meyers died suddenly Monday morning, the 22d.

H. P. Stephens is convalescent from an attack of pleurisy and rheumatism.

Miss Fannie Respass has sold her farm of 40 acres to Wm. Clore, at $50 per acre

We are having much rain, too much frosty weather and a general demand for overcoats and doctors.

Miss Kate Huey, of Missouri, is visiting relatives here.

Fisher & Johnson will soon begin prizing tobacco here. They are liberal buyers and worthy men, and farmers would do well to call on them.

Geo. Stevenson, sr., now of Lexington, says he will turn his attention to buying hogs this winter. He made an offer of $2 50 per hundred for a lot driven through Union the other day. No sale.

Florence.

Mr. Benj. Aydelotte has the beet that can't be beat by any beet on his beat, blood or sugar beet, by any live or dead-beat. Weight—10 lbs. Circumference, 29 inches, turnip variety and X L N T quality.

The difficult problem as to where the snow-birds go to in summer, has been solved by Uncle Noah Clore. His theory is that they do not amigrate, but only change their wintry garb when spring approaches, for a light brown summer dress, and become sparrows. Now, we never thought to ask Pap Clore whether this transition is sudden or gradual, or whether he ever saw them in the act of disrobing. In our school boy-days we used to trap snow-birds in the winter, and, occasionally, we would catch a sparrow. According to Pap's theory these must have been some of the few that don't believe in putting on style, wearing a plain suit of same color all the time. Now, if Uncle Noah is correct, the birds are free agents, and can do their own changing, because a change by nature would be entire and complete. We are afraid that Pap's bird doctrine is antagonistic to his predestination. He must explain this fully and all about the happy little snow-birds, where they rear their brood, &c., as this is an important item in ornithological science.

Florence has just opened a new hotel. It is styled the Hay Loft House. We have long felt the necessity for such an accommodation and are now supplied. The building is admirably adapted to the wants of night boarders. All that is necessary to make this a success, is to have in connection with the hotel, a soup house and red-hot baths. The regulations are strictly of a temperance nature, no intoxicating liquors being sold upon the premises. The hygenic arrangements are superb. Already 9 boarders have registered and ample room for more. The guests ascend to the sleeping apartments (second floor) by means of a new patent elevator. We are pained to learn that the usher (a young man) was severely injured while managing the elevator for the boarders to ascend, one of whom lost his balance, and falling astride the usher's neck, dislocated his shoulder. The beauty of this establishment is that it is self sustaining. The income from the hayseeds which are brushed from the backs of the boarders and sold is sufficient to meet all expenses. If the new house continues to monopolize the business as it ha done since opening, the balance will have to adjourn for the want of a quorum.

A phrenologist and fortune-teller struck our town Friday afternoon, and was very anxious to display his skill in the above sciences. He professed to be master of his occupation, which he said afforded him a livelihood, his charges for an examination being $1 50. Not meeting with success in this line (as few persons care to have their weak points exposed or hard fortunes made public) he next proposed to enter the prize ring with any man we could produce, and knock him out of time in one round. This business being more congenial to the feelings of the boys, his offer was soon accepted, and in less time than it takes to relate this narrative, the boys had him "over the rope," whether by "fair or fouls," we are not prepared to state, and with an accumulation of "bumps" upon his cranium, which will be a surprise to the phrenological text book.

GAS OMETER.

To the memory of Mrs. Dr. Blanton. A tribute of respect payed her memory by the Baptist Sunday-school, at Union, Kentucky.

The following resolutions were passed unanimously by the Baptist Sunday-school at Union, Ky.

WHEREAS, It has pleased Almighty God in the wise dispensation of his providence, to remove from our midst by death our beloved sister, Mrs. Dr. Blanton, and

WHEREAS, Our deceased sister was an active and energetic worker and teacher in the Sabbath-school, which position she filled with much credit until death forced her to resign, therefore,

Resolved, That in the death of our sister the Sabbath-school has lost one of its brightest ornaments, the church one of its most zealous members, the husband a loving wife, her children, a devoted mother.

Resolved, That we deeply mourn the loss of our much esteemed sister, and that we express our heartfelt sympathy to her bereaved family, bidding them look up through this affliction, recognizing in it the hand of God, and to rely upon him for strength and comfort. Seldom has death in our community occasioned a more solemn sensation, and one that has been more deeply lamented by numerous friends and relatives. Sister Blanton was highly esteemed in life and deeply lamented in death; and we confidently trust she is gone to rest from all her toils and labor in the paradise of God. Her husband survived her to feel and mourn the absence of a dear companion. May God sustain him in his bereavement, and cheer him in his lonely hours.

Resolved, That we bow in humble submission to His will; that we emulate the virtues of our departed sister, and cherish her memory as one true to her God, her church and her friends; and that we indulge the hope that when life's toils and trials are over, that we may meet her in that temple above, which is eternal and in the heavens.

Her funeral was largely attended at the Chapel in this place, where a sermon was preached by Rev. J. A. Kirtley from 1st John, 3d Chapter, 2d verse, after which her remains were laid to repose in the burying ground at Union.

"Take all the joys of all the spheres,
And multiply them together, one by one
Through endless years,
Yet, one moment of Heaven is worth them all."

C. T. RICE,
T. A. HUEY,
H. P. STEPHENS,
Committee.

County Attorney Tolin and County Clerk Garnett took in the Queen City Saturday.

Uncle Gus Weaver made our office a brief call last Saturday. We are glad to see Uncle Gus going about again over the country.

J. W. KIRKPATRICK & SON,
—BURLINGTON, KY.—

UNDERTAKERS

We have purchased a nice new hearse, and are prepared to attend funerals in regular city style, at the lowest prices.

ROBERT B. REED
Attorney at Law.
OFFICE AT - - UNION, KY.

F. RIDDELL,
ATTORNEY at LAW:
BURLINGTON, KY.
☞ Office over Dudley Rouse's Store. ☜

ALBERT W. GAINES,
Attorney and Counselor at Law.
LAWRENCEBURG, - - - IND.
Will practice in the courts of Boone county, Ky., Cincinnati, Ohio, Dearborn and adjoining counties, Ind. dec-6-82

W. E. VEST,
COUNTY SURVEYOR
WALTON, KY.
Is prepared to do all kinds of surveying. All orders sent him through the mail to Walton, will receive his prompt attention.

L. C. NORMAN. H. P. STEPHENS.
NORMAN and STEPHENS,
ATTORNEYS at LAW,
UNION, BOONE CO., KY.
Will practice in the Courts of Boone Kenton and adjoining counties. Collections solicited and made throughout the State. 24 tf 81

DR. A. B. HARRY AN
RESIDENT DENTIST.
Aurora, Indiana.
(Office Over Postoffice)
With J P. ULREY.
Dr. ULREY'S days, Wednesday and Saturday. Office open at all hours. 8-1y

J. J. Landram. G. G. Hughes.
LANDRAM & HUGHES.
ATTORNEYS at LAW.
Will practice in the Boone Circuit Cour and the Court of Appeals. Prompt atten tion given to Collections, on application t G. G. Hughes, Burlington, Ky.

S. W. TOLIN,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
BURLINGTON, - - - Y
Office in Court-house on 2d floor.
Will manage litigation in any of the Courts of the State, contracts and other legal instruments drawn up at reasonable rates. A prompt an studious attention given to business intrusted to my care. A trial solicited. 12-1y

H. KASSEN & CO.
(Formerly of Covington.)
—Dealers in Fine—
BOOTS AND SHOES,
106 W. 5th Street,
CINCINNATI, - - - OHIO.
☞ Custom made work a Specialty. A perfect Fit Guaranteed. dec. 20-1y

AURORA
MARBLE
AND GRANITE
WORKS,
Aurora, Ind
Will have constantly on hand
Marble and Granite Monuments,
Italian & American Headstones, &c.
I am ready to do all kinds of Stone Work on short notice and at low prices Hoping to receive the patronage of Boone County, I am respectfully,
F. W. KASSEBAUM.

We Have
J. SCHOFIELD & SON'S
JEANS, BLANKETS AND YARNS.
THE JEANS IS BLUE WARP, THE PRICE IS
45 Cents.
Those parties that wanted to get a corner on Schofield's Goods are badly disappointed as they see they can't get 60 cents a yard for the Madison Jeans when we propose to stir matters up a little.
COLTER, Rising Sun, Ind

FALL FALL FALL
—AND—
Winter Clothi'g
Clothing of the best goods, well trimmed, in the lat styles, made under my direct supervision and sold at low prices than are asked for badly made, shoddy goods other places. Call and be assured.
A splendid line of Suitings. Suits MADE to order on short notice.
H. F Blase,
540 Madison St, - COVINGTON, KY

Stop! Don't Read This.
S. C BUCHANAN takes this method of notifying his patrons that he has enlarged his room and now has the best and most complete stock of Drugs in the county, consisting of Drugs and Medicines, Standard Patent Medicines, &c.
Notions and Fancy Goods, Combs, Brushes, Toilet Powders Perfumery, Toilet and Medicated Soaps.
Also Spices of all kinds, Flavoring Extracts in bulk, Horse and Cattle Powders and many other things that we have not the room to mention here. If you call for anything not in Stock we will get it for you at the regular price, if it takes all the profit.
When in need of anything give us a call, at the Petersburg Duru Store, and be convinced that our Prices are as Low or LOWER than can be found.
Don't Read Any Further.

M.L. SWETNAM. HUBERT NEAD.
SWETNAM & NEAD,
(SUCCESSOR TO ALONZO GRAVES)
LIVERY AND BOARDING STABLE
AND TRANSFER LINE.
79 Pike Street, Covington, Ky.
Horses Kept by the Day, Week or Month.
Horses and Buggies for Hire.
Stock of all kinds Bought and Sold.
Best Care Taken of Horses entrusted to our Keeping.
All Orders for Hauling Promptly Attended to.

Dr. CLARK JOHNSON'S
Indian Blood Syrup
Cures all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys, Skin and Blood. Millions testify to its efficacy in healing the above named diseases, and pronounce it to be the
BEST REMEDY KNOWN TO MAN.
TRADE MARK. Guaranteed to cure Dyspepsia.
☞ AGENTS WANTED. ☜
Laboratory 77 W. 3d St, New York City. Druggists sell it.
D. CLARK JOHNSON:— This certifies that your Indian Blood Syrup is the best medicine I ever used in my family. My wife has been greatly benefited by it. L. E. MCCANC, Seaville, Ky. Mar. 15, '1

JAMES S. WAYNE, President. JNO. L. SANDFORD, Cashier
CAPITAL $300,000.
FARMERS AND TRADERS
NATIONAL BANK.
Covington, Kentucky.
DIRECTORS.
James S. Wayne, M. C. Motch, Sam Hind, E. J. Hickey, E. J. Green.
J. S. Matson, J. H. Mersman, J. L. Sandford, L. H. Dills, F. P. Helm.
L. C. Stephens.
The general operations of banking transacted upon the most favorable terms. Collections made on all points in the United States.
The Business and Accounts of Farmers are Especially Solicited by this Bank. dec. 20-6m

City Flouring Mills
RISING SUN, INDIANA.
FLOUR EXCHANGED FOR WHEAT OR CASH. THE HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR GOOD WHEAT.
mar7-tf23 J. W. Talbott.

UNDERTAKING.
We keep Constantly on Hand all sizes of
Burial Cases and Caskets.
And having just received a beautiful
NEW HEARSE,
Which can be had at a reasonable price when desired.
PRICES GUARANTEED LESS THAN CITY PRICES.
DAVIS BROS., HEBRON, KY.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL, Publishers.

BURLINGTON, : : KENTUCKY

The Falls of the Rhine.

A correspondent of the Baltimore American describes in glowing terms the effects produced by the illumination of the falls of the Rhine at Schauffhausen, and the excitement incident to passing under the rapids in a row-boat—a feat which has already cost lives enough to give it a double spice of enjoyment to rash people. He writes from the Schweetzerhof, and says: "After table d'hote, which ends about half-past eight o'clock at night, every one goes on the grand terrace or piazzas of the hotel to witness the illumination of the falls. After a few signal rockets, the old castle on the ledge above the falls is lighted up by colored lights. Then suddenly the falls are one blaze of many-colored lights. All down the cliffs, on either side, up and down the sides of the great island rock, in the very center of the falls, red, green, blue and pink lights flash forth. The electric wire has touched all simultaneously, and the water is one boiling, seething, pluttering, foaming mass of flames. The various lights shade into each other with the delicacy of a rainbow. The people at the hotel sit in silence, and while the illumination lasts only admire it. Then, as suddenly as it began, the lights go out and all is darkness. Only the roar of the waters is heard. I have seen Niagara illuminated, but this is grander, for here the whole falls are ablaze.

"The falls are nearly one hundred feet high, and the rapids below rush with terrible force; yet a boatman is always ready to ferry the daring up through those rapids to the very bottom of the falls and land him on the great rock—all for five francs, or one dollar. I went. The boat is a long, flat-bottomed canoe, while the two boatmen use flat oars. When I went one of the boatmen was away, and so a small boy sat in the bow and rowed, while an old man guided and helped the youth with his oar in the stern. It was fair rowing for a while, until the boat came within the regions of the spray. Then the boatman enveloped me in a big rubber coat, and dashed into the rapids. A wave struck the boat. It rolled, but on we went, the rocking becoming greater and greater. When in the very worst part of the stream, and the waves were whirling rapidly by, and the spray from the falls was drenching me, I noticed that the strength of the boy seemed to be giving out. The boat turned sideways. A great wave struck it full, and away it went careening over until the water came pouring over the side in a great stream. Another wave broke over the boat and gave me the full benefit from head to foot. I sat upright and held on to the little seat. Soon we righted again, and the old man turned our bow toward the rock, and on we went. Only once more did we ship water, but not as much as the first time. Arriving at the rock and looking up, the falls seemed several hundred feet high, while innumerable rainbows played around my head. The ascent to the rock, where a small iron pavilion stands, is made by several flights of stone steps, slippery and dangerous, of course. The shooting of the rapids is exciting, and our homeward trip was accomplished in a few seconds, so it seemed, but in reality was two or three minutes."

A Fiery Beauty.

Local scientists are already turning their attention to the wonderful comet which is booming along through space in the general direction of the earth, but which will not reveal its gorgeousness to the naked eye for several months to come. When it does come it will stay a year or more, and will be a grand event in astronomy. Concerning the fiery beauty the following, taken from the Albany Argus, which seems to have gotten into a dispute with itself on points of statistics, is very interesting:

The most recent calculations made at the Dudley Observatory relative to the orbit of the new comet, result in figures quite different from those reported in our issue of Sunday last. Yet for the short period embraced by the time since discovery, the two calculations place the comet in very nearly the same apparent positions as seen from the earth. About once in fifteen or twenty years a comet comes along, which, like this, gives the computers a great deal of trouble.

It now appears probable, say the astronomers of Dudley Observatory, that the comet is from three or four times as far from both the earth and the sun as the sun is from us. This distance is almost unprecedented at discovery. In fact no case is remembered in which distance was nearly so great. It appears probable that the comet will not come to perihelion until about June 1st of next year, and that it will remain in telescopic view for a year or more. The plane of its orbit seems to be nearly perpendicular to that of the earth's course about the sun. The perihelion point is indicated by the calculations to be at a distance from the sun not much greater than the earth's average distance.

For some time all calculations relative to the true course of this seemingly very erratic body must be regarded as quite approximate. The slightest variation in the observed places of a body so distant as this one probably is, throws the resulting elements of the orbit way off. The case might be well illustrated by the results of shooting at a mark 200 yards off with a pistol having a barrel less than an inch long—supposing it would carry so far. With a reasonably good marksman the balls would all take about the same course for the first few feet after leaving the barrel; but their subsequent course would be entirely a matter of conjecture. Yet it would be easier to hit an eight-inch bull's eye at 200 yards with a pistol whose barrel is one inch long, than it now is to say from observation and calculation where the Brooks comet will be (within 10,000,000 miles) at the end of three months. Give us a barrel three inches long and we will give you a dead center, say the astronomers of the observatory.—St. Louis Republican.

—A huge octupus, or devil-fish, recently made its appearance in the harbor of Port Royal, S. C. Some one fired a musket-load of slugs into the fish, which infuriated rather than maimed it. Seizing upon one of the piles of the pier, it lashed its great suction-cupped arms about the timber and wrenched it from its place. The fish was finally killed by pistol shots and harpoons and drawn up upon the beach, where, at low tide, it was exposed to full view.—Detroit Post.

—A marriage notice in a Meadville (Pa.) paper is as follows: "Miss Mary Pease of North street, surprised her parents by bringing home a nice young husband. The old folks have surmised for some time that a wedding was in view."

HOME AND FARM.

—A celery worm has made its appearance near Philadelphia.

—A little linseed meal mixed with the feed is good for scours in sheep.

—Tepid water is produced by combining two-thirds cold and one-third boiling water.

—Sow orchard grass early or wait until spring. It must get a good start or it will be uprooted by the frost.

—"J. S." asks: "What is a whipped syllabub?" It is one pint of sweet cream, half a cup of powdered sugar, with a large spoonful of vanilla or other flavoring extract. Mix the ingredients, and then beat to a stiff froth. Serve in glasses.

—Surface manuring says Colman, is especially effective on sandy soils, and a light dressing yearly is far more beneficial than heavy coatings once in three or four years. But the best results on sandy soils is when they are dressed with a compost of manure and clayey muck.

—It is quite plain that it does not pay to plant either sprouts or potatoes from which large sprouts have been taken. To be sure, the potatoes will sprout again, but the new growth has little vitality. Of course, this single experiment is not conclusive, but it points pretty directly that way.—Nebraska College Notes.

—Select the land that you are going to plant to potatoes the next year. If it is in grass, top dress with manure and let it lie until spring. Stubble should receive an application of manure, and then be turned under. If the ground is wet and you can not afford to underdrain it, put it to some other use, but do not risk potatoes on it.—N. Y. Herald.

—Brown bread, which may also be served as a pudding, is made by taking one cup of molasses, one teaspoonful of soda dissolved in half a cup of boiling water; stir this in the molasses until it is thoroughly mixed with it; then add three parts of graham flour to one of corn meal in sufficient quantity to make a batter; to this add a tablespoonful of melted lard. Steam this four hours. If you wish to eat it while hot in place of bread, dry it in the oven for fifteen minutes; if for pudding, serve it fresh from the steamer, with a sour sauce.—Boston Transcript.

—W. F. Brown, in the Rural New Yorker, says: "I find more profit in a cow that comes in fresh in the fall than from those that are fresh in the spring. Not only does butter bring a better price, but I think the cows give more milk in the year under this management, for just when they come to the time when they would naturally begin to shrink largely in their milk they go on fresh pasture and increase the flow, while a cow that is fresh in the spring begins to shrink just at the season of failing pasture, and the transition from green to dry feed, and a great falling off of milk is unavoidable."

Market Weight for Pigs.

The style of market pig has undergone a great change within a few years. The large 400 to 500-pound hog is now seldom found. The overgrown hog is no longer sought after, and pig-feeding has been more carefully studied of late years. Shrewd feeders have found that the older the hog, the more its carcass costs per pound. It is also found that the flesh of the large hog is coarser and stronger, and not as sweet and fine-flavored, as a ten to twelve months pig. It is true, the older and overfattened hog yields more lard, but this does not carry profit with it, as lard often brings no higher price than the side pork. The inducement, therefore, to grow these large hogs no longer exists and the 300-pound pig has displaced the 500-pound hog.

The time was when pigs were raised by a slow growth, to be fattened afterward. Farmers often kept a lot of shoats over winter, without expecting them to increase in weight much, so that he might have them ready to fatten the following fall. These were pastured and given house slops through the summer, making a growth during the eight to ten months of forty to sixty pounds. This was what was called a healthy growth! It was healthy for the pig. It was very unhealthy for the farmer's pocket, as the amount of gain was not one-half the cost of keep.

But the farmer did not then figure the cost of keep as closely as he does now; in fact, he probably never took an accurate account of the cost of wintering a pig without any material gain in weight. But when he examines the question he finds that the store pig has often cost more than he need to have cost, to have weighed 300 pounds, by a proper system of feeding. He finds that to keep the balance on the right side of the ledger the pig must always be kept gaining, for it is only out of gain in weight that he gets pay for his feed, and when the pig stops gaining then the loss begins.

"But," says one, "why not let the pig keep on gaining till he is two years old, when he will weigh 500 or more pounds, and bring a price worth having?" This is just the question that should be asked and answered, and every feeder should fully comprehend the answer. The answer is, that it takes less food to put a pound growth upon a fifteen or twenty pound pig, four weeks old, than upon a fifty pound pig, two months old, and less to put a pound on a fifty pound pig than on a 100-pound pig; or, in other words, the younger the animal, the less it costs in food to add a pound to its weight. As a general proposition, it takes more and more food to add a pound, live weight, to an animal, the older it becomes, until it reaches maturity. It takes from thirty to forty per cent. more food to full-feed a pig the second year than the first, and the gain is only about two-thirds as much as the first year. This shows clearly that it costs double to grow 100 pounds of pork on the pig the second year that it does the first—a pretty good reason why the pig should be sold at the end of the year. Besides, the market, as a general rule, offers no inducement for keeping beyond the first year. A well-fed pig, that weighs 300 pounds, will bring as good a price per pound as when kept longer, so there is nothing to be gained in price but much, if not all, the profit is lost by keeping the second year. The market has fixed upon 300 pounds as a profitable weight, and the farmer's interest wholly agrees with this.

Ten months' good feeding will often reach that weight. Skillful feeding consists in growing the largest amount of meat at a given cost, and such a feeder is not afraid of throwing away food by giving pigs all they will eat with a good appetite. He thoroughly understands the element of time in the feeding problem, and that, when he can shorten the time for the pig to reach 300 pounds, he has increased the profit. Our system of pig-feeding is not forcing, but judiciously giving the pig what it can digest and yet keep a good appetite.—Live Stock Journal.

Cheap Education in Switzerland.

Education, as most people know, is a strong point in Switzerland. The Swiss spend more public money on the schooling of their children than on the military forces of the Confederation, for primary education is not only compulsory but gratuitous, and secondary education is organized, and in a great measure provided, by the State. The system may be theoretically wrong, and perhaps open to the charge of socialism, but the Swiss have convinced themselves that in a democratic community like theirs, the people must be educated, and that the only means of securing that end is to promote free primary schools, and offer every possible encouragement to superior instruction. At the College of Geneva, for instance, an establishment founded by Calvin, and supported by the State, and which, as an educational institution, may rank with the best of English public schools, the fees are only 16s. 8d a year. At the secondary and superior girls' schools they are the same, and the charges at the gymnasium and the university are on a scale relatively quite as moderate. As foreigners are admitted to these establishments on the same footing as natives, Geneva offers to families to whom economy in education is an object, perhaps greater advantages than any other Continental city, and the existence of these facilities doubtless accounts in some measure for the cosmopolitan character of its population.—London Globe.

A Curious Tomb.

In the ancient burying-ground at East Boxford, in this State, there is a curious tomb, which is visited by many people in the course of a year. This is the tomb of Gen. Solomon Low, who was buried here in 1861, and who died at the age of seventy-nine years. It was designed by himself, and has on either side of the entrance two handsome white marble gravestones, erected to the memory of his three wives, who are also interred here. On each stone are carved pictures of two of his wives. The first two are represented with their children around them and infants in their arms. They are sitting in antique chairs with straight backs. The two wives represented on the second stone are sitting in modern rocking chairs, beside a center-table on which are books. The fourth wife is still living. When the adjacent ground was used for a muster-field, the tomb was always opened for one day, and the General's regimentals were exhibited there, in accordance with directions in his will.—Boston Journal.

Black Babies in Central Africa.

One word for the black babies. They are endowed with plentiful crops of hair which is finer in quality and less curly than that of their parents. They squall terribly and often, I fear, from pure "cussedness." When a mother can stand it no longer, she takes the child, and giving it a preliminary shake, demands to know if it is going to be good. This is the first time of asking, and no infant with spirit would yield so soon, so its reply is generally defiant. Then it is again taken and shaken well, but now its strangled sobs and agitation prevent an intelligible reply to the repeated question. A terrific up-and-down shaking follows, and the apoplectic babe can only give an inarticulate gurgle to its indignant mother's thrice-repeated inquiry. Whereupon it is solemnly and soundly smacked, to the satisfaction and ultimate tranquility of the lookers-on. Baby-nature and the methods of matenal education are much the same all the world over.—Cor. London Telegraph.

Taking Advantage of Native Prejudices.

A native writes in the Madras Mail: "Yesterday, just a little before dark, a small bier, carried on the shoulders of two lads, apparently of the pariah caste, was paraded all over the Kothaval Chowady Bazaar square, the carriers stopping at each shop and compelling the shop-keepers to throw them a copper. The contribution was eagerly made, as the sight of death was freezing to the shop-keepers. A passer-by, who also shared in the unpleasant feelings, discovered that, though the body on the bier was shrouded in the native fashion with a cloth dyed in saffron, and adorned with a profusion of flowers, the pariah carriers had come by a dead monkey and were cleverly passing off the carcass for the corpse of a young child."

—The Ogdensburg (N. Y.) Journal gives this modification of one of Colonel Mulberry Sellers' jokes: "At Brockville on one of the cool nights the clerk at a popular hotel lighted a lantern and placed it within a coal stove in the reading-room. One by one the citizens and guests strolled in, walked up to the stove, rubbed their hands with satisfaction, turned slowly around so as to warm their shivering backs, noticed a broad grin, took in the situation, and sat down to enjoy the discomfiture of the next victim."

THE MARKETS.

CINCINNATI, October 26, 1883.

LIVE STOCK—Cattle—common	$1 75	@	2 75
Choice butchers	4 00	@	4 75
HOGS—Common	4 00	@	4 50
Good packers	4 50	@	4 90
SHEEP	3 75	@	4 50
FLOUR—Family	5 00	@	5 60
GRAIN—Wheat—Longberry red	1 08	@
No. 2 red	1 03	@
Corn—No. 2 mixed	50	@
Oats—No. 2 mixed	30	@
Rye—No. 2	57½	@	58
HAY—Timothy No. 1	11 00	@	11 50
HEMP—Double dressed	8½	@
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	11 25	@	11 50
Lard—Current make	7-35	@
BUTTER—Fancy Dairy	24	@	25
Prime Creamery	24	@	27
FRUIT AND VEGETABLES—
Potatoes per bar. from store	1 25	@	1 30
Apples, prime, per barrel	2 50	@	2 75

NEW YORK.

FLOUR—State and Western	$3 00	@	3 55
Good to choice	4 40	@	7 00
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 spring	1 03½	@
No. 2 red	1 06	@	1 06½
Corn—No. 2 mixed—new	55½	@	56½
Oats—mixed	31	@	35
PORK—Mess	11 50	@	11 80

CHICAGO.

FLOUR—State and Western	$3 50	@	4 25
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	97¼	@	98
Corn—No. 2	48¼	@
Oats—No. 2	27½	@	27½
Rye	55	@
PORK—Mess	10 65	@	10 75
LARD—Steam	7 80	@	7 85

BALTIMORE.

FLOUR—Family	$5 00	@	6 00
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 04¼	@	1 04½
Corn—mixed	57¼	@	57½
Oats—mixed	35	@	38
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	12 75	@
Lard—Refined	9¼	@

LOUISVILLE.

FLOUR—A No1	$ 4 50	@	4 75
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red, new	1 01	@	1 02
Corn—mixed	51½	@	53
Oats—mixed	30½	@
PORK—MESS	11 50	@	12 00

INDIANAPOLIS.

WHEAT—No. 2. red, new	99	@
CORN—mixed	47¼	@	48½
OATS—mixed	28½	@
LIVE STOCK—Cattle
Butchers' stock	2 75	@
Shipping cattle	5 25	@

—The true newspaper reporter is not moved by fear or favor, and his notice, or more properly his notices, are bestowed impartially upon rich and poor, upon the humble citizen as well as the prominent statesman. The above just observation is called out through reading in the society column of the Milwaukee Sentinel the pleasing intelligence that "Grasshopper Jane," a Seminole Indian, is visiting friends in that city.—Indianapolis Journal.

—A man at Paterson, N. J., has been running a yacht with a boiler made of a beer barrel, and it blew up the other day and knocked boiler and boat into kindling wood.—Newark Register.

—A cheese weighing 2,245 pounds was made recently at a cheese factory in Whitesboro, N. Y., and was shipped to New Haven, Conn.

Canadian Bazaar.

Mr. John Osborne, Musical Bazaar, Toronto, Canada, writes that his wife was cured of rheumatism by the great pain-banisher, St. Jacobs Oil; that he has found it an invaluable remedy for many ailments.

"ISN'T it singular," said a visitor gazing at Niagara Falls, "that the little moisture that arises from that vast cataract should be mist?"—N. Y. Graphic.

Get the Original.

Dr. Pierce's "Pellets"—the original "Little Liver Pills" (sugar-coated)—cure sick and bilious headache, sour stomach, and bilious attacks. By druggists.

THE man who was kicked out of a seaside resort was caught by the under toe.—Marathon Independent.

A Total Eclipse

of all other medicines by Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" is approaching. Unrivaled in bilious disorders, impure blood, and consumption, which is scrofulous disease of the lungs.

A NOD thing in bonnets—A dozing woman in church.—N. Y. Journal.

A TRUE assistant to nature in restoring the system to perfect health, thus enabling it to resist disease, is Brown's Iron Bitters.

"JULIUS, seize her!" said Sambo, as Julius was contemplating a fat pullet by moonlight.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

YOUNG men or middle aged ones, suffering from nervous debility and kindred weaknesses, should send three stamps for Part VII of World's Dispensary Dime Series of books. Address WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N.Y.

A LAND-SLIDE is a portion of land sliding down a mountain. A land scape is some that got away.—Pretzel's Weekly.

OWENTON, Ky.—Rev. J. W. Waldrop says: "Brown's Iron Bitters greatly relieved me of general debility and indigestion."

MATCHES are now low, but it seems a pity to strike them when they are down.—Detroit Free Press.

I CAN SAFELY recommend Ely's Cream Balm for the cure of Catarrh, Cold in the Head, etc. Before I have used the first bottle I purchased I find myself cured. At times I could scarcely smell anything and had a headache most of the time. HENRY LILLY, Agent for the American Express Co., Grand Haven, Mich.

NEVER judge by appearances. A shabby old coat may contain an editor.—Philadelphia Call.

COCHRAN, GA.—Dr. A. J. Lamb says: "I never met with a remedy that gave more satisfaction in cases of debility and prostration than Brown's Iron Bitters."

OUT West when a bear gets into a hog-pen there is trouble bruin for the pigs.—Chicago Herald.

Don't Die in the House. "Rough on Rats," clears out rats, mice, flies, roaches, bed-bugs. 15c.

$10,000 WOULD not purchase from me what Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) has effected in my case. It has cured me of Malarial Rheumatism. ARCHIE THOMAS, Springfield, Tenn.

REDDING'S Russia Salve, best family salve in the world, and excellent for stable use. 25cts.

Skinny Men. "Wells' Health Renewer" restores health and vigor, cures Dyspepsia.

IN a letter from HON. MRS. PERY, Castle Grey, Limerick, Ireland, BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES are thus referred to: "Having brought your 'Bronchial Troches' with me when I came to reside here, I found that after I had given them away to those I considered required them, the poor people will walk for miles to get a few." For Coughs, Colds, and Throat Diseases they have no equal. Sold only in boxes.

Stinging, irritation, all Kidney and Bladder Complaints, cured by "Buchu-Paiba." $1.

I HAVE taken Swift's Specific (S.S.S.) for Rheumatism, and found perfect relief. It is the best tonic and Blood Remedy known to science. D. P. HILL, Attorney at Law, Atlanta, Ga.

Wells' "Rough on Corns." 15c. Ask for it. Complete, permanent cure. Corns, bunions.

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer

Is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from dandruff, restore gray hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which Sulphur, Sugar of Lead and Nitrate of Silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. JOHN D. PARK & SONS, Wholesale Agents, Cincinnati, Ohio, and C. N. CRITTENTON, New York.

Flies, roaches, ants, bed-bugs, rats, mice, crows, cleared out by "Rough on Rats." 15c.

For sore feet, swollen joints, sprains, corns or bunions, use St. Patrick's Salve.

TELEGRAPH ITEM.

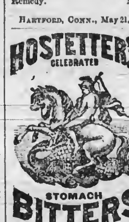
UTICA, June 2, 1883.

FRANK W. HOFFMAN, clerk of the American District Telegraph Co., says, "Having had occasion to use a medicine for kidney trouble with a lame back, I was recommended by one of our Utica druggists to use Hunt's Remedy, as he had sold a good deal of it to many of our leading families here with great success for kidney, liver and urinary troubles. I purchased some, and have only used three bottles. It has cured me, and I can truly recommend Hunt's Remedy to any one in need of the best medicine for these complaints."

In compliance with your request I send you a statement of my case. I will write you with a double purpose, first to thank you for the great amount of good your medicine, "Hunt's Remedy," has done me, and secondly, with the hope that my recovery will induce some sufferer to do as I did, "use the great specific and be cured." For nearly a whole year I was an invalid, unable to go out of the house, and a great part of the time confined to my bed, a living, powerless subject of the most dreadful of all diseases, "kidney complaint." From the long suffering I became weak from the loss of strength, with a lack of vitality, and very much reduced in flesh. All this time I was taking various medicines, and under the care of our family doctor, and not receiving a particle of help. I had almost despaired of getting well when my attention was called to Hunt's Remedy by a boarder in my family. I commenced taking it (unknown to the doctor) with but little hopes of relief. This non-belief was soon dispelled, however, as I daily began to improve. I continued the use of Hunt's Remedy, (and to make a long story short), used eight bottles, dispensed with the doctor, and to the surprise of all who knew me, and my own great satisfaction, became as well as ever. All pains and aches vanished, appetite returned, gained strength and flesh, and to-day consider myself as well as ever, and only too glad to place my testimony with that of many others.

That your medicine, "Hunt's Remedy," brought me from a sick bed I well know, and many people who know of my condition pronounce my cure almost miraculous. I am happy to say I am enjoying excellent health, thanks to your valuable medicine, Hunt's Remedy. MRS. L. W. CLARK, 109 Main Street.

HARTFORD, CONN., May 21, 1883.



HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS

In chronic dyspepsia and liver complaint, and in chronic constipation and other obstinate diseases Hostetter's Stomach Bitters is beyond all comparison the best remedy that can be taken. As a means of restoring the strength and vital energy of persons who are sinking under the debilitating effects of painful disorders, this standard vegetable invigorant is confessedly unequaled. For sale by all Druggists and Dealers generally.

ST. JACOBS OIL TRADE MARK

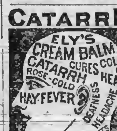
THE GREAT GERMAN REMEDY FOR PAIN.

CURES

Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica

Lumbago, Backache, Headache, Toothache, Sore Throat, Swellings, Sprains, Bruises, Burns, Scalds, Frost Bites, And All Other BODILY PAINS and ACHES. Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere. Fifty Cents a bottle. Directions in 11 Languages.

THE CHARLES A. VOGELER CO., (Successors to A. VOGELER & CO.) Baltimore, Md., U.S.A.



CATARRH ELY'S CREAM BALM HAY-FEVER

when applied by the finger into the nostrils, will be absorbed, effectually cleansing the head of catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions. It allays inflammation, protects the membrane of the nasal passages from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores taste and smell. A few applications relieve. A thorough treatment will positively cure. Agreeable to use. Send for circular. Price 50 cents by mail or at druggists. Ely Brothers, Druggists, Owego, N.Y.

HAIR Wholesale and retail. Send for price-list. Goods sent C. O. D. Wigs made to order. E. BURNHAM, 71 State Street, Chicago.

$65 A MONTH and BOARD for three live Young Men or Ladies, in each county. Address P. W. ZIEGLER & CO., Philadelphia.

It is a well-known fact that most of the Horse and Cattle Powder sold in this country is worthless; that Sheridan's Condition Powder is absolutely pure and very valuable. Nothing on Earth will make hens lay like Sheridan's Condition Powder. Dose, one teaspoonful to each pint of food. It will also prevent and cure CHICKEN CHOLERA, Hog Cholera, &c. Sold everywhere, or sent by mail for 25 cents in stamps. Also furnished in large cans, for breeders' use, price $1.00; by mail, $1.20. Circulars sent FREE. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

MAKE HENS LAY

Shall We Let the Child Die?

A hard-hearted political economist, looking at a pale and puny child feebly gasping as it lies upon a pillow, says that the child might as well die. It is so weak and poor that its life will never be worth much anyhow. There are already a good many people in the world who are of not much account anyhow. And what's the use of adding to their number another weakling, who has but slender chance of ever amounting to anything?

Now ask that child's mother what she thinks about letting the child die. About this time the hard political economist had better get out of the way. "Let my child die? No! No! As long as there is a remedy to be found that will save that child, the child shall not die! I'll spend my last dollar to save the child!" Well, try a bottle of BROWN'S IRON BITTERS on that child. See the poor little fellow pick up strength. He revives. He will live. Hosts of other children have been brought almost from death to healthy life by Brown's Iron Bitters. Your druggist sells it. 8

AN OPEN SECRET AMONG THE LADIES

The brilliant, fascinating tints of Complexion for which ladies strive are chiefly artificial, and all who will take the trouble may secure them. These roseate, bewitching hues follow the use of Hagan's Magnolia Balm—a delicate, harmless and always reliable article, Sold by all druggists.

The Magnolia Balm conceals every blemish, removes Sallowness, Tan, Redness, Eruptions, all evidences of excitement and every imperfection.

Its effects are immediate and so natural that no human being can detect its application.

Mason & Hamlin Organs.

New Illustrated Catalogue, (40 pp. 4to) for season of 1883-4, including many new styles; best assortment of the best and most attractive organs we have ever offered, and at lowest prices, $22 to $600, for cash, easy payments or rented. Sent free.

MASON & HAMLIN ORGAN & PIANO CO.

Boston, 154 Tremont St.; New York, 46 East 14th St.; Chicago, 149 Wabash Ave.

Sure Cure for Epilepsy or Fits in 24 hours. Free to poor. DR. KRUSE, 2814 Arsenal St., St. Louis, Mo.

$72 A WEEK. $12 a day at home easily made. Costly outfit free. Address True & Co. Augusta, Me.

AGENTS Coin Money by selling Dr. Chase's Family Physician and Second Receipt Book, $2. Address A. W. HAMILTON & CO., Ann Arbor, Mich.

Good Pay for Agents. $100 to $200 per mo. made selling our fine Books & Bibles. Write to J. C. McCurdy & Co., Cincinnati, O.

OPIUM and WHISKY HABITS cured at home without pain. Book of particulars sent free. B. M. WOOLLEY, M. D., Atlanta, Ga.

$250 A MONTH. Agents Wanted. 90 best selling articles in the world. 1 sample FREE. Address JAY BRONSON, Detroit, Mich.

Young Men learn Telegraphy here and we will give you a situation. Circulars free. VALENTINE BROS., Janesville, Wis.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STINSON & Co., Portland, Me.

PEOPLE WHO HAVE USED

DR. SCHENCK'S MEDICINES,

PULMONIC SYRUP,

SEA WEED TONIC,

AND

MANDRAKE PILLS.

Go and see any one whose name is mentioned here, and convince yourself that

CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED.

A full history of these and many other cases is given in which we will send you free, post-paid, on application. Address Dr. J. H. Schenck & Son, Philadelphia, Pa. This book also gives a full description of Consumption, Liver Complaint and Dyspepsia, in all their various forms. It is published in English and German. State which you want.

DR. SCHENCK'S BOOK ON CONSUMPTION,

Hon. DANIEL F. BEATY, of Washington, N. J., writes, June 3, 1882:

"Mr. Joseph Foddie, a gentleman in my employ, was afflicted with what was supposed to be Consumption. I got him to use your Pulmonic Syrup, Sea Weed Tonic and Mandrake Pills, and I can now state that he has been able to return to his office duties, and that his health is better than it has been for years."

J. C. ELLIOTT, of Binghamton, N. Y., says:

"I was told by my physician that I had Consumption, and I believe myself that I had, and that the use of your Medicines cured me."

Miss Annie W. RITTENHOUSE, of 941 Kurtz Street, Philadelphia, writes, July 16th, 1882:

"I believe your treatment and Medicines saved my life. I was told by several physicians of this city that I had Consumption."

A. SHELLY, of the firm of Smith & Shelly, Dry Goods Merchants, Grass Lake, Mich.,

Is now in perfect health, and in active business. Several years ago he was considered as incurable, with Consumption, by his physicians. He says, in a letter to Dr. Schenck, Oct. 27th, 1881: "I had all the symptoms of Consumption—cough, night sweats, and severe pain in my lungs. I have advised many others to use your Medicines, and can tell of some wonderful cures to those who may be interested. I believe that your Medicines will cure Consumption, even in its advanced stages."

REV. HENRY MORGAN

Was cured of Consumption, in its worst form, by Dr. Schenck's Medicines, over twenty years ago. His statement is published in Dr. Schenck's book on Consumption. Referring to which, in a letter to Dr. Schenck, dated Feb. 6th, 1880, he says: "The foregoing letter was written to Dr. Schenck many years ago. I can only say that my lungs were then perfectly cured; I have had no return of hemorrhage or lung difficulty from that day to this."

A. FOSTER, of Putnam, Conn.,

Writes April 18th, 1881, that his son was cured of Consumption by the use of Dr. Schenck's Medicines.

Dr. Schenck's Pulmonic Syrup cured me of a cough with which I was afflicted for over three months.

JULIUS WERHELM, Bay City, Mich.

Rev. JOSEPH S. LAME, Pastor of Eighteenth Street M. E. Church, Phila., says:

"I was a great sufferer from Dyspepsia, Bronchial affections, and Pulmonary trouble, and was so sick that I thought I should be compelled to give up preaching. Dr. Schenck's remedies restored me to perfect health."

A. W. WHITE, Proprietor of the "White House," Pekin, Ill., writes, Nov. 21, '79:

"In 1872 I was told by three prominent doctors that my wife had Consumption, and that she could not live until spring. Soon after, a friend, who lived in Dayton, Ohio, insisted on her giving your Medicines a fair trial. She did so, and, thank God, by their use her life was saved. She is now entirely well."

During the years 1880 and 1881, FREDERICK TRULL, of Hudson, Mass.,

Lost his mother and brother by Consumption, and shortly after was attacked with the disease himself. He supposed that there was no hope, as he had always been told by physicians that Consumption was incurable. As he grew worse, having all the symptoms of a confirmed case, he was induced to try Dr. Schenck's remedies. They saved his life, and he is now well and hearty. See record of his case page 15 Dr. Schenck's Book on Consumption.

GEO. C. REDDEN, Agent of the "White Line Transportation Co.," at Albany, N. Y.,

Writes that his daughter was given up as incurable by three of the best physicians of that city. She was restored to perfect health by Dr. Schenck's Medicines, although the disease is hereditary in her mother's family.

Ex-Lieut.-Gov. BENJAMIN DOUGLASS, of Middletown, Conn.,

Writes, Nov. 6th, 1882: "I have used Dr. Schenck's Medicines in my family for many years. I know of those who have been cured of very serious lung disease by their use."

MRS. SOPHIA M. LAWSON,

Who lives at No. 59 Ann Street, Newburg, N. Y., was sick with Consumption for over two years. She was cured by Dr. Schenck's Medicines in 1873, and has had good health ever since.

In 1876

Mr. H. P. Nelson, of Cedar Falls, Iowa, was attacked with severe bleeding from the lungs. He was cured by Dr. Schenck's Medicines, and has never had any return of bleeding or weakness of the lungs.

THOMAS DRAPER, Proprietor of the Brooklyn House, on 6th Ave., between 28th and 29th Streets, Brooklyn, N. Y.,

After using many remedies, and spending some time in the South for his health, was cured of a pronounced case of Consumption by Dr. Schenck's Medicines. See his letter to Dr. Schenck on page 9 of Dr. Schenck's Book on Consumption. This book is sent free to all applicants.

MRS. CHARLES W. PLUMMER, of No. 274 Main Street, Springfield, Mass.,

Was afflicted with Consumption. Symptoms—loss of appetite, great weakness, dry hacking cough, night sweats, and bleeding from the lungs. She was pronounced incurable by many doctors. She says: "In one week after I began to use Dr. Schenck's Medicines my night sweats stopped, and my appetite began to improve. I commenced to use the Medicines in March; in July I was quite strong, and in two months more I was well, and I have had good health ever since." Go and see her, if possible. See a full account of her case in Dr. Schenck's book, page 18.

MRS. J. D. GOODWIN, of Canaseraga, Allegheny Co., N. Y.,

Writes Nov. 6th, 1881, that she has been cured of Consumption by Dr. Schenck's Medicines. See her letter on page 9 of Dr. Schenck's Book on Consumption.

The REV. STEPHEN ROESE, Missionary for American Baptist Publication Society at Maiden Rock, Wis.,

Says that his wife was entirely cured by the use of Dr. Schenck's Medicine. He has also used the Pulmonic Syrup himself with great benefit for hoarseness or ministers' sore throat. For further information address him at Maiden Rock, Wis.

W. D. DUYCKINCK, Esq., whose place of business is at No. 707 Broadway, New York City,

Says: "Twelve years ago my physician left my wife to die, but thanks to your great medicines, she lives to-day a monument to their efficacy."

W. W. VAN ANTWERP, Editor of the "Daily Patriot," Jackson, Mich.,

Reports that his son was cured of Congestion of the Lungs, after the family physician had given him up, by the use of Dr. Schenck's Medicines.

HARLEY P. HOPKINS, of Providence, R. I.,

Writes to Dr. Schenck, May 19th, 1881: "I have been cured of what three of the best physicians of this city told me was Consumption of the Lungs, by the use of your medicines." Mr. Hopkins' case is a very interesting one, and we ask you to read his full statement in Dr. Schenck's Book, page 24. Mr. Hopkins resides at No. 3 Howell Street.

Mr. H. I. Leith, Druggist, No. 283 Main St., Providence, says, referring to Mr. Hopkins' case: "He was considered a consumptive in the last stages of the disease by his physicians and friends, and I believe that his recovery is entirely due to the use of Dr. Schenck's Medicines."

When the Draft was made at Connersville, Ind., Mr. Sanford Caldwell was drafted. The examining physician rejected him, saying that one of his lungs was partially gone with Consumption. Mr. Caldwell was soon after this advised to use Dr. Schenck's Medicines, by John S. Benson, who now lives in Indianapolis, Ind. From their use he entirely recovered his health. Mr. L. Rawls, druggist, at Connersville, says: "I know of the above case, and can certify to the truth of the foregoing."

J. McGONIGAL, of the Empire House, Akron, O.,

Says: "My mother was saved from a Consumptive's grave by the use of Dr. Schenck's Medicines."

DR. SCHENCK'S MEDICINES:

MANDRAKE PILLS,

SEAWEED TONIC,

and PULMONIC SYRUP

Are sold by all Druggists, and full directions for their use are printed on the wrappers of every package.

"THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST."

SAW MILLS, ENGINES THRESHERS, Horse Powers, (For all sections and purposes.) Write for Free Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio

AGENTS make money selling our Family Medicines; no capital required. STANDARD CURE CO., 197 Pearl St., New York.

PATENTS NO PATENT, NO PAY! R. S. & A. P. LACEY, Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C. Full instructions and Hand-Book of Patents sent free.

Advertising Cheats!!!

"It has become so common to write the beginning of an article, in an elegant, interesting manner,

"Then run it into some advertisement, that we avoid all such,

"And simply call attention to the merits of Hop Bitters in as plain, honest terms as possible,

"To induce people

"To give them one trial, which so proves their value that they will never use anything else."

"THE REMEDY so favorably noticed in all the papers,

"Religious and secular, is

"Having a large sale, and is supplanting all other medicines.

"There is no denying the virtues of the Hop plant, and the proprietors of Hop Bitters have shown great shrewdness

"And ability

"In compounding a medicine whose virtues are so palpable to every one's observation."

Did She Die?

"No!

"She lingered and suffered along, pining away all the time for years,"

"The doctors doing her no good;"

"And at last was cured by this Hop Bitters the papers say so much about."

"Indeed! Indeed!"

"How thankful we should be for that medicine."

A Daughter's Misery.

"Eleven years our daughter suffered on a bed of misery,

"From a complication of kidney, liver, rheumatic trouble and Nervous debility,

Under the care of the best physicians,

"Who gave her disease various names,

"But no relief,

"And now she is restored to us in good health by as simple a remedy as Hop Bitters, that we had shunned for years before using it."—THE PARENTS.

Father is Getting Well.

"My daughters say:

"How much better father is since he used Hop Bitters."

"He is getting well after his long suffering from a disease declared incurable."

"And we are so glad that he used your Bitters."—A LADY OF UTICA, N. Y.

50 Years.

I have known and watched the use of Swift's Specific for over fifty years, and have never known or heard of a failure to cure Blood Poison when properly taken. In all my life I have never known a remedy that would so fully accomplish what it is recommended to do. H. L. DENNARD, Perry, Ga.

We have sold Swift's Specific (S.S.S.) with most astonishing results. One gentleman who used half a dozen bottles says that it has done him more good than treatment which cost him $1,000. Another who has used it for a scrofulous affection reports a permanent cure from its use. VAN SHAACK, STEVENSON & CO., Chicago.

$1,000 REWARD!

Will be paid to any Chemist who will find, on analysis of 100 bottles S.S.S., one particle of Mercury, Iodide Potassium, or any mineral substance. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Drawer 3, Atlanta, Ga.

Our treatise on Blood and Skin Diseases mailed free to applicants.

CONSUMPTION CAN BE CURED!

DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE Lungs.

Cures Consumption, Colds, Pneumonia, Influenza, Bronchial Difficulties, Bronchitis, Hoarseness, Asthma, Croup, Whooping Cough, and all Diseases of the Breathing Organs. It soothes and heals the Membrane of the Lungs, inflamed and poisoned by the disease, and prevents the night sweats and tightness across the chest which accompany it. CONSUMPTION is not an incurable malady. HALL'S BALSAM will cure you, even though professional aid fails.

PORTABLE AND STATIONARY

STEAM ENGINES

and STEAM BOILERS, smaller sizes adapted to

Farm and Plantation Use.

$200 FOR ONE NO. 1 PLANTATION SAW MILL. WE MAKE SIX SIZES, CAPACITY FROM 3 TO 50,000 FT. PER DAY, WITH ONE MAN. Lane Bodley Co., John and Water Sts., Cincinnati, Ohio. (Illustrated catalogue free.)

$60. 5-TON

Iron Levers, Steel Bearings, Brass Tare Beam, JONES, HE PAYS THE FREIGHT. Sold on trial. Warranted 5 years. All sizes as low. For free book, address JONES OF BINGHAMTON, BINGHAMTON, N. Y.

DR. HORNE'S ELECTRIC BELT

Cures Nervousness, Rheumatism, Paralysis, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Kidney, Spine and Liver diseases, Gout, Asthma, Heart Disease, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Erysipelas, Catarrh, Piles, Epilepsy, Impotency, Prolapsus Uteri, &c. Only Scientific Belt that sends the Electricity and Magnetism through the body, and can be recharged in an instant by the patient. Send for Circular. Dr. W. J. HORNE, Inventor, 191 Wabash Av., Chicago, Ill.

$15 VALUE FOR $1.50

BALCH'S HAND-BOOK.

Combining a Dictionary and Encyclopedia of Social and Business Forms, Etiquette, House-keeping, Farming, Family Medicine, and other subjects in daily use. Contains the cream of 50 standard works. 700 pages for $1.50. Agents Wanted. Sells everywhere to everybody. FORSHEE & MACKIN, Cincinnati, O.

CANCER INSTITUTE. AURORA. Established, 1872; Incorporated, 1880. For the Cure of Cancers, Tumors, Ulcers, Scrofula and Skin Diseases, without the use of knife or Loss of Blood, and little pain. For INFORMATION, CIRCULARS AND REFERENCES, address DR. F. L. POND, Aurora, Kane Co., Ill.

ROOFING, TIN PLATES, SHEET IRON,

Sheet Copper, and Brass Wire, Rivets, &c. Fine Solder and Genuine Babbitt Metal. Full information about qualities given. MERCHANT & CO., 521 Cherry Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

PILES "Anakesis" gives instant relief, and is an infallible cure for Piles. Price $1 from druggists, or sent prepaid by mail. Samples free. Ad. "ANAKESIS," Makers, Box 2416, New York.

AGENTS WANTED EVERYWHERE to sell the best Family Knitting Machine ever invented. Will knit a pair of stockings with HEEL and TOE complete in twenty minutes. It will also knit a great variety of fancy work for which there is always a ready market. Send for circular and terms to the Twombly Knitting Machine Co., 163 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

Lady Agents can secure permanent employment and good salary selling Queen City Skirt and Stocking Supporters, etc. Sample outfit Free. Address Queen City Suspender Co., Cincinnati, O.

FREE to AGENTS AN ELEGANT $15 BIBLE Profusely Illustrated. Sells at sight and is just the thing for Holiday or other presents. Write postal for illustrated circulars, elegant specimen engraving, etc. Apply at once to G. S. MAYO & CO., 163 LaSalle St., Chicago, Ill.

DYKE'S BEARD ELIXIR [illegible]

WANTED—Agents for an article in general use. $5 a day to all persons. Sample and circular. Address J. F. DAVIS, Fall River, Mass.

AGENTS WANTED. Fastest selling books. Largest profits to canvassers. Circulars free. COBURN & NEWMAN, Publish'g Co., CHICAGO.

$66 a WEEK in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. Address H. HALLETT & Co., Portland, Me.

FREE By return mail. Full Description Moody's New Tailor System of Dress Cutting. MOODY & CO., Cincinnati, O.

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOLUME IX. BURLINGTON, KY., WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 7, 1883. NUMBER 2.

BEST, AS DAMSELS GO.

Eugenie? Why, she's just as nice
As Monopole right off the ice.
Pretty? Well, I should rather say
She was afflicted some that way.
She has the blackest, brightest eyes
You ever saw, of wondrous size;
Complexion rivaling the peach:
Upon the bough you can't quite reach;
Figure quite dainty and petite,
But plump, well rounded, very neat;
And then, she wears so small a shoe
That, if I named its size to you,
You'd not believe I told the truth.
But, oh, her beauty and her youth
Are not her sole or strongest charms.
She's sweet and gentle; never harms
A living thing. Though witty, bright
And jolly, she's religious, quite;
Not in a stupid way, you see,
But as a nice girl ought to be.
In fact, of all the girls I know,
She's quite the best, as damsels go.
I quite adore the little witch!
I'd marry her—if she were rich.

—Boston Post.

THE SCHOOL-MISTRESS IN SHANTYVILLE.

The astonishment of the men in Shantyville when the announcement was made that a school-mistress was coming to the place would have been comic had it not been so perfectly uncalled for.

The movement which resulted in the building of the school-house was caused much by a chance remark of "Shorty" Davis as by anything else. Shorty, on returning from a visit to the neighboring camp of Buster Gulch, said to the assembled crowd in Higgins's saloon: "I'll 'low ez how that place kinder lays over this yere. The men hez a respect fo' knowlidje, an' they hez the finest schule-house you ever see."

The rivalry between Shantyville and Buster Gulch was bitter in the extreme, and men said that when a stranger from Virginia City like Shorty Davis could make such remarks, it was time to move.

It must be confessed that the raw material for schools was not abundant in Shantyville. Of children there were but three in all; one belonging to the underground boss of the "Star of the West"—a great quartz mine—and two were the pride and glory of the Widow Black. Still, though there were not many children to be taught, it could not be denied that they needed teaching; and then, too, there was that disagreeable fact of the school in Buster Gulch.

It being clearly impossible to do anything in such a matter without a public meeting, and it being as clearly a movement with which it was a respectable thing to be connected, the meeting in question was called by no less a person than Squire Hatton—a gentleman about whom I could write at great length, had he any earthly thing to do with my story. As he has not, it must suffice that I say, he was in Shantyville the representative of respectability. Under such auspices the meeting went off beautifully, and as there was absolutely no opposition, it was resolved to build the school-house and start the school.

The house being built, the committee—of which Squire Hatton was chairman—sent to Virginia City for a teacher, and Miss Mary Kennedy arrived in time, duly certified to as being competent. And now you can see the unreason of the astonishment. There had been no secret about the thing; the very men who expressed the greatest amazement had been foremost in the movement. Yet the feeling was there, and it was thoroughly genuine. It gave rise, in time, to another feeling very much more curious—that the school-mistress was not so much a school-mistress as she was a public officer, in whose career all the tax-payers had a personal interest.

As I have said, Miss Mary Kennedy arrived in Shantyville and went to live at the Widow Black's place. This arrangement was felt by all to be thoroughly right, for in view of the fact that the widow was not well off, and her husband, Sam Black, had been one of the most popular men in the camp, a part of the money subscribed by the camp could not be better bestowed than upon her. It suited Miss Mary very well, because the place was convenient and clean, the food was good, although plain, and the widow herself was one of the cheeriest, nicest little bodies any one ever saw. Miss Mary, having arrived, took possession of her school-house, and the opening of the school was naturally made the subject of a celebration. The house was large, much larger than was required, having been built with an eye to its future use as a place for public meetings, and was at the opening comfortably well filled. The contrast between the three pupils and the crowd of visitors was somewhat amusing, but still the incongruity of the thing did not seem to strike any one. The Committee of Arrangements, probably with the idea of convincing all present that there were some children to be taught, placed the three prominently upon the platform, where they sat in high seats, their legs dangling down and exceedingly uncomfortable, "the observed of all observers. The opening of the new school passed off beautifully, and Squire Hatton received the congratulations of every man in camp.

But this story of mine is not so much about the Shantyville school as it is about the Shantyville school-mistress. As there would not have been any school-mistress had there been no school, it was necessary perhaps to account for Miss Mary's presence in Shantyville, but this having been done, I will go on to the story itself. And perhaps it is unnecessary to state that Miss Mary was very pretty. She was small, rather dark, with large brown eyes and brown hair, and charming. In the latter all men in the camp were agreed, and none were more thoroughly convinced of the fact than Jake Slocum commonly called Rhody, and his partner, Tom Freeman. These two men were, respectively, superintendent and assayer of the "Rattlesnake," a great quartz mine lying to the north of the "Star of the West." They lived together in one cabin, they shared what they made, and they had been "pards" for a very long time; in fact, long before they had arrived in Shantyville. It had become a bye-word in the camp, "as fast friends as Tom and Rhody." Of the two, Rhody was elder, being about forty, while Tom could not claim more than twenty-five; but in spite of the difference in age they were thoroughly suited to each other Of the two, Tom was perhaps the more enthusiastic, the more prone to take up a thing strongly, while Rhody was apt to talk somewhat cynically about Tom's new schemes. When it came to doing, however, there was not much to choose between them. Of course, Tom had been foremost in the school-house scheme, and equally as a matter of course, Rhody had laughed at it at first, but supported it strongly afterward. When Miss Mary arrived she had met the two men, and—well, it will clear up matters a good deal, and enable me to tell this story better, if I say they both fell in love with her straightway. As might have been expected, they manifested their passion in very different ways. Tom called constantly upon her, went out walking or riding with her, and hung upon her words as though, like those of the girl in the old fairy tale, they were pearls. Rhody, when with the girl, became rather more cynical than ever, and delighted in making caustic remarks about her sayings and doings. It was this perhaps which hid his passion from Tom, for the latter never imagined for a moment that his pard cared anything about the girl. In fact Rhody's age, suddenly recollected by the younger man, made Tom think him wholly out of the race. It must not be supposed that Tom imagined his love as patent to every one in the camp as I have good naturedly made it to you. Nor was it. Despite the fact that lovers, being something like ostriches, think no one can see them if their heads be covered, Tom's admiration, although very open, had not proceeded to such lengths as to attract general notice. This was owing as much to Miss Mary's prudence, care, modesty—call it what you will—as to anything else, for she shrank instinctively from publicity in the matter. That she personally knew that Tom worshipped the ground she trod on I myself thoroughly believe. Surely, she would have been no woman else!

One evening Tom and Rhody were sitting over their fire, smoking, after supper There had been silence in the room for some time, when Tom, stirring uneasily, broke it.

"Rhody, ol' man!" he said.

"What air up, Tom?" was the reply.

"Thar's somethin' I—that is, I thought—you mout like to know—I mean ef you're interested, that is."

"In course, Tom, I'm interested. What's up?"

"I kinder 'sposed you knew."

"Knew what? Anything the matter with the assays, lad?"

"Blame the assays! No!"

"Wa'al, lad, don't take my head off. What's up? Grease the slides an' let it flicker!" and Rhody looked at Tom with a smile.

"I—er—the fact air—that ar—I'm in love!"

"In love, lad? who with—the widder? She'll make a good wife, Tom."

"The widder? No. Aint ther' no other 'sides the widder livin' at th' foot o' th' hill?"

Rhody started, and his face grew dark.

"You don't mean the school-marm, do ye?" he asked, in a strangely altered voice.

"I means just her! I love her, Rhody, better'n my life. Why, what's the matter?" he continued, glancing up at his partner's face.

Rhody got up from his seat and walked out of the cabin without speaking. As he passed swiftly down the path, taking by habit the turn toward the widow's house, his breast was full of conflicting feelings. A man of strong passions, and one who was not apt to let others take from him that which he claimed, his first feeling was one of bitter anger. The information he had just received was a shock to him; he had never thought of anything of the kind. It was little wonder that he should at first determine that this thing should not be. The thought flashed across his mind that he could drive Tom from the camp the next day if he discharged him, because, as superintendent, he had supreme power. And with this idea came another—that if Mary was separated from Tom she might forget him. I think myself he was wrong in this: still he believed it. He exclaimed against the injustice of this thing. He thought of his loneliness, of Tom's popularity with all men, and his own lack of it. He felt as though his partner was taking from him the only thing he cared for, and he fought against it—fought fiercely.

By and by softer feelings began to find a place. He recollected how close Tom had been to him; how he had nursed Tom through the fever; and how dear the lad had grown during those long hours. He thought of his nobleness and his courage, his truth and kindness. The hours passed swiftly by as Rhody walked, taking little heed of the time. A bitter struggle was fought out that night in that man's breast, but in the end his better nature conquered, he returned to the cabin exhausted mentally and bodily, but with his mind made up. When he came in Tom was asleep, and he stood there watching his face by the flickering firelight. In his sleep Tom murmured two names, "Rhody" and "Mary," and his partner's face softened as he listened.

The next morning he said:

"Tom, I've bin thinkin' over what you told me last night, an' I dunno but what 'twould be a good thing. At any rate, lad, I'll help you."

"What made you leave so sudden like, ol' man?"

"Oh, nothing. I kinder thought I'd like to go over the thing by myself," was the answer, made lightly enough.

Tom did not know then nor afterwards what his partner had done for him.

Having Rhody's consent, or, rather, good-will, Tom had a talk with Mary. It was in the afternoon, when school was ended for the day, and the two were strolling along through the little valley just beyond the camp. What he said to her and what she said to him is of little or no consequence here, because it would be, in the first place, stupid if repeated, interesting as it was to them—and, in the second place, it has nothing to do with the yarn. Besides, I do not know what was said, as I was not there. It is enough that Mary allowed Tom to understand that she was willing to marry him. This much was proved by the announcement of the engagement, which was speedily made. But just at this point arose the queerest difficulty. As I have said, the men in the camp looked upon the school-mistress as being one in whose career they all had a personal interest, and they objected strongly to the proposed match. At first Tom and Mary were both rather disposed to laugh at the idea, but they found in time it was no laughing matter. The question was taken up warmly and debated with the utmost acrimony on each side, while Tom found that the number of those opposed was decidedly greater than those in his favor. Threats of tar and feathers finally became common, and things began to assume a most disagreeable aspect. In this condition of affairs Rhody came nobly to the front. He had been one of the strongest advocates of the lovers during the whole thing, but Tom had noticed that he was strangely busy with letters. One day when there were a large number of the men opposed to the match collected in front of the store discussing the affair, Rhody came down the street, and pausing in front of the crowd, said:

"Boys, I want to speak to ye. Thar's none on ye ez doesn't know ez how Tom, my pardner, wants to marry the school-marm. Thar's many on ye ez is agin any such 'rangement, most 'cause they thinks the gal mout do better. I gin ye all credit fur this feelin', an' I'm glad fur to do so. I dunno as I've thought myself that the gal wer' doin' the best she could in marryin' Tom." (Murmurs of applause from the crowd.) "So I've wrote to the Company, an' wrote agin an' agin, an' now I'm glad fur to tell ye all that my pard, Tom Freeman, air the superintendent of the Rattlesnake, wi' six thousand a year salary. I hez resigned myself—"

"I won't have it, pard," broke in Tom. "I ain't half as fit as you fur the place, an' won't have it."

"Yes, you will, lad," said Rhody. "Why shouldn't ye? 'Sides you aint a goin' fur to make me out a liar," and the man's stern face lit up with a smile.

Tom's protestations were drowned in the cheers which went up from the crowd. Turned completely around by the generosity of Rhody, they were now as eager for the wedding as they had before been opposed, and before many weeks, Rhody stood up and gave the school-marm away, an admiring crowd filling the school-house to overflowing.

—N. Y. Ledger.

A Story of Chambord.

When I wrote respecting the Count de Chambord and his doings, I little thought that Paris still contained an interesting and curious relic of his purposed kingship, or rather a group of relics, in the shape of the royal carriages ordered for the triumphal entry of the King into Paris. Twelve of these vehicles were ordered, but only six of them were finished when the refusal of the Prince to accept the tri-colored flag put an extinguisher on the hopes of his adherents. These six magnificent carriages have ever since been stored away awaiting the hour of the restoration of the monarchy. The whole half dozen were executed in six weeks, so great was the hurry of the Royalists, and so certain was the advent of the King considered. The largest and handsomest, that intended for Henry V. himself, is of great size and magnificence. The four lanterns alone cost $7,000. It is lined throughout with white satin, and the arms of France are emblazoned on the ceiling in the center of a golden sun. The seven large windows of plate-glass render the interior almost as visible as is that of an open carriage All the metal work is in repousse silver, and the hammer-cloth is fringed with gold. The panels are painted with fleur-de-lis on a background, and are highly varnished. Access is obtained to this truly royal vehicle by a series of four steps covered with pale blue velvet worked with fleurs-de-lis in gold thread. The other carriages are upholstered with pale blue satin figured with fleurs-de-lis in the same color. These six carriages cost $200,000. They were ordered by the Count de Damas, who still pays the annual bill for their storage. They were to have been paid for by a committee of enthusiastic Legitimist noblemen; but on the final dispersion of all hopes of restoration the Count de Chambord very generously insisted on settling the bill himself. I wonder what ever became of the eight snow-white steeds that were to have drawn the royal carriage? They were purchased, and were being trained to assume the high-stepping, solemn gait appropriate to horses that have so important a mission to perform, when the final catastrophe came that swept the embryo royality into the dust. I remember hearing about the controversy that took place between two highly-born Legitimists who were charged with the purchase, respecting the color of the animals. Eight perfectly-matched and very superb horses of a pale-cream color, with silken, silvery tails and manes, were offered. Nobleman No. 1 preferred the cream-colored horses, while No. 2 would hear of nothing but white ones. Finally, the dispute was settled by a third party. "Good heavens, gentlemen," he exclaimed, "if you select cream-colored horses to draw the King's carriage, every street boy in Paris, on seeing it approach, will cry, 'Here comes the the hippodrome!'" and so the white ones were chosen. Where are they now? Some years ago the carriage of a certain fair Parisienne was pointed out to me as being drawn by two of these favored animals. Certainly I never saw such beautiful white horses in my life. They were white as snow, without a single hair or shading of another color in their perfectly-groomed coats, their nostrils being tinged with a pale pink, and their full flowing manes and tails shining like flossilk. If they were not the chosen steeds of royalty they certainly looked it.—Cor. Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

—The London Medical News reports the death of a leading anti-vaccine agitator in England. Last summer the small-pox broke out in his family and carried off his wife and his three children. The loss preyed upon his mind, and he completed the extinction of his family by self destruction.

—A man in Bethel, Conn., gave a party on the one hundred and second anniversary of his birth, and died the next day.—Boston Post.

Our Young Folks.

ALL THE GOOD WE CAN.

If the sunshine never crept
Into hovels dark and sad,
If its glories never shone
Save where everything was glad,
If it scattered not its beams
Over hearts by sorrow chilled,
Would the sunshine do His will?
Would its mission be fulfilled?

If the roses never bloomed
Save for gladsome eyes alone,
If their beauty and their grace
For the weary never shone,
If they never brought a smile
To the wayside passer-by,
Would the roses do their task
While the hours of summer fly?

If the birdies sang their songs
Far from every listening ear,
If they poured them not abroad
All the earth to glad and cheer,
Would the birdies' work be done
Ere the autumn breezes call?
Ere the gold and crimson leaves
O'er the grave of summer fall?

If the sunshine of our smiles
We have scattered not afar,
If our roses—kindly deeds—
Bloom not where the lowly are,
If our words of hope and joy
Never fall to bless and cheer,
Have we done our Maker's will?
Have we wrought our mission here?

—George Cooper, in Golden Days.

SUSIE'S MISTAKE.

The town clock had struck two. School was over for the day. After stopping for a few moments in the shawl-room, to put on hats and cloaks, the girls ran out of the house, down the streets leading to their homes.

Maria Rogart, Susie Roberts and two or three other girls went together, along Main street. As usual, they had a great deal to say to one another.

Susie Roberts was telling about her cousin, lately arrived from Europe!—how the steamer had just escaped striking against an iceberg;—how her cousin had brought several trunks, full of beautiful things, and what a time she had getting them through the Custom House!

"She is a grand lady," said Susie. "She knows all about French, and German, and Italian, and she has just the whitest little hands that I ever saw! I do not suppose that she knows how to do a bit of housework. I got up early this morning, so that I could get my room in order, and do my dusting before she came down to breakfast."

"Why, Susie, are you ashamed to have her know that you dust the parlors, and take care of your own room?" asked Maria Rogart, laughing.

"Oh, I would not have her know it, on any account," said Susie. "As it is, I dare say she will think my hands very brown."

"I would not care," cried Ella Redman. "My mother says that beautiful hands are the hands that obey the Bible verse: 'Whatsoever thy hand findeth to do, do it with thy might.' The King who said that was very rich and very great."

Susie tossed her head, and assumed what she considered a grand air.

"I think the servants should do all the housework," said she.

Little Mary Jamison wondered if it really were not "respectable" to sweep and dust a room and wash the breakfast china. She took a peep at her brown hands, and drew on her gloves as quickly as possible. The girls were quiet for the remainder of the walk. Susie's words had set them all to thinking.

That evening, when Edith Grey's mother reminded her that, as Ellen the housemaid was out, it was time for her to set the tea-table, instead of running to do so with her usual willingness, she pouted and muttered something about doing a servant's work.

She handled the pretty china so carelessly that two cups fell and broke into ever so many pieces. They were the first of the set to be broken. It was a set of china, too, that her mother prized very much, because it had come to her from her grandmother.

"I am a horrid, careless girl!" Edith said, bursting into tears, and ready to put the blame on some one else—"it all comes from listening to that foolish Susie Robert's ridiculous notions. My grandmother was a lady, and yet I dare say that she took care of her china, and polished her furniture!"

Meanwhile Susie was having what she thought a very hard time. She was in the sitting-room, with her mother and cousin, when Mrs. Roberts said:

"By the way, Susie, before I forget it, after you have done your dusting, to-morrow, if you have time before school, I would like you to polish the dining-table. You have neglected this a great deal lately. I do not know what your grandmother would say if she could see her old furniture!"

Susie's cheeks flushed. She did not dare to look at her cousin, she could only trust that she had not heard.

Next morning Susie was up very early, determined to get all done before breakfast. With dust-cap and apron on, she was working away very industriously, when, to her dismay, she saw her cousin pass the door, on the way to the library.

"Good-morning, Susie," she said, "let me help you. I shall forget my skill if I do not get to housekeeping soon."

Susie was so much surprised by this remark that she stood for a moment in silence, looking at her cousin.

"You see," continued that bright little lady, "it is quite two years since I made a cup of coffee or a loaf of bread—just think of it! I dare say, Susie, that you know a good deal about housework? When I was a little girl I was delighted to help my mother"—she began to rub the old-fashioned side-board so vigorously that Susie was sure it would outshine the table—"I have a great fancy for women who are good housekeepers," continued the lady, talking and laughing, and using the wax and the brush—all at the same time. "My favorite heroine is that Queen Bertha who lived in Burgundy about nine hundred years ago. She kept house so beautifully that they stamped her likeness on a coin; they represented her as sitting at her spinning-wheel."

Susie could scarcely believe her ears.

"I have heard of persons who are ashamed of work, but I consider them very silly—don't you, Susie? I think that they forget that nice chapter in Proverbs about the industrious woman. There is a very pretty verse in that chapter—I went hunting through it once for a birthday verse—and I was ever so much pleased to find this: 'She looketh well to the ways of her household,' and: 'She is not afraid of the snow for her household, for all her household are clothed with scarlet.'"—N. Y. Observer.

Kitchen-Garden Games.

We make the following extract from a little girl's letter to her aunt, in the St. Nicholas, about the "Kitchen-Garden School," at which, in the same manner as the lessons are sugar-coated with fun, it will be seen that games are but a cloak for instruction:

My Dear Aunt Katie: I've saved the best part to the very last. It's about games. We just have an elegant time when we do games. We have one after every lesson in Kitchen-Garden. We have a skipping game, when we skip all round the room with a rope that has pretty ribbons tied to it, and we keep time when we skip to a nice tune that the teacher plays on the piano. And we have a broom game that is just splendid! We all have nice brooms, with pretty ribbons on them, and we do ever so many things with them, and sing songs all the time we're doing it. And then some of us make an arch with our brooms and the rest of us skip under the brooms all the way through the arch. And we hang up clothes-lines. You'd laugh if you saw all the funny little dolls' clothes hanging on the lines. But it looks real pretty, too, I think. And we play waiting on the door. We have a big round circle of girls, and we skip around and we sing:

"Here comes a crowd of merry little girls Who've lately come to school."

Then we ring a little bell and we ask: "Is Mrs. Brown at home?" and we say: "Yes, will you please 'low me to show you to the parlor, and I will speak to her." Then we go across the ring (we play that's the hall), and the girls lift up their hands and we go under (we play that's the door), and then we are in the parlor, you know. Then we play we have a card with our name on it, and we put it on a tray, and the girl that opens the door, she brings it to the lady, or else we tell our name.

Sometimes: "Mrs. Brown is not at home," or else: "She's engaged." Then we say: "Will you please to leave a message?"

Then the other girl—the lady, you know—she could leave quite a long message if she could think of one, but she doesn't, very often.

It's a splendid game, Aunt Katie, and so is "Little waiting-girls." We all stand in a ring with trays, and we march and sing:

"We are little waiting-girls
Just little waiting-girls.
We wait on the table
As well as we are able
For little waiting-girls.

"We pass the tray like this, we pass the tray like that,
Try to hold it, always hold it, very, very flat."

It's a real funny game. You just ought to see it, Aunt Katie. And "Jack and Jill," we play that, too, and it's

"Jack and Jill went up the hill
To get a pail of water;
Jack fell down and broke his crown,
And Jill came tumbling after."

And the chorus is:

"Two should step at the same time—
One should not go faster,
Else they'll surely, surely meet
With Jack and Jill's disaster."

Well, Aunt Katie, you ought to see just everything we do! I know you'd think it was lovely, and you'd be just as glad as we are that Miss Huntington thought about it. It don't seem like going to school at all. It seems like play. But we all learn ever so much there. Mamma says I've learned a good deal about housekeeping already.

Dear Aunt Katie: Mamma says I need not write any more, because your eyes are so bad. I give my love to you, Aunt Katie; and I give my love to Cousin Baby Grace, and to Uncle Howard, too.

This letter is from your dear little niece, MAY STRONG.

Ned's Crow.

Did you ever have a tame crow? It's fun, I can tell you, but sometimes it is more mischief.

I had one. He would follow me everywhere, almost. Of course I couldn't let him go to church nor to school, but he would perch upon a tree just outside and scold like a good fellow. If you judged by the sound and didn't try to make out words, you would think somebody was scolding sure enough. It was sport to watch him then. He would stretch his neck, this side and that side, and twist himself into all sorts of shapes—as if he must talk and the words had somehow got stuck in his throat.

That was three years ago. In the fall he went off, by spells, with the wild crows, and at last he left me entirely. But the next spring, and every spring since, with the first "caw, caw" comes a glossy black fellow with the same comical strut that all crows have, with a leer and twisting of its neck and an attempt at imitating the human voice that its mates never try. I feel sure that it is my runaway, for when I talk to it and call it by name it answers me, yet is very careful to keep just out of reach.

My aunt had a tame crow named Jim that could talk some, or at least speak some words. It was a great mimic, and would call out "grandpa, grandpa," just like little Joe, till grandpa would go out to see what ailed the boy. It would steal, too, everything it could get hold of, and hide the things in all sorts of places. Grandpa used to get greatly vexed about his glasses, sometimes, while a thimble was Jim's especial delight. One day I was picking up chips; Jim stood near watching me.

"Jim, you lazy fellow, why don't you help me?" said I, and Jim flew down close beside me and began to pick up the chips with his bill and dropped them into the basket, just as solemn and sober as a judge.—Youth's Companion.

—At Wheeling, W. Va., recently James Duff was leading a pair of hunting dogs along the track, when a coming locomotive frightened them so that they ran round and round him, binding him so that he could not move, and he fell before the engine, which run over him and killed him.

Religious.

ANSWERED PRAYERS.

I prayed for riches and achieved success.
All that I touched turned into gold. Alas!
My cares were greater and my peace was less
When that wish came to pass.

I prayed for glory; and I heard my name
Sung by sweet children and by hoary men.
But ah! the hurts, the hurts that come with fame!
I was not happy then.

I prayed for love, and had my soul's desire;
Through quivering heart and body and thro' brain
There swept the flame of its devouring fire;
And there the scars remain.

I prayed for a contented mind. At length
Great light upon my darkened spirit burst;
Great peace fell on me, also, and great strength.
Oh! had that prayer been first!

—Ella Wheeler.

GRUMBLING.

It is just as much a man's duty to be happy, as happy as his circumstances allow, as it is to be virtuous and honest. To make the best of whatever comes into your life is to plane the plank with the grain the proper way, as every master workman knows; but many foolish folk insist on planing against the grain, and then declare that luck is always against them. If a man is less happy, by even so much as a scruple's weight, than his circumstances warrant, it indicates either weakness of mind or a want of faith, or a temperament which needs the discipline of severe correction.

First, a weak-minded man mistakes the meaning of experiences, and is prone to declare that everything is going wrong, when in point of fact only one thing out of a score of things is playing the part of the crooked stick in the bundle. The nineteen sticks which lie close together because they are straight, he takes no thought of; but the one crooked stick occupies all his attention, and he can think of nothing else. For myself, it has been the policy of my life not to allow one-twentieth of my experiences to dominate the other nineteen-twentieths and to spoil my enjoyment of them. The difference between one man and another is that one man finds something to make him happy, while the other is generally successful in his search for something to make him miserable. I have known people who always seemed to have a bit of Heaven about them, in spite of adverse surroundings; and I have known people who seemed to exude a sulphurous odor, though their circumstances were reasonably auspicious. Second: Want of faith in the general fitness of things is like the sudden taste of lemon, which sets the teeth on edge and makes one cringe. If you believe that affairs are all in a tangle, that the Lord has put you into the midst of the wrong environment, you will probably have a perfect bedlam of a life. You are not in a condition to enjoy anything, but in just the frame of mind to grumble at the sunshine because it did not come sooner, and at the shower because it came so late. There are good folk in the world who don't know what they want, and who are always wishing they had the other thing, no matter what that other thing may be. They are not like bees, who somehow manage to suck honey out of a thistle without getting stung, but rather like spiders, who deliberately weave a web to catch every passing evil withal. I do not intend by this comparison to wrong the poor spider, who simply does his duty when he makes a feast of moth or fly, but simply to say that a man can find better business than fly or moth-hunting. The truth is, life is hardly worth the having if we must needs fill the corridors of time with long reverberating growls. Until we can get something of happiness out of every passing hour, we are still in the nurse's arms and suffering from infantile disorders. I have infinite respect for the venerable saint who said: "I have all my life been striving for a contented mind, and now I propose to sit down contented without it."

All things disturb a man who is determined to be disturbed. Nothing seems straight when the soul is crooked. If there is vinegar in the mouth, not sugar itself tastes sweet. Whatever weather we have displeases him, though we have a variety from which to choose that ought to satisfy any one who could be happy either in Greenland or the tropics. He never saw such a summer as this! conveniently forgetting that the last twenty summers have been just like this is, and that he has uttered the same criticism with each recurring season as far back as the tormented memory of his friends can go. He speaks as though the thermometer had a personal grudge against him, and in a tone which implies that if the manufacture of weather were only left to him he would show the Lord what could be done. So he would, doubtless; and that may be the reason why the Lord prefers to make it Himself.

Of course I do not intend to affirm that it is possible to live in a state of continual bliss. Not even a pure and undefiled religion can produce such a magical result. A man must sometimes set his teeth together with desperate determination, and sometimes must he wipe the tears of swift flowing sorrow from his eyes. Nay, I think there are moments when peevishness of the most exasperating kind is a privilege, a necessity, and as proper an expression of feeling as laughter is of joy. When one has the toothache, for example, it is utterly out of the question to smile benignly, or to feel like holding one's hands in benediction over a naughty world. There is a time to be querulous, but it ought not to be allowed to become chronic When the tooth rages solitude should be sedulously sought and indulged in until the pain let's go its hold. The lips had better be shut than parted; for if parted expletives and candid expressions of opinion more remarkable for strength than beauty are apt to issue thence. And, again, one can not imagine himself in Heaven when he is enduring the pangs unutterable of dyspepsia; nor is it his duty to attempt such folly. At such a time no one should look for politeness or courtesy. Men are mortal and dyspepsia is diabolical. Mortality and dyspepsia, however mixed, do not result in happiness. It is a volcanic experience, and analogy teaches us that when the internal arrangements of the earth are interfered with dust and smoke and dangerous missiles will fill the air. Neither wife nor children should look for too much while the convulsions continue, even though the sufferer be a saint. Saint and sinner are pretty much alike when this malady attacks them.

Nor can one be other than sorrowful when the greater ills of life are to be borne. There will always be a difference between a funeral and a feast. Laughter in the hour of mourning is simple lunacy. Levity in the midst of solemn services is idiocy. There are chromatic passages in the symphony of human life which can not be avoided. We need no sage to tell us that there are miserable and wretched experiences through which we must find our way as best we can. The shoulders will bend, and the heart will almost break at times, though we do the best we can. We may see the silver lining of the cloud, but it is impossible to ignore the cloud. The rule holds good, nevertheless. The habit which some have acquired of making things harder than they are is a criminal habit. Some one has said: "The worst tribulations through which I have passed are those which never happened." To take things as they really are, not as they seem to be, is a noble secret. The man who, looking at his sorrow, sees his sorrow only, and not the hope beneath it, sees only half of what God intended him to see. Death is a thousand times worse than death, if one sees only death in death. Death with a beautiful life on this side of it and the glories of immortality on the other side is not altogether dreadful. It is cloudy weather, to be sure, but the setting sun saturates the clouds with splendor.

You see at a glance, therefore, that I am not advising the skeptic to be cheerful. If a man plants briers, he must expect to be pricked by his own crop of thorns. It is as natural for the agnostic to fume and fret at the apparent incongruities of life, to him sadly real, as it is for water to run down hill. He has nothing to be cheerful about; he has every reason to be restless and miserable. With no God, no Savior, no Heavenly home after the weariness of this work-day life, how can he be anything else than miserable and restless? He is the plaything of ill-luck, with no power to control or cajole good fortune, and no optic ability to discern anything but the shadow of events. He is to be pitied for his forlornness, even when he despises your pity; and though he may christen his forlornness with the high-sounding name of science, it is only forlornness after all. Neither he nor you can make anything better out of it. One is in a sorry plight if he searches the world thoroughly and discovers no ruling Providence, but accidentally stumbles upon accident at every step, and then at last gets tripped up, and falls into the grave as the worst accident of all. His laugh is the laugh of desperation, and is wholly devoid of buoyancy. His heroism is stoicism, a grinding, almost a gnashing of the teeth, and a defiant clenching of the fists, as far removed from Christian resignation as madness is from sanity.

When a man believes in God he may grumble once in a while, because he is human; but constant fretting is irreligion. This life at its best is a kind of corduroy road across the lowlands to the highway of the King; and if you begin the journey by bewailing the fact, and wondering why the Lord has not had it macadamized, and then continue the journey by exclaiming at every jolt as though it was a personal insult, you will probably be so busy finding fault with everything that you will have little time left to enjoy the landscape. If others seem to have an easier time than you, it is poor policy to make a bad thing worse by fretting because it is not better. It is what it is; so make the best of it. If you try to be contented with your lot, you will be surprised to discover that there are many desirable things in this world which you can get on very well without. Move out of Grumbling Terrace, and rent an apartment in Thanksgiving Row, and your health, and that of your wife and children, will begin to improve at once.—Geo. H. Hepworth, in N. Y. Independent.

Choice Extracts.

—Holiness is the architectural plan upon which God buildeth up His living temples.—Spurgeon.

—The silent influences of life are by far the greatest. We do not know at what moment we are stamping the character and coloring the whole future life of our associates by our voiceless example or by our most unpremeditated words.

—I have been young, and now am old, and I bear witness that I have never found thorough, pervading, enduring virtue with any but such as feared God, not in the modern, but in the old, child-like way. And only with such, too, have I found joy in life—a hearty, victorious gladness, of so distinct a kind that no other is to be compared with it.—Jacobi.

—It is not the men of superior talents who do the great work of the world; it is the men who have trained their working powers the best. Many who possess enviable talents sometimes become hindrances in the way of others, all for the want of well-established habits of industry and a fixed purpose in life. They who have resolved to do the best they can in the world, and are doing it with their might, need not pause to look around for results. There will be time and opportunity for that in a vast eternity.—Golden Rule.

—This character, of which Christ was the perfect model is in itself so attractive, so altogether lovely, that I can not describe in language the admiration with which I regard it; nor can I express the gratitude I feel for the dispensation which bestowed that example on mankind, for the truths which He taught and the sufferings He endured for our sakes. I tremble to think what the world would be without Him. Take away the blessing of the advent of His life and the blessings purchased by His death, in what an abyss of guilt would man have been left. It would seem to be blotting the sun out of the heavens—to leave our system of worlds in chaos, frost and darkness.—Dr. J. B. Thomas.

HEYN & BRO. RISING SUN,

OVERCOATS, OVERCOATS, OVERCOATS, OVECOATS,

For Young Men, Youths, Boys and Children in Great Varieties, and Low Prices. All goods sold by us guaranteed. Also a Big Line of Ready Made Clothing on hand.

A full Stock of seasonable Dress Goods, with the latest Novelties in Trimmings. Ladies and Gents' Underwear, Hosiery and Gloves.

Heyn & Bro., Rising Sun, Indiana.

Genuine Schofield Blankets, Jeans, Flannels and Yarns, Prices Lower than any other store.

No Misrepresentation Practiced to Effect Sales. We invite Everybody to inspect our Goods.

Heyn & Bro., Rising Sun, Indiana.

Cloaks, Dolmans, Circulars and Jackets, for Ladies, Misses, and Children, in all colors and grade, latest styles.

Heyn & Bro., Rising Sun, Indiana.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL,
Proprietors.

BURLINGTON, KY. NOV., 7. 1883.

ADVERTISING RATES.

1 Column	1 year	$80
1 "	½ "	40
1 "	¼ "	20
½ "	1 "	20
½ "	½ "	10
¼ "	¼ "	6

For announcing candidates, $5. Obituary poetry, 5 cents per line. Obituary notices 20 lines free; over that number (excepting the announcement of the death) 3 cents per line.

Tributes of respect from lodges, &c., $1 50

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One year	$1 50
Six months	75
Three months	40

WE have some special correspondence which will appear next week.

IF you have a trade dollar take it to Germany. You can get its face value over there.

OUR local tobacco merchants are preparing to handle a large quantity of tobacco this season.

THE Owen County Democrat has been enlarged to an eight column paper. It grows in popularity also.

THE coinage at the United States mint in October was $1 359,914, of which $1,050,050 were silver dollars.

A FIRE in Paris last Saturday destroyed $38,000 worth of hemp and blue grass seed—insured for $25,000.

SAVANNAH, Georgia, had a million dollar fire last week. The first night after the fire 1,500 of the citizens were without shelter.

OHIO has more murderers than she can conceal, and they have commenced dropping over into Kentucky in search of hiding places.

WE will not be surprised if those who are buying tobacco at such remarkably high prices will hear something "drap" before they get it all off their hands.

DOGS day was a big day at the Louisville Expositon. The management ought to give the old bachelors and old maids of the country each a day, before the Exposition closes.

THE President of the Woolper pike, and his Cabinet, held a meeting, Monday, at the Circuit Clerk's office. Important business relative to that road was under consideration.

THE killing of Ira Hawkins and the fatally wounding of James Moffit, last week in Harrodsburg, by Robert Pulliam, created much excitement as the cause of the trouble was unknown.

IN Georgia, is a gang of ku-klux which has been giving the citizens much trouble, whipping and otherwise terrorizing them. It seems that the better class of citizens are afraid to apprehend them.

MAJOR CRUMBAUGH, collector of the Second Kentucky District, has been cleared in the United States Court, at Louisville, of the charge of using official stamped envelopes for private purposes.

R. S. Foster, United States Marshal, and a posse closed out the business of a band of counterfeiters in Pike county, Indiana, last week. Nine of the gang and their complete outfit for the manufacture of bogus gold and silver coins, were captured.

THE Southern Exposition at Louisville closes next Saturday, having been liberally patronized by all sections. It has been of great benefit to Louisville, and her business men will never see the time that they will regret what it cost them to get it up.

IN the event that a telephone line is put up from Covington to Williamstown, by way of Florence, Burlington should, by all means, have a wire tapping the Covington and Williamstown wire at Florence. The Burlington office would be one of the best suburb offices in the matter of pay.

LUTZ and Caruth, the St. Louis Police Commissioners were indicted last Friday, when the grand jury in its report declared that the Police Board is a corrupt body, and cast reflections upon the two Commissioners, who did not like that kind of racket, and they at once sued the grand jury for $50,000 damages each.

THE first appearance of Lieutenant-Governor Hindman in the gubernatorial chair was characterized by a number of remissions of fines, a branch of business in which it is thought Governor Knott will do but little, and which is causing the Louisville knights of the green cloth much uneasiness, for fear that their feast has come to a close.

SOME of Senator William's friends consider that he will have a walk-over in being re-elected. They claim to know of a certainty that he has votes enough pledged to him to secure his election, and the only question is as to the size of his majority. Gen. Williams may wake up slightly disappointed some of these bright frosty mornings.

WE understand that there is some probability of the Farmers Insurance Company of this county, building an office in Burlington, commence business in a style befitting the magnitude the enterprise has attained. No longer should the company take the risk of losing all its records by continuing its office in its hat. The business is on the increase, and demands a place in which it can be conducted in the proper style.

THE News Journal of the 2d inst., contains Thos. Arnold's and Colonel Monfort's statements in regard to the robbery of Arnold in Cincinnati on the 7th of last September. These statements put a very bad coloring on the action of the Police Court in regard to the discharge of the thieves and arrest of Arnold. Arnold's treatment by the Cincinnati authorities is changing the tide of the Owen county trade to a considerable extent.

COL. SWOPE recently suspended from active service sixteen white and four colored guagers and store-keepers, and Henry Scroggins, colored editor of the Kentucky Republican, published an article accusing Swope of turning him out on account of his color and for personal motives. This article caused Evans to write Scroggins asking him if he were the author of the article. Scroggins answered that he was, and intimated to Commissioner Evans that he ought to investigate Swope; but instead of the Commissioner concurring with Scroggins, he simply notified Scroggins that his commission as store-keeper was revoked. Of course Mr. Scroggins was floored.

SINCE 1870 the illiteracy of this country has been reduced from fourteen per cent. to twelve per cent. Of the 26,761,000 people in the United States over the age of ten years, about 5,000,000 can not read and over 6,000,000 can not write. Those who can not write are pretty equally divided between the blacks and whites. These figures show that there is in this country a large field in which to put to use the educational appliances of the several States. Ignorance is deep rooted in some localities, and much time and labor will be required to abrogate it. But the growing interest in education that now prevails throughout the country will make a good showing in the next decade.

County Court.

The attendance at court, Monday, was small, owing to the very busy time with the farmers.

Joseph Hunt, of Florence, and George Stamler, of Walton, were each granted tavern license.

Esquires Gaines, Brumback, Garnett, Sutten, Loader, Hensley, Baker, Howlett, Johnson, Norman, Bannister, Wagstaff, Rouse, McConnell, Ellis, Ryle and Curley appeared and took their seats.

Numerous claims were allowed as is usual at this term.

M. T. Garnett, as commissioner to make settlement with ex-sehriff Finch filed his settlement showing that he, Finch is indebted to the county on account of the county levy $3,497 50.

Esquire E. H. Baker was appointed receiver to receive of T. W. Finch the amount he owes the county and to take such steps as are necessary to enforce its payment.

All claims of physicians were laid over till the January term, except the claim of Dr W. H. Terrill for $100 which was rejected.

The County Attorney was authorized to employ someone to repair the sink in the jail immediately.

Esquires Gaines, Baker and Norman were appointed a committee to investigate and report what repairs are necessary on the jail.

Esquires Baker, Gaines and Norman were apponted a committee to do what they think best with the Poor-house land, and report at the January term.

The County Attorney was directed to look after the road funds.

The County Attorney and County Judge were each allowed $400 for their year's services.

The heirs of Nancy Snyder, and J. T. Stepenson's each filed petitions for division of lands.

THE plate-glass in Mabley,s show window was broken Monday night, and his $250 prize watch extracted. The burglar made good his escape.

THE election excitement in Virginia culmonated in a riot at Danville, last Saturday, in which three negroes and one white man were killed.

TWO prominent Louisville attorneys had a knock-down in the rotunda of the temple of justice, last Saturday. One of them made a motion as if going to draw a "pop," and bystanders interrupted the entertainment.

IT is a settled fact that Covington will not enjoy electric lights, for a time, at least. At a meeting held there last Friday night, a company of capitalists that proposed to light the city, and also fleece the people was sat down on very heavily.

ABOUT two o'clock Monday afternoon, Springfield, Missouri, was struck by a tornado that demolished thirty houses and killed several persons. A school-house a few miles from the town was raized to the foundation. It was full of children, but strange to say none of them were fatally hurt. Much damage was done in the country about the city.

13

PERSONS recovering from wasting diseases, such as malaria, fevers, etc., will be greatly benefited by the use of Brown's Iron Bitters, a true tonic.

OWENTON, KY.—Rev. J. N. Beck says: "I have used Brown's Iron Bitters and consider it one of the best tonics sold."

CODORUS, PA.—Rev. J. D. Zehring says: "I was paralyzed in my right side. The use of Brown's Iron Bitters enabled me to walk."

News Notes.

The Mormon missionaries in the South claim that they are meeting with encouraging success, especially in Georgia. The people of the South are becoming aroused on the subject.

The total registration of voters in the city of New York this year was 182,144. In 1882 it was 196,182; in 1881, 170,410, and in 1880 it was 217,023.

John Collins, son of E. K. Collins, a large steamboat owner, of New York, brought suit for $50,000. for false imprisonment and malicious prosecution against his stepmother, Mrs. Sarah J. Collins. He claims she secured his arrest on a charge of perjury, in May last, for the purpose of deterring him from contesting his father's will, by which the greater portion of his property was bequeathed her.

ONE-half the corn crop in the bottoms of the Wabash river has been destroyed by the late freshets.

County Directory.

OFFICERS.

Assessor—G. M. Riley.
County Surveyor—W. E. Vest.
School Commissioner—D. M. Snyder.
Coroner.—Dr. A. A. Murat, Constance.

COURTS.

CIRCUIT COURT meets the 2d Monday in April and first Monday in October, P. U. Major, Judge; W. L. Riddell, Clerk A. G. DeJarnette, Commonwealths Attorney; W. L. Riddell, Trustee Jury Fund.

COUNTY COURT meets the first Monday in every month. L. H. Dills, Judge; S. W. Tolin, County Attorney. M. T. Garnett, Clerk; J. R. Clutterbuck, Sheriff, T. W. Finch and W. T. German, Deputy Sheriffs.

QUARTERLY COURT meets the first Monday in March, June, September and December. The officers of the County Court preside.

COURT OF CLAIMS meets the first Monday in November.

MAGISTRATES' COURTS are held in March, June, September and December, as follows:

Bellevue—M. B. Green, first Saturday, and T. H. Sutton, third Monday. J. M. Moody, Constable.

Burlington—E. H. Baker, Thursday after first Monday, and Oscar Gaines, fourth Monday. B. H. Sandford, Constable.

Carlton A. G. McConnell, Wednesday after second Monday, and B. H. Ryle, Saturday after third Monday. Walter Ryle, Constable.

Petersburg—Jos. Hensley, Wednesday after first Monday, and L. A. Loder fourth Saturday. Geo. Comer, Constable.

Union—M. C. Norman, Thursday after third Monday, and H. Bannister, Thursday after second Monday. A. D. Riley, Constable.

Beaver—W. M. Rouse, Friday after the third Monday, and

Posted.

We the undersigned hereby give notice that our farms are posted against hunters:

Templeton Gaines,	J C Jenkins,
J E Duncan,	Oscar Gaines,
G C Gaddy,	Ben Clore,
Noah Craven,	Wm. Clore,
C S Balsly,	A S Gaines,
George Gaines,	C S Gaines,
Absalom Aylor,	J. B. Winston,

BOONE HOUSE,
BURLINGTON, KY.
C. L. CRISLER, Prop'r.

No pains spared in the accommodation of guests. The table supplied with the delicacies of the season. Stock well cared for. dec. 20-1y

A. L. Brown,

THE HATTER,
Cor. Pike and Washington Streets
COVINGTON, - - KY.

Has always on band a large variety of Men's, Boys' and Children's Hats, and prices GUARANTEED to be as low as the lowest.

Gents' Furnishing Goods a Specialty.

For Sale.

House and lot in Hebron, Boone county, Kentucky. This is a very comfortable house located near the center of the town. The lot contains one acre. For further particulars call on or address LYSTRA AYLOR, Hebron, Ky.

Doctors and Doctrines.
Whatever Cruel Creeds May Say, Truth is Always Orthodox.

"You know the old saying, Doctor, Ubi tres medici, duo athei,—where there are three doctors there are two atheists," laughed Rev. Apollo Creamcheese, the other day, to his friend, Dr. Senna, who had dropped in for a bit of a talk.

"Yes, I've heard it, and I'll bet a box of pills against your dry inkstand that some priest said it. They always pattered bad Latin when they had a bigger lie than common to get rid of," answered the Doctor, lighting his pipe. "I tell you, Dominie you're 'way off when you think our profession isn't doing as good work in this world as yours is. They've both been more'n half barbarous for centuries, but we're several lengths ahead of you on the home-stretch."

"But, Doctor, said Rev. Mr. Creamcheese," don't you think your fraternity shows a tendency to materialistic——?"

"Bah!" interrupted Dr. Senna, "we show a tendency to human charity and common sense. The fences are all down. Why, within the past week I've had a letter from my old friend, Dr. W. V. Haddox, of Pine Hill, Alabama, saying that he is using, with great success, PARKER'S TONIC, in his practice, and finds it the best thing for Coughs Lung, Kidney and Liver troubles, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, and so on, he ever struck; and another friend of mine, Dr. J. J. Oatman, of Carrolltown, Pa., says substantially the same thing. He's a big specialist, too, in chronic diseases, and knows what he is talking about every time."

Dr. Senna's statement as to PARKER'S TONIC, are supported by genuine testimonials from Drs. Haddox and Oatman, who write to Messrs. Hiscox & Co., of New York—the proprietors—in terms of the highest commendation concerning this great restorative remedy; and letters from the profession generally confirm the opinion of these physicians. Price, 50 cents and $1 per bottle.

REPORT OF THE CONDITION
OF THE
Farmers & Traders National Bank
AT COVINGTON,

In the State of Kentucky, at the close of business, October 2d, 1883.

RESOURCES.

Loans and discounts		$579,247 75
Overdrafts		969 39
U. S. Bonds to secure circulation 4 per cent		50,000 00
Due from approved reserve agents		43,991 83
Due from other National banks	3,554 33
Due from State banks and bankers	2,459 97	—6,014 30
Real estate, furniture and fixtures		4,668 94
Current expenses and taxes paid		2,994 80
Premiums paid		8,000 00
Checks and other cash items		1,432 60
Bills of other Banks		10,155 00
Fractional paper currency, nickels and pennies		56 54
Specie		12,015 00
Legal tender notes		22,000 00
Redemption fund with U. S. Treasurer, 5 per cent of circulation)		2,250 00
Total		$761,806 12

LIABILITIES.

Capital stock paid in		$300,000 00
Surplus fund		2,500 00
Undivided profits		—21,367 99
National bank notes outstanding		45,000 00
Individual deposits subject to check	368,774 08
Due to other National Banks	14,722 85
Due to State Banks and bankers	9,441 20	—392,938 13
Total		$761,806 12

State of Kentucky, County of Kenton, ss: I, John L. Sandford, Cashier of the above-named bank, do solemnly swear that the above statement is true to the best of my knowledge and belief.

J. L. SANDFORD, Cashier.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this 8th day of Oct., 1883. GEO. H. DAVISON, Notary Public.

Correct—Attest:
E. J. HICKEY,
J. H. MERSMAN,
L. C. STEPHENS, } Directors.

INSURE AT HOME
The Farmers' Mutual Fire
INSURANCE COMPANY
Of Boone County

Is now completely organized and receiving applications for insurance.

Its Rates are Lower

Than those of any other Company, and it gives the farmers of Boone County a

HITHERTO UNKNOWN ADVANTAGE

In keeping their property insured.

EVERY FARMER IN THE COUNTY

should take a policy at once.

N. S. WALTON, President, Petersburg, Ky.
J. H. WALTON, Secretary, Constance, Ky.
R. RANDALL, Treasury.

DIRECTORS.
LEGRAN GAINES, Jeff Utz,
JNO. M. MOODY.

E. E. IGOE,
Resident Dentist,
Rising Sun, Ind.
WITH
J. P. Ulrey.
Monday and Tuesday at Rising Sun, Ind.

Rev. Father Wilds'
EXPERIENCE.

The Rev. Z. P. Wilds, well-known city missionary in New York, and brother of the late eminent Judge Wilds, of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, writes as follows:

"78 E. 54th St., New York, May 16, 1882.
MESSRS. J. C. AYER & CO., Gentlemen:
Last winter I was troubled with a most uncomfortable itching humor affecting more especially my limbs, which itched so intolerably at night, and burned so intensely, that I could scarcely bear any clothing over them. I was also a sufferer from a severe catarrh and catarrhal cough; my appetite was poor, and my system a good deal run down. Knowing the value of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by observation of many other cases, and from personal use in former years, I began taking it for the above-named disorders. My appetite improved almost from the first dose. After a short time the fever and itching were allayed, and all signs of irritation of the skin disappeared. My catarrh and cough were also cured by the same means, and my general health greatly improved, until it is now excellent. I feel a hundred per cent stronger, and I attribute these results to the use of the SARSAPARILLA, which I recommend with all confidence as the best blood medicine ever devised. I took it in small doses three times a day, and used, in all, less than two bottles. I place these facts at your service, hoping their publication may do good.
Yours respectfully, Z. P. WILDS."

The above instance is but one of the many constantly coming to our notice, which prove the perfect adaptability of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to the cure of all diseases arising from impure or impoverished blood, and a weakened vitality.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

cleanses, enriches, and strengthens the blood, stimulates the action of the stomach and bowels, and thereby enables the system to resist and overcome the attacks of all Scrofulous Diseases, Eruptions of the Skin, Rheumatism, Catarrh, General Debility, and all disorders resulting from poor or corrupted blood and a low state of the system.

PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists; price $1, six bottles for $5.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS
—Best Purgative Medicine—
cure Constipation, Indigestion, Headache, and all Bilious Disorders.
Sold everywhere. Always reliable.

W. J. RICE,
CARPENTER & BUILDER,
BULLITSVILLE, KY.

Is prepared Raise or Move
EITHER LOG or FRAME BUILDINGS
On Short Notice,
And at the Lowest Possible Figures.
33-tf Your orders respectfully solicited

LUMBER.

Goe. M. Bedinger & Co.,
Erlanger, - - Ky.

We keep constantly on hand all kinds of Lumber, Laths and Shingles. Also Builder's supplies of all kinds.

—Come and see Us.—
may 9-tf

Farm for Sale!

35 acres of good rolling bottom land, 3½ miles below Aurora ferry, ½ mile from Bellevue and ¼ mile from the Ohio river, being part of the Warren Rogers farm. For particulars call on or address T. H. SUTTON, Grant P. O., Ky., or at this office. 44-2 m

Farm for Sale.

I am offering for sale my farm, lying 3 miles south of Burlington on the Big Bone road, containing 55¼ acres, a part of the Mason Crisler farm. The land lays well and is conveniently located, the improvments are a good brick house and all necessary out buildings, and a variety of good fruit. Any person desirous of purchasing a nice farm will do well to come and examine the premises and learn terms. Title good. MRS. OSCAR CRISLER.

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS
FOR THE LIVER
And all Bilious Complaints
Safe to take, being purely vegetable; no griping. Price 25 cts. All Druggists.

Cut This Out & Return to us with TEN CTS. Silver, & you'll get by mail, a GOLDEN BOX OF GOODS that will bring you in MORE MONEY in One Month than anything else in America. Absolute Certainty. Either Sex. No capital. M. Young, 173 Greenwich St. N. York.

NAVAL Agents Wanted for Ancient & Modern BATTLES, New and graphic Pictorial History of the great Sea fights of the World. By Medical Director SHIPPEN, U. S. N. Address J. C. McCURDY & CO., 180 W. Fourth St., Cincinnati, Ohio.

AGENTS Wanted for handsome illustrated standard works of character; great variety; Books & Bibles low in price; selling fast; needed everywhere; Liberal terms. Wm. Garretson & Co., 50 College St., Nashville, Tenn.

INCORPORATED UNDER THE LAWS OF MISSOURI.
CENTRAL MEDICAL & SURGICAL INSTITUTE
OF ST. LOUIS, MO.
SUCCESSORS TO DR. BUTTS' DISPENSARY.
OFFICE & ROOMS, NO. 920 LOCUST ST.
CHAS. L. LaBARGE, M.D., Pres't & Physician in Charge.
NELSON CHESMAN, Treas. & Business Manager.

This Institute has ample facilities and an experienced Faculty. While it succeeds to a large business, which has been established for years, it will aim to extend its medical and surgical practice, giving skillful and scientific treatment to CHRONIC DISEASES of the Head, Spine, Lungs and Air Passages, Heart, Liver, Stomach and Bowels, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Consumption and Asthma. BLOOD IMPURITIES, Inherited or caused by impure association, Scrofula, Fever Sores, Ulcers, etc. DEFORMITIES of the Limbs, Spinal Curvature, Wry-Neck, Diseases of the Joints, Piles, Fistula, Rupture, etc. WEAKNESS and wasting diseases in old and young men, also all diseases of the genito-urinary organs. FEMALE irregularities and weaknesses, causing pain in the back or side, etc.

Personal interviews with patients are always preferred. Those unable to visit the Institute will be furnished with blank lists of questions that will aid them in making a full statement of their cases and if not requiring a surgical operation they can be successfully treated by correspondence, and medicines sent by mail or express. To enable us to send proper list of questions applicants should give a brief statement of their trouble.

The Treasurer of the corporation is of Nelson Chesman & Co., Advertising Agents, and refers to the publisher of this or any other newspaper in the United States or Canada regarding responsibility.

Consultation at Office or by mail free and invited.

TUTT'S PILLS

TORPID BOWELS, DISORDERED LIVER, and MALARIA.

From these sources arise three-fourths of the diseases of the human race. These symptoms indicate their existence: Loss of Appetite, Bowels costive, Sick Headache, fullness after eating, aversion to exertion of body or mind, Eructation of food, Irritability of temper, Low spirits, A feeling of having neglected some duty, Dizziness, Fluttering at the Heart, Dots before the eyes, highly colored Urine, CONSTIPATION, and demand the use of a remedy that acts directly on the Liver. As a Liver medicine TUTT'S PILLS have no equal. Their action on the Kidneys and Skin is also prompt; removing all impurities through these three "scavengers of the system," producing appetite, sound digestion, regular stools, a clear skin and a vigorous body. TUTT'S PILLS cause no nausea or griping nor interfere with daily work and are a perfect

ANTIDOTE TO MALARIA.
Sold everywhere, 25c. Office, 44 Murray St., N.Y.

TUTT'S HAIR DYE.

GRAY HAIR OR WHISKERS changed instantly to a GLOSSY BLACK by a single application of this DYE. Sold by Druggists, or sent by express on receipt of $1.
Office, 44 Murray Street, New York.
TUTT'S MANUAL OF USEFUL RECEIPTS FREE.

VIGOROUS HEALTH FOR MEN

THE PASTILLE CURE TRADE MARK FOR NERVOUS DEBILITY

TESTED FOR 5 YEARS by use in thousands of cases. Founded on scientific medical principles, it has been growing in favor and reputation while its numerous competitors have invariably failed. The direct application of this remedy to the seat of the disease makes its specific influence felt without delay. The natural functions of the human organism are restored. The animating elements of life which have been wasted are given back. The buoyant energy of the brain and muscular system renders the patient cheerful; he gains strength with rapidity.

NERVOUS DEBILITY, organic weakness, and numerous obscure diseases, baffling the skill of best physicians, result for youthful indiscretion, too free indulgence, and over brain work.

Do not temporise while such enemies lurk in your system. Take a remedy that has cured thousands, and does not interfere with you attention to business or cause any pain or inconvenience.

(Send for a Descriptive Pamphlet giving Anatomical Illustrations, which will convince the most sceptical that they can be restored to perfect manhood, and fitted for the duties of life, same as if never affected. Sent free to any one. Remedy sold ONLY by the)

HARRIS REMEDY CO. MF'G. CHEMISTS.
306½ N. 10th. St. ST. LOUIS, MO.
One Month's treatment $3. two months $5. three months $7.

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM

A beneficial dressing preferred to similar articles because of its purity and rich perfume. It Restores to Gray Hair the Youthful Color & prevents dandruff and falling of the hair. 50c. & $1. Hiscox & Co., N.Y.

FLORESTON

Excels the finest flower extracts in richness. Delicate, very lasting. No odor like it. Be sure you get FLORESTON Cologne, signature of Hiscox & Co., N. Y., on every label. 25 and 75 cts., at druggists and dealers in perfumes.

COLOGNE

INJECTION SANTINELI

Cures all recent and chronic secret diseases of the Urinary passages in both sexes. Directions in all languages. $1.00 a bottle Druggists, or sent by express on receipt of price secure from observation Fairmount Chemical Co. Cincinnati, Ohio, U. S. A. Sold by W. F. McKim.

PAYSONS INDELIBLE INK

Is the BEST. No preparation. Used with any clean pen for marking any fabric. Popular for decorative work on linen. Received Centennial MEDAL & Diploma. Established 50 years. Sold by all Druggists, Stationers & News Agt's.

NEVER FAILS

FREE! RELIABLE SELF-CURE.

A favorite prescription of one of the most noted and successful specialists in the U. S. (now retired) for the cure of Nervous Debility, Lost Manhood, Weakness and Decay. Sent in plain sealed envelope free. Druggists can fill it.

Address DR. WARD & CO., Louisiana, Mo.

Local News.

November came in very cold.

Look out for Colter's new ad. next week.

Irwin Balsly is off to Arkansaw on a big hunt.

Say, you butchers, why don't you kill some sausage?

A big lot of freight is going over the Southern road now.

Schofield Blankets at Heyn's, Rising Sun, Ind., at $5 a pair.

Schofield's Jeans at 40c. per yard at Heyn's, Rising Sun, Ind.

New crop New Orleans and Sorghum molasses at W. E. Piper's.

Mutton took a fall the other day, a negro man was on top of it.

Heyn's, Rising Sun, Ind., is the place to get a nice Cloak or Dolman.

A fine Union Casemere Overcoat for $4 50, at Heyn's, Rising Sun, Ind.

A blind man with a team of blind horses was in town selling brooms Friday.

Two bicicilsts were reconnoitering on the Burlington and Florence pike, Sunday.

Gloves, Hosiery, Corsets, Shawls, etc. in great variety at Heyn's, Rising Sun, Indiana.

Heyn & Bro., Rising Sun, Ind., is the boss place to trade, as they deal fair and square.

To act on the liver and cleanse the bowls no medicine equals Ayer's Cathartic Pills.

Mrs. Tousey has had a fine monument put up on her lot in the cemetery at this place.

The song of the merry corn-huskers is now heard in the land from early dawn to night.

The autumnal beauty has escaped from the woods. The heavy frosts last week caused its exit.

If you want nice horse-blankets, or lap-robes, call on A. M. Acra, Burlington, Kentucky.

F. Riddell had a case last week in which there was neither pleasure nor profit—a case of neuralgia.

If the sheriff would take "taters" for taxes he could make much better head way collecting the revenue.

Tom Cowen is very busy sawing stove wood. Havn't learned where he expects to put up his stove.

Our double team of butchers are going slow on the killing business this fall. Material for their business is scarce.

The burglars that raided Florence and vicinity Saturday night, had an eye to keeping comfortable this winter.

Churchwell Clore's heirs were at the County Clerk's office the other day making conveyances one to the other.

The deciple of Blackstone just across the fence has hung out his shingle for the guidance of those in need of legal advice.

The Superior Court affirmed the judgment of the Boone Circuit Court in the case of Tilford Sullivan against John M. Moody.

Mr. Lewis Tanner and Miss Fannie Delph, daughter of Jonas Delph, visited the city last Thursday, and while there were married.

Charles McKim, while glazing the other day, cut his hand with a chisel, since which time it has been giving him some trouble.

Sam Kyle and Will Scott, of Kenton county were out here last Thursday on a hunting expedition. The game killed consisted of one quail, one 'possum and several rabbits.

Rice & Westbay's butcher cart, loaded with mutton, &c., principally &c., though, let down, on the street last Thursday evening, when on the way to the market-house.

Several Petersburg boys went to Memphis, Tennessee, this fall to work at the coopers trade, but all except two returned, on account of sickness. Since their return young Kine has died.

Judge Dills has a horse-brush that he has been using for fifteen years. A brush might last some people that long and then not be very good quality either, but Mr. Dills makes use of his brush.

Nice tombstones or monuments at the graves of the departed, are marks of respect which should not be neglected. Hurschart & Co., Lawrenceburg, Ind., have just what you want. John Beall of Hebron, is their agent.

Our attorney friend just across the fence certainly anticipates an attack from some nation, as he has been digging rifle pits about his premises for the past week. He is now pretty well fortified and we are daily expecting to see him mount his artillery.

F. W. Kassabaum, of Aurora, Ind., was in Burlington last Saturday, and put up two beautiful tombstones at the graves of Churchell Clore and Mrs. Nancy Snyder. Mr. Kassabaum is a fine workman and the people of Boone county are well pleased with his work.

The two new moons last month was considered very unusual by many persons, but Mr. R. E. Bruce produces the record and shows it often happens. His record is as follows: May, 1878, two new moons; August, 1879, two full moons; December, 1880, two new moons; July, 1882, two full moons; October, 1883, two new moons.

We have in our possession a book in which the city dads kept the records of their official acts, while the town sailed under the cognomen of Willmington. The record dates back to October 4th, 1814, and we will, at a more convenient time, give our readers the benefit of some extracts from the antiquated records.

Last week we advertised for two copies of the RECORDER of October 17th, and before the addition had been worked off the notice secured them, and several copies have come to us since; and we are much obliged to our friends for their prompt responses. There is efficacy in advertising.

Mr. A. G. Winston has been using a saddle made by J. M. Riddell, of Williamstown, since 1858, and it is yet comparatively a good saddle, but Mr. Winston concluding that a man ought to have at least two new saddles in a life time, ordered Mr. Riddell to make him another saddle, which he received a few days since.

This hat does not look like it ever failed in its attempt to support a butcher.

Some of the tobacco raisers say that what is commonly called ground leaves, will make a very nice, bright, clean quality of tobacco this year, and that the buyers will make more purchases, giving so much all round for the crop, this season than they generally do. At present the producers have a very fine prospect for realizing good prices for their tobacco raised this year.

Things antique are coming in style again, hence so many charavari parties this fall. Two parties organized for charavaring met at Jonas Delph's last Thursday night, armed with tin pans and cow bells and gave Lewis Tanner and his bride a benefit. A large band is now being organized in the Florence X-Roads neighborhood for a special event which is said will occur there in the nigh future. Tin pans and cow bells are bringing good prices out there, the demand exceeding the supply.

The Boone House was re-enforced by W. J. Rice's command last week, when a new time-card was adopted. The morning on which the new schedule went into effect, the ringing of the bell at such an unusually early hour created a stampede from the couches of many of the citizens who were enjoying their morning's nap, and who thought they were being called to assist in subduing a fire. Cy ascertained that the citizens would not suffer being aroused at such an unreasonable hour, and he has dispensed with bell ringing as part of the bill of fare.

Morning Star Lodge, I. O. O. F., gave J. Frank Grant a fine banquet Friday night, in honor of his election to the office of Grand Master of the State. Nine or ten lodges were represented in the large procession that, headed by the Aurora brass band, paraded the streets of Petersburg, marching to the Christian Church which was thronged by the large assembly who listened to brief and timely speeches made by the Grand Master, N. S. Walton and others. The little town of Petersburg was aglow with merriment that evening in honor of one of its most worthy citizens.

George Oliver, the man who killed Thomas Allen in Cincinnati, last Friday was captured at Thornton Ridge's, who lives about one mile north of Francesville, this county, Saturd'y night. Two officers from Cincinnati, followed Oliver to his shanty boat at Coal City, where they found him, but let him escape with his wife in a skiff, after having wounded him in one hand by a ball from one of their pistols. After some delay they followed him, and found his skiff on this side of the river, when they landed near Whitlock's, and accompanied by Dave Crosby, Irwin Balsly, and two or three others, all armed with shot guns repaired to Ridge's residence where they found Oliver, whom they succeeded in arresting after considerable parlying, without farther blood letting. Oliver killed his man by stabbing him in the throat with a knife which he surrendered to the officers after his capture. He expects to be cleared on the plea of self defense. Ridge, at whose house Oliver was found and captured, is his uncle.

Personal Mentions.

[If you have friends from a distance visiting you or expect to be away from home on business or pleasure, let us have the item for this column.]

Mrs. Dr. Grant and children are visiting her mother in Newport.

Mike Lawler was in Burlington renewing old acquaintances, last Friday.

The Rip Van Winkle of the north end of the county was in town the other day.

Gen. John W. Finnell was in town Thursday on business pertaining to the Petersburg distillery.

H. P. Stephens, of Union, was in town Friday, and he looked like he had just escaped from a hospital.

Mr. Geo. W. Bone, of Indianapolis, was visiting his relatives, Mr. E. A. Hughes and family, last week.

Mr. Summers, of Nelson county, and son-in-law of Mrs. R. W. Cooper was in Burlington one day last week.

J. F. Blythe had as guests in a day's hunting last week, three gentlemen from the city. The day was not favorable and not much game was killed.

Mr. J. J. Ryle, of Waterloo, was in town the other day, and was adopted as one of the RECORDER family. He says there is a fine lot of tobacco in his neighborhood, but no buyers have been about there.

NGEIHBORHOOD NEWS.

Scattersville.

We are having fine weather. The fall grass is doing well in this locality.

The farmers have commenced gathering their corn.

The most of the tobacco in these parts has been sold.

Wheat is looking fine at present.

O. P. Conner was visiting his father-in-law, W. A. Carpenter last Sunday.

W. N. Jurry and wife returned home, last week.

Hebron.

J. M. Utz will commence work on his pike on the 7th.

Born—Nov. 1st to Thos Huron and wife, a fine girl.

The hatter skipped from here, Sunday, leaving part of his tools and an unpaid board bill.

Geo. McGlasson raised the boss potato crop—2,590 bushels.

John Clore gave the young folks a party on the 30th. All present had a fine time.

Jno. Aylor is the proprietor of a new buggy. It is rumored that John will marry now.

Taylorport.

Ed Breed, of Cincinnati, was in town Sunday.

Mrs. Susie McPherson, of Hebron, was visiting her brother, M. Helm last week.

Mr. and Mrs. Currier, of Cincinnati, were in town a few hours last Thursday, on business concerning the estate of Mrs. McNeal, deceased.

Snowden Humphrey has the contract of building his brother's residence, corner of Second and Main streets. It will be completed some time next August.

John C. Robinson is again a resident of our town, he having moved here from North Bend last week.

Charlie Quick was quite ill last week, with bilious fever, but is convalescing.

Dr. Smith and family have moved into their new residence, and announce themselves immensely pleased with it.

Dr. W. B. Grubbs and family will move to Delhi this fall. We are happy to say his daughter, Miss Page, will remain on the Kentucky side of the river, with her grandmother.

Normansville.

Miss Susie B. Woodyard, a most estimable and amiable young lady, of Broadhead, Ky., is visiting the Miss Carsons, of this place.

Miss Cora Mulford a beautiful and accomplished young lady, of Covington, is visiting Miss Katie Kennedy.

Mr. Ben Allen and wife, have just returned from a visit to their daughter, Mrs. Hannah, at Dover, Ky.

Our Sabbath-school now meets at 3 p. m. Mr. E. T. Krutz, our new secretary, fills his office admirably.

On last Sunday evening Rev. J. A. Kirtley preached for us, not-with-standing the inclemency of the weather, the house was well filled.

Mr. Geo. Johnson is very sick with typhoid fever.

Died—Oct. 31st after an illness of several months, Mrs. Rhoda E. Reed, aged 45 years. She leaves a husband and eight children to mourn her loss.

Our new school-house is quite a success in every particular. The papils learn more, feel better and look prettier than ever before.

Flattsburg

G. C. Voshell will start to Kansas City, Missouri, in a few days.

Born—To W. C. Hensley and wife, a 16 pound boy. Will says he is going to call him Jumbo.

H. P. Crisler lost a valuable silver watch the other day, while plowing in wheat.

Worthy Grand Master, J. Frank's visits to our town are so few and far between, that we have almost forgotten how he looks. Surely the mantle of Ulysses S. has fallen on him.

There never was such a fine crop of cabbage in this part of the county, as we have this season. This goes to show that it takes dry weather for them.

Our corpulent friend, Cy Crisler, of the Boone House was in our town the other day buying hogs. Cy says he is going to founder Joe if it can be done.

Dr. J. M. Grant an old Flattsburg boy, was here one day last week, viewing the scenes of his childhood. Jim was a katy when he was young.

We received a letter from our friend W. T. Crisler who is attending school at Canton, New York. Billy is well pleased with his school. When he wrote the snow was about 2 inches deep there.

Success to the RECORDER as she enters upon the ninth year of its existence. A great many that are not subscribers now would take it if they had any way to get it from the office at Petersburg.

Petersburg.

S. G. Botts and son, Chas. Schramm and W. R. Gorden attended the Grand Lodge of Son's of Temperance of Ohio, which was held in Cincinnati, last week.

Dr. W. H. Terrill is still confined to his bed.

Ask Geo. Berkshire how much his dog weighs. Geo. has an eye to business.

Lerry Sweeney has purchased the property lately occupied by J. I. McWethy as a grocery.

Bro. Berkshire has several teams employed hauling gravel on the turnpike.

Capt. Christy, of the Str. Wave, was united in marriage to Miss Sallie Yerkes, by Rev. Froh, on Sunday evening the 28th, ult., at 8 o'clock p. m.

Joseph Weindle, who has been sick for several days, is able to be out again.

The lady members met at the christian church last Wednesday, and put down a new carpet. When the ladies undertake anything, it is well done.

The colored Baptist have been holding a protracted meeting here for two weeks, they have eight converts up to this time. They intend to organize a church here.

John Hoffman died last Thursday night. He was 87 years old. His remains were deposited in the vault.

R. Ranoull and wife returned last week, from a very pleasant visit to friends and relatives at Rushville, Ind.

Francesville.

We felt ourselves highly entertained one night last week, when a party of our gentlemen friends gave us an old fashioned serenade. Among the number were Prof. Jno. Furlong, of Burlington, Chas. Beall, of our town, Esq. McElvoy, of Covington, Dr. Crit and Frank Ernst, of Hebron, Judge Shannon, of Elijah's Creek and the Rev. Michael Muntly, of New York. Prof. Furlong and Beall furnished some very delightful music on the violin, Judge Shannon recited a poem, that he said was original, entitled, "We won't go home 'till morning," Dr. Ernst and Rev. Muntly sang a few ballads from Watty Morgan, and all in all, we pronounce it a success. We only regret that our water melons were gone, or we certainly would have treated the boys.

Mr. D. B. Watts was around last week, soliciting buyers for wild meat, such as Buffalo, Bear and Venison. He contemplates going to the Indian Nation on a grand hunting and trapping expedition, and will furnish his patrons as he kills it, fresh from the mountains. He was also wanting a good sheep killing hound, one that had had experience. He says they make noble deer dogs. He made several sales of meal, but at last account he had not bought a dog.

We had the pleasure of entertaining Mr. Joe Morrison, of Big Bone last Saturday and Sunday. Joe is a model young man of the first type, and he has our prayer that he may succeed in all his future undertakings.

Considerable alarm is being felt among our citizens just now, owing to the reappearance of cholera in Egypt. We all fear contagious epidemics here, and there being so many trancient visitors, we fear some may hail from the infected districts, and should cholera visit our beautiful village it would almost depopulate it.

Quite a sensational ghost story comes to us from the North Bend neighborhood, and it has created considerable gossip as well as alarm, among those of us that are superstitious. It seems this ghost appears in the shape of a man, neither naked nor clothed, and when seen was hailing a passing boat at night. The supposition of those that witnessed this hobgoblin (judging from the grimaces and curious pranks it made) is that it is undoubtedly the departed spirit of some stock dealer. It is to be hoped however, that it was all imaginary fancy, and not a reality, as such stories effect neighborhoods where they are said to occur.

A CALL FOR HEMP.

Several Houses Burglarized and Unsuccessful Attempts made upon Others.

FLORENCE, KY.,—Sunday morning, between one an four o'clock, burglars tried to force an entrance into the dry goods and grocery store of T. L. Swetnam. They forced open the side door leading to the school room on the second floor, also to Odd Fellows Hall above. Failing to make an entrance to the store room by this course, they directed their efforts to the front door which now bears the well defined marks of the jimmy; but as Mr. Swetnam has contributed his share of entertainments to like scoundrels, he had the precaution to secure his doors with efficient bars and locks by which they were defeated. However, they did not retire until making an unsuccessful attempt to blow off the heavy lock of the front door, by inserting gunpowder in the key-hole (a considerable quantity of which was sprinkled upon the stone sill), and applying a fuse.

They then payed their respects to Dr. A. Sayre. As the doctor is in the habit of receiving night visitors, he was not easily disturbed, though this party came in by the front window which is a little out of order in making calls, and we have no doubt but that if the doctor had been apprised of their necessities, he would have given a prescription free of charge, or he would have amputated a leg or arm, or made an incision that was necessary for their welfare, had they intimated as much. Not wishing to disturb the doctor in his dreams of happiness, they politely took a little bag of silver containing about $10, belonging to his wife, and which she had deposited upon one end of the sofa, and then laid her cloak upon it. This is the part we object to. We think the doctor ought to shell out in place of his wife. However the doctor didn't slight them altogether. He unconditionally loaned them his big ulster and another smaller coat, as the night was chilly and he didn't want his patients to take cold.

The next attempt was made upon the residence of J. I. Carpenter. They hoisted a window and in trying to open the inside shutters awakened the family, when they beat a hasty retreat. Proceeding to the residence of Dennis Nead: they met with better success, unlocking the door by catching the key with pinchers, they proceeded to ransack the house. At the head of the bed in which Mr. Nead was sleeping was his pants, containing about $10 which they carried out in the yard and rifled of contents. They also took his gun and left it in the yard. The vigorous barking of a little terrier probably caused them to desist from further depredations.

The next raid was upon the house of Mr. Abel Carpenter about ½ of a mile below Florence. The burglars made an entrance by crawling in the cellar window and coming up through an inner door into the dining room. Mr. Carpenter had a fine lot of solid silverware and some plated. They secured all the genuine and the plated was broken to examine it, and left. He lost with this ware 58 heavy spoons, also his silver watch. His wife's fine gold watch was in their bed room, which the rogues failed to get. We havn't heard any further on the road but expect this is not all.

Rev. Hewe, of the Christian church, assisted by Bro. Keene, is holding a protracted meeting here with preaching every evening at 7 o'clock. The audiences are large and attentive and the services give promise of good results. The meeting has been in progress nearly one week, and we believe one confession so far.

Miss Lucy Swetnam who is putting the polish on her education at Newport was at home Saturday and Sunday.

Mr James Henry and wife, of Indiana, have been here within the last week to see their friends and relatives.

Willie Bradford, of the firm of Bradford Bros, suddenly disappeared and as suddenly returned. No cause assigned for this strange freak; but it is believed that there is a "gal" at the bottom of it.

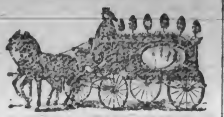
GAS OMETER.

The price of porkers have advanced a some.

R. H. Sandford has been quite sick for several days.

'Squire Ben Ryle celebrated the advent of a young Justice of the Peace at at his house the other day—weight, 11 pounds.

Mr. James D. Cloud has our thanks for a box of fine turnips, among which were three, the aggregate weight of which was nine pounds. On top of the box was a beet that weighed three and three-fourth pounds, and yet there are persons who say it was too dry to raise vegetables this year. We are going to increase in copulency, now.



J. W. KIRKPATRICK & SON,

BURLINGTON, KY.—

UNDERTAKERS

We have purchased a nice new hearse, and are prepared to attend funerals in regular city style, at the lowest prices.

ROBERT B. REED

Attorney at Law.

OFFICE AT - UNION, KY.

F. RIDDELL,

ATTORNEY at LAW.

BURLINGTON, KY.

Office over Dudley Rouse's Store.

ALBERT W. GAINES,

Attorney and Counselor at Law,

LAWRENCEBURG, - - - IND.

Will practice in the courts of Boone county, Ky., Cincinnati, Ohio, Dearborn and adjoining counties, Ind. dec-6-82

FANNIE G. RICE,

—TEACHER OF—

PIANO & ORGAN.

Lessons given at my residence,

Burlington, - - Ky.

W. E. VEST,

COUNTY SURVEYOR

WALTON, KY.

Is prepared to do all kinds of surveying. All orders sent him through the mail to Walton, will receive his prompt attention.

L. C. NORMAN. H. J. STEPHENS.

NORMAN and STEPHENS,

ATTORNEYS at LAW,

UNION, BOONE CO., KY.

Will practice in the Courts of Boone Kenton and adjoining counties. Collections solicited and made throughout the State. 24 tf 81

DR. A. B. HARRY AN

RESIDENT DENTIST.

Aurora, Indiana.

(Office Over Postoffice)

With J P. ULREY.

Dr. ULREY'S days, Wednesday and Saturday. Office open at all hours. 8-1y

J. J. Landram. G. G. Hughes.

LANDRAM & HUGHES,

ATTORNEYS at LAW.

Will practice in the Boone Circuit Cour and the Court of Appeals. Prompt attention given to Collections, on application t G. G. Hughes, Burlington, Ky.

S. W. TOLIN.

ATTORNEY AT LAW

BURLINGTON, - - Y

Office in Court-house on 2d floor.

Will manage litigation in any of the Courts of the State, contracts and other legal instruments drawn up at reasonable rates. Aprompt an studious attention given to business intrusted to my care. A trial solicited. 12-1y

H. KASSEN & CO.

(Formerly of Covington.)

—Dealers in Fine—

BOOTS AND SHOES,

106 W. 5th Street,

CINCINNATI, - - - OHIO.

Custom made work a Specialty. A perfect Fit Guaranteed. dec. 20-1y

AURORA MARBLE AND GRANITE WORKS,

Aurora, Ind

Will have constantly on hand

Marble and Granite Monuments,

Italian & American Headstones, &c.

I am ready to do all kinds of Stone Work on short notice and at low prices Hoping to receive the patronage of Boone County, I am respectfully,

F. W. KASSEBAUM.

We Have

J. SCHOFIELD & SON'S

JEANS, BLANKETS AND YARNS.

THE JEANS IS BLUE WARP, THE PRICE IS

45 Cents.

Those parties that wanted to get a corner on Schofield's Goods are badly disappointed as they see they can't get 60 cents a yard for the Madison Jeans when we propose to stir matters up a little.

COLTER, Rising Sun, Ind

FALL

—AND—

Winter Clothi'g

Clothing of the best goods, well trimmed, in the latest styles, made under my direct supervision and sold at lower prices than are asked for badly made, shoddy goods at other places. Call and be assured.

A splendid line of Suitings. Suits MADE to order on short notice.

H. F Blase,

340 Madison St, - COVINGTON, KY.

Stop! Don't Read This.

S. C BUCHANAN takes this method of notifying his patrons that he has enlarged his room and now has the best and most complete stock of Drugs in the county, consisting of Drugs and Medicines, Standard Patent Medicines, &c.

Notions and Fancy Goods, Combs, Brushes, Toilet Powders Perfumery, Toilet and Medicated Soaps.

Also Spices of all kinds, Flavoring Extracts in bulk, Horse and Cattle Powders and many other things that we have not the room to mention here. If you call for anything not in Stock we will get it for you at the regular price, if it takes all the profit.

When in need of anything give us a call, at the Petersburg Drug Store, and be convinced that our Prices are as Low or LOWER than can be found.

Don't Read Any Further.

M.L. SWETNAM. HUBERT NEED.

SWETNAM & NEAD,

(SUCCESSOR TO ALONZO GRAVES.)

LIVERY AND BOARDING STABLE

AND TRANSFER LINE,

79 Pike Street, Covington, Ky.

Horses Kept by the Day, Week or Month.

Horses and Buggies for Hire.

Stock of all kinds Bought and Sold.

Best Care Taken of Horses entrusted to our Keeping.

All Orders for Hauling Promptly Attended to.

Dr. CLARK JOHNSON'S

Indian Blood Syrup

Cures all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys, Skin and Blood. Millions testify to its efficacy in healing the above named diseases, and pronounce it to be the

BEST REMEDY KNOWN TO MAN,

Guaranteed to cure Dyspepsia.

TRADE MARK.

AGENTS WANTED.

Laboratory 77 W. 3d St., New York City. Druggists sell it

D. CLARK JOHNSON:— This certifies that your Indian Blood Syrup is the best medicine I ever used in my family. My wife has been greatly benefited by it. L. E. McCANE, Seaville, Ky. Mar. 15, '8

JAMES S. WAYNE, President. JNO. L. SANDFORD, Cashier

CAPITAL $300,000.

FARMERS AND TRADERS

NATIONAL BANK.

Covington, Kentucky.

DIRECTORS.

James S. Wayne, M. C. Motch, Sam Hind, E. J. Hickey, E. J. Green,
J. S. Matson, J. H. Mersman, J. L. Sandford, L. H Dills, F. P. Helm,
L. C. Stephens.

The general operations of banking transacted upon the most favorable terms. Collections made on all points in the United States.

The Business and Accounts of Farmers are Especially Solicited by this Bank.

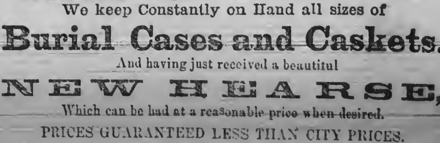
dec. 20-6m

City Flouring Mills

RISING SUN, INDIANA.

FLOUR EXCHANGED FOR WHEAT OR CASH. THE HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR GOOD WHEAT.

mar7-tf28 J. W, Talbott.



UNDERTAKING.

We keep Constantly on Hand all sizes of

Burial Cases and Caskets.

And having just received a beautiful

NEW HEARSE,

Which can be had at a reasonable price when desired.

PRICES GUARANTEED LESS THAN CITY PRICES.

DAVIS BROS., - - HEBRON, KY.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL, Publishers.

BURLINGTON, : : KENTUCKY.

"Prepared," not "Adulterated Milk."

A man who had long been engaged as a milk peddler on the streets of Boston, after abandoning the business, was asked by an interviewer this question: "Is adulterated milk sold in this market?" He replied: "No, sir, not a drop, as we milk peddlers understand it, but there is plenty of 'prepared' milk." On being asked: "What is the difference between 'prepared' and 'adulterated' milk?" he replied: "We milkmen associate something criminal with the word 'adulterated' milk but not with the word 'prepared' milk." He continued: "'Prepared' milk has in it no deleterious matter." [Is water furnished the city used to "prepare" milk? If so how can it be said that it contains no "deleterious matter" when it has defied the most learned chemists to tell the Water Board why the water furnished the city is unfit to drink?] When asked "How much 'prepared' milk is sold in Boston?" he replied: "Nine-tenths of all that is sold is more or less 'prepared.'" The interviewer remarked: "You don't mean to say that only one-tenth of the milk sold in Boston is pure?" The milkman replied: "That's precisely what I meant to say, and I know what I am talking about, at least I was long enough in the business to know it, and every milk peddler knows it, and the Inspector knows it too, if not a fool." He adds: "'Prepared' milk stands the test of the lactometer and the most skilful tasters. It is only when a man is a rogue and anxious to make money too fast that he can be detected by an examination of his milk."

The milk vender was next asked if he had any objection to telling how milk is prepared? And he replied as follows: "There can be no objection to letting the general public know, as a great many milk-consumers already do know, and buy their milk with that knowledge. The principal ingredient is water, which, if pure, is harmless, and only serves to increase the quantity. Then we put in salt, which tends to keep it fresh, and burnt sugar, which is the coloring matter used to give that rich look to the milk which, to the eyes of the ignorant, is a sure indication of cream. That is all." The interviewer inquired: "What proportion of water is used?" "That," replied the milkman, "depends upon the class of trade and the dairy from which he obtains his supply. If a milkman be wise he will select a source of supply upon which he can safely rely, and then he will, if careful, test his milk to see that the farmer does not cheat him by preparing it for the first time. The milk from some cows will stand more water than that from others. It depends a good deal, too, upon how the cows are fed. Then again, as to the consumers. If a milkman sells his milk to a poor class of people who can not afford to pay a fair price for it, so as to give him a living margin of profit, of course he uses water more liberally than he would if he dealt with people who were willing to pay, and did pay. If a milkman pays four cents a quart for his milk, you can readily see that he can not sell it to a small grocer who retails it at five cents a quart. In this case he gets his profit from the water used in preparation. One in five is not bad milk, and one in eight is, of course, better."

"What do you mean by 'one to five' and 'one to eight?'" Said the milkman in reply:

"'One in five' means one can of water to five cans of milk, and 'one in eight,' of course, one can of water to eight cans of milk. By the way, I forgot to tell you there is another ingredient sometimes used. In a dry season, when milk is scarce and prices high, I have known milkmen in order not to lose customers by failing to supply them, to use condensed milk with water and the other ingredients already mentioned. This makes a very good milk, and one can of condensed milk will make a great many large cans of milk." The milkman being interrogated, "Why not sell pure milk to people who are willing to pay for it?" answered. "If intelligent people, we do so; but there's the rub. People don't like pure milk as it comes from the cow. It is nauseating to most people. How often has the city child been heard to exclaim when in the country when served with pure milk, 'I don't want cow's milk, give me milkman's milk!' It may seem strange, but it is nevertheless true. I once had a customer who said, 'I want pure cow's milk and I will pay you your price for it.' I said 'all right,' and I served him with the pure article, but he bitterly complained; said he knew milk when he tasted it; cursed all milkmen as frauds, and was going to withdraw his custom, when I told him I would try another farmer. I then gave him 'one in eight,' and he was perfectly satisfied. There is another fallacy. Mothers always demand pure milk for infants. Now, I venture to assert that the majority of cow's milk, fresh from the cow, would not stay upon an infant's stomach. Again, without salt, it is impossible to keep milk sweet but a very short time. It sours soon, and here again the poor milkman comes in for abuse. If you pay eight or nine cents a quart for your milk, you will get a good nutritious article, but not pure milk. So what can you expect when you only pay five cents a quart?"

Such is the revelation made by an ex-milk peddler of this city, whose boast is, "I know what I am talking about," and concludes by saying, "I am thankful that I am no longer obliged to follow the occupation of milkman, and hope that misfortune will never drive me into it again."

"Not a drop of adulterated milk sold in Boston, but plenty of 'prepared' milk, as nine-tenths of all the milk sold here is 'prepared' more or less," and what this means is clearly stated by one who claims "to know what he is talking about.—Boston Post.

—A correspondent of the Pall-Mall Gazette sends to that paper the following account of what happened the other day in Queensland: "A Chinaman had to give his evidence, and was asked how he would be sworn. His reply was 'Me no care: clack 'im saucer, kill 'im cock, blow out 'im matchee, smell 'im book, alle same.' He was allowed to 'smell 'm book.'"

—Printer's Ink:

Little drops of printer's ink,
A little type "displayed,"
Make our merchant houses
And all their big parade.
Little bits of stinginess—
Discarding printer's ink—
Bust the man of business
And sees his credit sink.

Buffalo (N. Y.) Times.

—Captain Roach, of Austin, Tex., had a game-cock training for a cocking main, but an envious hawk swooped down on the poultry-yard and made a breakfast off the rooster.

Fooling the Cowboys.

Ben Carter had "heaps of fun," as he expresses it, at Rock Creek, west of Laramie, the other day. Ben is a typical Western cowboy—a whole-souled, dare-devil puncher of steers, a fellow who will divide his last dollar with a friend, or ride anything that has not more than four legs and wears a saddle. Ben has one weak point, however, a fondness for the sulphuric and annihilator which Wyoming barkeepers retail as whisky, and when he is "full" he is windy and ready for any harmless mischief.

On the day referred to Ben was at Rock Creek loading stock. A dozen or more of his brother cowboys were in town, and after the arduous duties incident to crowding twenty more steers into a car than the builders intended were over, the boys began to "boom up," and by the time it got dark enough to light the lamps the saloon-keeper found that he hadn't any that were fit to do duty as illuminators—the boys had shot them to pieces. Every time a lamp would fall the marksman who assisted at the post-mortem of said lamp would cheerfully waltz to the bar and pay for it, and then try again. The lamp market was active for a few minutes, but the supply was limited. Ben hadn't taken a hand in the shooting match as yet, but had made it a point to drink with the successful marksmen, so that strictly speaking he wasn't sober. Finally he awoke to action.

Seizing a revolver from a companion and drawing his own, he sprang to the center of the room and delivered himself of a speech. He told the boys that they ought to be ashamed of themselves. He was a perfect lady himself, and it shocked him to witness such disgraceful proceedings. He had been appointed as a deputy sheriff on his last visit to Laramie, and had decided to arrest every mother's son of them. The boys protested against such a strange procedure, but Ben flourished his guns, told them he had the whole United States at his back, and imperiously ordered them into an empty warehouse near, the door of which stood open. The novelty of the thing somewhat muddled the boys, and without a word they filed into the temporary prison, and Ben closed the door. He then rustled around and found several log chains, with which he securely fastened them, and, with the dignity of a high private in a State militia corps, mounted guard on the outside. The boys ventilated their prison cell as well as they could with what ammunition they had, and then dropped off to sleep. In the morning Ben released them, after exacting a solemn promise to behave themselves like gentlemen and ladies thereafter.

The boys walked over to the hotel as meek as lambs. When eating their breakfast they noticed that an unusual amount of hilarity seemed to prevail in the dining-room. The head and only waiter laughed boisterously while serving the soup, the cook poked his head through the doorway leading to the kitchen and drew it back again quickly, and a series of Comanche war-whoops that were positively painful to their listening ears gradually subsided into a low, mellow laugh, which made the plates on the tables fairly jingle. Sounds of mirth also floated in from the office, until finally one of the boys went out to inquire the cause. He came back presently, and the most ignorant judge of the emotions as shown by the human features could have told that he was madderanawethen. He consulted a moment with his companions, and then called the waiter and ordered a box of "forty-fours." These were served cold, and the command loaded their weapons and marched down to the saloon, where they found Ben Carter. The spokesman, Broncho Bill, then and there told Ben that he was no gentleman. He had taken advantage of his friends and made them the laughing-stock of the community. He had pretended that he was an authorized Deputy Sheriff, when the fact was that he had not a shadow of claim to the title of Deputy Sheriff. Believing that he represented the majesty of the law, they had given him the respect he deserved. He had insulted them by putting them in the "jug" over night, and they could only wipe out that insult by creating a vacancy in the atmosphere thereabouts of about the size of his body. He must go, and go quick.

Ben is brave enough, but after he had looked over the crowd and saw that each man had his hand on his persuader, he concluded that perhaps Broncho Bill was right. He got, and when he had put several hundred yards of sagebrush and sand between himself and the station, the boys, having no further use of "forty-fours," emptied their revolvers. From the agile manner in which Ben was dancing around as he passed swiftly over the brow of the hill toward Laramie, and the amount of dust rising in little clouds all around him, it is believed the boys carelessly pointed their weapons his way while taking the loads out.—Laramie Boomerang.

—Near William Purdy's ranch on Scott's Creek, near Santa Cruz, Cal., the forest fires had been raging for three or four days. Mrs. Purdy was at home with her five children when the fire reached her place. She hurried to the creek with her children, and ran into the water under the bridge. Here they stood for six hours, and with buckets threw water upon the bridge, which was in danger of taking fire. They were obliged frequently to get entirely under water to escape the terrible heat. After the fire had been subdued they came out, but were utterly destitute and homeless.—Chicago Times.

—North Dakota's coat of arms is a shield draped with the American flag depending from the beak of an eagle. In the background are a range of hills and the chimney of a smelting furnace; in the center is a river on which is a steamboat, and a train of cars are rounding a bluff. Beyond is a field of wheat and corn, with a white man with his plow on one hand and an Indian with his tents about him. Both look upward at a rift in the clouds, where is the legend: "Fear God, and take your own part."—Chicago Herald.

—At Brooklyn the other night George Mills killed his wife because she protested against his drunkenness, and the police arrested him at his residence, a room ten by twelve, in which Mr. and Mrs. Mills and four children, the oldest eighteen years of age, slept, with a worsted motto: "God bless our home," in a frame over the bed.—N. Y. Tribune.

—Sponge Cake: Four eggs; sugar, two cupfuls; water, eight tablespoonfuls; baking powder, four teaspoonfuls; flour, one and one-half cupfuls; salt and flavoring.—Ohio Girl.

—A little girl at Versailles, Ky., swallowed some hot soup, which burned her so severely as to cause her death the next day.

HOME AND FARM.

—If you do not wish to use the skins and seeds of quinces to make jelly, stew them in a little water, strain the juice, and use it to wet the sugar and help make the sirup for your preserved quinces.—N. Y. Post.

—A very ornamental foot stool is made of two colors in plush. The stool should be round and soft, and have the plush pieces cut after the fashion of quarters of orange peel. Where they join fancy stitches in colored silk should cover the seams.—Exchange.

—The New York Times reminds farmers that smut is rapidly increasing, few crops being free from it. A solution of four ounces of blue vitriol—sulphate of copper—dissolved in a gallon of water for each five bushels of seed, which is steeped in it until it is absorbed, has been found the most effective to destroy the minute spores which produce the fungus.

—Sulphuric acid, it is claimed, is a simple but certain test for adulterated butter. Fresh, pure, yellow butter, by the slightest contact with sulphuric acid, turns almost a pure white, while oleomargarine made from tallow changes to a deep crimson red. When lard or other oils are used, the colors are diversified—showing all the colors of the rainbow.

—A new fancy in the crazy quilt line is to have in the exact center of the quilt a block of plain satin with the initials, in monogram or otherwise, of the owner of the quilt. Another new departure is to have each block the embodiment of an idea, or at least to have each block develop method in madness. For example, let one have Kensington work in outline patterns only, another needlework of different kind, or applique, or painting. The foundation of these blocks must necessarily be of plain colors in silk, satin or velvet.—N. Y. Post.

—The free use of milk with some persons needs discretion. A large glass of milk swallowed suddenly will form in the stomach a lump of dense, cheesy curd. Under the action of the stomach this will turn over and over like a heavy weight, and as the gastric juice can only attack its surface it digests very slowly. The same milk taken with a biscuit, a slice of toast, a roll or a saucerful of porridge forms a porous, friable clot, which breaks up every time that the stomach turns it over, and through which the gastric juice can easily pass. Therefore, milk taken with breadstuffs is much more digestible than by itself. If the milk be still found too strong a little boiling water poured into it and a piece of sugar added makes it still more easily digested.—Chicago Journal.

Marriage.

What an epoch in life is one's wedding day! It is a day of victory and of proud success. The day of days has come at last. The vows are spoken. The young man and maiden are now husband and wife. They are one, and their lives flow on together, linked inseparably for better or for worse.

Can it be that the marriage day, so long a beautiful vision of the future, is a present reality? For years they have both looked forward to this day. Each has often painted it, and dreamed of him or her who was to make it a day of perfect bliss. The maiden, "fancy free," has said to her fluttering heart: "Will he come soon—that knight who will claim my hand because all my love is his?" And then her maiden fancy has wrought out an ideal of his rare qualities of person, mind and heart. Her ideal lover is a kingly man, of mingled strength and gentleness. How unworthy she feels to mate with him! Yet less will not suffice her, and she will, she whispers to her heart, make it up to him by her devotion and depth of love.

And he, too, has been picturing the future. Before his heart has risen an image of rare loveliness. A maiden of wondrous grace, beauty and sweetness charms him. Somehow, he knows not how; sometime, he knows not when, she listens to his suit and returns his love, and, in imagination, he is of all men most fortunate. He vows to attempt all noble things for her dear sake. Never was such a maiden, or lover so conscious of his unworthiness to win her. In his humility he would gladly kiss the very earth on which she steps.

But the dream is one thing. The reality is another. Some day they meet; perhaps meet and pass on their way, thinking little that the knight has come to his fair lady, and soon will claim her as his own. After a time Cupid draws his bow, and the young man is sore wounded. Doubtless even then, when before his enraptured gaze stands the maiden worthy to fill his dream, she does not see a future husband. But true love can wait. And there comes a time—she never knows why, though Cupid knows—when suddenly her heart answers responsive to his great love.

Then each becomes transfigured in the other's eyes. And while others see only a strong young man and a lovely maiden, they, with the lens of love, see all their dreams had painted. The same, yet not the same; as good, as beautiful, and yet all different. They love, are loved, and all the world is bright. And now dream and reality link hands. They see the marriage altar, hear the preacher's tones praying God's blessing on their united lives, and see a home, Eden renewed, and little ones coming to greet them.

Time passes; how swiftly when together; with what laggard steps when apart! And now the day is come. Friends surround them. Beauty and strength grace the scene. In bridal loveliness the maiden stands before the altar, and in low, sweet tones, with hand in his, pronounces with him the solemn words which make them man and wife. Congratulations and wedding presents shower upon them. Was ever day so sweet?

But all things human end. Friends depart; groomsmen and fair bridesmaids turn homeward to dream of future joys. The family circle linger to say good-bye. Amid a shower of kisses loving words and best wishes, the young couple launch out upon the sea of married life. All joy attend them. And when the dreams of former days are all transmuted into coming realities, may their wedded happiness exceed their fondest expectations. May a mother's fondest hopes be realized, and all her solicitude relieved. May unselfish thoughts of each other's welfare fill their hearts, and no divided interests arise to trouble them. May sweet parental joys be theirs, and God's good gifts and rich blessings crown all their future lives. And may the peace of God rest visibly upon them.

Dear friend, if for you that marriage-day is but a memory of the past, keep it a fresh, happy memory. Think again of those vows, and live those hours over and over again, not only in memory but in worthy deeds. And the Lord grant that for all of us marriage may be, or has been, or is still to be, the portal to a happier, better life.—Golden Rule.

A Good Enough Thing.

"Father," he said as the two stood on Jefferson avenue looking around, "that is the Board of Trade building over there."

"Yes, yes—I see; good big place to trade in."

"That's where they speculate."

"They do, eh?"

"Yes; if you were to give me a $1,000 in cash I'd go over there and buy wheat at 95, wait a few days and sell for a dollar, and divide the profit with you."

"I declar'!" said the old man as he reached into his pocket.

"It's an easy way to make money, father."

"Yes, James, it looks that way, but after all I don't see as it beats plattin' six acres of ground wuth $35 an acre into a buryin' ground of 400 lots at $5 a lot. Guess we'd better stick to our graveyard."—Detroit Free Press.

A Tall Rabbit.

Excepting the Irishman's hare, which was no hare at all but a donkey, the polar hair is the largest of the long-eared tribe. It equals the fox in size, and will sometimes reach the height of a man's knee.

The golden eagle and the snow owl are both particularly fond of the pretty creature, but it is a fondness which the hare has no desire to encourage, and, therefore, when it spies one of these great birds sailing through the air, with its sharp eyes searching about for something to devour, it sinks upon the snow as motionless as if dead, and, thanks to the whiteness of its fur, it can hardly be distinguished from the material it rests upon.—St. Nicholas.

—In the Carriage-makers' Convention in New Haven, Conn., after the Committee on Apprenticeship had reported in favor of restoring the old system of indenturing apprentices until they reach their majority, Mr. John W. Britton, of New York, said: "One of the serious wants of this country and of our trade is good boys. Our boys are deteriorating, as are our men. The greatest difficulty that we experience in New York is that of getting boys who have brains and are willing to learn a trade thoroughly. The example of men who have made millions in a few years is held up before our boys in school, and the boys become inflamed with the notion that they must make their millions and be able to found cross-roads colleges before they die. So they eschew trades and become poor professionals."—New Haven Register.

—The business of smuggling Chinamen from British Columbia into the United States has developed into a profitable one. The rates are from three to ten dollars a man, and the easy passage of a canoe among the uninhabited islands in Puget Sound renders the work comparatively safe. Once landed, no one can tell the contraband Chinaman from one who is entitled to residence within our borders.—Chicago Times.

—The New York Tribune cites the case of a railroad company paying a widow $12,500 for the death of her husband, then bringing in the statement that the owner of Jay-Eye-See holds him at $100,000, thus moralizes: "Horse, $100,000; man, $12,500! It looks as if the man must go." A horse has to go pretty fast before he is worth $100,000.—Indianapolis Journal.

One of the Elect.

CLEVELAND, O.—The Plain Dealer reports that Hon. Martin A. Foran, Congressman-elect from the Cleveland, O., district, has used St. Jacobs Oil in his family and has always found it safe and reliable, and it afforded him great relief to a lame knee.

THE difference between a besotted man and a pig is a slight one at best. One's a hunting grog and the other's a grunting hog.—Pittsburgh Telegraph.

BEING entirely vegetable, no particular care is required while using Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets." They operate without disturbance to the constitution, diet, or occupation. For sick headache, constipation, impure blood, dizziness, sour eructations from the stomach, bad taste in mouth, bilious attacks, pain in region of kidney, internal fever, bloated feeling about stomach, rush of blood to head, take Dr. Pierce's "pellets." By druggists.

A GOOD many of the young bloods wear diamond studs that stick. Paste always does.—Chicago Inter Ocean.

FOR YEARS I have been a sufferer with Catarrh, and under a physician's treatment for over a year. Ely's Cream Balm gave me immediate relief. I believe I am entirely cured. G. S. DAVIS, First National Bank, Elizabeth, N. J.

A DENTIST'S appearance is apt to deceive one. The more he looks down in the mouth the better he feels.—Buffalo Express.

MY DAUGHTER and myself, great sufferers from Catarrh, have been cured by Ely's Cream Balm. My sense of smell restored and health greatly improved. C. M. STANLEY, Merchant, Ithaca, N. Y.

ONE HUNDRED per cent. is a profit that always predicts a fortune.—N. Y. Journal.

FOR aged men, women, weak and sickly children, without a rival. Will not cause headache. Brown's Iron Bitters.

EVERY dog that has a bark should be launched—"into eternity."

THE MARKETS.

CINCINNATI, November 2, 1883.
LIVE STOCK—Cattle—common	$1 75 @ 2 27
Choice butchers	4 00 @ 4 65
HOGS—Common	3 75 @ 4 35
Good packers	4 40 @ 4 60
SHEEP	3 50 @ 4 25
FLOUR—Family	5 00 @ 5 60
GRAIN—Wheat—Longberry red	1 08 @ 1 10
No. 2 red	1 04 @ 1 05
Corn—No. 2 mixed	49½@
Oats—No. 2 mixed	30 @
Rye—No. 2	58 @
HAY—Timothy No. 1	10 50 @11 00
HEMP—Double dressed	8½@
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	11 00 @11 25
Lard—Current make	7¼@
BUTTER—Fancy Dairy	24 @ 25
Prime Creamery	24 @ 27
FRUIT AND VEGETABLES—
Potatoes per bar. from store	1 25 @ 1 30
Apples, prime, per barrel	2 50 @ 2 75
NEW YORK.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 00 @ 3 50
Good to choice	4 40 @ 7 00
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 spring	1 04 @
No. 2 red	1 07¼@ 1 08¼
Corn—No. 2 mixed—new	56½@ 57¾
Oats—mixed	32½@ 35
PORK—Mess	11 50 @11 62½
CHICAGO.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 50 @ 4 25
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	99 @ 1 01
Corn—No. 2	47½@ 47¼
Oats—No. 2	27¼@
Rye	55 @
PORK—Mess	10 25 @ 10 30
LARD—Steam	7-20 @ 7-25
BALTIMORE.
FLOUR—Family	$5 00 @ 6 00
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 04⅜@ 1 05
Corn—mixed	55½@ 56
Oats—mixed	35 @ 36
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	12 75 @
Lard—Refined	9¾@
LOUISVILLE.
FLOUR—A No 1	$4 50 @ 4 75
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red, new	1 01 @ 1 02
Corn—mixed	51¼@
Oats—mixed	30½@
PORK—MESS	11 50 @11 75
INDIANAPOLIS.
WHEAT—No. 2 red, new	1 00½@
CORN—mixed	48 @ 48¼
OATS—mixed	28¼@ 29
LIVE STOCK—Cattle—
Butchers' stock	2 75 @ 3 00
Shipping cattle	5 25 @

FORTY BILLION GERMS.

A Wonderful Theory That Concerns the Welfare, Happiness and Life of Everyone.

In his quiet and cozy library at the close of a busy day sat a gentleman and his wife, he absorbed in a new book and she in the newspaper. Quickly glancing toward her husband, she asked, at a certain point in the article:

"John, what is the germ theory?"

"The germ theory—well—yes; just look in the encyclopedia under 'Germ,' that will explain it so much better than I can."

Accordingly his wife opened the book at the word named and read: Germ Theory of Disease—A theory advanced by the ablest and best investigators and scientists of the times. It supposes the surface of the earth, the air and water to be inhabited to a greater or less extent with a peculiar growth of the lowest form of fungi—commonly termed bacteria, whose power of reproduction, under favorable conditions, is so great that a single germ will increase to fifteen million in twenty-four hours' time, and unchecked in its increase would grow to a mass of eight hundred tons, in three days' time, if space and food be furnished. There is no condition under which it can be said to be absent, unless it be from fire or air filtered through cotton-batting in numerous layers. A single drop of water containing a germ, put into water boiled, filtered and thus freed from bacteria, will grow murky in a day or two from the development of new germs. When it is considered that it requires about forty billion to weigh one grain, some remote idea can be had of the capacity of germ reproduction. Prof. John Tyndall, in a late work, elaborately treats of the influence of germs in the propagation of disease, and charges upon this cause the inception and development of very many of the ailments most injurious to man. Prof. Pasteur, an eminent French savant, has carried his original and beautiful experiments so far, and from them deduced such practical results, as very greatly to diminish the number of cases of anthrax among sheep and chicken cholera among fowls—proving his theory that these are essentially and actually germ diseases. These germs are carried into the system through the lungs, the stomach and possibly the skin, but through the lungs chiefly. Once in the system, they begin to develop, poisoning the blood, invading the nerve centers, disturbing the functional activity of the great organs of the body, and inducing a general impairment of the vital processes. They are the cause of fevers, rheumatism, Bright's disease of the kidneys, pneumonia, blood poisoning, liver disease, diphtheria and many other ailments. Lately Prof. Koch, a famous German physician, has proved that consumption of the lungs is due to this cause—the presence of a peculiar germ.

When the circulation is bounding, the nerves elastic and the system all aglow with life and energy, the germs seem to develop poorly, if at all. But with weakened nerves, poor digestion or malassimilation of food or a lowering of vitality from any cause, a change ensues, and in this impoverished and weakened fluid the germ finds a genial home and develops until symptoms of disease are distinctly manifest. This is seen in the everyday experience of all. The healthy man resists the influences around him and does not take cold, while those whose systems have become weak from any cause readily contract colds. This is on the same principle as the germ theory. The germs attack any weakened spot in the body, and fixing themselves upon it, begin their propagation. It is plain therefore that it is only by fortifying the weak portions of the body that the germs of disease can be resisted and driven from the system. But this has proved almost an impossibility heretofore, and it has been the study of physicians for years how best to accomplish it. Within the past few years, however, a preparation has been attracting great attention, not only throughout the entire land, but among the medical profession and scientists generally, which is based upon this theory, and it may safely be said, no remedy has ever been found which can so successfully place the system in a condition to resist the germs of disease as Warner's Safe Cure. This article is unquestionably the best and most efficient that has ever been discovered for this purpose, and—

"John, say, John! does the encyclopedia advertise Warner's Safe Cure?"

"I should not wonder, dear, it's a grand remedy, and that pamphlet we received the other day stated that Dr. Gunn, of the United States Medical College indorsed it. At all events the wonderful cures it is accomplishing entitle it to be honorably noted among the great discoveries of the present century."

However the facts above stated may be, the truth remains that the germ theory of disease is the correct one, and that the great remedy mentioned is the only one which has ever been found that can put the system in a condition to kill these germs before they obtain a hold upon the body, and undermine the life.

BOSTON girls never giggle. They merely express their delight by a dreamy, far-away, north-pole smile.—Detroit Post.

SALTMARSH, ALA.—Dr. Jas. B. Mills says: "Several of my patients have used Brown's Iron Bitters for chronic indigestion with benefit."

COULD the pitcher of a base-ball team be spoken of as "power behind the thrown?"—Chicago Tribune.

A Fortune

may be made by hard work, but can neither be made nor enjoyed without health. To those leading sedentary lives Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" is a real friend. It stimulates the liver, purifies the blood, and is the best remedy for consumption, which is scrofulous disease of the lungs. By all druggists.

THE man who made "a virtue" of "necessity" is believed to have been a particularly intelligent compositor.—N. Y. Post.

Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription"

always becomes the favorite remedy of those who try it. It is a specific for all female "weaknesses" and derangements, bringing strength to the limbs and back, and color to the face. Of all druggists.

WHEN Ismail Pasha looks at his bills for fall bonnets, that's the time, of course, he finds his harem scare 'im.—N. Y. Graphic.

DARDANELLE, ARK.—Dr. M. M. Croom says: "Brown's Iron Bitters is the best medicine in the world and is effecting miraculous cures."

A STITCH in Time must make the old chap feel sew-sew.—Burlington Hawkeye.

SWIFT'S SPECIFIC (S. S. S.) has cured me entirely of bad Blood Poison. I went one hundred miles to get it, and it made me as sound as a new dollar.
J. W. WEYLES, Meadville, Pa.

A CHILD that wakes with croup should have a dose of Piso's Cure.

SUFFERERS FROM COUGHS, SORE THROAT, etc., should try "Brown's Bronchial Troches," a sure remedy. 25 cents a box.

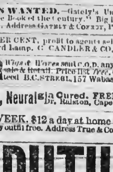
IF afflicted with Sore Eyes, use Dr. Isaac Thompson's Eye Water. Druggists sell it. 25c.

St. Jacobs Oil
THE GREAT GERMAN REMEDY
For Pain!
Relieves and cures
RHEUMATISM,
Neuralgia,
SCIATICA, LUMBAGO,
BACKACHE,
Headache, Toothache,
SORE THROAT,
QUINSY, SWELLINGS,
SPRAINS,
Soreness, Cuts, Bruises,
FROSTBITES,
BURNS, SCALDS,
And all other bodily aches and pains
FIFTY CENTS A BOTTLE.
Sold by all Druggists and Dealers. Directions in 11 languages.
The Charles A. Vogeler Co.
(Successors to A. VOGELER & CO.)
Baltimore, Md., U.S.A.

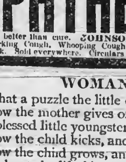
I HAVE been entirely cured of a terrible case of Blood Poisoning by the use of Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) after trying everything known to the medical people without relief. JNO. S. TAGGART, Salamanca, N. Y.

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer
Is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from dandruff, restore gray hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which Sulphur, Sugar of Lead and Nitrate of Silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. JOHN D. PARK & SONS, Wholesale Agents, Cincinnati, Ohio, and C. N. CRITTENTON, New York.

SCHOOL TEACHERS.
MR. H. L. SOPER, Principal of the High School at Poquonock, Conn., says in relation to a matter which has given him much anxiety and pain: "My wife and I have both used Hunt's Remedy, and find it really a superior article. A year or so ago my kidneys became weak and sluggish, owing to a severe strain, and finding relief in Hunt's Remedy I continued its use until I had used four bottles, when I became well. Since my cure I have suggested its use to a great number of people, who I know have been benefited by using it." And to substantiate this statement, Mr. H. S. Clark, Assistant Superintendent of the High School, says: "I can certify to the value of Hunt's Remedy, having received great benefit from its use. My troubles commenced twelve years ago, when my kidneys became afflicted with inflammation of the passages, but the timely use of so valuable a medicine arrested the disease. I can now cheerfully recommend it to all suffering as I was."
MAY 31, 1883.
This most remarkable statement was made by Mr. Frank B. Lee, clerk in the office of N. Y. C. & H. R. R. R., Little Falls, N. Y., on the 8th of June, 1883.
Mr. Lee says: "My father has been troubled for over twenty years with severe kidney and bladder disease, suffering the most acute pain when urinating. He became so bad that he was obliged to give up all business. His condition was such that his urine would drop constantly, and he was obliged to use a rubber bag, the weakness was so great. He used many kinds of medicine without deriving any benefit, until he was urged by one of our druggists in Little Falls (Mr. Skinner) to use Hunt's Remedy, as he had known of its being used in many cases with great success. I purchased one bottle, and he commenced using it, and he was so improved that he got along without the rubber bag. He used in all twelve bottles, and it has entirely cured him. Father is sixty-two years old, and we consider it a most wonderful cure, and cheerfully recommend Hunt's Remedy to all afflicted with kidney, liver or urinary troubles."
All the evidence published in regard to Hunt's Remedy can be relied upon; it is true in every particular.

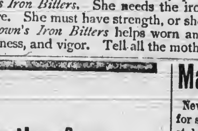


HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS
Though shaken in every joint and fiber with fever and ague, or bilious remittent, the system may yet be freed from the malignant virus with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Protect the system against it with this beneficent anti-spasmodic, which is furthermore a supreme remedy for liver complaint, constipation, dyspepsia, debility, rheumatism, kidney troubles and other ailments. For sale by all Druggists and Dealers generally.



CATARRH ELY'S CREAM BALM HAY-FEVER
ELY'S CREAM BALM when applied by the finger into the nostrils, will be absorbed, effectually cleansing the head of catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions. It allays inflammation, protects the membrane of the nasal passages from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores taste and smell. A few applications relieve. A thorough treatment will positively cure. Agreeable to use. Send for circular. Price 50 cents by mail or at druggists. Ely Brothers, Druggists, Owego, N. Y.

Sawing Made Easy
Monarch Lightning Sawing Machine!
Sent on 30 Days Test Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.



A boy 16 years old can saw logs FAST and EASY. MILES MURRAY, Portage, Mich., writes: "Am much pleased with the MONARCH LIGHTNING SAWING MACHINE. I sawed off a 30-inch log in 2 minutes." For sawing logs into suitable lengths for family stove-wood, and all sorts of log-cutting, it is peerless and unrivaled. Illustrated Catalogue, Free. AGENTS WANTED. Mention this paper. Address MONARCH MANUFACTURING CO., 163 E. Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

Lady Agents can secure permanent employment and good salary selling Queen City Skirt and Stocking Supporters, etc. Sample outfit Free. Address Queen City Suspender Co., Cincinnati, O.

AGENTS WANTED.—Gately's Universal Educator, "The Book of the Century." Big inducements for territory. Address GATELY & CONNER, Pubs, Cincinnati.

100 PER CENT. profit to agents selling our Standard Lamp. C. CANDLER & CO., Cincinnati, O.

HAIR Wigs & Waves sent C.O.D. anywhere. Wholesale & Retail. Price list free. Goods guaranteed. B.C. STREHL, 157 Wabash-av., Chicago.

ASTHMA, Neuralgia Cured. FREE to poor. Add. Dr. Ralston, Cape Girardeau, Mo.

$72 A WEEK. $12 a day at home easily made. Costly outfit free. Address True & Co., Augusta, Me.

"DRINK FAIR, BETSEY, WOTEVER YOU DO."—Martin Chuzzlewit.
TEA CLUB ORDERS.
We have made a specialty for five years of giving away as Premiums, to those who get up clubs for our goods, Dinner and Tea Sets, Gold Band Sets, Silverware, etc. Teas of all kinds, from 30 to 75 cents per pound. We do a very large Tea and Coffee business, besides sending out from 60 to 90 CLUB ORDERS each day. SILVER-PLATED CASTERS as Premiums with $5, $7 and $10 orders. WHITE TEA SETS with $10 orders. DECORATED TEA SETS with $15. GOLD BAND or MOSS ROSE SETS of 44 pcs., or DINNER SETS, of 106 pcs., with $20 orders, and a Host of other Premiums. Send us Postal and mention this Paper, and we will send you full Price and Premium List. Freight charges average 25 cents per 100 lbs. to points West. GREAT LONDON TEA CO., 803 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

TRADE S.S.S. MARK
I was suffering from Blood Poison and Mercurial Rheumatism, and had spent $100 for treatment with no benefit, and it seemed that I was doomed to die. Caught at Swift's Specific as a drowning man would at a straw, and it has saved me from a horrible death, and cured me sound and well. It is the greatest medicine in the world. C. H. SMILEY, Quincy, Ill.
HEREDITARY.—Swift's Specific cured me sound and well of a Scrofulous taint inherited from my ancestors. J. A. MAY, Macon, Ga.
I am sure that Swift's Specific saved my life. I was terribly poisoned with Malaria, and was given up to die. Swift's Specific relieved me promptly and entirely. I think it is the greatest remedy of the age. C. G. SPENCER, Sup't Gas Works, Rome, Ga.
$1,000 REWARD will be paid to any chemist who will find, on analysis of 100 bottles of S. S. S., one particle of mercury, iodide potassium, or any poisonous substance.
SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Drawer 3, Atlanta, Ga.
Our treatise on Blood and Skin Diseases mailed free to applicants.

VOL. XX 1884
DEMOREST'S MONTHLY MAGAZINE.
ILLUSTRATED WITH
Original Steel Engravings, Photogravures & Oil Pictures.
Send twenty cents for one copy, and you will certainly subscribe Two Dollars for a year and get ten times its value.
W. Jennings Demorest, Publisher, 17 East 14th St., New York.
$2 THE BEST $2
SOLD BY ALL NEWSDEALERS AND POSTMASTERS.

$15 VALUE FOR $1.50
BALCH'S HAND-BOOK.
Combining a Dictionary and Encyclopedia of Social and Business Forms, Etiquette, House-keeping, Farming, Family Medicine, and other subjects in daily use. Contains the cream of 50 standard works. 700 pages for $1.50. Agents Wanted to send twenty-five cents and secure Outfit and Agency. Sells everywhere to everybody.
FORSHEE & MACKIN, Cincinnati, O.

PORTABLE AND STATIONARY
STEAM ENGINES
and STEAM BOILERS, smaller sizes adapted to
Farm and Plantation Use.
$200 FOR OUR NO. 1 PLANTATION SAW MILL. WE MAKE SIX SIZES, CAPACITY FROM 3 TO 50,000 FT. PER DAY, WITH ONE SAW.
Lane Bodley Co., JOHN AND WATER STS., (Illustrated catalogue free.) Cincinnati, Ohio.

DR. HORNE'S ELECTRIC BELT
Cures Nervousness, Rheumatism, Paralysis, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Kidney, Spine and Liver diseases, Gout, Asthma, Heart Disease, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Erysipelas, Catarrh, Piles, Epilepsy, Impotency, Prolapsus Uteri etc. Only Scientific Belt that sends the Electricity and Magnetism through the body, and can be recharged in an instant by the patient. Send for Circular. Dr. W. J. HORNE, Inventor, 191 Wabash Av. Chicago, Ill.

PILES "Anakesis" gives instant relief, and is an infallible cure for Piles. Price $1 from druggists, or sent prepaid by mail. Sample free. Ad. "ANAKESIS," Makers, Box 2416, New York.

"THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST."
SAW MILLS, ENGINES THRESHERS, HORSE POWERS.
(For all sections and purposes.) Write for Free Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION 25 100
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.

CANCER AND TUMORS Treated scientifically and cured without the knife. Book on treatment sent free. Drs. Gratigny & Norris 204 W. 4th St., Cincinnati, O.

CANCERS, Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Rheumatism, and all Blood diseases, cured by Loose's Extract Red Clover. Send for circulars and testimonials. J. M. LOOSE & CO., Monroe, Mich.

CHICAGO SCALE CO.
151 South Jefferson Street, Chicago, Ill.
2-Ton Wagon Scale, $40; 4-Ton $60; "Little Detective," $3. Send for Price List.

PATENTS NO PATENT, NO PAY! R. S. & A. P. LACEY, Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C. Full Instructions and Hand-Book of Patents sent free.

$250 A MONTH. Agents Wanted. 90 best selling articles in the world. 1 sample FREE. Address JAY BRONSON, DETROIT, MICH.

COLEMAN BUSINESS COLLEGE, Newark, N. J. Terms $40. Positions for graduates; write for circular.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STINSON & CO., Portland, Me.

DIPHTHERIA
CROUP, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, Neuralgia, Rheumatism.
JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT (for Internal and External Use) will instantly relieve these terrible diseases, and will positively cure nine cases out of ten. Information that will save many lives sent free by mail. Don't delay a moment. Prevention is better than cure. JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT CURES Influenza, Hoarseness, Hacking Cough, Whooping Cough, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Cholera Morbus, Kidney Troubles, and Lame Back. Sold everywhere. Circulars sent FREE. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

WOMAN AND THE BABY.
What a puzzle the little child is in the domestic economy!
How the mother gives of her own life and strength to support the life of her blessed little youngster!
How the child kicks, and laughs, and crows!
How the child grows, and is heavier and heavier every day.
And yet she lifts him, and tosses him, and plays with him, and takes care of him by day and by night.
Is it any wonder the mother breaks down? Her back aches. Her stomach fails her. Her liver is bad. Her blood is thin, and she says she feels poorly. Yes, yes, poorly—very poorly. Give mother a bottle of Brown's Iron Bitters. She needs the iron in her blood, which that will put there. She must have strength, or she will be a confirmed old invalid.
Brown's Iron Bitters helps worn and weary women into new life, cheerfulness, and vigor. Tell all the mothers you know. 9

Lay the Axe to the Root
If you would destroy the cankering worm. For any external pain, sore, wound or lameness of man or beast, use only MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT. It penetrates all muscle and flesh to the very bone, expelling all inflammation, soreness and pain, and healing the diseased part as no other Liniment ever did or can. So saith the experience of two generations of sufferers, and so will you say when you have tried the "Mustang."

Mason & Hamlin Organs.
New Illustrated Catalogue, (40 pp. 4to) for season of 1883–4, including many new styles; best assortment of the best and most attractive organs we have ever offered, and at lowest prices, $22 to $600, for cash, easy payments or rented. Sent free.
MASON & HAMLIN ORGAN & PIANO CO.
Boston, 154 Tremont St.; New York, 46 East 14th St.; Chicago, 149 Wabash Ave.

ST. PATRICK'S SALVE
TRY IT USE IT
It relieves at once Burns, Piles, Chapped Hands or Lips, Corns, Bunions, Scalds, Bruises, Soreness of feet, hands, eyes, etc.; Itching from any cause. 25c. Ask your druggist, or send to 92 Fulton Street, N. Y.

AGENTS make money selling our Family Medicines; no capital required. STANDARD CURE CO., 197 Pearl St., NEW YORK.

$4,444 a Year at home. Terms and costly outfit free. Address H. A. ELLS & CO., Chicago.

$66 A WEEK in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. Addr's H. Hallett & Co., Portland, Me.

A. N. K.—E. 950

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOLUME IX. BURLINGTON, KY., WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 14, 1883. NUMBER 3.

LEFT!

A summer-evening—
 A low, square room,
One-half moon-lighted
 And half in gloom.

From out the stillness
 A girl's voice floats,
And charms my soul
 With its sad, sweet notes

The music draws me,
 With witchery sweet,
To lay my heart
 At the singer's feet.

I pause a moment,
 And, while I wait,
I hear the latch
 Of the garden-gate.

A shadow darkens
 The moonlit square;
A touch falls soft
 On the girl's bright hair

A sudden silence—
 A startled cry—
And they are happy!

 But where am I?

—Puck.

HIDDEN STRENGTH.

In one of the prairie towns of Northern Iowa, where the Illinois Central Railroad now passes from Dubuque to Sioux City, lived a woman whose experience repeats the truth that inherent forces, ready to be developed, are waiting for the emergencies that life may bring.

She was born and "brought up" in New England. With the advantages of a country school, and a few terms in a neighboring city, she became a fair scholar—not at all remarkable; she was married at twenty-one to a young farmer, poor, but intelligent and ambitious. In ten years after the death of their parents they emigrated to Iowa, and invested their money in land that bade fair to increase in value, but far away from neighbors. Here they lived, a happy family, for five years, when he died, leaving her, at the age of thirty-five, with four boys, the eldest nearly fourteen, the youngest nine. The blow came suddenly, and at first was overwhelming. Alone, in what seemed almost a wilderness, she had no thought of giving up the farm. It was home. There they must stay and do the best they could. The prospect of a railroad passing near them in time, was good; then some of the land might be sold. A little money had been laid by—nothing that she ought to touch for the present. Daniel, the hired man, who had come out with them, and who was a devoted friend and servant, she determined to keep—his judgment was excellent in farm matters. Hitherto the boys had gone regularly to school, a mile or two away; for a settlement in Iowa was never without its school-house. They were bright and quick to learn. Their father had been eager to help and encourage them. Newspapers, magazines, and now and then a good book, had found their way into this household Though very fond of reading herself, with the care of her house she had drifted along, as so many women do, until the discipline of study, or any special application, had been almost forgotten. It was the ambition of both parents that their sons should be well educated. Now Jerry and Thede, the two oldest, must be kept at home during the summer to work. Nate and Johnnie could help at night and in the morning. The boys had all been trained to habits of obedience. They were affectionate, and she knew that she could depend upon their love.

One evening, alone in her bedroom, she overheard some part of a conversation as the children were sitting together around the open fire-place:

"I don't mind the work," said Theodore, "if I could only be learning, too. Father used to say he wanted me to be a civil engineer."

"If father was here," said eleven-year-old Nate, "you could study evenings and recite to him. I wish mother could help; but, then, I guess mother's—"

"Help, how?" she heard Jerry ask sharply, before Nate could finish his sentence; and she knew the boy was jealous at once for her. "Isn't she the best mother in the world?"

"Yes, she is; and she likes stories, too; but I was just thinking, now that you can't go to school, if she only knew a lot about everything, why, she could tell you."

"Well," replied Jerry, with all the gravity of a man, "we must take hold and help all we can; it's going to be hard enough for mother. I just hate to give up school and pitch into work. Thede, you shall go next winter, anyway."

"Sha'n't we be lonesome next winter?" said little Johnnie, who had taken no part in the talk until now; "won't mother be afraid? I want my father back," and, without a word of warning, he burst into tears.

Dead silence for a few minutes. The outburst was so sudden, she knew they were all weeping. It was Jerry again who spoke first: "Don't let mother see us crying. Come, Johnnie, let's take Bone and all go down to the trap;" then she heard them pass out of the house.

Desolation fell upon that poor mother for the next hour. Like a knife Nate's remark had passed through her heart, "Father could have helped!" Couldn't she help her boys, for whom she was ready to die? Was she only "mother," who prepared their meals and took care of their clothes? She wanted a part in the very best of their lives. She thought it all over, sitting up far into the night. If she could only create an interest in some study that should bind them all together, and in which she could lead! Was she too old to begin? Never had the desire to become the very center of interest to them taken such hold upon her.

A few weeks after, she said, one morning, at the breakfast table: "Boys, I've been thinking that we might begin geology this summer, and study it, all of us together. Your father and I meant to do it some time. I've found a text-book; by and by, perhaps, Thede can draw us a chart. Jerry will take old, I know, and Nate and Johnnie can hunt for specimens. We'll have an hour or two every night."

The children's interest awoke in a flash, and that very evening the question discussed was one brought in by Nate: "What is the difference between limestone and granite?" A simple one, but it opened the way for her, and their first meeting proved a success. She had to study each day to be ready and wide awake for her class. They lived in a limestone region. Different forms of coral abounded, and other fossils were plenty. An old cupboard in the shed was turned into a cabinet. One day, Nate, who had wandered off two or three miles, brought home a piece of rock, where curious, long, finger-shaped creatures were imbedded. Great was the delight of all to find them described as ortho-ceratites, and an expedition to the spot was planned for some half-holiday. Question after question led back to the origin of the earth. She found the nebular hypothesis, and hardly slept one night trying to comprehend it clearly enough to put it before others in a simple fashion. Her book was always at hand. By and by they classified each specimen, and the best of their kind were taken to shelves in the sitting-room. Her own enthusiasm in study was aroused, and, far from a hardship, it now became a delight. Her spirit was contagious. The boys, always fond of "mother," wondered what new life possessed her, but they accepted the change all the same. She found that she could teach, and also could inspire her pupils. They heard of a gully, five or six miles away, where crystals had been found. Making a holiday, for which the boys worked like Trojans, they took their lunch in the farm wagon and rode to the spot; and if their search was not altogether successful, it left them the memory of a happy time.

In the meanwhile the farm prospered. She did all the work in the house, and all the sewing; going out, too, in the garden, where she raised a few flowers, and helping to gather vegetables. Daniel and the boys were bitterly opposed to her helping them. "Mother," said Jerry, "if you won't ever think you must go out, I'll do anything to make up. I don't want you to look like those women we see sometimes in the fields. Generally she yielded; her work was enough for one pair of hands. Through it all now ran the thought that her children were growing up; they would become educated men; she would not let them get ahead, not so as to pass her entirely.

Winter came. Now Daniel could see to the work; but these habits of study were not to be broken. "Boys, let us form a history club," was the proposition; "it sha'n't interfere with your lessons at school." They took the history of the United States, which the two younger children were studying. Beginning with the New England settlements, and being six in number, they called each other, for the time, after the six States, persuading old Daniel to take his native Rhode Island. "That woman beats all creation," he was heard to exclaim, "the way she works all day and goes on at night over her books." The mother used to say she hardly knew if she were any older than her boys when they were trying to trip each other with questions. The teacher of the district school came over one Saturday afternoon. "I never had such pupils," said he, "as your sons, in history; and, indeed, they want to look into everything." Afterward he heard with delight the story of their evening's work. The deep snows often shut them in, but the red light shone clearly and bright from that sitting-room window, and a merry group were gathered around the table. Every two weeks an evening was given to some journey. It was laid out in advance, and faithfully studied. Once, Theodore remembers, a shout of laughter was raised when nine o'clock came, by Jerry's exclamation: "Oh, mother, don't go home now; we are all having such a good time!" Five years they lived in this way, and almost entirely by themselves. They studied botany. She knew the name of every tree and shrub for miles around. The little boys made a collection of birds' eggs, and then began to watch closely the habits of the birds. It was a pure, simple life. It would have been too wild and lonely but for the charm of this devoted mother. Her hours of loneliness were hidden from them, but she learned in an unusual degree to throw every energy, into the day's work of study, and create, as it were, a fresh enthusiasm for the present hour. Her loving sacrifice was rewarded Each child made her his peculiar confidante. She became the inspiration of his life.

English history opened a wide field to this family. One afternoon she brought in Shakespeare to prove some historical question. It was a rainy day and the boys were all at home. Jerry began to read "Hamlet" aloud; it proved a treasure that brought them into a new world of delight. Sometimes they took different characters for representation, and the evening ended in a frolic, for good-natured mirth was never repressed.

First of all, a preparation had been made for the Sabbath. There was a church in this town, but at a distance of several miles, and during many days the roads were not passable. She had leaned upon Infinite strength, gathering wisdom through all these experiences. The secret of many a promise had been revealed to her understanding, and, above everything, she desired that the Scriptures should become precious to her children. She took up Bible characters, bringing to bear the same vivid interest, the same power of making them realities.

These lessons were varied by little sketches or reports of one Sunday to be read aloud the next. Of this Nate took hold with a special zest. None of this family could sing. She thought of a substitute. They learned the Psalms, much of Isaiah, and many hymns, repeating them in concert, learning to count upon this hour around the fire as others do upon their music. How many of those times came to her in after life—a vision of the bright faces of her boys, as they clustered affectionately around her.

Time rolled by. The railroad passed through. A village sprang up, and the land was ready to sell. She could keep enough for her own use, and the boys could prepare for college. Thede and Nate went away to school. The old home was kept bright and pleasant; friends, new settlers, came in, and now there was visiting and social life.

Jerry stayed on the farm; Theodore became an engineer; Nate, a minister; Johnnie went into business. Theodore used to say: "Mother, as I travel about, all the stones and the flowers make me think of you. I catch sight of some rock, and stop to laugh over those blessed times." Nate said: "Mother, when I am reading a psalm in the pulpit, there always comes to me a picture of those old evenings, with you in the rocking-chair, by the fire-light, and I hear all your voices again." Johnnie wrote: "Mother, I think that everything I have has come to me through you." When Jerry, who remained faithful always, had listened to his brothers, he put his arm about her, saying, tenderly: "There will never be anybody like mother to me."

She died at sixty-five, very suddenly. Only a few hours before, she had exclaimed, as her children all came home together: "There never were such good boys as mine. You have repaid me a thousand fold. God grant you all happy homes." They bore her coffin to the grave themselves. They would not let any other person touch it. In the evening they gathered around the old hearth-stone in the sitting-room and drew their chairs together. No one spoke until Nate said: "Boys, let us pray;" and then, all kneeling around her vacant chair, he prayed that the mantle of their mother might fall upon them. They could ask nothing beyond that.—Henrietta Ray, in Christian Union.

Made-Up Men.

A reporter was engaged in conversation with the proprietor of a Market-street corset-factory a few days ago, when a dapper-looking and stylishly-dressed young man, well known in society, entered, and, addressing the proprietor, wanted to know if "those things" he had ordered were done.

"You mean the corset and pads?" asked the proprietor.

"Yes," timidly replied the dandy, looking suspiciously at the reporter. A clerk was called and took charge of the young man, who secured the things and departed.

"Yes, that young man and many others of his class wear corsets and pads," said the proprietor, in answer to interrogatories. "You must not think that artificial make-ups are confined alone to women," he said. "You may not believe it, but I can name upward of a hundred society men in this city who wear corsets, and even a greater number than that who pad their legs. The latter custom has only been in vogue since the tight-fitting pantaloons came into style."

"No, the custom is not original. It comes from abroad where roues, dandies and court-followers who are getting old make up to a greater extent than the most slender and homely ballet-dancer in the country. After a man gets to be between forty and fifty years of age his abdominal region expands and he becomes corpulent. To avoid this he orders an appliance, which, although it differs somewhat from the female corset, is virtually a corset, and clinches the wearer's adipose tissue up so as to make his form almost as perfect as an Apollo. Then by the judicious use of a few pads and some paint and powder, aided by false teeth and hair-dye, the aged beau looks many years younger and frisks about a ball-room with a step as light as a youth of twenty. Army officers, as a general thing, are very proud of their shape, and if nature has been unkind to them they wear corsets and pad. There are a dozen or more of Uncle Sam's brass-mounted dandies who deal with me.

"Actors, too, are good customers. Of course, many of them only wear these appliances on the stage to carry out their idea of a character, but I could name several who wear them both on and off the stage. There is one in particular, a member of an Eastern combination, who thinks he is just too sweet for anything. Lots of the girls think so, too. He travels principally on his shape, but if the girls could but know how he is made up they would be astonished and disgusted.

"Of course, there is a prejudice against men wearing corsets," continued the maker, "but in some cases it is a silly one. Now, take it in the case of large, heavy men; there it is an absolute necessity. They become so fat that unless they wear something to brace their bodies they would grow entirely out of proportion."

A corpulent gentleman who wanted to have a brace made interrupted the conversation, and the reporter took his departure pondering over his discovery that men wore corsets.—San Francisco Chronicle.

—A Baltimorean who has returned from New South Wales says that some of the "sheep stations" there have from 100,000 to 300,000 acres, and as many as 250,000 sheep. On Alfred Hay's farm 2,000 sheep were shorn before breakfast by about seventy-five shearers. Kangaroos are numerous and troublesome. They ruin the sheep pastures, and the Government has been constrained to offer a bounty of seventy-five cents a head for their scalps. Hundreds of thousands are killed annually.

—Federmeyer and Guerrero, who are trundling wheel-barrows across the continent for a purse of $2,000, started from San Francisco October 7. Their time of starting was entered on their books there, and their books are to be stamped in every Post-office that they pass. The two will travel together to Cheyenne, and then each will take whatever route he may choose. They expect to report at the New York City Post-office about the middle of March next.—N. Y. Sun.

—A striking case of a fortune doing a poor man more harm than good comes from Oswaldtwistle, in Lancashire, England. An old shoemaker who lived there inherited about four years ago a sum of $7,500. Recently he was found dead in his bed, and he was almost penniless. His name was Grimshaw, and he was respectably connected. During the four years he drank heavily, sometimes spending over forty dollars a week in this way.

—Three children of James Knight, of Chatham County, N. C., died of diphtheria. The same week two of his children died from the effects of rattlesnake bites, and the only remaining child was fatally scalded a few days thereafter in a pot of boiling soap.

Our Young Folks.

A YOUNG SEAMSTRESS.

"I am learning how to sew," said an eager little maid;
"I push the needle in and out, and make the stitches strong;
I'm sewing blocks of patchwork for my dolly's pretty bed,
And mamma says, the way I work it will not take me long.
 It's over and over—do you know
 How over-and-over stitches go?

"I have begun a handkerchief; mamma turned in the edge,
And basted it with a pink thread to show me where to sew.
It has Greenaway children on it stepping staidly by a hedge;
I look at them when I get tired, or the needle pricks, you know.
 And that is the way I learn to hem
 With hemming stitches—do you know them?

"Next I shall learn to run, and darn, and back-stitch, too, I guess,
 It wouldn't take me long, I know, if 'twasn't for the thread;
But the knots keep coming, and besides—I shall have to confess—
 Sometimes I slip my thimble off, and use my thumb instead!
 When your thread knots, what do you do?
 And does it turn all brownish, too?

"My papa, he's a great big man, as much as six feet high;
 He's more than forty, and his hair has gray mixed with the black;
Well, he can't sew! he can't begin to sew as well as I.
 If he loses off a button, mamma has to set it back!
 You mustn't think me proud, you know,
 But I am seven, and I can sew!"
 —Mary L. B. Branch, in St. Nicholas.

MAKING SUNSHINE.

"I don't see how I can ever pass away the time," scowled Lucy. "There isn't a thing I can do with myself. I wish the sun would shine." She looked out of the window with a face fully as cloudy as the sky which was pouring down such a torrent of rain that she could not go to school.

"Plenty for a little lassie to do," said her mother.

"I'm sure I don't see what."

"There is one thing you can do if everything else fails. You can make sunshine here in the house, even although there may be none out of doors."

"What do you mean, mamma?"

"Why, when you get up in the morning and go about singing like a bird, as you sometimes do, your dear little voice fills the whole house, and seems to make brightness and sunshine all through it, no matter how Dame Nature may be frowning and weeping outside."

It seems a pity that Lucy should not have fallen in with such a pleasant suggestion, but it was plain that she was not in a sunshiny mood. She whined and whimpered at the weather as if she fancied that it would do some good. She worried her mother for different things with which to amuse herself, teased the younger children till their noise drove grandmother to her room, and made such a muss in the kitchen that Nora at last remarked: "It's the blessed thing intoirely ye'er not at home much of the toime, for it's none of us'd have our wits left wid ye!"

The next morning found the rain coming down with as good a will as ever. Father rejoiced in the heaven-sent drops, each one of which was bringing its kindly gift of help and refreshment to the growing crops. Mother was glad to see the cistern filling, and the flowers smiling up their thanks as they bloomed and brightened with clean washed faces. All were satisfied except crabbed little Miss Lucy, who felt more than ever abused, and looked as if she believed the rain was sent for the sole purpose of doing her a grievous injury. She took an umbrella and walked about in the garden, from which she was brought in by Nora to her mother, who was sadly troubled at finding her feet soaking wet.

And she suffered for her folly, for on the next day, when it rained but little and she might have gone to school, she had such a bad cold she could not go out of the house. Indeed, she was a prisoner for several days afterwards, as the weather continued damp.

I would not like to tell you, even if I could, how much those about her had to endure from her peevishness and ill-temper. It is sad to think how many little ones who have bright faces, sweet voices and active limbs, giving them the power to cheer and help those they love, seem to like better to sadden them by their sullenness and idleness.

Lucy continued to growl and grumble at the weather through several weary days, until one morning the sun peeped suddenly from behind a black cloud, and looked around inquiringly, as if to say:

"I wonder, now! if I am really wanted down there."

He seemed to decide that he was, for he climbed clear above the cloud as fast as possible and sailed up into the blue. Plenty of light, feathery white clouds were all about, but he laughed so hard at them that they scampered out of his way and hid. And then he turned his attention down to the neighborhood where Lucy lived, and found things quite wet and muddy and disagreeable there.

"Ha! ha!" he said, "here's a little solid work waiting for me." So he sent down a liberal supply of his cheeriest, warmest rays, and Lucy was soon at the window with a face as clear as if she had not all the week been running a race with the sky to see who could show the most clouds.

"Oh, mamma," she cried, "its beautiful! Do come and see how the trees are full of diamonds and how the flowers shine in the sun! Can't you smell those lilies and the jessamine? And hear those darling little birds, what a twitter and a chatter they are keeping up! There's a robin picking up the crumbs you threw out. Oh, I do love sunshine!"

"But you don't try to make much of it yourself, my little daughter. You seem to prefer to cast clouds about. No one would think you were fond of sunshine."

"But, mamma, my sunshine would shine only such a little way, no matter how hard I tried. Now, when the sun shines he shines all over the world, he is so great and grand, but I am only a little bit of a girl."

"Yes, but there is only one great sun, and think how many little girls there are—and boys, too. If every boy and every girl made his or her own little share of sunshine, how much would there be, do you think?"

"Why, mamma—it would reach all over the world!"

"Very nearly."

"But we can't get every little boy and girl to do it, mamma."

"I'm afraid not; but the best way to begin is for each one faithfully to do her own share towards it."

Lucy thought so, too, and resolved she would try to make her share of sunshine, and to make it reach as far as she could.

I hope she kept her resolution. I hope she learned the lesson taught by the sunshine and the birds and the flowers and every other beautiful thing, that every child heart should, like them, give out brightness and music and sweetness, all to make light and happiness for those whom they love.—Sydney Dayre, in N. Y. Observer.

The Little Musician.

How many of the readers of Young People ever think of the great results that may flow from one little act of kindness?

More than fifty years ago the famous singer Madame Malibran was sitting in her room in one of the great hotels of London. She was very tired, for she had just been holding a large reception, during which some of the greatest people in England had visited her. Word was brought her that a little lad wished to speak with her. In spite of her fatigue she gave orders that he should be admitted.

A little flaxen-haired fellow of some ten years timidly entered the room, and taking a roll of paper from his pocket, said: "Madame, everybody tells me that you are so good, so very good, to the poor. I do not come to beg, madame, though we are so poor that my dear mamma, who is very ill, has to do without both food and medicine. I thought if you would sing my little song at one of your concerts perhaps somebody would buy it, and I could get the wine and medicine the doctor has ordered."

Tears stood in his eyes as he made his request, and as Madame Malibran took the manuscript and rapidly hummed the lines over, they rolled slowly down his cheeks.

"Did you write this music, a little child like you?"

"Yes, madame."

The lady took from her purse a coin and a card and pressed them into the boy's hand.

"Run home as quickly as you can," she said, "and get for your mother all she needs, and this evening come to my concert, to which the ticket will admit you."

Pierre did as he was told, and when evening came he went to the theater, presented his ticket, and was taken to a seat away down near the stage. The lights, the warmth, and the bright colors, to say nothing of the crowd of handsomely dressed gentlemen and ladies, bewildered and dazzled him, and he could only think: "Oh, if mamma were but here, I should be so happy!"

Presently he glanced at the platform, and there stood his lovely lady. She began to sing, and little Pierre's heart throbbed as if it would burst as the familiar notes of his own little song fell upon his ear. Its simple melody touched the audience, too, and it was sung again, and at its close the house rang with applause.

How the rest of the concert passed Pierre never knew. He staid until it was all over, and then hurried home and told his wonderful news.

Several days after, Madame Malibran called upon Pierre's mother and told her that a London publisher had offered three hundred pounds for the song, which offer she had accepted, and pouring into the astonished woman's lap a pile of notes and gold, said:

"Madame, your son will one day be a great composer. Thank God for the gift He has given him."

Pierre and his sick mother mingled their tears and thanks to one who seemed to them like an angel sent from Heaven. With the money thus obtained Pierre was enabled to pursue his musical studies, and in after-years verified the great singer's prediction, and became one of the most talented composers of his day.

What might little Pierre's fate have been if a cruel servant had sent him away from the great singer's door, or if Madame Malibran had refused to listen to his timid little appeal?—Harper's Young People.

Matrimonial Amenities.

Bill Pendergast, a rather impecunious Austin man, married for money, and his wife, a widow, ugly and long-tongued, made William repent of his culpable avarice many and many a day. The widow brought with her into Bill's family a son, as well as other property, and one morning sweet William overheard the boy howling dismally.

"Why howleth the kid?" inquired Bill.

"He was a bad boy and I have been whipping him. But I made him kiss me afterward to show him that it was more in sorrow than in anger that I punished him."

"Did you really ask that poor child to kiss you?" said Bill.

"Yes," answered his wife.

"How could you be so cruel," said Bill, "as to add new tortures to the punishment already inflicted?"—Texas Siftings.

—A critical observer makes this sensible remark: "A woman's glove is to her what a vest is to a man." Precisely. When a man is agitated or perplexed he at once attacks his vest buttons, thus giving occasion for a certain very expressive slang phrase. A woman's vest does not admit of this sort of "pulling down," but her glove is always a source of inspiration and a refuge from any embarrassment. She smoothes on the fingers, rearranges the buttons, drags out the wrinkles, looks critically at the fit, and does a dozen little things with her glove that betray or allay nervousness and quite sustain the truth of the above quotation.—N. Y. Graphic.

Religious.

GIVING.

What is a gift? Some rare and costly thing—
 Which only wealth is privileged to bestow?
A joy that opulence alone can bring?
 A boon that poverty may never know?
Nay! nay! the sweetest gifts that life adorn
Ne'er left the loving hearts where they were born.

More humble gifts than e'en the "widow's mite"—
 Whose fame rolls down through the applauding years—
Shall live in memories, safe from Lethe's blight—
 Preserved in love, embalmed in holy tears:
Our rarest gifts are hungerings to bestow
The good that ne'er may come to us below.

All that in man is best, the stamp shall bear
 Of that which we call immortality;
And fond good wills, defeated now, shall share
 The glad fruition of the time to be:
God frames our purpose true in purer gold
Than eye of mortal ever may behold.

There is a wealth descending from the sky,
 That falls on every loyal gift we bring,
A Heavenly fragrance that can never die,
 Breathing through all our true heart-offering:
If with each gift unselfish love we weave,
"More blessed 'tis to give than to receive."
 —S. S. Times.

International Sunday-School Lessons.

FOURTH QUARTER.

Nov. 11—Saul Rejected	1 Sam. 15:12-26
Nov. 18—David Anointed	1 Sam. 16: 1-13
Nov. 25—David and Goliath	1 Sam. 17:38-51
Dec. 2—David's Enemy—Saul	1 Sam. 18: 1- 6
Dec. 9—David's 'Friend—Jonathan	1 Sam. 20:32-42
Dec. 16—David Sparing His Enemy	1 Sam. 24: 1-17
Dec. 23—Death of Saul and Jonathan	1 Sam. 31: 1-13
Dec. 30—Review.

God Rules.

The inner worth and the sincere religiosity of men is more easily ascertained by the manner in which they contemplate the future than of the view they take of the present or the past. All men are at length reconciled to the past, and habit enables them to bear with the present; but it is not so easy to look forward with indifference or calmness to that which may come. The more a man fears for the future, the less is the worth of his heart, the less the sincerity and depth of his religiosity. The more cheerfully and happily he looks forward to the days that are coming, the purer is his mind, the truer is his religion.

For weak, sensuous persons, strongly attached to what is earthly—persons to whom what they eat, and what they drink, their household furniture, their worldly position, and the consideration in which they are held by others, are the most important matters—must, of course, be more fearful of the future than others, because they have set their hearts on things that must perish. They must tremble, in spite of their trust in God! for they know beforehand that God will not leave them forever to the joys of the senses. Their own conscience tells them that they cling more to what belongs to the dust than to what is Divine and eternal; that they value mere worldly appearance more than the virtue which raises us above the world. The truly God-fearing and God-trusting Christian, on the contrary, looks cheerfully toward the future. It terrifies him not because it may bring punishment for hidden sins, for he is guiltless, though not faultless. Whatever wrong he has done he at once endeavors to make amends for. He has done all that man can do, and that a follower of Jesus is bound to. Whatever God may have ordained, whether it be war or peace, riches or poverty, joyful intercourse with beloved objects, or the death of the latter—storm or sunshine—he knows that God rules. And when he sees the storm-cloud rolling toward him it is God's voice that says to him: "Be still, and know that I am God."

Why, then, should I fear, O Lord, if it be Thee, my God, my Father, who sendeth forth the thunder-cloud of fate? Without Thy will how can it harm me? And can it be Thy will to render me miserable?—me, Thy child, whom Thou hast created and destined for eternal bliss; Thy helpless child, who holds everything he possesses from Thee, O Almighty God! Nay, I feel no uneasiness. I fear not my own death; for what is death but the dissevering of the bonds of earth, freedom to the immortal soul, union with Thee? What, then, should I fear? Give or take, exalt me or abase me, let me be the joy of my friends or fall the victim of my enemies. I accept with thankfulness whatever fate may befall me, for Thou art my Father; Thy love is my highest good, virtue my palladium; all else belong to the dust, and must sink into the grave. I am still, still and full of trust, trustful and joyful, for I know Thou art God, my God, forever! Amen!—Meditations from the German of Zschokke.

The Mother of Men.

Some one, who had noticed the influence of wives in promoting the good or evil fortunes of their husbands, said: "A man must ask his wife's leave to be rich." We doubt not that a similar observation of the influence of mothers upon their sons would justify the remark: "A man must ask his mother's leave to be great."

Years ago, a family of four, a father, a mother, and two sons, dwelt in a small house, situated in the roughest locality of the rocky town of Ashford, Conn. The family was very poor.

A few acres of stony land, a dozen sheep and one cow, supported them. The sheep clothed them, and the cow gave milk, and did the work of a horse in plowing and harrowing. Corn bread, milk and bean-porridge was their fare. The father being laid aside by ill health, the burden of supporting the family rested on the mother. She did her work in the house and helped the boys do theirs on the farm. Once, in the dead of winter, one of the boys required a new suit of clothes. There was neither money nor wool on hand. The mother sheared the half-grown fleece from the sheep, and in one week the suit was on the boy. The shorn sheep was protected from the cold by a garment made of braided straw.

The family lived four miles from the "meeting-house." Yet, every Sunday, the mother and her two sons walked to church. One of these sons became the pastor of the church in Franklin, Conn., to whom he preached for sixty-one years. Two generations went from that church to make the world better.

The other son also became a minister, and then one of the most successful of college presidents. Hundreds of young men were moulded by him.

That heroic Christian woman's name was Deborah Nott. She was the mother of Rev. Samuel Nott, D.D., and of Eliphalet Nott, D.D., LL.D., President of Union College.—N. Y. Observer.

Hard Virtues.

Forbearance, considerateness — we need them everywhere we go. Our common imperfections are mutual limitations. They demand self-restraint, patience, mutual concession. These virtues are hard, but so are all. These are especially hard, because they are incessant. I will tell you what will help much to make them practicable, perhaps easy. Do them for God. It is God's ends that demand them, which demand these almost more notably than some others. His greatest end is love. No material or intellectual progress: no prosperity in church, State or home; no moral, social, religious or philanthropic interest—is so precious to Him as the mutual sympathy among His children, out of which His two great aims are the development of our race and the elevation of our individual characters. Humanity can not progress, save as we stand closely by each other, heart and hand; our own characters can not beautify themselves, save as we attain to the unselfish benevolence which is the comprehensive symbol of the Divine character. What is hard for yourself, then, do for God. Let His love be the reward of your self-sacrifice. He has made self-sacrifice the law of the universe; each thing, each being, depends on and gives itself for the other. The extinction of love is the paraphrase of love. Be sure that in habitual self-constraint, self-forgetfulness for others' good, in considerateness, in forbearance, in yielding to others' views and wishes, so far as conscience will allow, we are both rejoicing and resembling Him. If He should mark iniquity, who would stand? Let not us, then! "Let us not judge one another, but judge this rather, that no one put a stumbling-block, or an occasion to fall, in his brother's way." So (is it not sweet, is it not manly?) says the zealous, persistent, self-confident but self-sacrificing, the of all men most manly, Paul. And also "Love is the fulfilling of the law." Wherefore, to go back to the Master for a general maxim: "Have salt in yourselves, and have peace with one another."—Joseph May.

The Young Agnostic's Catechism.

A French writer, M. Andre Berthet, has issued a "Lay Catechism" for the instruction of young agnostics. Here are some of the questions and answers:

Question. What is God?
Answer. I don't know.
Q. Who created the world?
A. I don't know.
Q. Whence comes humanity, and whither does it go?
A. I don't know.
Q. When and how did man come on earth?
A. I don't know.
Q. What will become of us after death?
A. I don't know.
Q. Are you not ashamed of your ignorance?
A. There can be no shame in being ignorant of what no one could know.

We now understand a passage of Scripture. The ox knoweth his owner; but the ass knows only his master's crib, without knowing his master, and that is the case with M. Berthet. He knows the crib where he gets his food, but not the Master who provides it.—N. Y. Independent.

Week of Prayer, 1884.

The Week of Prayer commences with the first Sunday in the year, January 6, and the general arrangement of topics is as follows:

Monday, January 7.—Praise and Thanksgiving.
Tuesday, January 8.—Confession of Sin, and Prayer for Cleansing and Renewal.
Wednesday, January 9.—Prayer for Families and Instructors of Youth.
Thursday, January 10.—Prayer for the Church of Christ.
Friday, January 11.—Intercession for the Nations.
Saturday, January 12.—Prayer for Missions at Home and Abroad.

This is the general series of topics, and subdivisions may be made according to the wishes of pastors and churches.

Choice Selections.

—We judge ourselves by what we feel capable of doing, while others judge us by what we have already done.—Longfellow.

—We might enjoy much peace if we would not busy ourselves with the words and deeds of other men, with things which appertain nothing to our charge. Blessed are the single-hearted, for they shall enjoy much peace.—Thomas a Kempis.

—One watch set right will do to set many by; on the other hand, one that goes wrong may be the means of misleading a whole neighborhood: and the same may be said of the example we set to those around us.

—For Our Good.—

We love our dead, and hold their memories dear:
 But living love is sweeter than regret:
God's ways are just; and, though they seem severe,
 He can give back with blessings greater yet
Than we have lost. He chastens for some good
That in our weakness is not understood.
 —Barton Grey.

—Dr. T. L. Cuyler says, in the Evangelist, that "all the best preaching that can be marshaled in the Sabbath pulpits of our communities is unable to counteract the malarious influence of godless, frivolous homes. Just as soon expect to grow sugar-cane in Greenland, or oranges in Alaska, as to rear the plants of grace in a family whose very air is saturated with worldliness.

—The desire for the cheap notoriety of the newspapers springs from a small vanity; it sometimes leads to crime. Who shall say that there have not been many crimes committed from a motive lurking at the bottom of it all that the criminal might get himself talked about? The happiest lives are not those that are passed in the "keen sunlight of publicity." The happiest homes are not those into which every unsympathizing stranger is permitted to curiously gaze. When men—and women—will be content to lead their own lives without seeking notoriety, much will be gained.—Christian Weekly.

HEYN & BRO. RISING SUN,

OVERCOATS, OVERCOATS, OVERCOATS, OVECOATS,

For Young Men, Youths, Boys and Children in Great Varieties, and Low Prices. All goods sold by us guaranteed. Also a Big Line of Ready Made Clothing on hand.

A full Stock of seasonable Dress Goods, with the latest Novelties in trimmings. Ladies and Gents' Underwear, Hosiery and Gloves.

Heyn & Bro., Rising Sun, Indiana.

Genuine Schofield Blankets, Jeans, Flannels and Yarns, Prices Lower than any other store.

No Misrepresentation Practiced to Effect Sales. We invite Everybody to inspect our Goods.

Heyn & Bro., Rising Sun, Indiana.

Cloaks, Dolmans, Circulars and Jackets, for Ladies, Misses, and Children, in all colors and grade, latest styles.

Heyn & Bro., Rising Sun, Indiana.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL,
Proprietors.

BURLINGTON, KY. NOV. 14. 1883.

ADVERTISING RATES.

1 Column	1 year	$80
1 "	½ "	40
½ "	½ "	20
¼ "	1 "	20
¼ "	½ "	10
¼ "	¼ "	6

For announcing candidates, $5. Obituary poetry, 5 cents per line. Obituary notices, 20 lines free; over that number (excepting the announcement of the death) 3 cents per line.

Tributes of respect from lodges, &c., $1 50

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One year	$1 50
Six months	75
Three months	40

IN Massachusetts Butler didn't get there Eli.

A NOTED turfman, James McIntyre died in Lexington on the 10th inst.

BUTLER won't down. He has already declared his intention to run for Governor again next fall.

AN explosion that killed seventy-sixty men occurred in the Mansfield Collery, Lancashire, England, last week.

A PORTION of the walls in the capital extension at Madison, Wisconsin, fell last Thursday, killing twenty persons.

MERCER is the banner murder county in the state, there being seventeen murder trials on the docket at the last term of its Circuit Court.

THE candidates for Speaker will be in Washington this week, and will commence working up their strength. Carlisle's prospect for success is now good.

MAHONE is downed by only thirty thousand majority in Virginia. He can extract no consolation from the result in other states, and is a dead cock in the pit.

IN the elections last week the Democrats did not come out as well as they anticipated. They carried Virginia by about 30,000; lost Pennsylvania by 16,000.

LOUISVILLE is now trying to decide whether to have the great exposition repeat next fall, and will not be long in making up its mind when the balance sheet of the one just closed is made up.

THE Governor has appointed Hon. E. J. Green, of Kenton county, delegate for the 6th Congressional district to the Farmers' Congress of the United States which meets in Louisville December 6th, 1883.

TROXELL, a rapist was hanged to the railroad bridge that crosses the Cumberland river, this State. The mob drew him up instead of swinging him off, and he was suspended two hours, dying from exhaustion.

THE hog cholera making its appearance in the county at this particular season renders it to be the more dreaded on account of the hogs that are being fed for market. Those who are feeding hogs should administer such preventives as they have faith in. Hogs in two neighborhoods of the county are now dying with the cholera.

IT is said that Mrs. General John S. Williams is almost invincible when she enters the political arena on behalf of her husband, and that the General owes much of his political success to his wife. His competitors this winter will have to make arrangments to counteract Mrs. Williams' presence at Frankfort when the legislature meets.

THE elections held in ten States Tuesday of last week did not result as favorably to the Democrats as was hoped. In the State of New York the Republicans elected the head of their ticket, Carr for Secretary of State by over 17,000 plurality. In Pennsylvania the Democrats were defeated by 16,000. Massachusetts elected a Republican Governor over Ben Butler by 10,000 majority. Minnesota gave a Republican majority of 25,000. Nebraska elected a Republican Supreme Judge by 10,000. In Virginia the Democrats worked hard and carried the State 30,000, completely routing Mahone and his party. New Jersey elected a Democrat Governor by 6,000 majority.

The above results knock some of the Democratic certainty of success in 1884, but perhaps the party will redouble its efforts and do better work in the doubtful territory.

IN the United States Court at Louisville, in the case of the United States against Moore, the attorney in a pension case, charged with violating the pension law as regards charging fees, Judge Barr instructed the jury, and the attorney was fined one thousand dollars. It was charged that Moore, in a pension case, in addition to receiving a fee of $10, obtained a written obligation from his client that, in case he gained the claim, he was to give the attorney a present of a sum of money received by the granting of the pension. The instructions, which is virtually an opinion, states that, in regard to receiving and demanding more than $10 in a pension case, penalties apply, and that fraud and extortion constitute no part of the offense. The Judge says that money advanced and actual expenditures in prosecution of the case may be reimbursed to the attorney, but especially is the instruction strong on the bearing of Moore's case when it states that when a pensioner receives his money he has a right to do with it as he pleases, except that he can not pay more than $10, either directly or by any device of loan or gift, for services rendered in the case.

THE Second Auditor of the Treasury, in his annual report says: "The great increase in the number of applications for arrears of pay and bounty is something anomalous; and when it is stated that not one in ten of the applications now being filed possess any merit, the inquiry is naturally suggested why at this late period—nearly twenty years after the war—so many claims are filed, and the number increasing." As an answer to the suggested inquiry, the Auditor states that not one in twenty of the 16,578 claims received in his office during the last fiscal year was filed upon the suggestion or by the voluntary action of the claimant, the great majority of the cases having been drummed up by claim agents. There is a great imposition being practiced on the Government in the drawing of pensions. Thousands of persons are drawing their monthly stipends, who have no right whatever to a pension, but have succeeded by the false swearing of relatives and friends in having their names enrolled on the pesion list. Many of those who were in the late civil war have arrived at a period in their life where a decline has naturally set in, and it is a very easy matter for them to persuade themselves and a sufficient number of their friends, who, in due time are called on as witnesses, to believe that the cause of their aches and pains are traceable to their service in the Federal army during the rebellion, and they make applications for pensions which are granted nearly every time, and are often accompanied by a large amount of back pay. Many of the applicants of the present day are worthy and entitled to pensions, but a large number of them are the worse kind of frauds.

SEAMER ANDY BAUM.

To the Editors of the Recorder:

Nov. 9.—Not many years since I wrote you from the great falls at Louisville, where I have been wrecked twice, going over the falls on the roof of one of the boats Capt. Ed Baker lost at that place. On the roof of one of those boats I stood, cold, dry and lonely for eight days, caring but little whether school kept or not. But Capt. Ed sent me some seitletz-water and my drooping spirits were rervived. Returning to old Boone I was contented till a few weeks since, when I became afflicted with some kind of bear or bare, or dear or deer fever, and a trip became necessary, when a party consisting of Irwin Balsly, me and five or six others organized to go south on a hunt. On the 8th inst., I met Irwin in Cincinnati, with his dogs and armed and equipped as the law of Nimrod or some other fellow that loved to hunt; the other boys could not leave their Susan Marys, so Irwin and I composed the crowd.

We boarded the Andy Baum bound for Memphis. At Aurora five jolly young fellows bound for Pt. Pleasant, Mo., on a hunting expedition came aboard.

We are now a long way below the mouth of Salt river, so you can inform our friends that that is not our destination. We are having a very pleasant trip, and will keep a diary and send to you an account of all the narrow escapes and exciting scenes that may transpire on this eventful trip.

We will take in Pine Bluff, Ark., and if not successful there, we will visit the Ozark mountains, as we are not coming back till we can bring some kind of bear or deer meat with us.

WM. B. WATTS.

FLORIDA LETTER.

SANDFORD, FLA., Nov. 2, 1883.

To the Editors of the Recorder:

At present I find myself about 200 miles south of Jacksonville, on the St. Johns river, at Sandford, which is quite a little city with 1,200 or 1,500 people, and a thorough business place. The numerous stores are very large, being filled with goods coming mostly from New York and Philadelphia. Clothing is as cheap here as in Cincinnati. Flour is in advance about $1 on the barrel. They have a hotel here that can accommodate 200 or 300 people at $3 50 to $4 a day. I am not stopping there—it is closed at present.

There are the finest openings for mechanics here and at Enterprise I ever saw. Carpenters, poor workmen at that—get from $2 50 to $3 a day; plasterers, $4 and are scarce.

The country around Sandford is not so good, but a mile or so back the land is rolling, and there you find groves of oranges and all other tropical fruits. I visited the Spear and Doyl groves southwest of this place. They are a grand sight. The Spear grove covers 4½ acres of land and is worth $90,000. There are $9,000 worth of oranges on the trees now. The Doyl grove is 14 years old and is worth $13,000 or $14,000. It contains 5 acres.

Five years ago Mr. Sandford brought a small colony of Swedes and gave them 75 cents a day and 5 acres of land to work for him one year. They owed him for their passage, and many of them worked their time out, then went to work on their places, and most of them have already sold their groves for $4,000 or $5,000.

Yesterday, in company with Col. Bodine, I visited his beautiful grove south of Sandford. This grove is 5 years old, and is loaded with the finest of oranges and lemons. His place covers about 25 acres, has a fine frame dwelling house and other improvements and can not be bought for $50,000.

The climate here is delightful. I have not been bothered with insects at all. There are some mosquitoes but they are not troublesome.

My trip up the St. Johns was very enjoyable. From Jackson 75 miles up, the river is very broad and looks like a sea more than a river. Above Calatka the river narrows, and the fine tropical scenery commences, and it is beautiful. On our trip up the river we saw lots of "gators" along the shore basking in the tropical sunshine, and just before reaching Deland a deer swam the river just in front of the boat, which came near running over it. We were in sight of aquatic fowl at all times. We passed through Lake George in daylight and had the benefit of another grand sight. In approaching Sandford you enter Lake Monroe which is the finest sheet of water I ever saw, and is 12 or 15 miles long by 5 or 6 miles wide.

It is early in the season for tourists, but people here say there is more travel on the railroads than they ever saw so early. The boat I came up on had 250 or more passengers.

The people here are more thrifty than persons would suppose, and when persons come down from the north they are soon a lively go-ahead set. In every yard in Sandford or Enterprise you see bananas, oranges, pineapples, figs and citrons.

"The fishing is fine."

A. W. SMITH.

THERE will be services in the Universalist church at this place every evening the remainder of this week, closing Sunday night. Rev. S. P. Carlton and Rev. C. C. Conner will conduct the meeting.

THE escapade of Judge McManama in Frankfort has created much talk through the country, but he has done no more than he has been doing for several years, except the shooting part of his frolic, and probably that was all for effect.

THE Owen County Democrat has interviewed Judge McManama lately, and says, "Judge McManama pronounces the statement made by the Frankfort correspondent to the Louisville Courier-Journal of last Thursday as a Mulhatton lie, made out of whole cloth."

THE question, what will the County Court do with the jail? is being discussed throughout the county. There is no doubt but the committee that has the matter under advisement will do that which will be best for the county. Some think that the report of the grand jury ought to be ignored, and the jail left in its present condition. This would be an unwise and unsafe couse to pursue, as the building has been condemned by a body with authority. If some fellow should contract a severe spell of sickness while confined therein, he might make the county pay heavily the jail being condemned.

Tobacco Market.

Cincinnati, Friday, Nov. 14, 1888.

G'n Trash and Lugs	$1 80@	$4 00
Common Trash	4 50	5 00
Colory Trash	7 00	6 50
Good Br't Trash	10 00	15 00
Fine Br't Trash	16 00	20 00
Fancy Bright Leaf	00
Dark Lugs	6 00	7 00
Common Lugs	7 00	9 50
Colory Lugs	10 00	12 00
Good Stripping Lugs	13 00	15 00
Fine Str'p'g Lugs	17 00	23 00
Common Leaf	6 00	11 00
Com. Med. Leaf	12 00	14 50
Good Med. Leaf	15	19 50
Good Br't Leaf	28 00	32 00
Fine Br't Leaf	24 50	27 50
Com Lug Fillers	7	11 50
Good Lug Fillers	12 00	16 00
Fine Lug Fillers	17 00	22 00
Com. Med. Fil'rs	12 00	16 00
Good Med. Fil'rs	17	19 50
Good L'f Fillers	20 00	24 50
Fine Leaf Fillers	25 00	27 50
Fancy Leaf Fillers	28 00	30 00

A PURE strengthening tonic, free from whisky, cures dyspepsia, indigestion, and similar diseases. It has never been equaled. Brown's Iron Bitters.

WADLEY, GA.—Dr. H. L. Battle, Jr., says: "Brown's Iron Bitters are very popular in this section and give entire satisfaction."

SHEBOYGAN, WIS.—Dr. S. B. Myers says: "I recommend Brown's Iron Bitters for general debility, loss of appetite, and want of strength."

Doctors and Doctrines.

Whatever Cruel Creeds May Say, Truth is Always Orthodox.

"You know the old saying, Doctor, Ubi tres medici, duo athei,—where there are three doctors there are two atheists," laughed Rev. Apollo Creamcheese, the other day, to his friend, Dr. Senna, who had dropped in for a bit of a talk.

"Yes, I've heard it, and I'll bet a box of pills against your dry inkstand that some priest said it. They always pattered bad Latin when they had a bigger lie than common to get rid of," answered the Doctor, lighting his pipe. "I tell you, Dominie, you're 'way off when you think our profession isn't doing as good work in this world as yours is. They've both been more'n half barbarous for centuries, but we're several lengths ahead of you on the home-stretch."

"But, Doctor, said Rev. Mr. Creamcheese, "don't you think your fraternity shows a tendency to materialistic——?"

"Bah!" interrupted Dr. Senna, "we show a tendency to human charity and common sense. The fences are all down. Why, within the past week I've had a letter from my old friend, Dr. W. V. Haddox, of Pine Hill, Alabama, saying that he is using, with great success, PARKER'S TONIC, in his practice, and finds it the best thing for Coughs Lung, Kidney and Liver troubles, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, and so on, he ever struck; and another friend of mine, Dr. J. J. Oatman, of Carrolltown, Pa., says substantially the same thing. He's a big specialist, too, in chronic diseases, and knows what he is talking about every time."

Dr. Senna's statement as to PARKER'S TONIC, are supported by genuine testimonials from Drs. Haddox and Oatman, who write to Messrs. Hiscox & Co., of New York—the proprietors—in terms of the highest commendation concerning this great restorative remedy; and letters from the profession generally confirm the opinion of these physicians. Price, 50 cents and $1 per bottle.

County Directory.

OFFICERS.

Assessor—G. M. Riley.
County Surveyor—W. E. Vest.
School Commissioner—D. M. Snyder.
Coroner.—Dr. A. A. Murat, Constance.

COURTS.

CIRCUIT COURT meets the 2d Monday in April and first Monday in October, P. U. Major, Judge; W. L. Riddell, Clerk A. G. DeJarnette, Commonwealths Attorney; W. L. Riddell, Trustee Jury Fund.

COUNTY COURT meets the first Monday in every month. L. H. Dills, Judge; S. W. Tolin, County Attorney. M. T. Garnett, Clerk; J. R. Clutterbuck, Sheriff, T. W. Finch and W. T. German, Deputy Sheriffs.

QUARTERLY COURT meets the first Monday in March, June, September and December. The officers of the County Court preside.

COURT OF CLAIMS meets the first Monday in November.

MAGISTRATES' COURTS are held in March, June, September and December, as follows:

Bellevue—M. R. Green, first Saturday, and T. H. Sutton, third Monday. J. M. Moody, Constable.

Burlington—E. H. Baker, Thursday after first Monday, and Oscar Gaines, fourth Monday. R. H. Sandford, Constable.

Carlton A. G. McConnell, Wednesday after second Monday, and B. H. Ryle, Saturday after third Monday. Walter Ryle, Cornstable.

Petersburg—Jos. Hensley, Wednesday after first Monday, and L. A. Loder fourth Saturday. Geo. Comer, Constable.

Union—M. C. Norman, Thursday after third Monday, and H. Bannister, Thursday after second Monday. A. D. Riley, Constable.

Beever—W. M. Rouse, Friday after the third Monday, and

Posted.

We the undersigned hereby give notice that our farms are posted against hunters:

Templeton Gaines,	J C Jenkins,
J E Duncan,	Oscar Gaines,
G C Gaddy,	Ben Clore,
Noah Craven,	Wm. Clore,
C S Balsly,	A S Gaines,
George Gaines,	C S Gaines.
Absalom Aylor,	J. B. Winston,

BOONE HOUSE,

BURLINGTON, KY.

C. L. CRISLER, Prop'r.

No pains spared in the accommodation of guests. The table supplied with the delicacies of the season. Stock well cared for.

dec. 20-1y

Notice.

The members of Petersburg Grange are all requested to attend its next meeting, on Saturday, Nov. 17th, as the accumulations in the treasury of the Grange will be divided out that day.

R. RANDALL,
Treasurer.

A. L. Brown,

THE HATTER,

Cor. Pike and Washington Streets
COVINGTON, - - KY.

Has always on hand a large variety of Men's, Boys' and Children's Hats, and prices GUARANTEED to be as low as the lowest.

Gents' Furnishing Goods a Specialty.

AYER'S
Hair Vigor

restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray hair to a natural, rich brown color, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use light or red hair may be darkened, thin hair thickened, and baldness often, though not always, cured.

It checks falling of the hair, and stimulates a weak and sickly growth to vigor. It prevents and cures scurf and dandruff, and heals nearly every disease peculiar to the scalp. As a Ladies' Hair Dressing, the VIGOR is unequalled; it contains neither oil nor dye, renders the hair soft, glossy, and silken in appearance, and imparts a delicate, agreeable, and lasting perfume.

MR. C. P. BRICHER writes from Kirby, O., July 3, 1882: "Last fall my hair commenced falling out, and in a short time I became nearly bald. I used part of a bottle of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, which stopped the falling of the hair, and started a new growth. I have now a full head of hair growing vigorously, and am convinced that but for the use of your preparation I should have been entirely bald."

J. W. BOWEN, proprietor of the McArthur (Ohio) Enquirer, says: "AYER'S HAIR VIGOR is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. Its use promotes the growth of new hair, and makes it glossy and soft. The VIGOR is also a sure cure for dandruff. Not within my knowledge has the preparation ever failed to give entire satisfaction."

MR. ANGUS FAIRBAIRN, leader of the celebrated "Fairbairn Family" of Scottish Vocalists, writes from Boston, Mass., Feb. 6, 1880: "Ever since my hair began to give silvery evidence of the change which fleeting time procureth, I have used AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, and so have been able to maintain an appearance of youthfulness—a matter of considerable consequence to ministers, orators, actors, and in fact every one who lives in the eyes of the public."

MRS. O. A. PRESCOTT, writing from 18 Elm St., Charlestown, Mass., April 14, 1882, says: "Two years ago about two-thirds of my hair came off. It thinned very rapidly, and I was fast growing bald. On using AYER'S HAIR VIGOR the falling stopped and a new growth commenced, and in about a month my head was completely covered with short hair. It has continued to grow, and is now as good as before it fell. I regularly used but one bottle of the VIGOR, but now use it occasionally as a dressing."

We have hundreds of similar testimonials to the efficacy of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It needs but a trial to convince the most skeptical of its value.

PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists.

W. J. RICE,
CARPENTER & BUILDER,
BULLITSVILLE, KY.

Is prepared Raise or Move
EITHER LOG or FRAME BUILDINGS
On Short Notice.
And at the Lowest Possible Figures.
88-tf Your orders respectfully solicited

LUMBER.

Goe. M. Bedinger & Co.,

Erlanger, - - Ky.

We keep constantly on hand all kinds of Lumber, Laths and Shingles. Also Builder's supplies of all kinds.

—Come and see Us.—

may 9-tf

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS
FOR THE LIVER
And all Billious Complaints
Safe to take, being purely vegetable; no griping. Price 25 cts. All Druggists.

For Sale.

House and lot in Hebron, Boone county, Kentucky. This is a very comfortable house located near the center of the town. The lot contains one acre. For further particulars call on or address LYSTRA AYLOR,
Hebron, Ky.

INCORPORATED UNDER THE LAWS OF MISSOURI.

CENTRAL MEDICAL & SURGICAL INSTITUTE
OF ST. LOUIS, MO.

SUCCESSORS TO DR. BUTTS' DISPENSARY. OFFICE & ROOMS, NO. 920 LOCUST ST.

CHAS. L. LABARGE, M.D., Pres't & Physician in Charge.
NELSON CHESMAN, Treas. & Business Manager.

This Institute has ample facilities and an experienced Faculty. While it succeeds to a large business, which has been established for years, it will aim to extend its medical and surgical practice, giving skillful and scientific treatment to

CHRONIC DISEASES of the Head, Spine, Lungs and Air Passages, Heart, Liver, Stomach and Bowels, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Consumption and Asthma.

BLOOD IMPURITIES, inherited or caused by impure association, Scrofula, Fever Sores, Ulcers, etc.

DEFORMITIES of the Limbs, Spinal Curvature, Wry-Neck, Diseases at the Joints, Piles, Fistula, Rupture, etc.

WEAKNESS and wasting diseases in old and young men, also all diseases of the genito-urinary organs.

FEMALE irregularities and weaknesses, causing pain in the back or side, etc.

Personal interviews with patients are always preferred. Those unable to visit the Institute will be furnished with blank lists of questions that will aid them in making a full statement of their cases and if not requiring a surgical operation they can be successfully treated by correspondence, and medicines sent by mail or express. To enable us to send proper list of questions applicants should give a brief statement of their trouble.

The Treasurer of the corporation is of Nelson Chesman & Co., Advertising Agents, and refers to the publisher of this or any other newspaper in the United States or Canada regarding responsibility.

Consultation at Office or by mail free and invited.

TUTT'S PILLS

TORPID BOWELS,
DISORDERED LIVER,
and MALARIA.

From these sources arise three-fourths of the diseases of the human race. These symptoms indicate their existence: Loss of Appetite, Bowels costive, Sick Headache, fullness after eating, aversion to exertion of body or mind, Eructation of food, Irritability of temper, Low spirits, A feeling of having neglected some duty, Dizziness, Fluttering at the Heart, Dots before the eyes, highly colored Urine, CONSTIPATION, and demand the use of a remedy that acts directly on the Liver. As a Liver medicine TUTT'S PILLS have no equal. Their action on the Kidneys and Skin is also prompt; removing all impurities through these three "scavengers of the system," producing appetite, sound digestion, regular stools, a clear skin and a vigorous body. TUTT'S PILLS cause no nausea or griping nor interfere with daily work and are a perfect

ANTIDOTE TO MALARIA.
Sold everywhere, 25c. Office, 44 Murray St., N.Y.

TUTT'S HAIR DYE.

GRAY HAIR OR WHISKERS changed instantly to a GLOSSY BLACK by a single application of this DYE. Sold by Druggists, or sent by express on receipt of $1.

Office, 44 Murray Street, New York.

TUTT'S MANUAL OF USEFUL RECEIPTS FREE.

VIGOROUS HEALTH FOR MEN

THE PASTILLE CURE TRADE MARK FOR NERVOUS DEBILITY.

TESTED FOR 5 YEARS

by use in thousands of cases. Founded on scientific medical principles, it has been growing in favor and reputation while its numerous competitors have invariably failed. The direct application of this remedy to the seat of the disease makes its specific influence felt without delay. The natural functions of the human organism are restored. The animating elements of life which have been wasted are given back. The buoyant energy of the brain and muscular system renders the patient cheerful; he gains strength with rapidity.

NERVOUS DEBILITY, organic weakness, and numerous obscure diseases, baffling the skill of best physicians, result for youthful indiscretion, too free indulgence, and over brain work.

Do not temporize while such enemies lurk in your system. Take a remedy that has cured thousands, and does not interfere with you attention to business or cause any pain or inconvenience.

Send for a Descriptive Pamphlet giving Anatomical Illustrations, which will convince the most sceptical that they can be restored to perfect manhood, and fitted for the duties of life, same as if never affected. Sent free to any one. Remedy sold ONLY by the

HARRIS REMEDY CO. MF'G. CHEMISTS.
306½ N. 10th. St. ST. LOUIS, MO.

One Month's treatment $3. two months $5. three months $7

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM

A beneficial dressing preferred to similar articles because of its purity and rich perfume. It Restores to Gray Hair the Youthful Color & prevents dandruff and falling of the hair.

50c. & $1. Hiscox & Co., N.Y.

FLORESTON

Excels the finest flower extracts in richness. Delicate, very lasting. No odor like it. Be sure you get FLORESTON Cologne, signature of Hiscox & Co., N. Y., on every label. 25 and 75 cts., at druggists and dealers in perfumes.

COLOGNE

INJECTION
SANTINELI

Cures all recent and chronic secret diseases of the Urinary passages in both sexes. Directions in all languages. $1.00 a bottle Druggists, or sent by express on receipt of price secure from observation Fairmount Chemical Co. Cincinnati, Ohio, U. S. A. Sold by W. F. McKim.

PAYSON'S INDELIBLE INK

Is the BEST. No preparation. Used with any clean pen for marking any fabric. Popular for decorative work on linen. Received Centennial MEDAL & Diploma. Established 50 years. Sold by all Druggists, Stationers & News Agt's.

NEVER FAILS

FREE!
RELIABLE SELF-CURE.

A favorite prescription of one of the most noted and successful specialists in the U. S. (now retired) for the cure of Nervous Debility, Lost Manhood, Weakness and Decay. Sent in plain sealed envelope free. Druggists can fill it.

Address DR. WARD & CO., Louisiana. Mo.

Local News.

Fine weather for butchering.

Local items are painfully scarce this week.

Fine weather last week for stripping tobacco.

Monday morning gave cheeks a healthy tint.

Bachelor says he sold his snake for five dollars.

Buy a bar of Frank Siddall's soap at W. E. Pipers.

F. P. Walton commenced receiving tobacco last week.

Mit Aera hangs out a managerie every morning as a sign.

Schofield Blankets at Heyn'e, Rising Sun, Ind., at $5 a pair.

W. B. Adam's mammoth pumpkin weighed 140 pounds.

Schofield's Jeans at 40c. per yard at Heyn's, Rising Sun, Ind.

Henley Smith is a part and parcel of Walton's tobacco shop again.

We are under obligations to John W. Ryle for favors extended.

Heyn's, Rising Sun, Ind., is the place to get a nice Cloak or Dolman.

A fine Union Casemere Overcoat for $4 50, at Heyn's, Rising Sun, Ind.

Gloves, Hosiery, Corsets, Shawls, etc. in great variety at Heyn's, Rising Sun, Indiana.

Heyn & Bro., Rising Sun, Ind., is the boss place to trade, as they deal fair and square.

Fresh Prunes, Dried Peaches, Hominy, Beans and Buckwheat flour at W. E. Pipers.

Monday morning was a bracer, and people moved about like they had springs in their shoes.

Mr. G. T. Gaines has, within the last few days, lost six hogs with cholera, and has others that are sick.

The Boone base-ball club sold its wardrobe to liquidate its liabilities contracted during the season.

For Fever and Ague, and all miasmatic diseases, Ayer's Ague Cure is a positive remedy. Warranted.

The paper vendor now makes his daily trips to Burlington and other points between here and the city.

Henry Hafer and the heirs of Walter Goodridge were in town Monday on business pertaining to the estate.

The sale of the personal estate of Mrs. Nancy Snyder was well attended, and property brought fair prices.

The Sutler's wagon leaves the Boone House daily, Sunday excepted, at 12 m, under the superintendence of Dr. Hitter.

Don Williamson has been offered $16 all 'round for his tobacco. The time of delivery prevented the trade being closed.

Nearly every neighborhood in the county has its local tobacco dealer, who has made arrangements for prizing large quantities.

How about that young friend of ours of Florence X-Roads selling 1,000 bushels of seed-corn while at Louistown, Ohio, about two weeks ago.

Remember the Sabbath day and keep it holy saith the Bible; but about this time of the year some seem to remember it and go hunting.

The ball at Hebron the other night was a grand success in every respect, Good order prevailed and all present enjoyed themselves hugely.

We understand that the suits against Maloney, the contractor who built the pike between Hamilton and Normansville, have been compromised.

Ben Crisler, of the Union neighborhood, was in town Saturday closing a land sale with Perry Weaver at $35 per acre cash. Ben's domains are gradually spreading.

A negro man who lives with George Anderson, near Constance, a few nights since hearing thieves about the meat-house went out to scare them off, when they closed in on him and robbed him of his coat but left without any meat,

Nice tombstones or monuments at the graves of the departed, are marks of respect which should not be neglected. Hurschart & Co., Lawrenceburg, Ind., have just what you want. John Beall of Hebron, is their agent.

A large crowd of white, and colored people assembled at the creek near town on the Burlington and Florence pike, Sunday, to witness the immersion of two colored females who had united with the colored church at this place. Rev. Bush officiated.

'Squire Dunaway, the marrying 'Squire, married a runaway couple from Kentucky on Monday evening at the Lotton House. The groom was James Record and the bride Maggie Farrel, They were from Walton, and in getting away from the opposition of parents made the fastest time on Record.—Lawrenceburg (Ind.) Register.

The president of the Framers Insurance Company and his cabinet, held a meeting at the Circuit Clerk's Office last Saturday in which a large number of applications for renewals, and many applications for policies in that company, were received and accepted. The company has near $500,000 worth of property insured, and their cry is "still they come."

W. F. Howlett, of Boone County, was arraigned before United States Commissioner Bostwick yesterday on the charge of selling liquor without license. He sold a man a pint of whisky for his sick wife and was informed on. Thus it appears that he is being maliciously prosecuted. The case will probably be compromised.—Cov. Item Cincinnati Enquirer.

The Tafferty-Geisler trial was disposed of by the County Court in special session last Thursday, it being the third trial, two other juries having failed to agree. The jury found that the defendant was the father of the child and fixed his annual contribution for its support at $25 per year for eight years. The defendant filed a schedule of his property, took the insolvent debtor's oath and was discharged.

Everett Walton writes us from Butler, Mo., saying that he is house-keeping, that cabbage is 25 cents a head, and that the heads are very small at that; sweet potatoes, 8 small ones for 5 cents; cranberries, 15 cents a pint; corn, 25 cents; oats, 18 cents; good wheat, 60 cents; beef-roasts, 10c; loin stake, 12; cattle very scarce and tremendously high; horses from $80 to $200; apples, 50c a bushel; game abundant; lawyers and doctors, about 27,000 of each. We suppose croquet is scarce, as he didn't mention it.

Last Monday morning, Julia Webb, a colored widow, who works at various places in town and country, left, as usual, her ten year old daughter to take care of the younger children, the youngest of which is a babe in the arms, while she made her daily rounds. The child was nursing the infant, when, by some means, her clothing took fire; placing the baby on the bed and covering it, she ran out of the house to call for help, but before assistance could reach her, her clothing were burned off and her flesh in several places litterly roasted.

The Florence X-Road band of charlivariers were out with their horse-fiddles, cowbells, muskets, tin pans, &c., the other night, the occasion being the marriage of their neighbor Moore. They having made his premises a pandemonium for about an hour, he threw open his hospitable door, rolled out a keg of beer and invited the boys to drink and be merry. The contents of the keg soon vanished, when the boys stacked arms, and the groom having unconditionally surrendered, they took possession of his commodious rooms and indulged in tripping the light fantastic till a late hour, when they, with many good wishes, bid the bride and groom farewell.

While the jury in the Tafferty-Geisler case was deliberating last Thursday, Alanzo Yerkes, a witness for the defendant, who had been offended by some question put him, while on the witness stand, by County Attorney Tolin, assaulted the attorney in the Court-room, but deputy sheriff German interfered and hostilities were suspended only to be renewed in a few minutes on the pavement in front of the temple of justice, where the belligerents had more room, and less obstructions to interfere with their pugilistic performance. When the battle subsided and the smoke blew away, it was ascertained that neither of the parties had been punished any to speak of, and peace and quiet again reigned.

Last Friday John Bachelor passed through Burlington going to Cincinnati, having among other things in his wagon, a box containing a snake that measured 7 feet 2½ inches in length and weighed 24 pounds, which was killed on the Indiana beech opposite Laughery Island, it having swum from the the island to the Indiana shore. It was a stranger in this part of the country, and Bachelor's theory is that it came down among the drift during the February flood. For some time James Rogers has been occasionally seeing a track in the sand on his farm, and thought it was that of a turtle, but since the capture of this giant snake, he thinks it was the track of this same snake. Our theory is that it is one of the offsprings of the snake about which our Plattsburg correspondent wrote some time since, and we hope there is no more as ugly looking and as large snakes in this part of the country.

Personal Mentions.

[If you have friends from a distance visiting you or expect to be away from home on business or pleasure, let us have the item for this column.]

B. K. Sleet was at home one day last week.

Miss Sophia Finch left for Frankfort, last Wednesday.

Ott Murphy has returned and is presiding over Walton's tobacco shop.

Mrs. Logan Gaines and daughter, of Carroll county, are visiting their relatives in Boone.

Mrs. W. F. Ashburn, of Cincinnat, Ohio, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Lillie Hall, at this place.

G. L. Miller, J. W. Kennedy and S. J. Ewalt, three of Big Bone's leading business men, were in town last Friday.

This kind of weather is hard on croquet players.

If you want to buy a good sewing machine, call on W. E. Piper.

Cincinnati Daily papers for sale at the Burlington Drug and Grocery store,

NGEIHBORHOOD NEWS.

Hebron.

The new pike is progressing rapidly.

Robert Collins has returned home from Crawfordsville, Ind.

Jeff Snyder has gone to Sadieville to clerk in a drug store.

Leonard Crigler is now occupying his new residence.

The cholera has made its appearance among the hogs in this neighborhood.

David Beall is repairing his sawmill. He talks of getting a whistle.

The ball given at this place last Wednesday night was quite a success, and all present had a big time.

Dr. Luther Terrill talks of moving from here in the near future. He does not know just where he will locate.

Florence X-Roads.

Grains look well.......The warm, damp weather has injured the corn in the shock ......Last Thursday Capt. John Moore and Miss Eliza Lake, of Cincinati, were married by Elder E. Stephens. The boys here gave them a big send-off that night......Uncle Billy Tanner returned, last Saturday, from a very pleasant trip to his old home in Virginia. He brought several souvnoirs back with him, and says he would not take $200 for his trip......Sam Krutcher has been skipping around here among his many friends for the last few days........ Castle Welsh has a new roof......Dutton Tanner has been spending several days in Dearbon county, Ind......Miss Anna Jackson, of Indian, has been visiting her sister for several weeks......Dance at Geo. Krapp's last Saturday night......Joe Souther has been buying ready-made clothing. His intentions are unknown.

Franceville.

John Beall, agent for Hurschart & Co., of Lawrenceburg, has been putting up some very fine monumental work in the Sand Run cemetery, the past few days.

Quite a curiosity can be seen at Mr. Nat Brown's in the way of an apple tree in full bloom. Mr. Brown is of the opinion that unless the season is very favorable, they will not mature

We have been informed that Ben Clore would have taken the premium at the Mabley pumpkin show had his sympathies been just right, and his pumpkin been the largest, but as it was not, he failed.

During a wind storm a few nights since, the barn of Mrs. Foster was unroofed. Fortunately there was no stock injured.

It became our painful duty to attend a burying last week—it was burying our crop of potatoes.

Mr. Holland Goodridge is stocking his farm with geese, an entirely new industry.

John R. Smith has commenced stripping his crop of tobacco.

The cabbage and turnip crop in this vicinity is about an average. We contemplate putting up about three barrels of kraut this fall in order to have plenty in case of sickness.

Billy Hayes has closed out his butchering business for this season, and is now giving his attention to farm affairs.

There is a considerable quantity of potatoes to dig in this vicinity yet.

Mr. Tom Howard is the champion rabbit shot in these diggins.

Lewis Watts, cold., lost a very valuable mare week before last.

Florence.

The protracted meeting which we noticed last week as being held in the Christian church, concluded on Friday evening last. The services throughout were well attended and considerable interest manifested, resulting in five confessions.

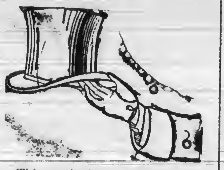
We have the report of an interesting debating club organized in the neighborhood of Pleasant Ridge. The exercises are exciting much attention, and the discussion of the following question for the second time has created quite a stir. "Resolved, That it is easier to do right than wrong." The fights were hotly contested, the affirmative coming off victorious each time. I am of the opinion that the judges were to conscientious. If the negative will give them another hitch, and let your correspondent preside we will insure a negative victory.

Dr. B. A. Dulaney, between his professional visits, is engaged in the carpenters' and builders' trade. He is making barns a specialty, and is now at work remodeling his own. If Billy Rice and John Kirk would come over and take some items from this architecturer, it would be of incalculable benefit to them in their occupation The Dr. has invented a new system in building, for which he intends to take out letters patent. The main features of his new plan consists in working in timbers or boards of any length, regardless of the dimensions of the barn. He has adopted for trade mark the following: "There is a divinity that shapes our ends, rough hew them as we may," A telescopic view of his building at this writing presents to the idea the appearance of the British frigate, Gurriere, after the two hours fight with the United States Sloop, Constitution. Persons having work in the Dr's new line would profit by giving him a call.

We understand that our esteemed friend and attorney, S. W. Tolin, has filed his petition as the "champion light weight of Boone county." If so, we will have our answer ready in a few days.

GAS OMETER.

COLTER'S.



This cut is the exact shape of OUR SILK DRESS HATS. Price $3. Also have some shape in fur at $1. The above are new stock, just added, and are meeting with ready sale. Our stock of Hats and Caps is as complete as ever, and it will pay you to buy your Hats at

COLTER'S, Rising Sun, Ind.

SCHOFIELD'S Flannels, Jeans, Blankets and Yarns are kept at COLTER'S. Price at Bottom since we keep these goods.

Buy your Blankets, Yarns, Jeans and Flannels at COLTER'S, Rising Sun, Indiana.

Luck will be with you if you trade at COLTER'S, Rising Sun, Ind

This cut represents our nobby styles in Double Breasted Suits and Ulsterettes.

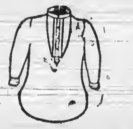
Have ten different Double Breasted Suits, pattern of above, ranging in prices from $6 50 to $14.

We offer sixteen different grades of Ulsterettes, pattern of above cut, at $3 75 to $13.

COLTER'S, Rising Sun, Ind.

This cut represents our nobby Folding Roll Dress Overcoats Price $5 to $11. Our Stock of Clothing is immense, and anyone can get suited, either in price or quality, at

COLTER'S, Rising Sun, Ind,



OUR $1 00 DRESS SHIRT Is the best Shirt for the money ever offered before. See our Shirts and Drawers. Over Two Hundred Dozen to select from, at COLTER'S, Rising Sun Ind.

Colter's

MAMMOTH

CHEAP CASH

Store,

Rising Sun,

IND.

Has over Sixteen Thousand Feet of Floor jammed full of DRY GOODS, Ready-Made CLOTHING, BOOTS and SHOES, HATS and CAPS' MILLINERY GOODS, CLOAKS, DOLMANS and Ladies' WRAPS of all kinds, SHAWLS, &c. Make your headquarters at

COLTER'S

Cheap Cash

STORE,

RISING SUN,

INDIANA.

J. W. KIRKPATRICK & SON,

—BURLINGTON, KY.—

UNDERTAKERS

We have purchased a nice new hearse, and are prepared to attend funerals in regular city style, at the lowest prices.

ROBERT B. REED

Attorney at Law.

OFFICE AT - - UNION, KY.

F. RIDDELL,

ATTORNEY at LAW.

BURLINGTON, KY.

Office over Dudley Rouse's Store.

ALBERT W. GAINES,

Attorney and Counselor at Law,

LAWRENCEBURG, - - - IND.

Will practice in the courts of Boone county, Ky., Cincinnati, Ohio, Dearborn and adjoining counties, Ind. dec-6-82

W. E. VEST,

COUNTY SURVEYOR

WALTON, KY.

Is prepared to do all kinds of surveying. All orders sent him through the mail to Walton, will receive his prompt attention.

E. E. IGOE,

Resident Dentist,

Rising Sun, Ind.

WITH

J. P. Ulrey.

Monday and Tuesday at Rising Sun. Ind.

L. C. NORMAN. H. I. STEPHENS.

NORMAN and STEPHENS, ATTORNEYS at LAW,

UNION, BOONE CO., KY.

Will practice in the Courts of Boone Kenton and adjoining counties. Collections solicited and made throughout the State. 24 tf 81

DR. A. B. HARRY AN

RESIDENT DENTIST.

Aurora, Indiana.

(Office Over Postoffice)

With J P. ULREY.

Dr. ULREY'S days, Wednesday and Saturday. Office open at all hours. 8-1y

J. J. Landram. G. G. Hughes.

LANDRAM & HUGHES.

ATTORNEYS at LAW.

Will practice in the Boone Circuit Cour and the Court of Appeals. Prompt attention given to Collections, on application t G. G. Hughes, Burlington, Ky.

S. W. TOLIN.

ATTORNEY AT LAW

BURLINGTON, - - Y

Office in Court-house on 2d floor.

Will manage litigation in any of the Courts of the State, contracts and other legal instruments drawn up at reasonable rates. A prompt an studious attention given to business intrusted to my care. A trial solicited. 12-1y

H. KASSEN & CO.

(Formerly of Covington.)

—Dealers in Fine—

BOOTS AND SHOES,

106 W. 5th Street,

CINCINNATI, - - - OHIO.

Custom made work a Specialty. A perfect Fit Guaranteed. dec. 20-1y

AURORA MARBLE AND GRANITE WORKS,

Aurora, Ind

Will have constantly on hand

Marble and Granite Monuments,

Italian & American Headstones, &c.

I am ready to do all kinds of Stone Work on short notice and at low prices Hoping to receive the patronage of Boone County, I am respectfully,

F. W. KASSEBAUM.

INSURE AT HOME

The Farmers' Mutual Fire

INSURANCE COMPANY

Of Boone County

Is now completely organized and receiving applications for insurance.

Its Rates are Lower

Than those of any other Company, and it gives the farmers of Boone County a

HITHERTO UNKNOWN ADVANTAGE

In keeping their property insured.

EVERY FARMER IN THE COUNTY

should take a policy at once.

N. S. WALTON, President, Petersburg, Ky.

J. H. WALTON, Secretary, Constance, Ky.

R. RANDALL, Treasury.

DIRECTORS.

LEGRAN GAINES, Jeff Utz,

JNO. M. MOODY.

FALL FALL FALL

F A L L

—AND—

Winter Clothi'g

Clothing of the best goods, well trimmed, in the latest styles, made under my direct supervision and sold at low prices than are asked for badly made, shoddy goods at other places. Call and be assured.

A splendid line of Suitings. Suits MADE to order on short notice.

H. F Blase,

540 Madison St. - COVINGTON, KY.

Stop! Don't Read This.

S. C BUCHANAN takes this method of notifying his patrons that he has enlarged his room and now has the best and most complete stock of Drugs in the county, consisting of Drugs and Medicines, Standard Patent Medicines, &c.

Notions and Fancy Goods, Combs, Brushes, Toilet Powders Perfumery, Toilet and Medicated Soaps.

Also Spices of all kinds, Flavoring Extracts in bulk, Horse and Cattle Powders and many other things that we have not the room to mention here. If you call for anything not in Stock we will get it for you at the regular price, if it takes all the profit,

When in need of anything give us a call, at the Petersburg Duru Store, and be convinced that our Prices are as Low or LOWER than can be found,

Don't Read Any Further.

M.L. SWETNAM, HUBERT NEED

SWETNAM & NEAD,

(SUCCESSOR TO ALONZO GRAVES)

LIVERY AND BOARDING STABLE

AND TRANSFER LINE,

79 Pike Street, Covington, Ky.

Horses Kept by the Day, Week or Month.

Horses and Buggies for Hire.

Stock of all kinds Bought and Sold.

Best Care Taken of Horses entrusted to our Keeping.

All Orders for Hauling Promptly Attended to.

Dr. CLARK JOHNSON'S

Indian Blood Syrup

Cures all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys, Skin and Blood, Millions testify to its efficacy in healing the above named diseases, and pronounce it to be the BEST REMEDY KNOWN TO MAN.

TRADE MARK.

Guaranteed to cure Dyspepsia.

AGENTS WANTED.

Laboratory 77 W. 3d St., New York City. Druggists sell it

D. CLARK JOHNSON:— This certifies that your Indian Blood Syrup is the best medicine I ever used in my family. My wife has been greatly benefited by it. L. E. MCCAMC, Seaville, Ky. Mar. 15, '8

JAMES S. WAYNE, President. JNO. L. SANDFORD, Cashier

CAPITAL $300,000,

FARMERS AND TRADERS

NATIONAL BANK.

Covington, Kentucky.

DIRECTORS.

James S. Wayne, J. S. Matson, M. C. Motch, J. H. Mersman, Sam Hind, J. L. Sandford, E. J. Hickey, L. H Dills, E. J. Green, F. P. Helm, L. C. Stephens,

The general operations of banking transacted upon the most favorable terms. collections made on all points in the United States.

The Business and Accounts of Farmers are Especially Solicited by this Bank, dec. 20-6m

City Flouring Mills

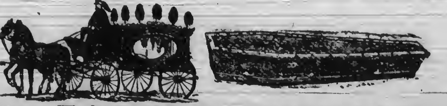
RISING SUN, INDIANA.

FLOUR EXCHANGED FOR WHEAT OR CASH. THE HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR GOOD WHEAT.

mar7-tf26

J. W. Talbott.

UNDERTAKING.



We keep Constantly on Hand all sizes of

Burial Cases and Caskets.

And having just received a beautiful

NEW HEARSE,

Which can be had at a reasonable price when desired.

PRICES GUARANTEED LESS THAN CITY PRICES.

DAVIS BROS., - - HEBRON, KY.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL, Publishers.

BURLINGTON, : : KENTUCKY.

The Value of a Man.

Men are estimated largely at their pecuniary value in these days, and the pocket-book is too often taken as the measure of a man's worth. But there is a sense in which men are worth much more, even pecuniarily, than the mere amount of money they possess or can command. A reference to certain judicial cases will explain this statement. The other day a man's eye was put out by another, and he sued for damages, and was awarded $4,500. This gives us a starting point in estimating the man's real value. The other eye, being now compelled to do the work of both, is certainly worth to that man $9,000. For the two eyes, then, $13,500 seems to be a fair valuation.

In the case of Smith vs. the A., B. and C. Railroad Company for damages sustained by the loss of a leg at the knee, caused by negligence on the part of the employes of the company, plaintiff recovered $15,000 and costs. In this case the remaining leg could not perform the work of both, and its value can not be put at more than $16,000. A man's two legs may, therefore, according to the highest legal authority, be counted worth $31,000.

Another interesting suit was that of Thompson vs. the Wimposkeag Milling Company. Thompson was engaged in defendant's mill, and, through no fault of his own, one of his arms was caught in the machinery and made into cotton goods. He brought suit for $15,000, but recovered only $12,000. It was his right arm that was taken off, but he has since learned to shave himself, sign his name, cut his food and do other useful and necessary things with the left; so that it is of more value to him now than the right arm alone formerly was. A fair estimate of its worth, on the basis of the judicially ascertained value of the other arm, would probably be about $18,000.

We have endeavored to fix the value of an ear and a nose in the same way; but these members are generally removed under circumstances which make it prudent for the injured party not to bring suit; and we can find no better measure of their value than the cost of a new and improved member of papier-mache—say $10) for the three. It is difficult also to put an appraisal on a man's hair. Persons who have been scalped can not carry the matter to the courts, as the wild Indian is not a citizen, nor amenable to civil law. A wig, however, costs in the neighborhood of fifty dollars.

Reckoning up, we find that a man's hair, nose, ears, eyes, arms and legs are worth together at least $74,650. This is calculated to give one a new and increased idea of his personal worth. If these mere appendages, every one of which a man may loose and yet go on living, be worth so much, what must be the value of his entire body? Right here comes in one of the anomalies of the law. The New York Legislature, in the exercise of its supreme wisdom, has declared that a man is worth only $5,000. That is all the Long Island Company had to pay for the corpses made by their recent disaster. So that it pays to kill a man outright; for taking off one of his legs may cost more than killing him, even including Coroner's fees and funeral expenses. We call attention to this apparent conflict of legal authority, not attempting to explain it save by the suggestion that, perhaps, one of a man's eyes is worth as much to himself as the whole man is to his surviving friends.—N. Y. Mail.

Curious Immigration to the Sandwich Islands.

John Tucker, manager of one of the large plantations on the island of Hawaii, of the Sandwich Island group, arrived from Panama Thursday on the Pacific Mail Steamship Colima, bringing with him thirty-six pairs of that curious and useful animal called the mongoose. Mr. Tucker was sent by the planters of Hawaii to Jamaica to procure the animals at a cost of about $1,300. The mongoose is similar to a weasel, and has proved of incalculable service in the island of Jamaica in ridding it of rats, which are so destructive to sugar-cane. It has freed that island from the rat-pest, and has also acted as a modern St. Patrick, and has destroyed every snake. One of the growing troubles in the Hawaiian Islands is the rat-pest. Cane is destroyed in the fields and great losses are entailed on the planters. Nothing seemed to be able to put a stop to this wholesale destruction, and it was determined to import the mongoose. Ten of the plantations combined, and Mr. Tucker was sent to Jamaica. In that island the mongoose had multiplied to such an extent that they are to be seen everywhere. They run across the roads, swarm in the fields and are found everywhere. They are caught in box traps, as squirrels are, and are sometimes caught when young and tamed. The tame mongoose lives around the house like a cat. They are about the size of an ordinary rat, with a longer body and a tail similar to that of a cat. The untamed animals are savage little creatures, having a large and ugly mouth filled with sharp and glistening teeth. They are fierce fighters, and their movements are like a lightning flash. When two of them are fighting in a cage it looks as though there were simply a shadow flitting about within.

It is said that whenever their teeth meet in flesh they can not be made to let go their hold until either they or their prey is dead. They are the natural exterminators of rats, entering every rat-hole and killing its inmates. They then make the rat's abode their own, never preparing shelter for themselves. They live on animal food, and in Jamaica, now that the rats are gone and they have exterminated many of the other pests, they kill many of the negroes' chickens. Mr. Tucker obtained 103 animals in Jamaica, and put them in cages, in each apartment of which were placed a male and a female. He lost twenty of them before he left Jamaica through their proclivities to fight among themselves and to suck each other's blood. On the Panama Railroad the employes treated the cages and their occupants as if they were cast iron, and several more were lost. But seventy-two were got aboard the Colima, and since then none of the animals have died.—San Francisco Bulletin.

—Mr. Ruskin savagely denounces what he styles the modern style of making love. He may be a good judge of art and all that, but unless he grows a great deal younger than he was when he published his last book, he will probably not be able to suggest any desirable improvements on the love-making methods now in vogue.—Detroit Post.

Hired Help on the Farm.

The success or failure of the farmer is apt to depend more on his skill in dealing with men than on any other single item in farm management. On every farm much of the labor done must be hired. The farmer who understands human nature can secure more effective and cheaper help than he who does not. As a rule, farm employes are a difficult set to deal with. The more enterprising and intelligent are apt to get the Western fever early and seek homes for themselves. Occasionally a young man of good habits and intelligence works for others on the farm a few seasons to get the capital to commence farming on his own account. These make altogether the best help, and should be secured at almost any reasonable price they may ask. An ignorant, unskilled blunderer will waste and destroy twice the amount of his wages in a single season. Good farming consists in carefulness in little things. When we consider how few farmers are able to stand this test, the wonder is that when much of the details of farm-work is left to hired help, there should be as much good farming as there is.

When a faithful and intelligent hired man has been found, all his reasonable demands should be satisfied. Better use farm tools without oiling than have a hired man constantly grumbling. The friction will do less damage on the insensate iron than on the human temper and feelings. The hired man need not and should not be "boss," but a good farmer will not hesitate to consult him at times, and listen to, if not follow, his advice. Two heads are better than one, and there are few men so ignorant as not to know more about certain things than their employers. It is common for farmers to resent any advice from their employes as impertinence; but the fact that advice is thus resented shows that the farmer who does so is in some doubt as to his position. Young farmers and those having little experience in the business are most apt to have trouble with their hired men, and this mainly because they are afraid to lower their dignity by asking the opinion of their employes. If a young man is intelligent he will not take kindly to such treatment, and this is one reason why so few of the better class of young men seek employment on the farm.

It is essential to the best success with farm help that they should have the fullest confidence of their employer and be interested in their work. Men will not and can not work as well for a poor as for a good farmer, not alone because they have less to do with, but because the enthusiasm of interest will in one case impel the help to do their utmost, while lack of interest will retard every effort. When work is progressing favorably it is easier to do a good day's labor than when it is lagging, and the better the help the more difference this feeling will create. Poor help is of the kind that does things mechanically, and with such it may matter little whether the work is reasonable and effective or not. A story is told of an English farmer, who, on hiring a new man, first employed him in doing the most unreasonable and preposterous job of which he could think. The next day he set him to undoing what he had done before. The man went at his task each time without a word of protest, or even seeming to care what he was set to do, so long as his pay was sure. The rich farmer at the end of the second day said he was satisfied, for he had found a man who would do exactly what was told him without thinking or caring for the result. In other words he was seeking a mere machine, and had secured one to his liking. A man is not a machine, however, even if he is a farm hand hired by the month. Whoever seeks to transform him into a machine not only injures his manhood, but impairs his effectiveness as a worker.

In every way possible hired help should be made interested in that which they are doing. If a farmer discusses his plans and calculations his employes will soon take an intelligent interest in the work they are doing. Then, if the employer is taken sick, or some unexpected emergency calls him away, one among his employes will be able to take the lead and arrange to keep the work in progress. It may be necessary sometimes to employ men who do things mechanically, but where several men are employed one or more among them should be competent and be authorized to take charge of affairs when the employer is not present.

The fact has often been noted that employes will work better and more freely for a rich man than for a poor one. In the days of slavery Southern negroes used to boast of the wealth and respectability of their owners, as reflecting luster on themselves, and something of this feeling is quite common among hired help with regard to their employers. Nothing succeeds like success, and no man can do his best when working on a practical failure. A lazy, drunken farmer may often have a kind, sensible and loving wife; but he can not keep a good hired man two seasons in succession. As a rule, the better the farmer the more thorough his culture, and the more promptly he keeps up with his work the better the class of help he can employ. Keeping in advance of work is doubly important, for if a farmer gets behind, his men see his helplessness and do about as they please. Generally a farmer will not have any trouble about help leaving him if he manages always to be so well beforehand that their leaving will not seriously distress him.

As for payment, the old Mosaic rule not to let the sun go down without paying the servant his hire is a good one for all day help. Hands hired by the month of course do not expect pay until their time has expired, and this should be in the contract. But for a faithful hand all money needed should be always ready when asked for. This is not so much for the benefit of the hired man as of his employer. Usually the less of his wages an employe takes up before his time expires the better for him, yet the employer can not afford to have a dissatisfied man about the place, for lack of a few dollars which he will have to pay in any event, and can generally pay with trifling inconvenience a few months or weeks before the money is legally due.—American Cultivator.

—In Marysville, Cal., the street-cars are run to make money. You tender the conductor a fifty-cent piece or a standard dollar and he gives you change in tickets. If you protest he stops the car and waits till you get out, if it takes all summer. He doesn't offer to eject you, but pulls out a cigar, lights it, cocks himself on the dashboard, and proceeds to smoke. You have the choice of either walking or being swindled.—N. Y. Sun.

—William Oberly suicided in New York recently because business didn't go right, and he had lost twelve children by death in the last eighteen months.—N. Y. Sun.

HOME AND FARM.

—"Great Farmers on Small Farms" is the motto of a New England paper.

—When walnuts and hickorynuts begin to fall, some of the largest and finest should be gathered for planting. Many "waste-places" might in time be made beautiful and valuable with very little labor by being planted with nut trees. —N. Y. Examiner.

—A New York farmer declares that the wheat, oats and barley which he dragged last spring, in some doubt as to whether he was not doing more harm than good, yielded thirty-three per cent. more grain than that not dragged, though the latter was on the richest and best ground.

—Baked Berry-Rolls: Roll biscuit dough thin in the form of a large square or into small squares. Spread over with berries. Roll the crust and put into a dripping-pan close together until full; then put into the pan water, sugar and pieces of butter. Bake them. Serve with any of the pudding sauces.—Prairie Farmer.

—It is sometimes said that it is impossible to grow too much fruit in this country, on account of the immense demand for fruit of all kinds. It is possible to grow too much inferior fruit; but of the finer varieties there can not be too abundant a supply. There will unquestionably always be a good market for superior fruit.—Exchange.

—The New York Times reminds farmers that smut is rapidly increasing, few crops being free from it. A solution of four ounces of blue vitriol—sulphate of copper—dissolved in a gallon of water for each five bushels of seed, which is steeped in it until it is absorbed, has been found the most effective to destroy the minute spores which produce the fungus.

—Here is a very simple recipe for a China cement, which rarely fails, and as it can be home-made is inexpensive: Mix a little lime or calcined plaster of Paris with the white of one egg. To use it, take a sufficient quantity of the egg to mend one article at a time: shave off a quantity of the lime and mix thoroughly; apply quickly to the edges and place firmly together, when the parts will very soon adhere and the cup or plate become as strong as ever.—Detroit Post.

—Hashing Roast Pork: Put into a stewpan two tablespoonfuls of cider vinegar, two or three cloves, three onions chopped finely, with a little salt; cover tightly, and stew till tender. Cut the cold roast pork into thin slices, dip into flour, scatter salt and pepper over them, and put them into the stewpan; add the gravy that was made for the roast pork, and a little boiling water; simmer with the vinegar and onions for twenty minutes, but do not let it boil on the gallop. Pour upon a hot platter and garnish with bits of toast or fried bread.—The Household.

Cheese as Food.

Cheese serves two purposes. It is food and it promotes the digestion of other food. As food it is the most nutritious of all alimentary substances. This is shown by the figures given by Dr. Frankland as the result of a long series of careful experiments with alimentary substances. Food is the material which produces force in an animal, or rather which enables the muscular system of an animal to exert force, and it is valuable and effective in proportion to the amount of force which it enables the muscles to exert. Dr. Frankland's experiments were conducted on the basis of the weight of a certain kind of food which would enable a man of 160 pounds weight to raise himself 10,000 feet. He found that 1.15 pound of cheese in this respect was equivalent to 1.28 of oatmeal, 1.31 of flour, 1.33 of pea meal, 2.34 of bread, 3.53 of lean beef, 5 pounds of potatoes and 8 pounds of milk. Thus cheese is the most useful of all these foods. Butter has the equivalent ratio of 0.693, but butter can hardly be considered as a food, because it is wholly deficient in nitrogen and is a carbo-hydrate only, and therefore wholly inadequate to repair the waste of muscular tissue. But although cheese varies in its composition, as skim, half-skim and full milk cheese, yet it varies but little in its food value, because when the fat is deficient there is an excess of casein or nitrogenous matter, which is directly available in the animal system for the production of heat or force, and even fat, as well as of muscular fiber. The following table gives the composition of some kinds of cheese in common use.

	Water....	Casein....	Fat......	Sugar....	Ash and Salt....
American factory.....	27.29	25.87	35.39	6.21	5.22
English Cheddar......	30.32	28.18	35.43	1.68	4.31
English Cheshire.....	32.59	26.06	22.51	4.53	4.31
English Wiltshire.....	38.22	34.22	19.76	2.28	5.12
Common skim.........	30.43	30.87	27.08	0.22	2.90
Gruyere skim.........	40.00	31.50	24.00	1.50	3.00
Parmesan (skim)......	27.50	44.08	15.95	6.69	5.72
Camembert............	51.94	18.90	21.05	4.40	4.71
Brie..................	45.24	18.48	25.73	4.94	5.61
Roquefort.............	34.55	26.52	36.14	3.72	5.07

It is seen that they vary considerably, but yet that all kinds are very rich in nutritive elements, and make a nearly perfect food. In passing, it may be noticed how the acid curd of the Cheddar is produced at the expenditure of the sugar of the milk, and how the skimmed milk cheese develop in the curing a considerable quantity of fat.

This last mentioned point is more closely connected with the secondary purpose of cheese as food than might be suspected. The rennet used in making the cheese conveys to it some of its own peculiar property of coagulating and digesting casein. Cheese itself may be used in making cheese, as do' will raise a new batch of do'. This digestive property is able to convert albuminoids (casein) into the elements of fat in the stomach, and so it does undoubtedly in the cheese. And the curing of a skim-milk cheese, skillfully conducted, enriches it in fat and brings it up in a very slightly inferior condition to that of a full milk cheese. This same digestive property is excessively developed by long curing, and exists more largely in the more highly flavored cheese; the flavor being produced by the decomposition which increases the digestive activity. Cheese of this kind is not used as food strictly, but as a condiment to aid digestion of other food. It is used as fruit is, at the end of a meal, nominally as a relish, but really as a help to digestion. The production of this active agent of digestion by the curing of cheese is one of the skilled arts of the dairy. Without it cheese does not fulfill its complete use and purpose, and it may be, and no doubt is, a sufficient reason for the comparatively small domestic consumption of cheese and its general neglect as a staple article of food; that American cheese-makers do not know how to thoroughly cure and refine cheese and develop the exquisite flavors and the accompanying digestive properties for which foreign varieties of cheese are so highly estimated.—The Dairy.

A Queer Assortment.

A well-dressed man was locked up in the station-house for safe keeping the other day, the general aspect of whose figure betokened a too free imbibition of fiery Jersey lightning. He represented himself as a commercial traveler, and gave as his home, New Bedford, Ct. "Shay," he said, "am I—hic—in New Bedford—hic—or in Detroit?" It was some time before he could be made to understand the fact that he was in Rochester. When he was searched at the station the strangest assortment of articles ever found upon a man was taken from his pockets. He had tickets from Boston to various points in Massachusetts, and one from Rochester to East Saginaw, Mich. He had in his pockets five knives, all in a state of general dilapidation. A dozen cigars and a package of tobacco were next taken out. Then followed in quick succession a box of "universal pomade," a bottle of whiskey, two cooked veal cutlets, several raw lamb chops, three bunches of celery, several herrings, a pound of nails and a copy of Oscar Wilde's poems. Each pocket seemed inexhaustible, and each article brought out seemed stranger than all preceding ones, and the array which was finally piled upon the table was indeed a curious one. To put them all back from whence they came seemed among the impossibilities, and the man manifested an extreme solicitude for each and every article.—Rochester (N. Y.) Democrat.

A Pretty Story.

A pretty story is told in a late issue of the New York Tribune. A feeble old lady, poorly clad, got into a street car and let a nickel drop, which she had just received from the conductor in change. The piece fell in between the gratings on the floor, and after a short search was given up as lost—the old lady too feeble to make the extra exertion necessary to recover it. As she settled back in her seat with a sigh of regret, a gentleman opposite stooped down, and, affecting to pick up the missing coin, reached over and placed something in her lap. He then pulled the bell and got out. As the old lady discovered the presence of a gold coin left by the stranger, a gentleman sitting near whispered to her the name of the donor. He is one of the best known philanthropists in New York, and the member of a family noted far and wide for its countless good deeds.

Origin of the Word "Album."

The German magazine Daheim contains a note on the origin of the word "album." The writer points out that in the Middle Ages the parchment in common use was of two kinds—the Spanish-Italian and the German-French—and that the main difference between these varieties lay in the method of their preparation. The German-French could be written upon on both sides, while of the Spanish-Italian only the inner surface was available. The smooth white side of this latter was called album, to distinguish it from the stained exterior; and as the Spanish-Italian parchment, being stouter and cheaper than the other, was generally used for volumes intended as repositories for scraps and literary collections, the meaning of the word album broadened out into its modern signification.

—The country can now rest satisfied that Lord Coleridge's round of American experiences was complete. He was started on the Dispatch for Mount Vernon, and run aground on the mud in the Potomac. This treat is regularly provided for distinguished foreigners by the State Department, and it is pleasant to know that the Lord Chief Justice was not slighted.—New York Tribune.

—A man in Dooly County, Ga., seventy-six years old, is living in the house where he was born, and has spent but one night from under its roof.—Atlanta Constitution.

Happy Once More.

St. Louis, Mo.—A Chronicle reporter was told by Mr. Alfred J. Papiu, of this city, that his nephew had the most obstinate case of inflammatory rheumatism, which baffled all kinds of treatment, until St. Jacobs Oil, the great pain-conqueror, was used. It cured the young man, and he recommends it as the greatest cure for pains in the world.

Speaking of visiting, did it ever occur to you that the telephone girl answers more "calls" in one day than other ladies do in a month?

A Smart Man

is one who does his work quickly and well. This is what Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" does as a blood-purifier and strengthener. It arouses the torpid liver, purifies the blood, and is the best remedy for consumption, which is scrofulous disease of the lungs.

Who says it is unhealthy to sleep in feathers? Look at the spring chicken, and see how tough he is.—Exchange.

Wadley, Ga.—Dr. H. L. Battle, Jr., says: "Brown's Iron Bitters are very popular in this section and give entire satisfaction."

When a giraffe wants to drink, he knows what a long felt want it is.—N. O. Picayune.

THE MARKETS.

CINCINNATI, November 9, 1883.

LIVE STOCK—Cattle—common	$1 75	@	2 27
Choice butchers	4 00	@	4 65
HOGS—Common	3 75	@	4 35
Good packers	4 40	@	4 60
SHEEP	3 50	@	4 25
FLOUR—Family	5 00	@	5 60
GRAIN—Wheat—Longberry red	1 12	@
No. 2 red	1 07¼	@	1 08½
Corn—No. 2 mixed	50	@	50½
Oats—No. 2 mixed	30½	@
Rye—No. 2	60	@
HAY—Timothy No. 1	10 50	@	11 00
HEMP—Double dressed	8½	@
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	11 50	@	11 75
Lard—Current make	7¼	@
BUTTER—Fancy Dairy	24	@	25
Prime Creamery	28	@	30
FRUIT AND VEGETABLES—
Potatoes per bar. from store	1 25	@	1 30
Apples, prime, per barrel	2 50	@	2 75

NEW YORK.

FLOUR—State and Western	$3 00	@	3 50
Good to choice	4 40	@	7 00
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 spring	1 04	@
No. 2 red	1 10¾	@	1 11¼
Corn—No. 2 mixed—new	59¼	@	60¼
Oats—mixed	35	@	37
PORK—Mess	11 50	@	11 62½

CHICAGO.

FLOUR—State and Western	$3 50	@	4 25
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 01	@	1 01½
Corn—No. 2	48⅞	@
Oats—No. 2	28¼	@	⅛
Rye	55½	@
PORK—Mess	11 00	@	11 10
LARD—Steam	7-42	@	7-45

BALTIMORE.

FLOUR—Family	$5 00	@	6 00
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 08	@	1 08¼
Corn—mixed	58¼	@	58½
Oats—mixed	35	@	34
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	12 75	@
Lard—Refined	9½	@

LOUISVILLE.

FLOUR—A No 1	$4 50	@	4 75
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red, new	1 01	@	1 02
Corn—mixed	51	@	52
Oats—mixed	[illegible]	@	31
PORK—MESS	11 50	@	11 75

INDIANAPOLIS.

WHEAT—No. 2 red, new	$1 01	@	1 02½
CORN—mixed	49	@
OATS—mixed	28¾	@	29½
LIVE STOCK—Cattle
Butchers' stock	2 75	@	3 00
Shipping cattle	5 25	@

Youthful

indulgence in pernicious practices is a most startling cause of nervous and general debility, lack of self-confidence and will power, impaired memory, despondency, and other attendants of wrecked manhood. Sufferers should address, with three letter postage stamps, for large illustrated treatise, pointing out unfailing means of perfect cure, World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

Very few men are so stingy that they will not share a kiss with a pretty girl.—Boston Transcript.

Sheboygan, Wis.—Dr. S. B. Myers says: "I recommend Brown's Iron Bitters for general debility, loss of appetite and want of strength."

"In money matters," said a miserly old fellow, "treat strangers as though they were your relatives."

Beautiful Women

are made pallid and unattractive by functional irregularities, which Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" will infallibly cure. Thousands of testimonials. By druggists.

A pure strengthening tonic, free from whisky, cures dyspepsia and similar diseases. It has never been equaled. Brown's Iron Bitters.

Would a law against tight lacing be inimical to the freedom of contracts?—Boston Star.

I have been a severe sufferer from Catarrh for the past fifteen years, with distressing pain over my eyes. Gradually the disease worked down upon my lungs. About a year and a half ago I commenced using Ely's Cream Balm, with most gratifying results and am to-day apparently cured. Z. C. Warren, Rutland, Vt.

A young man named Darling lives in Fargo, and when any one calls to him on the street every young lady within three blocks blushes and looks around, gently saying: "Sh, sh."—Chicago Herald.

"Mother Swan's Worm Syrup," for feverishness, restlessness, worms. Tasteless.

Brown's Bronchial Troches for Coughs and Colds: "The only article which has done me good service. I want nothing better."—Rev. R. H. Craig, Otisville, N. Y.

CONSUMPTION.

Important to the Public as well as the Medical Profession.

Hall's Journal of Health, referring to Consumption, makes the following important statement:

"Consumption usually begins with a slight, dry cough in the morning, then on going to bed, getting more and more frequent, with more and more phlegm, increasing debility, thinness of flesh, shortness of breath, and quickness of pulse. In fatal cases its average course is about two years; hence the importance of arresting the disease at as early a stage as possible, and the sooner rational means are employed for this purpose the greater the chance of success. The disease is owing to an irritation commencing in the throat and extending to the lungs, so that their action is interferred with, and the blood does not receive sufficient oxygen to purify it. The most marked sign of lung disease is emaciation; and the most positive indication of returning health is increase in weight."

So speaks Hall's Journal of Health, and we may add that in desperate cases, and, in fact, in all cases of Consumption, or troubles of the throat and lungs, immediate relief may be obtained and a permanent cure effected by the use of Dr. Wm. Hall's Balsam for the Lungs, a medicine known for more than thirty-five years as an unfailing remedy for coughs, colds, bronchitis and all pulmonary and pectoral diseases. That the worst cases of Consumption have been cured by the use of Hall's Balsam has been attested to by the thousands who have used it, or have been cognizant of its wonderful remedial efficacy.

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer

Is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from dandruff, restore gray hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which Sulphur, Sugar of Lead and Nitrate of Silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. John D. Park & Sons, Wholesale Agents, Cincinnati, Ohio, and C. N. Crittenton, N. Y.

Skinny Men. "Wells' Health Renewer" restores health and vigor, cures Dyspepsia.

Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) has cured me of a long-standing case of Eczema, which has resisted all sorts of treatment.
Rev. W. J. Robinson,
N. Ga. Conference.

"Rough on Rats." Clears out rats, mice, flies, roaches, bed-bugs, ants, vermin 15c.

Ask your druggist for Redding's Russia Salve. Keep it in house in case of accidents. Price 25c.

One dozen small bottles of Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) cured me sound and well of a bad Scrofulous affection which had baffled all treatment, including Hot Springs.
J. H. Raiff, Denver, Col.

"Buchu-paiba." Complete cure, all annoying Kidney Diseases, irritation. $1.

To cure sore throat, gargle with Piso's Cure for Consumption. 25 cents.

Wells' "Rough on Corns." 15c. Ask for it. Complete, permanent cure. Corns, bunions.

Use St. Patrick's Salve, and learn its great value. One trial convinces.

ST JACOBS OIL

TRADE MARK

[1]

THE GREAT GERMAN REMEDY FOR PAIN.

CURES

Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica

Lumbago, Backache, Headache, Toothache, Sore Throat, Swellings, Sprains, Bruises, Burns, Scalds, Frost Bites, And All Other BODILY PAINS and ACHES.

Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere. Fifty Cents a bottle. Directions in 11 Languages.

THE CHARLES A. VOGELER CO., (Successors to A. VOGELER & CO.) Baltimore, Md., U.S.A.

GROCERS My immense success in SELLING CRACKERS has been in making only the best. Once used always used. Send for samples. H. L. BAUMAN, Dayton, O.

$65 A MONTH and BOARD for three live Young Men or Ladies, in each county. Address P. W. ZIEGLER & Co., Philadelphia.

AGENTS WANTED.—Gately's Universal Educator, "The Book of the Century." Big inducements for territory. Address Gately & Convoy, Pubs, Cincinnati.

$250 A MONTH. Agents Wanted. 90 best selling articles in the world. 1 sample FREE. Address JAY BRONSON, Detroit, Mich.

Sure Cure Epilepsy or Fits in 24 hours. Free to poor. Dr. Kruse, 2844 Arsenal St., St. Louis, Mo.

STAMMERING and all Impediments in Speech cured at Vocal Institute, 243 W. Fifth St., Cincinnati. Send for circular.

AGENTS Coin Money by selling Dr. Chase's Family Physician and Second Receipt Book. $2. Address A. W. HAMILTON & CO., Ann Arbor Mich.

OPIUM and WHISKY HABITS cured at home without pain. Book of particulars sent free. B. M. WOOLLEY, M. D., Atlanta, Ga.

Young Men learn Telegraphy here and we will give you a situation. Circulars free. VALENTINE BROS., Janesville, Wis.

Good Pay for Agents. $100 to $200 per mo. made selling our fine Books & Bibles. Write to J. C. McCurdy & Co., Cincinnati, O.

AGENTS make money selling our Family Medicines; no capital required. STANDARD CURE Co., 197 Pearl St., New York.

HAIR Wholesale and retail. Send for price-list. Goods sent C. O. D. Wigs made to order. E. BURNHAM, 71 State Street, Chicago.

FREE By return mail. Full Description Moody's New Tailor System of Dress Cutting. MOODY & CO, Cincinnati, O.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STINSON & Co., Portland, Me.

CATARRH ELY'S CREAM BALM

when applied by the finger into the nostrils, will be absorbed, effectually cleansing the head of catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions. It allays inflammation, protects the membrane of the nasal passages from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores taste and smell. A few applications relieve. A thorough treatment will positively cure. Agreeable to use.

HAY-FEVER

Send for circular. Price 50 cents by mail or at druggists. Ely Brothers, Druggists, Owego, N.Y.

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED

STOMACH BITTERS

Though shaken in every joint and fiber with fever and ague, or bilious remittant, the system may yet be freed from the malignant virus with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Protect the system against it with this beneficent anti-spasmodic, which is furthermore a supreme remedy for liver complaint, constipation, dyspepsia, debility, rheumatism, kidney troubles and other ailments. For sale by all Druggists and Dealers generally.

ABSOLUTELY THE BEST. WILSON'S LIGHTNING SEWER!

Two thousand stitches a minute. The only absolutely first-class Sewing Machine in the world. Sent on trial. Warranted 5 years. Send for Illustrated Catalogue and Circular R. Agents Wanted. THE WILSON SEWING MACHINE CO., Chicago or New York.

CANCER INSTITUTE. AURORA ILL. Established, 1872; incorporated, 1880. For the Cure of Cancers, Tumors, Ulcers, Scrofula and Skin Diseases, without the use of knife or Loss of Blood, and little pain. For INFORMATION, CIRCULARS AND REFERENCES, address DR. F. L. POND, Aurora, Kane Co., Ill.

PORTABLE AND STATIONARY STEAM ENGINES and STEAM BOILERS, smaller sizes adapted to Farm and Plantation Use.

$200 FOR OUR NO. 1 PLANTATION SAW MILL. WE MAKE SIX SIZES, CAPACITY FROM 3 TO 30,000 FT. PER DAY, WITH ONE SAW. Lane Bodley Co., John and Water Sts., (Illustrated catalogue free.) Cincinnati, Ohio.

$15 VALUE FOR $1.50 BALCH'S HAND-BOOK, Combining a Dictionary and Encyclopedia of Social and Business Forms, Etiquette, House-keeping, Farming, Family Medicine, and other subjects in daily use. Contains the cream of 50 standard works. 700 pages for $1.50. Agents Wanted to send twenty-five cents and secure Outfit and Agency. Sells everywhere to everybody. FORSHEE & MACKIN, Cincinnati, O.

Iron Levers, Steel Bearings, Brass TARE BEAM. JONES, HE PAYS THE FREIGHT. Sold on trial. Warranted 5 years. All sizes as low. For free book, address JONES OF BINGHAMTON, BINGHAMTON, N. Y.

ROOFING, TIN PLATES, SHEET IRON, Sheet Copper, and Brass Wire, Rivets, &c. Fine Solder and Genuine Babbitt Metal. Full information about qualities given. MERCHANT & CO., 521 Cherry Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Rupture! "WHITE'S PATENT LEVER TRUSS" is a perfect instrument for the cure of Hernia. The use of steel springs, so hurtful, is avoided. An inward and upward power is obtained at the Spot where it is needed. No pressure on the back. Pamphlets free. Special rates to the trade. Address WHITE'S PATENT LEVER TRUSS CO., 311 Broadway

AGENTS WANTED EVERYWHERE to sell the best Family Knitting Machine ever invented. Will knit a pair of stockings with HEEL and TOE complete in twenty minutes. It will also knit a great variety of fancy-work for which there is always a ready market. Send for circular and terms to the Twombly Knitting Machine Co., 163 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

"THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST." SAW MILLS, ENGINES THRESHERS, Horse Powers, (For all sections and purposes.) Write for Free Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

Florida Lands, 2,000,000 ACRES, well adapted to Orange Culture and Stock Raising. For Sale by Florida Southern Railway. Address C. A. BOARDMAN, Land Commissioner, Palatka, Fla.

DYKE'S BEARD ELIXIR

L. L. SMITH & CO., Agents, Palatine, Ills.

Lady Agents can secure permanent employment and good salary selling Queen City Skirt and Stocking Supporters, etc. Sample outfit Free. Address Queen City Suspender Co., Cincinnati, O.

PATENTS NO PATENT, NO PAY! R. S. & A. P. LACEY, Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C. Full instructions and Hand-Book of Patents sent free.

$72 A WEEK. $12 a day at home easily made. Costly outfit free. Address True & Co. Augusta, Me.

A-Great-Problem.

TAKE ALL THE Kidney & Liver Medicines, BLOOD PURIFIERS, RHEUMATIC Remedies, Dyspepsia And Indigestion Cures, Ague, Fever, And Bilious Specifics, Brain & Nerve Force Revivers, Great Health Restorers,

IN SHORT, TAKE ALL THE BEST qualities of all these, and the best qualities of all the best Medicines of the World, and you will find that HOP BITTERS have the best curative qualities and powers of all concentrated in them, and that they will cure when any or all of these, singly or combined, fail. A thorough trial will give positive proof of this.

ARCADIA VELVETEEN FINEST BEST

Looks equal to Silk Velvet, and costs one-third as much.

The Pile is fine, deep and rich. The Finish is soft and silky. The colors are perfectly uniform. The tints are bright and beautiful, harmonizing with the latest and most fashionable shades in Dress Goods. They are durable and handsome. They are warranted. They do not fade. They do not spot. They are not harsh and heavy, like ordinary Velveteen. They are not streaked. They can not be distinguished from Lyons Silk Velvet. They are not equaled by any other make.

WHAT FASHION AUTHORITIES SAY!

The fair Goddess of Fashion points to Arcadia Velveteen as the leading article in this line of goods for the coming season.—Bazar.

We notice that basques worn this season are made of the famous Arcadia Velveteen.—Fashion Quarter.

"Godey's Lady's Book" recommends Arcadia Velveteens for children's suits.

"Arcadia Velveteens for walking dresses," says "Demorest's Monthly."

"Peterson's Magazine" speaks of the Arcadia Velveteens as the best adapted for general use.

See that the name ARCADIA is stamped on back of every yard. Ask for This, Take no Other

SOLD BY FIRST CLASS DRY GOODS DEALERS.

Mason & Hamlin Organs.

New Illustrated Catalogue, (40 pp. 4to) for season of 1883-4, including many new styles; best assortment of the best and most attractive organs we have ever offered, and at lowest prices, $22 to $600, for cash, easy payments or rented. Sent free.

MASON & HAMLIN ORGAN & PIANO CO.

Boston, 154 Tremont St.; New York, 46 East 14th St.; Chicago, 149 Wabash Ave.

VOL. XX 1884

DEMOREST'S MONTHLY MAGAZINE

ILLUSTRATED WITH Original Steel Engravings, Photogravures & Oil Pictures.

Send twenty cents for one copy, and you will certainly subscribe Two Dollars for a year and get ten times its value.

W. Jennings Demorest, Publisher, 17 East 14th St., New York.

$2 $2

THE BEST

SOLD BY ALL NEWSDEALERS AND POSTMASTERS.

25 PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION. 100

PILES "Anakesis" gives instant relief, and is an infallible cure for Piles. Price $1 from druggists, or sent prepaid by mail. Samples free. Ad. "ANAKESIS," Makers, Box 2416, New York.

PATENTS promptly procured in all countries. American Patent Agency, 189 Fifth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

It is a well-known fact that most of the Horse and Cattle Powder sold in this country is worthless; that Sheridan's Condition Powder is absolutely pure and very valuable. Nothing on Earth will make hens lay like Sheridan's Condition Powder. Dose, one teaspoonful to each pint of food. It will also prevent and cure

MAKE HENS LAY

CHICKEN CHOLERA, Hog Cholera, &c. Sold everywhere, or sent by mail for 25 cents in stamps. Also furnished in large cans, for breeders' use, price $1.00; by mail, $1.20. Circulars sent FREE. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

Healthy People Sometimes Laugh

At the sufferings of dyspeptics, and say that their pains and distresses are imaginary. This is not meant for cruelty, but it is cruelty, all the same. A person who has a crooked foot, or a wounded hand, or a sightless eye, calls forth sympathy by the exhibition of the defective member. If the dyspeptics sufferer's stomach could be placed on exhibition, the cause of his distress would be apparent.

The man with a troublesome stomach often suffers quite as much as the man with a broken leg, but is far less likely to receive sympathy.

Sympathy is good for sufferers, as far as it goes. But Brown's Iron Bitters is better, for it strikes at the root of these troubles, and cures disease. Disappointed dyspeptics, weary of having tried many experiments in seeking cure, will do well to make one fair trial of Brown's Iron Bitters, and report the result. That this well-tried family medicine will thus diminish the quantity of human suffering is an established fact. 10

MUSTANG

Survival of the Fittest.

A FAMILY MEDICINE THAT HAS HEALED MILLIONS DURING 35 YEARS.

Mexican Mustang Liniment.

A BALM FOR EVERY WOUND OF MAN AND BEAST!

THE OLDEST and BEST LINIMENT EVER MADE IN AMERICA.

SALES LARGER THAN EVER.

The Mexican Mustang Liniment has been known for more than thirty-five years as the best of all Liniments, for Man and Beast. Its sales to-day are larger than ever. It cures when all others fail, and penetrates the skin, tendon and muscle, to the very bone. Sold everywhere

ONE OF THE BEST PHYSICIANS TESTIFIES.

I have been using Swift's Specific in my practice for quite a long time, and I regard it the best combination as a blood purifier and tonic. It is entirely vegetable, being composed of the extracts of roots which grow in this section of Georgia. I am familiar with its history from the time the formula was obtained from the Indians. It is a certain and safe remedy for all kinds of blood poison and skin humor, and there has never been a failure to cure. I have cured blood taint in

THE THIRD GENERATION

with it, after I had most signally failed by the most approved methods of treatment with mercury and iodide of potassium. FRED A. TOOMER, M. D., Perry, Houston Co., Ga.

Our treatise on Blood and Skin Diseases mailed free to applicants. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Drawer 3, Atlanta, Ga.

DR. HORNE'S ELECTRIC BELT

Cures Nervousness, Rheumatism, Paralysis, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Kidney, Spine and Liver diseases, Gout, Asthma, Heart Disease, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Erysipelas, Catarrh, Piles, Epilepsy, Impotency, Prolapsus Uteri, etc. Only Scientific Belt that sends the Electricity and Magnetism through the body, and can be recharged in an instant by the patient. Send for Circular. Dr. W. J. HORNE, Inventor, 191 Wabash Av. Chicago, Ill.

100 PER CENT. profit to agents selling our Stand-ard Lamp. C. CANDLER & CO., Cincinnati, O.

$66 A WEEK in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. Addr's H. Hallett & Co., Portland, Me.

A. N. K.—E. 951

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOLUME IX. BURLINGTON, KY., WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 21, 1883. NUMBER 4.

A WILD-GOOSE CHASE.

Thanksgiving! When Effie heard it she knew very well what it meant,
For always at Grandma Spicer's Thanksgiving-day had been spent,
With aunts and uncles and cousins, dogs, cats and pumpkin pies,
And nuts and apples, frolicsome games, and many a glad surprise.

Is "Fanksgivin'-day to-morrer?" over and over again
Effie would ask her parents, begging them to explain
How many days and weeks must pass, and endeavor to make it clear
Why Thanksgiving-day at grandma's came only once in a year.

The Governor's proclamation, for the good of the Nation planned,
Little Effie was much too young and too flighty to understand;
But she comprehended the meaning of preparations to start
For Grandma Spicer's; and no one could have a more thankful heart.

But this year the floods had broken away the barriers strong,
And over the roads and the meadows went roaring and rushing along,
Bearing away the bridges, and whatever else there might be
In their track; and the narrow streamlet stretched out to a great wide sea.

There were lives lost, too, in the torrent that was all the while being fed
By the great black clouds that hung like a mantle of gloom o'erhead,
And as soon as the sun shone out again the dismal troop to disperse,
Men gathered in solemn crowds, and said: "Thank God that it is no worse!"

Effie had heard her father say, as he brushed away a tear,
That he wouldn't be able to travel about very much this year,
And the little maiden thought 'twould be a bitter drop in her cup
If the visit to Grandma Spicer's was to be given up.

For how could they keep Thanksgiving all alone by themselves,
Even with lots of pies and things spread out on the pantry shelves?
And how could Grandma Spicer give thanks in a proper way
If none of them went to see her, to help her keep the day?

Thus reasoned the little maiden, who grew very sad and sedate,
As if a puzzle were twisting itself about in her curly pate,
And as she'd been always cheerful, and rather to romps inclined,
'Twas feared that her father's trouble had worried the baby mind.

'Twas the day before Thanksgiving, as searching the place around,
From garret to cellar, from barn to shed, little Effie could not be found,
And all the treasures that had been swept away in the vast abyss,
Though grievous to lose, could not compare with a loss so great as this.

She was surely stolen from them like poor little Charley Ross
And Lizzie Selden! God pity the bearers of such a cross!
They sought for her in the dismal swamp, and off by the lonely church;
They looked in the well, and, as night came on, with lanterns kept up the search.

In a village some ten miles distant was Grandma Spicer's abode,
And the way to it was over a rugged and lonesome road,
And Effie's father and mother drove over to tell their sorrow,
And the reason why in fasting and prayer they'd have to spend the morrow.

But Grandma's eyes had a twinkle in them as she soberly said:
"Well, now you're so worn and weary, you'd better go right to bed;
Those only are worthy the sweet who have tasted the bitter drink,
And it may be the dawn is breaking—is nearer now than you think."

They closed the door of their chamber, heavy and sick at heart;
In the festival of the morrow determined to take no part;
And turning they saw—what was it?—the old-fashioned trundle-bed,
And there, asleep on the pillow, their own little "curly-head!"

"Effie! Effie!" the mother screamed; "I have found my child at last."
"Effie! Effie!" the father cried, his tears coming thick and fast;
And all that the naughty maiden said, as she quietly sucked her thumb,
Was: "It's Fanksgivin'-day to-morrer, and gran'muvver said you'd come."

Oh, that was a rare Thanksgiving! the lifting of soul above
The things of earth, to the thought of God's goodness and infinite love;
And when the story of floods and misfortunes the group rehearse,
Each looks in a dear one's face and feels there are trials that might be worse.

And when Effie has told her story—the troublesome little elf!—
How she started all right for grandma's, and suddenly lost herself,
And how scared she was, with many a loving kiss and embrace
They forgive the little "goosie" that started this wild-goose chase.

—Josephine Pollard, in Harper's Young People.

THE BIRD OF THE MORNING.

If every bird has his vocation, as a poetical French writer suggests, that of the American robin must be to inspire cheerfulness and contentment in men. His joyous "Cheer up! cheer up! Cheery! Be cheery! Be cheery!" poured out in the early morning from the top branch of the highest tree in the neighborhood, is one of the most stimulating sounds of spring. He must be unfeeling, indeed, who can help deserting his bed and peering through blinds till he discovers the charming philosopher, with head erect and breast glowing in the dawning light, forgetting the cares of life in the ecstasy of song.

Beside admonishing others to cheerfulness, the robin sets the example. Not only is his cheering voice the first in the morning and the last at night—of the day birds—but no rain is wet enough to dampen his spirits. In a drizzly, uncomfortable day, when all other birds go about their necessary tasks of food-hunting in dismal silence, the robin is not a whit less happy than when the sun shines; and his cheery voice rings out to comfort not only the inmates of the damp little home in the maple, but the owners of water-proofs and umbrellas who mope in the house.

The most delightful study of one summer, not long ago, was the daily life, the joys and sorrows, of a family of robins, whose pretty castle in the air rested on a stout fork of a maple-tree branch near my window. Day by day I watched their ways till I learned to know them well.

The seat chosen for observations was under a tree on the lawn, which happened to be the robin's hunting-ground; and here I sat for hours at a time, quietly looking on at his work and listening to the robin talk around me; the low, confidential chat in the trees where the little wife was busy, the lively gossip across the street with neighbors in another tree, the warning "Tut! tut!" when a stranger appeared, the war-cry when an intruding bird was to be driven away, and the joyous "P-e-e-p! tut, tut, tut," when he alighted on the fence and surveyed the lawn before him, flapping his wings and jerking his tail with every note.

In truth, the sounds one hears in a robin neighborhood are almost as various as those that salute his ear among people; the laugh, the cry, the scold, the gentle word, the warning, the alarm, and many others.

When I first took my seat I felt like an intruder, which the robin plainly considered me to be. He eyed me with the greatest suspicion, alighting on the ground in a terrible flutter, resolved to brave the ogre, yet on the alert, and ready for instant flight should anything threaten. The moment he touched the ground, he would lower his head and run with breathless haste five or six feet; then stop, raise his head as pert as a daisy, and look at the monster to see if it had moved. After convincing himself that all was safe, he would turn his eyes downward, and in an instant thrust his bill into the soil where the sod was thin, throwing up a little shower of earth, and doing this again and again, so vehemently that sometimes he was taken off his feet by the jerk. Then he would drag out a worm, run a few feet farther in a panic-stricken way, as though "taking his life in his hands," again look on the ground, and again pull out a worm; all the time in an inconsequent manner, as though he had nothing particular on his mind, and merely collected worms by way of passing the time.

So he would go on, never eating a morsel, but gathering worms till he had three or four of the wriggling creatures hanging from his firm little beak. Then he would fly to a low branch, run up a little way, take another short flight, and thus having, as he plainly intended by this zigzag course, completely deceived the observer as to his destination, he would slip quietly to the nest, and quickly dispose of his load. In half a minute he was back again, running and watching, and digging as before. And this work he kept up nearly all day. In silence, too, for noisy and talkative as the bird is, he keeps his mouth shut when on the ground. In all my watching of robins for years in several places, I scarcely ever heard one make a sound when on the ground, near a human dwelling.

Once I was looking through blinds, and the bird did not see me. He had, after much labor, secured an unusually large worm, and it lay a few inches away where it fell as he gave it the final "yank." This was an extraordinary case; the robin was too full to hold in, and there bubbled out of his closed bill a soft "Cheery! cheery! be cheery!" hardly above a whisper and half frightened withal. Then catching the trophy he flew away, doubtless to show his luck, and tell his tale at home.

The robin has been accused of being quarrelsome; and to be sure he does defend his home with vigor, driving away any bird which ventures to alight on his special maple-tree, sometimes with a loud cry of defiance, and again without a sound, but fairly flinging himself after the intruder so furiously that not even the king-bird—noted as a tyrant over much larger birds—can withstand him. But jealous as he is of his own, he is equally ready to assist a neighbor in trouble. One day while I was studying him a great uproar arose in the orchard. Robin voices were heard in loud cries, and instantly those near the house took wing for the scene of distress. With my glass I could see many robins flying about one spot, and diving one after another into the grass, where there was a great commotion and cries of some other creature—I thought a hen. The robins were furious, and the fight grew very warm, while every now and then a small object was tossed into the air.

Hurrying down to the scene of the warfare, I found that the creature in the grass was a hen-turkey with one chick. She was wild with rage, shaking and tossing up what looked like another young turkey, and the robins, evidently taking the side of the victim, were delivering sharp pecks and scolding vigorously. Securing with some difficulty the object of her fury, I found it to be a young robin, which had fallen from a nest, and which no doubt the usually meek turkey thought threatened danger to her own infant.

The poor little fellow was too badly hurt to live, and although the turkey was removed, some time passed before calmness was restored to the neighborhood. It seemed to me that the chatter in the trees that evening was kept up longer than usual, and I fancied that every little youngster still living in the nest heard the direful tale, and received a solemn warning.

I was surprised to discover, in my close attention to them, that although early to rise robins are by no means early to bed. Long after every feather was supposed to be at rest for the night, I would sit out and listen to the gossip, the last words, the scraps of song—different in every individual robin, yet all variations on the theme "Be cheery," —and often the sharp "He he he he he!" so like a girl's laugh, out of the shadowy depths of the maple.

Once I saw a performance that looked as if the robin wanted to play a joke "with intent to deceive." Hearing a strange bird note, as usual I hastened to my post. From the depths of a thick chestnut-tree came every moment a long-drawn-out, mournful "S-e-e-e-p!" as though some bird was calling its mate. It was not very loud, but it was urgent, and I looked the tree over very carefully with my opera-glass before I caught sight of the culprit, and was amazed to see the robin. The tone was so entirely unlike any I ever heard from him that I should not have suspected him even then, but I saw him in the very act. No sooner did he notice that he was observed than he gave a loud mocking "He he he!" and flew across the lawn to his own tree.

One morning he was not to be seen at his usual work, but a furious calling came from the other side of the lawn. It was anxious and urgent, and it was incessant. I resolved to see what was the trouble. Stealing quietly along, I came in sight of the bird, loudly calling, fluttering his wings, and in evident trouble, though I could not imagine the cause, until looking closely I saw perched on a branch of a cedar tree a fat, stupid-looking bird, fully as big as the robin, and covered with feathers, but with a speckled breast, and no tail worth mentioning.

There he sat, like a lump of dough, head down in his shoulders and bill sticking almost straight up, and neither the tenderest coaxing nor the loudest scolding moved him in the least. In fact, I thought he was dead, till the opera-glass showed that he winked. But stupid and ugly as he looked, he was the darling of the heart in that little red breast, and the parent fluttered wildly about while I found a stick, and jarred the branch slightly as a gentle hint that he should obey his papa. That started the youngster, and away he flew, as well as anybody, to the other side of the walk.

Wondering why the mother did not take part in this training, I peeped into the nest, where I found her sitting, and I concluded she must be raising a second family. It was indeed time for that grown-up baby to learn to care for himself before there was another family to feed. While I was looking at the nest and its frightened yet brave little owner, the young robin came back and alighted on the ground, and so proud and happy yet so anxious a parent is rarely seen. It was soon evident that this was Master Robin's first lesson in the worm business; he was now to be taught the base of supplies, and I kept very quiet while the scene went on. The father would hop ahead a few feet and call persuasively, "Come on!" The awkward youngling answered loudly: "Wait! wait!" Then he would hop a few steps, and papa would dig up a worm to show him how, and tenderly offer it as a slight lunch after his exertion. So they went on, that clumsy and greedy youngster induced by his desire for worms, while the patient teacher encouraged and worked for him. As for making an effort for himself, the notion never entered his head.

Not long after I saw one of the same brood seated on a twig and asking to be fed. I was quite near, and the robin papa hesitated to come. Master Robin called more and more sharply, drawing up his wings without opening them, exactly like a shrug of the shoulders, and jerking his body in such a way that it looked like stamping his foot. It was a funny exhibition of youthful imperiousness, and resembled what in a child we call "spunkiness."

One of the most interesting entertainments of the later days was to hear the young bird's music lesson. In the early morning the father would place himself in the thickest part of the tree, not as usual on the top, in plain sight, and with his pupil near him would begin, "Cheery! cheery! be cheery!" in a loud, clear voice; and then would follow a feeble, wavering, uncertain attempt to copy the song. Again papa would chant the first strain, and baby would pipe out his funny notes. This was kept up, till in a surprisingly short time, after much daily practice both with the copy and without, I could hardly tell father from son.

When the maple leaves turned, in the fall, and the little home in the tree was left empty and desolate, I had it brought down to examine. It was a curious and remarkably well-made nest, being a perfect cup of clay, a little thicker around the top, well moulded, and covered inside and out with dry grass. This snug cottage of clay has been the scene of some of the sweetest experiences of all lives, great as well as small. For the happiness it has held I will preserve it; and thus moralizing I placed it on a bracket in memory of a delightful study of the Bird of the Morning.—Olive Thorne Miller, in Atlantic Monthly.

The Chinese Race.

On board the Australia, on which I sailed to Honolulu, writes Moncure D. Conway, there is a rather venerable Chinaman, called John Tuck, who is nearly blind and seems to do only light work. When a number of years ago one of the Pacific Mail ships was taking a cargo of gold to Hong Kong a fire broke out, the Chinese sailors were demoralized and this man mainly controlled them, taking the side of the officers. It was largely owing to him that the crew did not seize everything for a piratical expedition. [The ship sunk and there is some talk of trying to find the bars of gold still in that water.] The company would not part from John Tuck after that. They all speak highly of the Chinese servants on board, and surely there could not be better servants. Our cooks are Chinamen, and I only wish there were such on some of the Atlantic steamships on which I have traveled. Every dish that comes on the table has plainly had special care bestowed on it, and our daily curry (an old traveler tells me) is equal to any that can be got in any country. There are on board about 100 Chinese, men and women, on their way to settle in the Sandwich Islands. Ever since we left San Francisco, and even now, when we are in the tropics, these people prefer to cram themselves like sardines in their hold beneath the deck and play dominos while they melt, rather than enjoy their deck and the breezes that never fail us. The inner being of these Chinamen must be curiously constructed. The women, several of whom have babies, do not play at dominos, nor anything else, yet, instead of enjoying the open air, they sit in their small rooms below the deck. The captain showed me around the ship, and in one small room we found four women and two babies, though they are all allotted ample room. There seems to be a swarming instinct, as of bees in a hive, at work in them. I observed that the two Chinese babies were decidedly pretty, and there was nothing in their features that appeared characteristic of their race. I could hardly have distinguished them from bright mulatto infants. Unless while he is playing at dominos, I have observed no Chinaman in a state of repose. No matter what the heat or the time of day, these men seem to be always doing something, as if motion rather than inertia were their natural state. They move about as noiselessly as incessantly, and at table appear to anticipate one's request before it is uttered. Their faces are always peaceful, and I have only observed one that has any wrinkles in it. They are said to have remarkably good health, despite their disregard of ventilation and their opium smoking. Their two passions are opium and gambling, but their friendlier critics say that they do not carry either to the excess prevalent among whisky-drinkers and gamblers of whiter complexion.

—An Indianapolis minister believes that base-ball increases the loafer crop. —Chicago Tribune.

Religious.

THANKSGIVING HYMN.

Night's solemn hush is o'er me. Lo! I bend
Before the beauty of this mystic hour.
No still, small voice, no sounds supernal blend
Their strains with all the sweet, uplifting power
In which my soul utters its grateful cry;
And yet a blessing falls through all the hallowed sky.

Soul of all life! the heart within me thrills
In reverent worship for the love Divine
With which Thou clothest all the vales and hills
With beauty; for the fruitful corn and wine
Of earth's abundance; for its flocks and herds,
For flowers and streams and verdure and the song of birds.

We thank Thee for the sunshine flecking o'er
The grassy meadows; for the burnished gold
Of morning, and the rainbow tints before
The sun is fled, when the fair day grows old,
And for the clouds that flock in pageant by,
In grandeur sailing down the radiant western sky.

We thank Thee for the smile and clasp of hands,
When friend meets friend upon the devious way
Of life's strange journey o'er the shifting sands
Of tortuous years, where pause we not or stay,
E'en when a loved one sinketh to his rest,
Breathing his life out gently on the earth's broad breast.

Thanks for the benediction of Thy love
Celestial, falling with a Heavenly grace
From out those heights, where angel ones, above
The scene of our temptations, gladly trace
The paths by which our steps may safely climb
Those shining heights beyond, where life shall grow sublime.

We thank Thee, O our Father, that we live!
That endless cycles roll beyond our ken,
That all the pure affections we receive
And give, that bind us to our fellow men,
Shall bloom and ripen in that home above,
Where dwell we evermore with peace, and joy, and love.

—Hester M. Poole, in Continent.

THANKFUL IN ALL THINGS.

We count too often only the rosary of our outward prosperities, and measure our gratitude too much by the shining pearls of our successes, as we sit in silent review of the year at the Thanksgiving service. There is a deeper and a truer thankfulness than this, and Mr. Howells has put it into strong verse:

"Lord, for the erring thought
Not into evil wrought;
Lord, for the wicked will
Betrayed and baffled still;
For the heart from itself kept,
Our Thanksgiving accept.

"For ignorant hopes that were Broken to our blind prayer;
For pain, death, sorrow sent
Unto our chastisement;
For all loss of seeming good
Quicken our gratitude."

There is a truer prosperity than that which counts its bank notes, its bonds, stocks and bushels of wheat. For health and vigor, for increase of goods, for unbroken family circles and for unsundered friendships it is our duty to give thanks; but is Thanksgiving-Day only for those who are prosperous as the world counts prosperity? Is there to be no song of rejoicing, no prayer of gratitude to the Infinite Giver from the households that are darkened and the hearts that are desolate? "Though He slay me yet will I trust Him," said the noble old man out of whose opulent life a whirlwind of trouble had swept every possession, every earthly affection, every earthly hope.

We thank God for the flower; we do not thank Him enough for the seed. We thank Him for the perfect fruit; we do not thank Him enough for the long, slow process by which the fruit ripens. We thank Him for the summer, with its soft air and its masses of fragrant color; we do not thank Him for the winter, with its blasts and its snows. And yet His goodness is as great in the cold as in the heat, in the storm as in the calm, in the cloud as in the sunshine. We are continually asking for courage and fortitude, but when the hard and perilous times come which mold our feebleness into strength and transform our timorousness into bravery, we do not see that our prayer is being answered; we send up daily petitions for patience, but when annoyances and perplexities throw their meshes over us and train us into the very habit we ask for, we fail to read in them the reply of Divine Providence. Our heartfelt longing is for the development of the highest and noblest things that are in us, but our thanksgiving limits itself too often to the comforts and pleasures that satisfy our poorest cravings. We are thankful to be comfortable when we ought to rejoice that God will not suffer us to find comfort in any but the highest things.

We need to thank God that He delivers us from ourselves; that He denies our wishes, thwarts our plans, defeats our purposes. The true thanksgiving service must make room for every son of man, however afflicted or sorrowing; it is not a feast for the rich and happy; it has its prayer of gratitude and its psalm of praise for the poor and the afflicted. We must rejoice not in ourselves but in God; we must count not on our own prosperities, but the ministries of His infinite love. He lives and we live in Him; His life sweeps our little lives within the impregnable circle of an unchanging and an unfailing love. Wealth comes with the morning, and at night it has taken wings and is gone; pleasure smiles upon us, and then hides herself; friends come close to our innermost souls, and then vanish out of sight; hands that minister to us grow cold, eyes that shine like stars of hope upon us are closed, hearts that beat for us are stilled; but God abides, and the mighty power of His immortality makes all that we worthily love imperishable.

Faith lays the foundation of an hourly and eternal gratitude, and gives the key-note of an everlasting song. We are weak, but One is strong, and we lean on Him forever; we are but for a day, but One is for eternity, and we breathe the air of His immortality; our lives change and are at the mercy of winds and storms, but One holds the winds in the hollow of His hands, and He is our God, our Friend, our Comforter. We can not tell what a day may bring forth, but the future unrolls like a scroll before His gaze; we do not know the possibilities of our own natures nor what to ask for when we crave a blessing; He sees the seeds of immortal beauty and fruitage that are sown in us, He brings the winter that fertilizes and protects the soil, the summer that enriches and vitalizes it, the autumn that brings mellow and beautiful fruit. We see ourselves in the dim light of a brief earthly day, God sees us in the radiance of eternity; we ask for that which will make us comfortable for an hour, God gives us that which will enrich us forever. We plan for time, God brushes aside our poor structure and lays for us, broad and deep, immortal foundations. Thank God, then, not only for the golden coin which drops from His treasury into our lives, but also for the inexhaustible wealth which bears an image and superscription which we have not yet learned to value at its worth; thank Him for health, and lands, and friends; but thank Him above all for that sleepless and changeless ministry, whether of joy or sorrow, which makes us the heirs of His glory, and the children of His immortality.—Christian Union.

Goodness of a Good Man.

True goodness consists in the suppression of self. We find that suppression in the case of Barnabas, in the surrender of his goods at the beginning, in the waiving of his own prejudices in order to welcome the Gentile converts, and in his unenvying yielding of the foremost place to the young man whom he himself had first taken by the hand. All these incidents point to the same great truth—that goodness and the crucifixion of self are but two names for one thing.

This is but the other side of the thought that all goodness is loving obedience to the will of God. God and self are the two polar opposites, one or other of which must be the center of our lives. All varieties of character and conduct come down to these two great varieties at last. Either we are seeking to please God, and then we are good, or else we are living for self, in a more or less gross and direct fashion, and then, I am afraid, we must complete the antithesis, and say—we are bad. In such life, however white and glittering it may look, there is a core of corruption.

To live to self, whether it be our judgment or our own taste, or our passions, or our own lusts, is sin, and it is death. To live to God is goodness and life; and to live to God is the only way by which we cease to live to self. We must die in order to live. All goodness is martyrdom, the martyrdom of self, that the life of God, which is life indeed, may flow into our souls. In the lowest region of all we must sacrifice possessions, and in every region of experience we must give up ourselves, our prejudices, or ambitions, our notions, our tastes, and worst of all, and most comprehensive of all, our will, and everything that is ours but our consciences, if we would have the fair beauty of goodness in our characters. Old fairy tales describe how a loathy serpent, twining round a tree, had to be slain by a sharp sword ere the spell was broken, and the foul thing becomes a princess living in her beauty. So we ourselves have to slay ourselves, and out of the ugly, poisonous self that we slay struggles forth, beautiful and radiant, the better self, which is the image and gift of Christ. All goodness is self-repression.—The Churchman.

Do Your Work Well.

"Whatever is worth doing at all is worth doing well."

The beauty of this maxim is best seen by comparison, by placing before us a useful life, and one that is in no way commendable.

The old Greek architects laid the foundations of a temple as thoroughly as if the stones were to meet the public gaze.

The scholar whose lessons barely escape the mark of failure, who is never quite up to the mark in anything, is laying the foundation for a worthless character. Character is not ready-made; it grows day by day, and at last becomes a coat-of-mail that can not be put on or laid aside at will.

There was once a member of the British House of Commons who rose to that distinction from the humblest origin. One day, during a warm debate, an aristocratic member said, sneeringly: "I remember when you blacked my father's boots." "Well, sir," was the dignified reply, "did I not black them well?" By being thorough in whatever he undertook, he fitted himself for responsible situations, and made as good a member of the House of Commons as boot-black.

It is well for Christians to be all that they profess to be, for the sake of the soul-growth it secures to them, as well as the benefit it is to those who look sharply after their short-comings, and are not sorry when they discover them.

We know a few whose seats in church are seldom vacant of a Sabbath day, and whose names can be found on church books; but that is all we know, all anybody knows, respecting their religious experience or devotion. As professing Christians, they "pass muster," and that is all. How will it be when they appear "in that multitude which no man can number?" Will they "pass muster" there?—Golden Rule.

Gems of Thought.

—Reflection is an angel which points out the errors of the past and gives us courage to avoid them in the future.

—He that is choice of his time will also be choice of his company, and choice of his actions.—Paley.

—The noblest spirits are those which turn to Heaven, not in the hour of sorrow but in that of joy. Like the lark, they wait for the clouds to disperse, that they may soar up into their native element.

—The Interior suggests that if the 600,000 Presbyterians should add one penny saved by the reduction of postage to the widow's two mites, taking it for granted that they write on an average one letter a day, it would add a very large sum to the Lord's treasury in a year.

—Infinite toil would not enable you to sweep away a mist; but by ascending a little you may often look over it altogether. So it is with our moral improvement; we wrestle fiercely with a vicious habit, which would have no hold upon us if we ascended into a higher moral atmosphere.—Helps.

Our Young Folks.

TOM WEE.

"Hear ye," the merry gossips say,
"A tale of the last Thankful Day:"

(9 O'CLOCK.)

Up from his perch on grandpa's knee,
Up to the dear face, soberly
Looked Tommy Wee, that merry elf,
The while he murmured to himself:
"He'll go to church and pray—and pray,
He'll have a jolly time, his way,
To-day."

(12 O'CLOCK.)

Up to the turkey crisp and brown,
Up to the mince pies, smiling down
Mid hosts of goodies from the shelf,
Looked Tommy, murmuring to himself:
"He's gone to church to pray—and pray;
I'll have a jolly time, my way,
To-day."

(4 O'CLOCK.)

Up in his little trundle-bed,
Up, covered close from foot to head,
Lay Tommy Wee, a sorry elf,
Lay Tommy, murmuring to himself:
"Oh, what is turkey? what is pie?
If only I don't die—don't die,
Next time Thanksgivin' comes this way,
I'll go to church and pray—and pray
All day!"

"Think you," the merry gossips say,
"He'll keep his word, this Thankful Day?"
—Wide Awake.

SIX THANKSGIVING TURKEYS.

Dan Riley was eating his breakfast. Strange to say, he wasn't thinking much about the buckwheat cakes and honey this morning, though grandma always said breakfast was the only time that Dan was not absent-minded. She had known him go to school without his hat, and go to bed in his boots, and leave his candle burning all night, and forget to mail a letter for a week; but he never failed, grandma would say, with a funny twinkle, to hear Prue's step at the door, and was always there to meet her and bring in the hot cakes.

It was two days before Thanksgiving. There was a fine snow on the ground and Dan had a new sled. Ike Paxton, his chum, had no sled and no time to make one (it was all Ike's mother could do to spare him school times, and almost more than she could do to feed and clothe him and the other three boys other times). Should he let Ike coast with him Thanksgiving, when all the fellows met on Big Spring Hill—for, of course, even Ike would have some Thanksgiving holiday? or should he give him his old piece of a sled, that wouldn't go straight and would certainly go to smash the first time it struck against a tree?

Meantime, grandma was interviewing grandpa about her Thanksgiving dinner. Son John was going to drive over in his big sleigh, with wife and six children; and daughter Caroline would bring her family to dinner; "and I am determined to cook two turkeys," said this old lady, as fiercely as if somebody were going to oppose her.

"Very well," said Farmer Riley, smiling. "You don't say nothin' 'bout how many ears of corn Dobbin gets. I ain't got nothin' to say against your two turkeys."

"And that ain't all," continued grandma, still defying an imaginary opposer. "I want another one killed for Widder Aldrich. Don't you think, father, when I asked her, at Miss Roger's quiltin', whether she put chopped parsley in her turkey gravy, she said she hadn't had a turkey to cook for so long she most forgot. I just made up my mind that minute that I'd kill three turkeys, 'stead of two, this Thanksgiving."

"All right, old woman," said the farmer, finishing off his breakfast with a glass of fresh buttermilk. "Better have 'em killed 'fore night and hung up. Do you hear, Dan? If granny wants all her turkeys killed, don't you ask no questions. Just go ahead and do it."

"And Dan," said grandma, "don't be too late getting at it."

Dan was busy picturing himself, alone in his glory, flashing down Big Spring Hill on "The Rainbow" and trying to persuade himself that to a fellow who had no sled an old, rickety trap would seem a very fine affair. He didn't take in very clearly what was expected of him, but contented himself with a vague assurance that he was to kill all grandma's turkeys and ask no questions.

He thought he was beginning his job pretty early that evening; but the November twilight seemed very short, and he had only killed six turkeys when he heard the supper-bell rung out of the window at him and knew he must give up the job for the night. He lugged them up to the kitchen door, washed his hands at the pump, and, by no means in a gentle humor, went in to supper.

"Well, Dan," said grandma, putting an extra spoonful of sugar in his cup, "did you get through?"

"No'm," he said, in a very injured tone: "not half through. I only killed six."

"Six!" said Grandma Riley, and set down the cup and saucer. There was a blank silence, while an uncomfortable suspicion began to dawn upon absent-minded Dan.

"Grandpa said I was to kill all your turkeys, without asking any questions," he said, presently; and then grandpa roared out laughing, and laughed and laughed, until grandma herself had to join, and Dan. They were still at it when Prue rushed in with the overwhelming statement that there were six "kilt" turkeys at the kitchen door.

Her chances for scolding Dan being spoiled by all this laughing, Grandma Riley took the fact of the six turkeys very quietly.

"'T'aint often you make me a present, mother," said the old farmer, "and I want one of them turkeys for Jim Coales' family."

"Grandma, can't I have one for Ike Paxton's mother?" said Dan, conscious of a guilty thought that this might buy off his conscience about that coasting business.

"Oh! go 'long," said grandma: "but you needn't ask for t'other, 'cause Prue is a-goin' to fetch it to her old uncle. And now come 'long and help me and Prue to pick them six turkeys, Dan'el Riley."

Next afternoon Dan and Dobbin went 'round getting rid of those turkeys. But giving is a very spreading sort of thing. When Dan got to Mrs. Paxton's, he had almost forgotten his old broken sled, and he and Ike laid their plans for double-riding on the Rainbow. And the spreading did not stop there. That was the gayest Thanksgiving the Rileys had ever known. The story of the six turkeys was told amid shouts of happy laughter, and when it had quieted down John's wife said:

"Sister Caroline, while we come home to eat mother's turkeys, I think we might kill our own for somebody that hasn't any." And they made the bargain between them.

When Grandpa Riley was covering the bedroom fire for the night grandma shook her head at him from the pillows and said, in the tone of one who quells an enemy:

"You needn't say a word, old man, I mean to kill six turkeys every Thanksgiving as long as I live!"—E. P. Allan, in N. Y. Independent.

Good Mother Woodcock.

My friend the woodcock has an excellent wife, and an excellent mother—that is, an excellent mother to his children. He may have had an excellent mother himself; probably he did, for of all birds the woodcock mother is the kindest and most affectionate to her little ones. But what I wish to state, though I'll confess that, like Brother Boreas, I'm a little long-winded this time, is that the offspring of my friend Woodcock actually are carried about by their mother when they are too young to escape from danger unaided. She does not carry them by her bill (no, even the cat-bird would not attempt that), but she closes her little feet upon them, and so holds them as safely as your mother holds the baby in her careful arms.

In numbers of cases, hunters have seen the great-eyed birds rise and fly away heavily and low, seemingly holding something between their feet. Mr. C. F. Holder, one of the St. Nicholas writers, tells me that a Western sportsman recently had curiosity enough to follow such a bird, and a good chase she led him, through a hay-field, over brambles, bushes and stones, but he finally gained upon her, and saw that in her feet she carried a tiny downy woodcock, that seemed not the least alarmed by such a strange mode of traveling. The old bird carried it several hundred yards, before alighting with it, and then quickly disappeared in the tall, thick grass.

My little Mrs. Woodcock is the proudest mother I ever knew. She thinks her children are perfection. To me they seem to have rather large mouths, but she scouts the idea of that being anything against their beauty. To her way of thinking a large mouth gives an openness of expression to the young that is simply charming. Ah, Woodcock is a happy fellow!—St. Nicholas.

Money in the Antipodes.

Socially money will do very much in America; judiciously expended I think it will do even more in England; in the way of sheer purchase of social recognition it will do curiously little in Australia. There was, indeed, a time there when, in a social sense, the moneyed man was regarded with actual suspicion. And for this there were some grounds. The original moneyed man might have had unpleasant antecedents, of which time had not yet effaced the memory. Non olet is not true of nummus in Australia, although it is safe to predicate that with the lapse of years non olebit. But now there is a vast number of moneyed men in Australia, and the means whereby their wealth has come to them are known as reasonably savory. They have therefore ceased to be regarded with suspicion. I do not think people at home have any idea how large fortunes are in Australia, and how many of those large fortunes there are. Once in South Australia I had occasion to speak of a friend who had come from that colony and taken up his residence in London. I spoke of him as a very rich man. "Oh, no," was the answer, "he is very well off, but we don't reckon him a very rich man." "Why," said I, "I understood him to be worth a quarter of a million!" "Well, I hope he is a little better than that," said my interlocutor, "but still we don't reckon him here as very rich." I am not going to compile a roll of Australian millionaires, because, for one thing, it would take up too much space. But this I may affirm, that two-thirds of them are not in society, nor nourish any hope of ever being admitted within its pale. If you find one of them inside it, he has not crossed the palisade on the golden ladder; he entered by the gate in virtue of his social attributes. If these are unsatisfactory, you will find him outside among the nettles; or again, it may be, far away in the bush, a man content with himself, and caring for none of these things. For it must be said that in Australia there is no universal aspiration after the flower garden of society. But the moneyed aspirant will not find that his wealth gives him social prestige. There are Australians now in England who have entertained royalty, and whose guest-lists have filled columns of the Morning Post, yet who, in their native land, have never, with all their efforts, got further than the outlying fringes of Australian society.—Archibald Forbs, in Contemporary Review.

The Superior Man.

"What's this Dead Scott decision about?" queried Mrs. Wigglesworth, looking up from the paper. "Dread Scott—not Dead Scott," corrected Mr. Wigglesworth, with a man's patronizing smile of superiority. "Well, Dread Scott, then. What is it?" Mr. Wigglesworth was stuck, but he looked wise. "Something to do with the Mexican war," he explained. "General Scott, you know, was a terrible fighter, and the greasers got to referring to him as Dread Scott. Some decision or other he made about a battle is what the papers mean." Mrs. Wigglesworth, with a satisfied air, folded the paper back and turned to see if any new people had been born, while Mr. Wigglesworth winked to himself at his having got out of it so smoothly. "All a woman needs," he mentally remarked, "is to have a thing explained one way or another. Don't matter what you tell 'em, so long as it's something. It's a mighty sight easier than having to answer a hundred questions; makes 'em respect a man, too."—Rockland Courier-Gazette.

HEYN & BRO. RISING SUN,

OVERCOATS, OVERCOATS, OVERCOATS, OVECOATS,

For Young Men, Youths, Boys and Children in Great Varieties, and Low Prices. All goods sold by us guaranteed. Also a Big Line of Ready Made Clothing on hand.

A full Stock of seasonable Dress Goods, with the latest Novelties in trimmings. Ladies and Gents' Underwear, Hosiery and Gloves.

Heyn & Bro., Rising Sun, Indiana.

Genuine Schofield Blankets, Jeans, Flannels and Yarns, Prices Lower than any other store.

No Misrepresentation Practiced to Effect Sales. We invite Everybody to inspect our Goods.

Heyn & Bro., Rising Sun, Indiana.

Cloaks, Dolmans, Circulars and Jackets, for Ladies, Misses, and Children, in all colors and grade, latest styles.

Heyn & Bro., Rising Sun, Indiana.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL,
Proprietors.

BURLINGTON, KY. NOV. 21. 1883.

ADVERTISING RATES.

1 Column	1 year	$80
1 "	½ "	40
1 "	¼ "	20
¼ "	1 "	20
¼ "	½ "	10
¼ "	¼ "	6

For announcing candidates, $5. Obituary poetry, 5 cents per line. Obituary notices 20 lines free; over that number (except the announcement of the death) 3 cents per line.

Tributes of respect from lodges, &c., $1 50

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One year	$1 50
Six months	75
Three months	40

THE office of Coroner is again vacant. Look out Dr. Cropper.

IN the Owen Circuit Court Wm. Carter was fined $600 for malicious shooting.

SOME days last week in the northwest thermometers ranged from 15 to 40 degrees below zero.

THE nail factory and rolling mills of the Norton Iron Works at Ashland burned on the 14th inst.

AT Prospect Park, N. Y., last week, J. B. Barnby & Co's. H. B. Winship trotted a mile in 2:08½.

JUDGE HOADLEY wants no expense displayed at his inauguration as Governor of Ohio. Another indication that he is a man of judgment.

MR. RANDALL has been quite sick. Probably he has a slight recollection of the state of Hoadley's health during the Ohio campaign this fall.

NEARLY all the ladies in Washington are for Carlisle for Speaker, which is a pretty good indication that his chances for election are good.

IT costs Woodford county $33 55 a head, per year, to keep its paupers. They certainly feed on wind and dust.

LEXINGTON and Frankfort are reviving the old quarrel about the capitol. When they get things pretty warm Burlington will come in as a dark horse.

WM. H. VANDERBILT'S registered four per cent. United States bonds bring him an income in the way of interest of $3 58 per minute. He owns $47,050,000 of them.

IT is in evidence in a London newspaper suit that dispatches of thirty words from America are sometimes expanded three quarters of a column after their reception in London.

HOGGISH—Select butchers and heavy shippers, $4 80@5 00; fair to good packers, at $4 60@4 85; fair to good light, $4 40@4 65; common, $3 75@4 35; culls, $3 00@3 80: stock hogs, $3 50@4 25.

THE main walls of the Mormon Temple in Salt Lake were completed last Friday. They are of solid granite eighty-five feet high and ten feet thick, and were begun twenty-eight years ago. The cost thus far has been $4,500,000.

FITCHE'S lumber yard in Lawrenceburg, Ind., was destroyed by fire last week, the loss being estimated at $50,000. The stock of lumber had been assigned to Fitche's bank which put up its shutters some months since.

BUTLER says that he will not guarantee that the Democrats will carry Massachusetts next year, but he will guarantee that the State will need all its Republican talent at home, having none to spare other states during the presidential campaign.

Ada Atkinson's Murder At Last Avenged.

FOWLER, IND., Nov. 19—About 10:30 last night a man on horseback slowly rode to the jail from the southwest. After riding around the courthouse he turned, broke, and rode rapidly back in the direction whence he came. In about an hour after about 300 masked men rode into town. They hitched their horses, posted guards to warn away citizens, and went to the east door of the jail, where they soon found an entrance by breaking down the door with sledges. They then very quietly, but with great determination, proceeded to break down the iron doors leading into the corridors. This took some, perhaps half an hour. Soon, however, the doors gave away under the skill and labor of the avengers. Old man Nelling met them at the door of his cell, already dressed, and ready to go to his doom. He was quickly walked to a carriage, in which was a rope. The only remark that he made was, "Go a little slow, gentlemen, I am older than some of you." He was taken to Oxford and hung immediately.

THE new revision of the Old Testament is completed, and will soon appear for the sanction or condemnation of a charitable public. It is said that it can hardly be recognized as the old book, and it is predicted that it will not be as favorably received as was the New Testament revision. Such radical changes in the composition of the old book will not be satisfactory to the older people who are able to understand the teachings of the Bible expressed as it is. The modern expressions that the revisors have seen proper to introduce will not gain the confidence of the masses, no matter how hard they labor to prove that the original translators were a set of ignoramuses. Too great a change will not take with the people.

THE Warsaw Independent advocates a change in the school law, and allow each county to retain the money which the school tax produces therein. If this change were made, the respective school districts might claim that the lines ought to be drawn closes, and each district have for its exclusive use all the money its property yields.

THEY are trying to get up an oil excitement over in Dearborn county, Indiana. Some experienced oil men are taking hold of the matter, and if they can get the land they will proceed to sink wells, and ascertain what can be done, if any thing. No doubt but now is a good time to sell Dearborn county land.

ON the Mexican National railroad last week, a train was wrecked and robbed of $8,000 in silver, which was in care of the express messenger. Before the work of robbing the passengers was commenced, the robbers became frightened, mounted their horses and fled. Mexico seems to have a Jesse James gang also.

THE weather having reversed, the farmers will now proceed with the stripping of their tobacco, as it is to the advantage of the producer to get his crop on the scales as soon as possible, because of the rapid loss incurred by cold, dry weather.

IT is evident that the newspaper correspondents at Washington are only guessing as to the relative strength of the candidates for Speaker on the first ballot in the caucus.

SAM ROGRS, who killed his brother in Robertson county, has given bond for his appearance for trial, in the sum of $10,000.

THE price of hogs has advanced some.

THERE is considerable excitement in Powell county just now over what some people choose to call the return of a spirit to this earth. A few weeks ago a Mrs. Pettit died, leaving several married children and one single—a girl. The idea of leaving this daughter to fight the battles of life alone was a source of considerable worry to her in her last hours. But she died and was buried, and nothing unusual happened until about three weeks later, when on going out of the house one night just after dark, the daughter heard the voice of her departed mother calling her name. The sound seemed to come from the heavens, and she recognized the voice distinctly. For several nights the daughter went out to listen for the sound, and at last she persuaded some of the neighbors to come out and hear for themselves. They all declared that there is no doubt but that it is the voice of the departed woman. This story has been told us by reliable persons who have been there and heard the voice and recognized it.—Mt. Sterling Sentinel.

DURING the last term of the Powell Circuit Court a decision was rendered in a land suit between Ludfords and Hatins, in which certain lines were indentified. Hatins, in compliance with the judgment of the court began moving the fence as directed, when it was thrown down by Ludfords. This was repeated by the contending parties until threats of violence were made. Last week, two brothers, Ludfords, armed with double-barreled shot-guns, went out to the scene, determined to carry into effect their former threats or have the lines where they wanted them, notwithstanding the opinion of the court to the contrary. They found Hatin at work, when their guns were made to cover him and the order given to throw up his hands. Instead of obeying, he gathered his faithful rifle. The two brothers fired, but without effect. The rifle was then fired, and a ball took effect in the hip of one of the Ludfords, causing an ugly but not a serious wound. With this the parties went to their homes, their blood at fighting heat. This occurrence was on the line between Powell and Menifee, and on the waters of Red river, the Ludfords living in Powell and the Hatins in Menifee. The families of the respective parties are now aroused and swear vengeance. Fears are entertained that one county will be in arms against the other and much blood be shed. The cooler heads are for quelling the disturbance, but the immediate families are on the war-path.—Mt. Sent.

2

A TRUE assistant to nature in restoring the system to perfect health, thus enabling it to resist disease, is Brown's Iron Bitters.

COCHRAN, GA.—Dr. A. J. Lamb says: "I never met with a remedy that gave more satisfaction in cases of debility and prostration than Brown's Iron Bitters."

OWENTON, KY.—Rev. J. W. Waldrop says: "Brown's Iron Bitters greatly relieved me of general debility and indigestion."

Tobacco Market.

Cincinnati, Friday, Nov. 16, 1883.

G'n Trash and Lugs	$1 80@	$4 00
Common Trash	4 50	6 00
Colory Trash	7 00	9 50
Good Br't Trash	10 00	15 00
Fine Br't Trash	16 00	20 00
Dark Lugs	5 00	7 00
Common Lugs	7 00	9 50
Colory Lugs	10 00	12 00
Good Stripping Lugs	13 00	16 50
Fine Str'p'g Lugs	17 00	23 00
Common Leaf	6 00	11 50
Com. Med. Leaf	12 00	14 50
Good Med. Leaf	15	19 50
Good Br't Leaf	20 00	24 75
Fine Br't Leaf	25 00	27 50
Fancy Bright Leaf	28 00	34 50
Com Lug Fillers	7	11 50
Good Lug Fillers	12 00	16 00
Fine Lug Fillers	17 00	22 00
Com. Med. Fil'rs	12 00	16 00
Good Med. Fil'rs	17	19 50
Good L'f Fillers	20 00	24 50
Fine Leaf Fillers	25 00	27 50
Fancy Leaf Fillers	28 00	30 00

BACKLOG SKETCHES, our large 16 page paper, filled with charming serials, stories, choice miscellany etc., is sent 3 mos. on trial for 25 cents; and we send EVERY subscriber FREE our new HOLIDAY PACKAGE, consisting of 10 pieces popular music 10 interesting games, 1 pack of age and fortune-telling cards; 1 pack "Hold to Light" cards, 1 pack fun & flirtation cards, 1 set chromo cards, 13 new tricks in magic 5 new puzzles, game of fortune, the mystic oracle, 25 ways to get rich, Heller's wonderful delusion cards, etc., etc. Endless amusement! Agents wanted. Sample paper for stamp. BACKLOG PUBLISHING CO., Augusta, Me.

Out on the Prairie.

Concerning Something Better than Mrs. Toodles' Wheelbarrow—And the Reasons Why.

When a certain Commissary-General complained to the Duke of Wellington that Sir Thomas Picton had declared he would hang him if the rations for that General's division were not furthcoming at a certain hour, the Duke replied:

"Ah! did he indeed go so far as that? Did he say he'd hang you?"

"Yes my lord."

"Well, General Picton is just the man to keep his word. You'd better get the rations up in time."

But to get rations or anything else up in time one must know when to lay his hand on them. As Mr. Toodles said about the coffin which he had bought at auction and brought home to his wife:

"If anything should happen, my dear, it will be so handy to have in the house."

Being in the great wholesale drug house of William Hart, in Elgin, Ill., one day, Mr. G. H. Sherman, the photographer of that place, remarked, concerning PARKER'S TONIC "I have used it in my family for two years, and I unhesitatingly pronounce it the best medicine we have ever used. It is handy to have in the house, and we are never without it."

Called from the mass of [illegible] Mr. Sherman was right, be good enough to consider these: First, PARKER'S TONIC, is delicious to the palate; second, it invigorates, but does not promote a love for strong drink; third, it cures Coughs and Colds by inciting the torpid organs into healthy action, and opening all the pores of the skin; fourth, it purifies the Blood, thus curing Kidney Liver and Lung diseases and Rheumatism; fifth—

But take it into your house; and it will speak for itself. Once used, will change it for nothing else. Physicians commend it. Price, 50 cents and $1. Hiscox & Co., Chemist, New York.

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Boone Circuit Court, Ky.

Stewart Baker Plff.
vs
James Marshall, Deft.
} Notice of sale in equity

By virtue of a judgment and order of sale of the Boone Circuit Court, rendered at the Oct. term thereof, 1883, in the above cause, the undersigned will, on Monday, the 3d day of Dec., 1883, at 1 o'clock p. m., or thereabout (being County Court day) proceed to offer for sale at public auction, to the highest bidder, on a credit of 6 and 12 months at the Court-house door, in the town of Burlington, the property mentioned in the judgment to wit:

Being a portion of the farm on which the defendant James Marshall now resides near Richwood church this county and is bounded thus: Beginning at a Mulberry tree a corner between the James Marshall and James Rice tracts of land; thence with the line dividing the same N 77⅞ W 4.08 ch. to a stone near the edge of the Richwood pike a corner between James Marshall and L. B. Stephens; thence S 13¼ W 23.80 ch. to a stake; thence N 50 E 28.12 ch. to a stake in Robt. Cleek's line; thence with his line N 4 E 21 ch. to a stake; thence S 59 W 24.30 ch. to the beginning containing 50 acres.

Or sufficient thereof to produce the sums of money so ordered to be made. The purchaser will be required to give bonds with approved security, for the payment of the purchase money, to have the force and effect of a judgment, bearing legal interest from the day of sale, according to law. Bidders will be prepared to comply promptly with these terms. Amount to be raised by sale, $825 85

Bonds payable to the undersigned.

W L RIDDELL, M C B C C

INSURE AT HOME

The Farmers' Mutual Fire

INSURANCE COMPANY

Of Boone County

Is now completely organized and receiving applications for insurance.

Its Rates are Lower

Than those of any other Company, and it gives the farmers of Boone County a

HITHERTO UNKNOWN ADVANTAGE

In keeping their property insured.

EVERY FARMER IN THE COUNTY

should take a policy at once.

N. S. WALTON, President, Petersburg, Ky.

J. H. WALTON, Secretary, Constance, Ky.

R. RANDALL, Treasury.

DIRECTORS.

LEGRAN GAINES, Jeff Utz,
JNO. M. MOODY.

Subscribe for the RECORDER.

County Directory.

OFFICERS.

Assessor—G. M. Riley.
County Surveyor—W. E. Vest.
School Commissioner—D. M. Snyder.
Coroner.—Dr. A. A. Murat, Constance.

COURTS.

CIRCUIT COURT meets the 2d Monday in April and first Monday in October; P. U Major, Judge; W. L. Riddell, Clerk A. G. DeJarnette, Commonwealths Attorney; W. L. Riddell, Trustee Jury Fund.

COUNTY COURT meets the first Monday in every month. L. H. Dills, Judge; S. W. Tolin, County Attorney. M. T. Garnett, Clerk; J. R. Clutterbuck, Sheriff, T. W. Finch and W. T. German, Deputy Sheriffs.

QUARTERLY COURT meets the first Monday in March, June, September and December. The officers of the County Court preside.

COURT OF CLAIMS meets the first Monday in November.

MAGISTRATES' COURTS are held in March, June, September and December, as follows:

Bellevue—M. B. Green, first Saturday, and T. H. Sutton, third Monday. J. M. Moody, Constable.

Burlington—E. H. Baker, Thursday after first Monday, and Oscar Gaines, fourth Monday. R. H. Sandford, Constable.

Carlton A. G. McConnell, Wednesday after second Monday, and B. H. Ryle, Saturday after third Monday. Walter Ryle, Constable.

Petersburg—Jos. Hensley, Wednesday after first Monday, and L. A. Loder fourth Saturday. Geo. Comer, Constable.

Union—M. C. Norman, Thursday after third Monday, and H. Bannister, Thursday after second Monday. A. D. Riley, Constable.

Beever—W. M. Rouse, Friday after the third Monday, and

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Boone Circuit Court, Ky.

Virginia M. Huey, &c. Plffs.
vs
Laura Huey, Deft.
} Notice of sale in Equity.

By virtue of a judgment and order of sale of the Boone Circuit Court, rendered at the Oct., term thereof, 1883, in the above cause, the undersigned will, on Monday, the 3d day of Dec. 1883, at 1 o'clock p. m., or thereabout (being County Court day) proceed to offer for sale at public auction, to the highest bidder, on a credit of 6, 12 & 18 mos. at the Court-house door in the town of Burlington, the property mentioned in the judgment to wit:

101 acres of land being the farm upon which William S. Huey resided at the time of his death and now occupied by John Humphrey and bounded by the lands of T. P. Marshall, the Bradfords, J. T. Ryle, Gen. Smith, &c.

The purchaser will be required to give bonds with approved security, for the payment of the purchase money, to have the force and effect of a judgment, bearing legal interest from the day of sale, according to law. Bidders will be prepared to comply promptly with these terms.

Bonds payable to the undersigned.

W L RIDDELL, M C B C C.

BOONE HOUSE,

BURLINGTON, KY.

C. L. CRISLER, Prop'r.

No pains spared in the accommodation of guests. The table supplied with the delicacies of the season. Stock well cared for. dec. 20-1y

Posted.

We the undersigned hereby give notice that our farms are posted against hunters:

Templeton Gaines,
J E Duncan,
G C Gaddy,
Noah Craven,
C S Balsly,
George Gaines,
Absalom Aylor,

J C Jenkins,
Oscar Gaines,
Ben Clore,
Wm. Clore,
A S Gaines,
O S Gaines,
J. B. Winston,

THE MARVELLOUS WEBBER SINGING DOLL.

"A PRIMA DONNA IN EVERY HOME."

A Mechanical Wonder.

Last year we first introduced this CHARMING NOVELTY to the children of America and it is safe to assert that no Toy ever devised attained such immediate popularity; fully aware of its merit we had thousands of Dolls ready for the Holiday trade notwithstanding which the supply was exhausted early in December, and hundreds of children who came to our store were disappointed. We have been accumulating stock for the past nine months and shall endeavor this year to fill all orders the day of receipt. The Doll has been improved in every way since last year. Instead of the stiff German body as in all imported Dolls our Doll has an AMERICAN MADE BODY with limber joints so that it will sit easily and gracefully in any position. The arm is of Finest Kid with separate fingers. These are positively the finest bodies ever put in a Doll, they are of graceful and natural shape, and much better and more expensively made than the best imported bodies which they will out-wear many times. The Waxen Heads with long hair are of the best French and German make made especially for this Doll and they are as beautiful as life, long hair, beautiful eyes and delicately tinted cheeks. We consider them the finest Doll's Heads ever imported into this country, and that without the Wonderful Singing Attachment THE DOLL ALONE IS WELL WORTH THE ENTIRE PRICE. THE SINGING ATTACHMENT is concealed within the body. It is one of the most ingenious inventions of the age. Its shape and location are shown in the right hand engraving. It is a Perfect Musical Instrument, finely made, not liable to get out of order and so arranged that a slight pressure causes the Doll to sing one of the following airs: "Home sweet home," "Greenville," "I want to be an angel," "There is a happy land," "Sweet bye and bye," "Bonnie Doon," "How can I leave thee?" "A B C Song," "America," "Thou, thou reign'st" (German), "Frohe Botschaft" (German), "Tell Aunt Rhoda," "Buy a broom," "Yankee Doodle," "Coming thro' the Rye," "God bless the Prince of Wales," "Grandfather's Clock," "Child's Song," "Last Rose of Summer," "Joyful Message" (German), "Old Folks at Home," "Pop Goes the Weasel," "So many Stars" (German), "Sleep my Child" (German), "When I a little bird," "Cradle's Empty," "God save the Queen." Walking and talking dolls have long been made, but they are expensive, soon out of order and do not afford the little ones half the pleasure and entertainment that our Wonderful Singing Doll does, which is the Greatest Novelty in CHILDREN'S TOYS EVER PRODUCED and is the most beautiful and appropriate present that can be made to a child. We can furnish three sizes No. 1, 22 inches high, price $2.75. No. 2, 24 inches high, larger head price $3.25. No. 3, 26 inches high, OUR BEST DOLL, price $4.00. These Prices Include Boxing. All three sizes are equally perfect and complete, but the larger the doll the larger the singing attachment and better head. Sent to any address on receipt of price; fine embroidered Chemise 25 cts. extra. THE TRADE SUPPLIED. Address all orders to THE MASSACHUSETTS ORGAN CO., No. 55 Washington Street, Boston, Mass., U. S. A.

☞ FINE COSTUMES for these dolls with underclothing lace trimmed, finely made, $2.00 to $3.00 extra.

A. L. Brown,

THE HATTER,

Cor. Pike and Washington Streets
COVINGTON, - - KY.

Has always on hand a large variety of Men's, Boys' and Children's Hats, and prices GUARANTEED to be as low as the lowest.

Gents' Furnishing Goods a Specialty.

SCROFULA

and all scrofulous diseases, Sores, Erysipelas, Eczema, Blotches, Ringworm, Tumors, Carbuncles, Boils, and Eruptions of the Skin, are the direct result of an impure state of the blood.

To cure these diseases the blood must be purified, and restored to a healthy and natural condition. AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has for over forty years been recognized by eminent medical authorities as the most powerful blood purifier in existence. It frees the system from all foul humors, enriches and strengthens the blood, removes all traces of mercurial treatment, and proves itself a complete master of all scrofulous diseases.

A Recent Cure of Scrofulous Sores.

"Some months ago I was troubled with scrofulous sores (ulcers) on my legs. The limbs were badly swollen and inflamed, and the sores discharged large quantities of offensive matter. Every remedy I tried failed, until I used AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, of which I have now taken three bottles, with the result that the sores are healed, and my general health greatly improved. I feel very grateful for the good your medicine has done me. Yours respectfully, MRS. ANN O'BRIAN."

148 Sullivan St., New York, June 24, 1882.

☞ All persons interested are invited to call on Mrs. O'Brian; also upon the Rev. Z. P. Wilds of 78 East 54th Street, New York City, who will take pleasure in testifying to the wonderful efficacy of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, not only in the cure of this lady, but in his own case and many others within his knowledge.

The well-known writer on the Boston Herald, B. W. BALL, of Rochester, N.H., writes, June 7, 1882:

"Having suffered severely for some years with Eczema, and having failed to find relief from other remedies, I have made use, during the past three months, of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which has effected a complete cure. I consider it a magnificent remedy for all blood diseases."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

stimulates and regulates the action of the digestive and assimilative organs, renews and strengthens the vital forces, and speedily cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, Catarrh, General Debility, and all diseases arising from an impoverished or corrupted condition of the blood, and a weakened vitality.

It is incomparably the cheapest blood medicine, on account of its concentrated strength, and great power over disease.

PREPARED BY

Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.

Sold by all Druggists; price $1, six bottles for $5.

W. J. RICE,
CARPENTER & BUILDER,
BULLITTSVILLE, KY.

Is prepared Raise or Move
EITHER LOG or FRAME BUILDINGS
On Short Notice,
And at the Lowest Possible Figures.

83-tf Your orders respectfully solicited

LUMBER.

Goe. M. Bedinger & Co.,

Erlanger, - - Ky.

We keep constantly on hand all kinds of Lumber, Laths and Shingles. Also Builder's supplies of all kinds.

—Come and see Us.—

may 9-tf

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS FOR THE

LIVER

And all Billious Complaints

Safe to take, being purely vegetable; no griping. Price 25 cts. All Druggists.

For Sale.

House and lot in Hebron, Boone county, Kentucky. This is a very comfortable house located near the center of the town. The lot contains one acre. For further particulars call on or address LYSTRA AYLOR, Hebron, Ky.

INCORPORATED UNDER THE LAWS OF MISSOURI.

CENTRAL MEDICAL & SURGICAL INSTITUTE

OF ST. LOUIS, MO.

SUCCESSORS TO DR. BUTTS' DISPENSARY. OFFICE & ROOMS, No. 920 LOCUST ST.

CHAS. L. LaBARBE, M.D., Pres't & Physician in Charge. NELSON CHESMAN, Treas. & Business Manager.

This Institute has ample facilities and an experienced Faculty. While it succeeds to a large business, which has been established for years, it will aim to extend its medical and surgical practice, giving skillful and scientific treatment to

CHRONIC DISEASES of the Head, Spine, Lungs and Air Passages, Heart, Liver, Stomach and Bowels, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Consumption and Asthma.

BLOOD IMPURITIES, Inherited or caused by impure association, Scrofula, Fever Sores, Ulcers, etc.

DEFORMITIES of the Limbs, Spinal Curvature, Wry-Neck, Diseases of the Joints, Piles, Fistula, Rupture, etc.

WEAKNESS and wasting diseases in old and young men, also all diseases of the genito-urinary organs.

FEMALE irregularities and weaknesses, causing pain in the back or side, etc.

Personal interviews with patients are always preferred. Those unable to visit the Institute will be furnished with blank lists of questions that will aid them in making a full statement of their cases and if not requiring a surgical operation they can be successfully treated by correspondence, and medicines sent by mail or express. To enable us to send proper list of questions applicants should give a brief statement of their trouble.

The Treasurer of the corporation is of Nelson Chesman & Co., Advertising Agents, and refers to the publisher of this or any other newspaper in the United States or Canada regarding responsibility.

Consultation at Office or by mail free and invited.

TUTT'S PILLS

TORPID BOWELS, DISORDERED LIVER, and MALARIA.

From these sources arise three-fourths of the diseases of the human race. These symptoms indicate their existence: Loss of Appetite, Bowels costive, Sick Headache, fullness after eating, aversion to exertion of body or mind, Eructation of food, Irritability of temper, Low spirits, A feeling of having neglected some duty, Dizziness, Fluttering at the Heart, Dots before the eyes, highly colored Urine, CONSTIPATION, and demand the use of a remedy that acts directly on the Liver. As a Liver medicine TUTT'S PILLS have no equal. Their action on the Kidneys and Skin is also prompt; removing all impurities through these three "scavengers of the system," producing appetite, sound digestion, regular stools, a clear skin and a vigorous body. TUTT'S PILLS cause no nausea or griping nor interfere with daily work and are a perfect

ANTIDOTE TO MALARIA.

Sold everywhere, 25c. Office, 44 Murray St., N.Y.

TUTT'S HAIR DYE.

GRAY HAIR OR WHISKERS changed instantly to a GLOSSY BLACK by a single application of this DYE. Sold by Druggists, or sent by express on receipt of $1.

Office, 44 Murray Street, New York.

TUTT'S MANUAL OF USEFUL RECEIPTS FREE.

VIGOROUS HEALTH FOR MEN

THE PASTILLE CURE TRADE MARK FOR NERVOUS DEBILITY

TESTED FOR 5 YEARS

by use in thousands of cases. Founded on scientific medical principles, it has been growing in favor and reputation while its numerous competitors have invariably failed. The direct application of this remedy to the seat of the disease makes its specific influence felt without delay. The natural functions of the human organism are restored. The animating elements of life which have been wasted are given back. The buoyant energy of the brain and muscular system renders the patient cheerful; he gains strength with rapidity.

NERVOUS DEBILITY, organic weakness, and numerous obscure diseases, baffling the skill of best physicians, result for youthful indiscretion, too free indulgence, and over brain work.

Do not temporize while such enemies lurk in your system. Take a remedy that has cured thousands, and does not interfere with you attention to business or cause any pain or inconvenience.

(Send for a Descriptive Pamphlet giving Anatomical Illustrations, which will convince the most sceptical that they can be restored to perfect manhood, and fitted for the duties of life, same as if never affected. Sent free to any one.) Remedy sold ONLY by the

HARRIS REMEDY CO. MF'G. CHEMISTS.
306½ N. 10th. St. ST. LOUIS, MO.

One Month's treatment $3. two months $5. three months $7

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM

A beneficial dressing preferred to similar articles because of its purity and rich perfume. It Restores to Gray Hair the Youthful Color & prevents dandruff and falling of the hair. 50c. & $1. Hiscox & Co., N.Y.

FLORESTON

Excels the finest flower extracts in richness. Delicate, very lasting. No odor like it. Be sure you get FLORESTON Cologne, signature of Hiscox & Co., N. Y., on every label. 25 and 75 cts., at druggists and dealers in perfumes.

COLOGNE

INJECTION SANTINELI

Cures all recent and chronic secret diseases of the Urinary passages in both sexes. Directions in all languages. $1.00 a bottle Druggists, or sent by express on receipt of price secure from observation Fairmount Chemical Co. Cincinnati, Ohio, U. S. A. Sold by W. F. McKim.

PAYSON'S INDELIBLE INK

Is the BEST. No preparation. Used with any clean pen for marking any fabric. Popular for decorative work on linen. Received Centennial MEDAL & Diploma. Established 50 years. Sold by all Druggists, Stationers & News Agt's.

NEVER FAILS

FREE! RELIABLE SELF-CURE.

A favorite prescription of one of the most noted and successful specialists in the U. S. (now retired) for the cure of Nervous Debility, Lost Manhood, Weakness and Decay. Sent in plain sealed envelope free. Druggists can fill it. Address DR. WARD & CO., Louisiana, Mo.

Local News.

Clean up your ice houses.

Have you standard time or old time

Honey bees were on the wing, Monday.

The Boone's regalia brought $15 01—cost $75.

The wind work for a town hall is being done.

The Central Hotel is being partially re-roofed.

Talk's talk, but it takes money to buy town halls.

Haven't had much picnic weather the past ten days.

Occasionally a mob hangs a man north of the Ohio river.

Hog's feet and souse will be on the bill of fare in a few days.

Schofield Blankets at Heyn's, Rising Sun, Ind., at $5 a pair.

Schofield's Jeans at 40c. per yard at Heyn's, Rising Sun, Ind.

Mr. Souther canvassed the town last week for pictures to enlarge.

Heyn's, Rising Sun, Ind., is the place to get a nice Cloak or Dolman.

A fine Union Casemere Overcoat for $4 50, at Heyn's, Rising Sun, Ind.

The tobacco crop brought the raisers of this county near $500,000 in 1883.

The first skating of the season was indulged in by the juveniles last Friday.

W. T. German has had Col. Graddy build him a long line of fire proof fence.

Gloves, Hosiery, Corsets, Shawls, etc. in great variety at Heyn's, Rising Sun, Indiana.

The probability is that an Odd-Fellows' lodge will be organized here at an early day.

The holidays approach and we have a rush of advertisements, which will soon be over.

The croquet season has about come to a close, and the foot-ball has made its appearance.

Heyn & Bro., Rising Sun, Ind., is the boss place to trade, as they deal fair and square.

Some thief robbed John Berkshire's tenant house the other night of all the window sash.

F. P. Walton is making arrangements to handle tobacco in the Richwood neighborhood.

It is estimated that over half of the last crop of tobacco raised in this county has been sold.

Hall's Hair Renewer makes the hair moist, soft, and glossy, and is unsurpassed as a hair dressing.

Grand display of Holiday Goods at Langsdale's, Thanksgiving day afternoon, Rising Sun, Ind.

G. T. Gaines has sold his farm between this place and Bullittsville to B. R. Gaines. Price not learned.

The little negro, who was so badly burned last week, died after two days suffering, having been burned inwardly.

L. D. Houston has sold his house and 17 acres of land near Florence X-Roads and on the pike, to E. D. Tanner for $950.

Col. Crisler says that work has been booming since moving here, and he has not had time to put his shop in order yet.

Don't miss the rare chance of seeing Langsdale's display of Holiday Goods, Thanksgiving day afternoon, Rising Sun, Indiana.

The first snow of the season fell here last Wednesday, the 14th day of the month; therefore we are to have fourteen snows this winter.

Don't miss the rare chance of seeing Langsdale's display of Holiday Goods, Thanksgiving day afternoon, Rising Sun, Indiana.

Sausage, spareribs and backbones are looming up on the farmers' bill of fare. Who wouldn't be a farmer at meal times during this particular season?

Aurora has a man who claims that he has not slept any for four years. If he were put on a night police force it would soon bring him to his sleep again.

Everybody is asked to call and examine our Holiday Stock and prices. The largest stock ever in Rising Sun, Ind. at R. G. Langsdale's, Thanksgiving day at 1 p. m.

When the daily papers arrived here Sunday, a crowd of five, three Republicans and two Democrats, met the carrier, and all called for the Enquirer. This is only a straw.

Last Wednesday F. P. Walton put a hogshead of new tobacco on the brakes in Cincinnati and rejected $16 75 for it. It was very fine tobacco and was raised on P. A. Ryle's farm.

J. M. Conner has been entertained several days the past week with a giant carbuncle on his neck. For once Jim has been the owner of something that he could not trade off.

Covington is now overrun with a host of candidates who are calling loudly on the dear people for election to city offices next January, and the "bleeding" element is having a rich harvest.

The case of Dempsey vs Rankin in the Court of Appeals from Kenton county, and which involves Mrs. Dempsey's farm adjoining this town, was reversed last week, which is favorable to Mrs. Dempsey.

Nice tombstones or monuments at the graves of the departed, are marks of respect which should not be neglected. Hurschurt & Co., Lawrenceburg, Ind., have just what you want. John Beall of Hebron, is their agent.

Mr. A. G. Winston has built a very large pond on the Collins farm, which he will stock with fish; having first stocked it with locust post to keep the seiners out. The pond is on a ridge and will not fill up very readily.

The very propitious weather last Thursday induced the Burlington pisca club, armed with a sein, to visit Schlosser's ponds, near Covington, where they attempted to capture some of the finny tribe, but, owing to some insurmountable obstacle they were poorly rewarded for the slight airing they experienced.

And now our colored citizens who took stock in the McAdams incorporation for the organization of a supply house at this place, have opened their optics to the fact that the negro who talked them into the matter, at the same time pocketing some of their money, is a fraud. The time for his second visit has passed and he came not; but their money is gone allee samee.

Last Friday, W. B. Craven who lives about one mile east of town, was out in the woods chopping, when a tree he was felling lodged and a broken limb fell, striking him on the head, making a very ugly scalp wound, and rendering him unconscious for some time. Drs. Jonas and Luther Terrill were called and they examined and dressed the wound.

Prof. Brewer was in town Wednesday and Thursday nights with his panorama, and entertained a large audience each night in the Court-house. Thursday evening A. M. Acra assisted the professor and made his debut in character songs. He created a storm of applause and was frequently encored, and at times it seemed that the court-house floor would be knocked into splinters by the number tens that joined in the tumult of appreciation.

Miss Allie Carpenter, of Sparta, Gallatin county, who was visiting her relatives in this county, was very unexpectedly called home Tuesday morning, her father having died the day before. Mr. Carpenter has been suffering for one or two years from being poisoned by ivy, and it finally terminated in his death, while at Hot Springs, Arkansas, where he went sometime since for his health. Miss Allie was accompanied home by her uncles, Thomas and William Goodridge.

Personal Mentions.

[If you have friends from a distance visiting you or expect to be away from home on business or pleasure, let us have the item for this column.]

B. S. Noell, of Glencoe, Ky., was in town Monday.

Miss Annie Cowen is visiting her brother at Rabbit Hash.

James Allen and family, of Indiana, are visiting Mrs. Dempsey.

Mrs. J. M. Riddell, of Williamstown, is visiting her daughter at this place.

Miss Maggie McFarlan left, Tuesday morning, on a visit to friends at Williamsburg, this State.

Mr. Z. T. Kelley and family, of East Bend, were the guests of Deputy Sheriff German and wife, Saturday and Sunday.

L. B. Stephens and wife were in town Monday, and while here made a conveyance to his son-in-law, of some real estate in Florida.

Mrs. Collins, wife of Benjamin Collins and daughter of A. K. Gaines, died at Texarkana last week. Her remains were interred at Highland Cemetery last Thursday.

Grand display of Holiday Goods at Langsdale's, Thanksgiving day afternoon, Rising Sun, Ind.

Religious.

Last week the cause of religion was considerably revived in this county.

Rev. J. A. Kirtley conducted a protracted meeting at Bullittsburg church, which resulted in four or five additions to the church.

Rev. E. N. Dicken was engaged in a protracted meeting at Bellevue, and eighteen united with the church, of which sixteen were baptized Friday.

The Universalist meeting which commenced at the church here Tuesday evening of last week, closed Sunday evening, having four additions to the church.

NGEIHBORHOOD NEWS.

Rabbit Hash.

Fuel was used extensively last week for a few days, but the change of the weather has been greatly to the advantage of the farmers who want to get their tobacco on the market while the prices are good.

C. H. Acra and family were visiting his father on Middle Creek Saturday and Sunday.

There is some talk of John P. Ryle's moving to McVille, where he will handle tobacco.

Uncle Billy Steel is stripping and assorting tobacco in the Calvert warehouse for a Louisville firm.

Rev. Froh's protracted meeting is still in progress at the M. E. Church. There have been some additions.

Hebron.

Last Friday the thermometer ranged as low as ten degrees above zero.

Farmers are making a rush on their corn fields, and all hands are very busy now.

Dr. L. B. Terrill has decided to locate in Delhi, Ohio, and will move in a few days. The doctor's many friends hate to lose such a genial and worthy citizen.

James Davis contemplates occupying the house which Dr. Terrill vacates.

James Duncan sold 14 hogs averaging 350 pounds at $4 50 per cwt.

Boone County is without a Coroner again, Dr. Murat having moved to Ludlow, which short move puts Boone County beyond his jurisdiction as dead inspector.

Verona.

New tobacco is selling very readily at from $15 and $4 to $15 around. Roberts and Houston have bought a house here for the purpose of prizing and selling tobacco. Kennedy and Whitson are still buying.

Mr. R. O. Powers had the finest lot of hogs weighed here this season. They averaged 375 pounds, and were engaged early at $4 75.

Mr. John Ransom intends going to Florida to spend the winter...... Miss Mary Stephenson has just returned from a visit to Washington county, Ind...... Larry Farrel has gone to Kansas to spend part of the winter...... Willie Hudson has just returned pleased with his trip to Tenn...... John Powers and Gus Adams have gone to Kansas on a visit...... Dr. Butler, our old physician, was visiting friends and acquaintances here last week...... Even one hundred people from this place took in the exposition at Louisville on the 21st ult.

Beaver Lick.

Our farmers were not altogether prepared for the recent Artic wave that struck our locality during the past week. They are now utilizing every moment shaping their business so it will endure the winter without too much careful attention.

Mr. John Beutler, of Verona, spent last Sunday in Beaver, his old home. John speaks with pride of his prospects in Verona. We wish him success.

Mr. Wenden Dean, of Gallatin county, who has been doing good service as clerk in the store of J. H. Sleet, left here last Thursday for his father's mansion. Weed is a whole soul fellow and our town is sad over his abrupt departure.

A letter coming from one of our friends in Florida presents a glowing picture of the flourishing condition of our young "cornerackers" who are sojourning in that paradisical country. Kentuckians call letters from their sweet ones in Florida, orange zephyrs. Truly touching!

We have preaching at the Hughes Chapel on the second Sunday by Rev. Froh and on the fourth by Rev. Buffington. Also, preaching at the baptist church by Rev. Lafe Johnson.

Several of our farmers have sold their crop of tobacco for good figures.

Plattsburg

Ice 3 inches thick on Woolper last Saturday morning.

Miss Allie Carpenter, of Gallatin county, is visiting Miss Lena Smith.

Our town now presents a holiday like appearance.

The larboard side of County Attorney Tolin's face looks like he had come in contact with a sly coon.

Col. Will Barker was in town last Saturday and Sunday.

We don't know, but Ed Rice says the hogs thought your tater hills were crawfish houses, as he called them, which caused them to make so many excursions into that garden of yours.

Miss Lizzie Voshell has been dangerously ill for several days with brain fever.

Col. Will Hayden, of Omaha, Nebraska, says to friends in Boone that he has a boy at his house. For particulars ask J. Frank Grant.

Mr. Wilbur Rice, an old Plattsburg boy, stopped in town one morning not long since, something unusual for Wib, it being the first time since he moved from this place to where he now lives. He says he has a fine crop of tobacco and expects to get 15 cents for it.—[If the crop is large enough we'll take it at 15c, bring it on.—Eds.]

The senior editor of the Recorder has some recollections of the notorious Oliver family, as they were residents of this place at one time and used to go to school at Woolper. They were a hard party then, George, the one that killed Allen in Cincinnati, being the toughest one of the gang. [We recollect the lads.—Ed]

Col. Will Casey and Capt. Harry Graves, pilots of Bishop Schramm's supply wagon, took in the sights in Shite Poke Bend last Monday.

The latest is a reading room in town. J. W. Burkshire comes all the way from home to see the Recorder as the reading room furnishes it a day or two in advance of the mail at Pete.

A dance at B. F. Sturgeon's last Tuesday night was largely attended by the lovers of the merry dance. T. B. J.

Everybody is asked to call and examine our Holiday Stock and prices. The largest stock ever in Rising Sun, Ind., at R. G. Langsdale's, Thanksgiving day at 1 p. m.

COLTER'S.

This cut is the exact shape of OUR SILK DRESS HATS. Price $3. Also have same shape in fur at $1. The above are new stock, just added, and are meeting with ready sale. Our stock of Hats and Caps is as complete as ever, and it will pay you to buy your Hats at

COLTER'S, Rising Sun. Ind.

Buy your Blankets, Yarns, Jeans and Flannels at COLTER'S, Rising Sun, Indiana.

This cut represents our nobby styles in Double Breasted Suits and Ulsterettes.

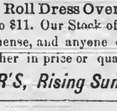
Have ten different Double-Breasted Suits, pattern of above, ranging in prices from $6 50 to $14.

We offer sixteen different grades of Ulsterettes, pattern of above cut, at $3 75 to $13.

COLTER'S, Rising Sun, Ind.

This cut represents our nobby Folding Roll Dress Overcoats Price $5 to $11. Our Stock of Clothing is immense, and anyone can get suited, either in price or quality, at

COLTER'S, Rising Sun, Ind,



OUR $1 00 DRESS SHIRT Is the best Shirt for the money ever offered before. See our Shirts and Drawers. Over Two Hundred Dozen to select from, at COLTER'S, Rising Sun Ind.

Colter's
MAMMOTH
CHEAP CASH
Store,
Rising Sun,
IND.

Has over Sixteen Thousand Feet of Floor jammed full of DRY GOODS, Ready-Made CLOTHING, BOOTS and SHOES, HATS and CAPS, MILLINERY GOODS, CLOAKS, DOLMANS and Ladies' WRAPS of all kinds, SHAWLS, &c. Make your headquarters at

COLTER'S
Cheap Cash
STORE,
RISING SUN,
INDIANA.

J. W. KIRKPATRICK & SON,
—BURLINGTON, KY.—

UNDERTAKERS

We have purchased a nice new hearse, and are prepared to attend funerals in regular city style, at the lowest prices.

ROBERT B. REED
Attorney at Law,
OFFICE AT - - UNION, KY.

F. RIDDELL,
ATTORNEY at LAW
BURLINGTON, KY.
☞ Office over Dudley Rouse's Store. ☜

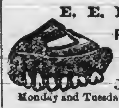
ALBERT W. GAINES,
Attorney and Counselor at Law,
LAWRENCEBURG, - - - IND.

Will practice in the courts of Boone county, Ky., Cincinnati, Ohio, Dearborn and adjoining counties, Ind. dec-6-82

W. E. VEST,
COUNTY SURVEYOR
WALTON, KY.

Is prepared to do all kinds of surveying. All orders sent him through the mail to Walton, will receive his prompt attention.

E. E. IGOE,



Resident Dentist,
Rising Sun, Ind.
WITH
J. P. Ulrey.
Monday and Tuesday at Rising Sun. Ind.

L. C. NORMAN. S. I. [illegible]
NORMAN and STEPHENS,
ATTORNEYS at LAW.
UNION, BOONE CO., KY.

Will practice in the Courts of Boone Kenton and adjoining counties. Collections solicited and made throughout the State. 24 tf 21

DR. A. B. HARRY AN

RESIDENT DENTIST.
Aurora, Indiana.
(Office Over Postoffice)
With J P. ULREY.
Dr. ULREY'S days, Wednesday and Saturday. Office open at all hours. 8-1y

J. J. Landram. G. G. Hughes.
LANDRAM & HUGHES,
ATTORNEYS at LAW.

Will practice in the Boone Circuit Cour and the Court of Appeals. Prompt attention given to Collections, on application t G. G. Hughes, Burlington, Ky.

S. W. TOLIN.
ATTORNEY AT LAW
BURLINGTON, - - - Y
Office in Court-house on 2d floor.

Will manage litigation in any of the Courts of the State, contracts and other legal instruments drawn up at reasonable rates. A prompt and studious attention given to business intrusted to my care. A trial solicited. 12-1y

H. KASSEN & CO.
(Formerly of Covington.)
—Dealers in Fine—
BOOTS AND SHOES,
106 W. 5th Street,
CINCINNATI, - - - OHIO.
☞ Custom made work a Specialty. A perfect Fit Guaranteed. dec. 20-1y

AURORA
MARBLE
AND GRANITE
WORKS,
Aurora, Ind

Will have constantly on hand
Marble and Granite Monuments,
Italian & American Headstones, &c.

I am ready to do all kinds of Stone Work on short notice and at low prices Hoping to receive the patronage of Boone County, I am respectfully,

F. W. KASSEBAUM.

MUSICAL WONDER
$7
for $3.50.
AN ORCHESTRA IN EVERY HOME.

A MUSICAL INSTRUMENT
that will play any tune, and that any one, even a child, can operate.

The Organette has gained such a world-wide reputation that a lengthy description of it is not necessary. It will be sufficient to say that it is a PERFECT ORGAN that plays mechanically all the sacred airs, popular music, songs, dances, etc. etc. It consists of three strong bellows and set of reeds with EXPRESSION box and SWELL. A strip of perforated paper represents the tune, and it is only necessary to place the paper tune in the instrument, as shown in the picture, and turn the handle, which both operates the bellows and propels the paper tune. The perforations in the paper allow the right reeds to sound and a perfect tune is the result, perfect in tune, execution, and effect, without the least knowledge of music being required of the performer; even a little child can operate it; as is shown in the picture, a little girl is playing a song and her playmates are singing the words. It is tuned in the key best suited for the human voice to sing by. It interests and entertains both old and young, assists in training the voice and AFFORDS HOURS OF SOCIAL AMUSEMENT. The Organette is perfectly represented by the picture. It is made of solid black walnut, decorated in gilt, and is both handsome and ornamental. The price of similar instruments has hitherto been $8, and the demand has constantly increased until now there are over 75,000 in use. We are encouraged to place the Organette on the market at this greatly reduced price, believing that the sale will warrant the reduction. The Organette though similar in construction is an improvement upon our well-known Organette, which sells for $8 and $10. It contains the same number of reeds and plays the same tunes. Our offer is this: On receipt of $7 we will send the Organette by Express to any address, and include FREE $2.50 worth of music, or on receipt of $5 we will send it with over $1.50 worth of music FREE, or for $3.50 we will send it with small selection of music FREE. The price includes boxing and packing. There are agent's prices, and we will appoint the first purchaser from any town our agent if he so desires. Address,

The Massachusetts Organ Co., 57 Washington Street, Boston, Mass., U. S. A.

F FALL A FALL L FALL L
—AND—
Winter Clothi'g

Clothing of the best goods, well trimmed, in the lat styles, made under my direct supervision and sold at lo prices than are asked for badly made, shoddy goods other places. Call and be assured.

A splendid line of Suitings. Suits MADE to order o short notice.

H. F Blase,
540 Madison St. - COVINGTON, K

Stop! Don't Read This.

S. C. BUCHANAN takes this method of notifying his patrons that he has enlarged his room and now has the best and most complete stock of Drugs in the county, consisting of Drugs and Medicines, Standard Patent Medicines, &c.

Notions and Fancy Goods, Combs, Brushes, Toilet Powders Perfumery, Toilet and Medicated Soaps.

Also Spices of all kinds, Flavoring Extracts in bulk, Horse and Cattle Powders and many other things that we have not the room to mention here. If you call for anything not in Stock we will get it for you at the regular price, if it takes all the profit.

When in need of anything give us a call, at the Petersburg Drug Store, and be convinced that our Prices are as Low or Lower than can be found.

Don't Read Any Further.

M.L. SWETNAM. HUBERT NEEL
SWETNAM & NEAD,
(SUCCESSORS TO [illegible])
LIVERY AND BOARDING STABLE
AND TRANSFER LINE.
79 Pike Street, Covington, Ky.

Horses Kept by the Day, Week or Month.
Horses and Buggies for Hire.
Stock of all kinds Bought and Sold.
Best Care Taken of Horses entrusted to our Keeping.

All Orders for Hauling Promptly Attended to.

Dr. CLARK JOHNSON'S
Indian Blood Syrup
Cures all diseases of the Stomach, Liver, Bowels, Kidneys, Skin and Blood. Millions testify to its efficacy in healing the above named diseases, and pronounce it to be the
BEST REMEDY KNOWN TO MAN.
TRADE MARK. Guaranteed to cure Dyspepsia.
AGENTS WANTED.
Laboratory 77 W. 3d St., New York City. Druggists sell it.

D. Clark Johnson:— This certifies that your Indian Blood Syrup is the best medicine I ever use in my family. My wife has been greatly benefited by it. L. E. McCamc, Seaville, Ky. Mar. 15, '8

JAMES S. WAYNE, President. JNO. L. SANDFORD, Cashier
CAPITAL $300,000.
FARMERS AND TRADERS
NATIONAL BANK.
Covington, Kentucky,
DIRECTORS.
James S. Wayne, M. C. Motch, Sam Hind, E. J. Hickey, E. J. Green
J. S. Matson, J. H. Mersman, J. L. Sandford, L. H. Dills, F. P. Helm
L. C. Stephens.

The general operations of banking transacted upon the most favorable terms, collections made on all points in the United States.

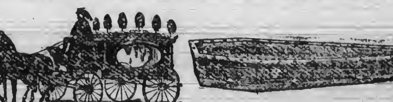
The Business and Accounts of Farmers are Especially Solicited by this Bank, dec. 20-6m

City Flouring Mills
RISING SUN, INDIANA.

FLOUR EXCHANGED FOR WHEAT OR CASH. THE HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR GOOD WHEAT.

mar7-tf33 J. W. Talbott.

UNDERTAKING.



We keep Constantly on Hand all sizes of
Burial Cases and Caskets.
And having just received a beautiful
NEW HEARSE,
Which can be had at a reasonable price when desired.
PRICES GUARANTEED LESS THAN CITY PRICES.
DAVIS BROS., - - HEBRON, KY.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL, Publishers.

BURLINGTON, : : KENTUCKY

Insults to Turgeneff's Body.

The following was told me by one who happened to be in the train that brought Turgeneff's body to St. Petersburg, and I had better give it as nearly as possible in my informant's own words:

"As you know, M. Stasulevitch, editor of the European Messenger, was the delegate of the funeral committee sent to the German frontier to receive Turgeneff's remains. When he reached Werjbelovo, the Russian frontier station, on Thursday, and got out on the platform, a gendarme officer at once presented himself and said that he had been instructed to attend on him. M. Stasulevitch told the officer that he did not want him, but the officer replied that, whether he wanted him or not, such were his orders, so Stasulevitch had to submit to be saddled with the gendarme. The train with the body arrived in the evening. Stasulevitch asked the gendarme when it would start again for St. Petersburg, and was bluntly told that he, the gendarme, had been further instructed to detain the body until Monday. 'What are you going to do with it then?' 'Put it into a stable-shed near by.' 'Put it into a shed!' ejaculated Stasulevitch, 'when there's a church in the village!' 'The priest,' responded the gendarme, 'has refused to have it.' 'Well, then,' said Stasulevitch, perfectly astounded at this treatment of the great author's remains, 'show me the shed.' The gendarme showed him the shed, and to his further amazement he found the dirty place full of sheep and pigs. 'Well,' said Stasulevitch, 'if no better place than this can be found to shelter Turgeneff's bones, I shall make my bed here, too, by the side of the coffin.' Before the gendarmes could carry out their plan, Stasulevitch found the priest of the village church and learned that what the gendarme officer had said was a lie. The priest at once had the body removed with all due ceremony to the sanctuary, much to the disgust of the police, who were doing all they could to prevent crowds from collecting and making any processions.

"On Sunday morning early, when the body was to be sent on to St. Petersburg, the gendarmes went to take it away to the train before any one was about, so as to prevent any crowding and fuss; but the priest had the keys. On the gendarmes asking him for them, the priest, who was a bold man, gave up the keys at once, but added that if the body were taken away in that disgraceful manner he would immediately telegraph to the Metropolitan Archbishop that they had committed sacrilege by stealing the sanctified remains of an orthodox Christian from the sanctuary of the church. This threat frightened the gendarmes almost out of their lives and they let the body alone. It was then transported to the train in procession in the proper way. At the station hundreds of telegrams had arrived from all parts inquiring the time of its arrival, but by official instructions no answers were returned, until Stasulevitch sent them on his own account, even telegraphing out of revenge to all kinds of places that had not even asked for information. You see what this everlasting opposition between public and official interest leads to. All the way up to St. Petersburg the stations were crowded day and night with eager watchers for the funeral train. When it arrived they fell down on their knees and kissed the coffin, which was in a wagon that could be opened at the side toward the platform. At many places the clergy performed service over it. On all these occasions the gendarmes completely lost their heads. They had been ordered to prevent all demonstrations and they rang the departure bell in the middle of the service to get the train away, but happily the conductor would not blow his whistle while the priests were praying, and so the train remained. At one station in the dead of night, Stasulevitch was much afraid that there would be accidents, as the crowds of people pressed upon the carriage to kiss the bier, which could scarcely be seen in the darkness. He bethought himself of a good plan. He shouted for a little girl to be handed over to him out of the crowd, which was done. He then made the little girl kiss the coffin, and, presenting her to the crowd, told them to be satisfied by kissing her, as the train could not wait any longer."—St. Petersburg Cor. London Times.

A Jewish Rip Van Winkle.

Choni ha-Maagol was all his life unable to understand the Biblical passage, "When the Lord turned again the captivity of Zion, we were like them that dream." (Ps. 126, 1). "Can seventy years be regarded as a dream? How is it possible," he asked, "or a man to remain for seventy years asleep?" One day, while on a journey, he saw a man planting a carob tree, and asked him how long a period he expected would elapse before the tree became fruitful. "Seventy years," was the reply. "Do you then expect to live seventy years and to eat of the fruit?" "When I entered the world," was the answer, "I found carob trees in abundance. Even as my fathers planted for me in like manner shall I also plant for those that are to come after me." Choni sat down to his meal and a deep sleep fell upon him, and he slumbered. The rock closed up around him and he was hidden from the sight of men. And thus he lay for seventy years. When he awoke and rose to his feet, lo! he beheld a man eating of the fruit of the very carob tree that he had seen planted. Choni asked: "Dost thou know who it was that planted this tree?" "My grandfather." Then Choni knew that he had slept on for seventy years. He went to his house and asked where the son of Choni ha-Maagol was. "His son," they told him, "is dead. His grandson you can see if you will." "I am Choni ha-Maagol!" he exclaimed; but no one believed him. He thence turned his steps to the House of Learning and he heard the Rabbis saying: "We have resolved this difficulty as we used to do when Choni ha-Maagol was alive;" for, in times past, when Choni went to the meeting, he was able to expound every subject under discussion. "I am Choni ha-Maagol!" he cried for the second time. But again none would believe him, neither did they treat him with honor. Broken-hearted, he left the haunts of men and prayed for death, and his prayer was answered. "This," says Ruyah, "is the meaning of the saying: To the friendless man death cometh as a blessing."—Jewish Chronicle.

A Cattle King and a Lord.

Information reached us yesterday from a passenger who came in on the train, who was an eye-witness to almost a bloody struggle between a Billings cattle man and an English lord, at the Queen's Hotel, Winnipeg, a few days ago. The cattle man, who had just sold a train load of cattle in Chicago at a high market price, concluded that he would, in company with his family, visit the noted city across the boundary line. Arriving at that place he put up at the hotel, and during the evening took his family to a place of amusement. In the meantime the titled man from across the Atlantic called at the office of the hotel for quarters. Every room in the house was occupied, but the clerk found a room for his English guest, or at least he thought he had, and consequently removed several lariats, a six-shooter, "chaps" and valises belonging to the Billings man from the room which he had engaged, and the English lord retired, not dreaming that in a few moments he would be aroused from his peaceful slumber at the point of a Colt's six-shooter. Such, however was the case. The room was called for and the reply from the clerk was: "It's occupied by an English lord."

"The dickens you say!" was the cool answer from the noble Montana man.

"You see," says the clerk, "we always in this country make room for an Englishman in preference to any Americans, and a cot in the hallway ought to suit Montanians, whose means are limited."

"Limited be blowed!" was the reply; "I've got enough cash here in my weasel-skin to buy all the hotels in this town, and besides have ten thousand head of cattle ranging in the Judith country of Montana," and away he went to bring forth the man who had taken possession of his room. The panels of the door were broken with the butt of the six-shooter, and the cry of "murder" attracted the attention of the police and made a general stampede among the guests of the house. The herd of guests were corraled by the cattle king, who made an explanation of what caused the disturbance, and the English lord left the house muttering an oath that he never again would intrude on the rights of any man who hailed from Montana.—Miles City (Mon.) Journal.

American Purchasers and Parisian Tradesmen.

I have always been very ready to espouse the cause of the American purchaser against the Parisian tradesmen, and especially against the petty tricks of the dressmakers of this city. But I regret much to be compelled to say that right and justice are not always on the side of my countrymen, or rather of my countrywomen, since it is unusually the members of the fair sex who become involved in these controversies. For American ladies as customers some time indulge in an exasperating course of action that is little understood on this side of the water, and is, in consequence resented vigorously. One of these peculiarities is an undue exercise of the feminine privilege of changing one's mind. I have known one of my countrywomen to go to one of the leading houses of Paris, to select certain articles, taking them absolutely and without reserve, to order sundry changes to be made in them, and then, on the following morning, to send word that she would not take any of them. In one case an American lady bought and paid for a set of costly furniture, and then, after it had been packed and sent to Havre for shipment, she wanted to return it and to get back her money. In another instance a lady ordered a superb dress from Worth, and because the corsage did not fit when it was sent home, she refused altogether to take the dress, and threw it on his hands, while admitting that the defect was one that could perfectly have been remedied. And recently one of the prominent dressmakers of Paris called on me to give me the particulars of a case which had just occurred within her own experience. A wealthy American lady had called at her establishment and had ordered a cloak, selecting herself the velvet, the lining, the fur wherewith it was to be trimmed, and the model after which it was to be made. The price was agreed upon, the garment was made, was tried on and found to fit perfectly, and then the lady sent it back, saying that she "had changed her mind and concluded that she did not want the cloak." Now, in this case the return of the article simply involved a considerable pecuniary loss to the dressmaker, as the cloak was a costly one, and having been made to fit the person who ordered it there was not much chance of its exactly suiting any one else.—Paris Cor. Philadelphia Telegraph.

Petroleum Chewing Gum.

"Did you know that three-quarters of the chewing-gum that tires the jaws of the rising generation in the United States is now made from petroleum?" said a manufacturing confectioner to a reporter the other day.

The reporter did not know it.

"Oh, yes," said the confectioner. "Petroleum first knocked the spots off of the whale-oil business of New England, and now it is clipping into its spruce and tamarack gum industry at a fearful rate. Here's a lump of petroleum we have just received." The confectioner slapped his hand on a large block that resembled a piece of marble. "A few days ago," said he, "that came out of the ground in Pennsylvania, a dirty, greenish-brown fluid, with a smell that could knock an ox down. The oil refiners took it and put it through a lot of chemical processes that I don't know anything about, and after taking out a large percentage of kerosene, a good share of naphtha, considerable benzine, a cart load or so of tar, and a number of other things with names longer than the alphabet, left us this mass of nice clean wax. There isn't any taste to it, and no more smell than there is to a china plate.

"We will take this lump, cut it up, and melt it in boilers. This piece will weigh two hundred pounds. We add thirty pounds of cheap sugar to it, and flavor it with vanilla, wintergreen, peppermint, or any pleasant essential oil. Then we turn it out on a marble table and cut it into all sorts of shapes with dies. After it is wrapped in oiled tissue paper and packed in boxes it is ready for the market. You can imagine that somebody is chewing gum in this country when I tell you that a lump like this one will make ten thousand penny cakes, and we use one up every week. There are dozens of manufacturers using almost as much of the wax as we do.

"I believe this petroleum chewing gum, if honestly made, is perfectly harmless, and that is more than can be said of some of the gums made from the juices of trees, especially the imported article."—N. Y. Sun.

HOME AND FARM.

—Cider made from late apples is of better quality and possesses more body than that made from early apples; it will also keep much longer.—Chicago Tribune.

—A farm of twenty-seven acres near Rochester, N. Y., is entirely devoted to raising cabbages. The receipts this year were $5,400.

—Fowls delight to scratch in loose ground, and if a portion of their yard is dug up at intervals it will afford them the exercise they so much need.—Exchange.

—It is well known that pruning an orchard too severely does far more harm than good. All that is necessary is to remove the dead limbs and unfruitful branches. An important part of fruit-culture is to know when to let the trees alone.—Toledo Blade.

—Cream fritters, as an entree with roast beef and vegetables, are made just the same as if they were to be eaten with sirup. The cream is a gravy made of butter and flour, with boiling water poured over. A little sugar should be added, and a few drops of vanilla.—N. Y. Post.

—Salve for Chapped Hands: Three drachms white beeswax; three drachms spermaceti; two ounces olive oil; three drachms gum camphor. Put into a tin cup; place on back of range, where they will melt slowly. Stir often. When well-mixed, pour into a china cup. Rub on the hands every night.—Prairie Farmer.

—A little time and trouble used in removing the seeds from grape sauce will pay a large interest. After the grapes have cooked sufficiently so that the seeds separate readily from the sauce through a colander, then with a spoon remove the seeds as far as possible, put the skins back with the juice to cook until they are soft, and skim off any seeds that rise to the top.

—Six hundred pounds of land phosphate was put on about one acre and a quarter of land, which had been pastured quite a number of years to sheep; after thoroughly harrowing, the rows were marked out three feet apart, the hills being about two feet apart. The potatoes were cut small, one and two eyes on a piece, and two pieces put in a hill. These potatoes were planted early and hoed once with a horse-hoe. I dug 140 bushels of smooth potatoes, big and little.—Farmer, Anson, Me.

—White Mountain Cake: One cupful of white sugar, half a cupful of butter, half a cupful of sweet milk, half a cupful of corn-starch, one cupful of sifted flour, the whites of six eggs. Beat the butter and sugar to a cream, add the milk, mix two teaspoonfuls of baking powder with the flower and stir it slowly in; then the corn-starch, and lastly the whites of eggs beaten to a stiff froth. Use a little vanilla for flavoring.—The Household.

—At the last annual meeting of the National Wool-Growers' Association, the secretary, Mr. W. G. Markham, was re-elected, but immediately resigned, owing to severe strictures by leading members of the Association on his position respecting the reduction of the tariff on wool. Mr. Garland, the late President, and Mr. Markham favored the reduction, while a majority of the Wool-Growers' Association desire a restoration of the tariff of 1867—a desire which is not likely to be gratified.—N. Y. Examiner.

Health and House Plants.

Oftener than otherwise it is safe to reverse the popular maxims and prejudices, since, as it would seem, their basis is ignorance and sensual gratification. Whatever appears to favor the indulgence of the lower appetites—generally more or less vitiated—apparently is formulated into a favorite maxim, eagerly adopted by the masses, as a rule of conduct. This is well illustrated in reference to the popular notion that plants are unfavorable in their effects in the sleeping apartment and in the rooms of the sick. If this popular prejudice has any force or importance it is when the odor of a plant is so strong as to be unpleasant to the very sensitive sick, the unpleasantness indicating its impropriety in that individual case.

Scientific facts assure us and convince the discriminating that such are the relations of the animal creation and the vegetable world that the one can not exist without the other, each contributing to the sustenance of the other. Breathing, combustion, fermentation, putrefaction and still other processes are constantly exhausting the more vitalizing element of the air—oxygen—distributing its chemical constituents, at the same time producing a deadly gas—carbonic—which, aside from certain compensating processes, might soon render the air unfit for respiration. This gas—so deadly to animal life that it is scarcely possible to have it enter the human lungs in its pure state on account of suffocation—is an important element of nutrition to the vegetable kingdom, that, indeed, from which all woody fiber is made. In this and other respects the three kingdoms are mutually dependent each upon the other, each necessary to the sustenance and existence of the other. The nourishment consumed by the animal kingdom must come from the vegetable, originally, so the vegetable kingdom must be sustained by the animal.

This was finely and fully illustrated by the scientific experimentor who put a mouse and a plant in a tight jar, air-tight, the two living as one could not alone—each feeding the other. We have no better purifiers than the light of the sun, moving air, and the leaves of plants and trees.—Golden Rule.

Death From the Scratch of a Cat.

Sir John Humphreys held an inquest at the Lord Raglan Tavern, St. Ann's Road, Mile end Old Town, recently, on the body of Louisa Cain, aged seventy-three. John Cain said the deceased, who was his wife, about three weeks ago went to put the cat in an out-house, when the animal scratched her on the hand; the deceased afterward became poorly, and went and saw a doctor, who prescribed for her, but she got gradually worse and died on Thursday morning. Previously the deceased was in good health, and he had no doubt her death was caused through the scratch. Mr. Joseph Francis Porter, surgeon, said when he saw the deceased she was suffering from an injury between the thumb and first finger, and erysipelas supervened. Death was consequent on the scratch. The jury returned a verdict of accidental death.—Pall-Mall Gazette.

—The recent Boston cat show had a Doctor Tom, a large yellow feline that has served eighteen years in a drug store. A cross-eyed cat was named Butler in honor of the Chief Magistrate of Massachusetts. There was a tiger-cat that weighed twenty-five pounds. A deaf cat had one blue and one yellow eye.—Boston Post.

"A" and "An."

A correspondent writes to us: "Why does the author of the amusing note on some journalist new version of the "Parturiunt Montes" line talk about "a hexameter"? There are writers who similar say (or rather write, for to speak such things would be too difficult), "a hotel," "a habitual," etc., "a historical," etc., and so on. The rule on the subject is, I believe, that whenever in a word beginning with an h the accent falls on the second syllable, the aspirate shall be preceded not by "a," but by "an." "An hexameter" is euphonious. "A hexameter" is simply impossible. If no rule on the subject existed it would be necessary to invent one. But the rule just given will be found sufficient in every case. As no one out of a national school or board school is supposed to study English grammar (which to men of classical education "comes by nature," (like Dogberry's reading and writing), it will perhaps not be thought offensive on my part if I point out that in words like "union," "university," "unicorn," in which the letter u forms a syllable by itself, the indefinite article used in connection with it should be not "an," but "a." "An unicorn," "an university," are almost as ugly combinations as "a hotel" or "a hexameter."—St. James' Gazette.

Petrified Pumpkins.

The California papers are telling a story about petrified pumpkins in Mendocino County. The report is that a farmer, some years ago, had a lot of pumpkins washed away by a freshet down a ravine, and for a number of years the pumpkins were observed where the water had lodged them, but no one had ever thought they had turned to stone, until the other day a man attempted to pick one of them up, when he discovered that it was very heavy and had turned to stone. About fifty more were in the same condition. The story may be true, but it offers no special inducement for agriculturists to raise paving stones on pumpkin vines. Some pumpkins are of no special good, except to sling at cats, but as the supply is too small to be used with advantage, they will not be used. If California will find a process for making pies out of her petrified pumpkins, the boarding-house keepers of the country will rise up and call her blessed.—Boston Globe.

—The Princess of Wales and her sisters were photographed during their recent visit home, standing beneath a tree in their old playground, the garden of Castle Bernstoff. The photograph has been chromographed and gone all over the land.

—A Columbia, (Fla.,) woman left her babe at home alone all day, and when she returned, found that the ants had crawled into its mouth, nose, eyes and ears, and killed it.

The Little Model Republic.

VALPARAISO, CHILI.—Senor Ricardo Stuven, a leading commission merchant of this city, after having exhausted all other remedies has been completely cured of rheumatism by the use of St. Jacobs Oil, the great pain-banisher. He makes this public.

THE first doctor of divinity is said to have been "O. Fiddle, D. D."

The Bilious,

dyspeptic or constipated, should address, with two stamps for pamphlet, WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASS'N, Buffalo, N. Y.

THE . for putting the : has , again.—Boston Star.

Pioneer History of America.

This splendid volume of 1032 pages crowded with elegant and striking full-page illustrations has just been issued by Jones Bros. & Co., Cincinnati. This extensive work has connected historical value as well as thrilling narrative interest. The author is a perspicuous and dramatic writer, and carries each recital forward to an absorbing climax. The hundred engravings are not only well drawn, but are full of thought, suggestion and feeling. The work is written in the best, most graphic, historical style, which, combined with the intensely interesting facts detailed, will hold the attention of the reader throughout. No other book on Pioneer Life approaches it in vividness of description, purity and vigor of style, accuracy of detail and fascination of the story. The excellent introduction by Dr. Ridpath, written in his proverbially accurate and fascinating manner, is a good contribution to the volume. The publishers, who are an old and reliable firm, want agents to take orders for the work.—Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette.

GIRLS, when an eligible youth pops the question, never say: "I should blush to twitter." Always observe: "I scream to ejaculate."—Detroit Post.

IF you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes bad, poor appetite, tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver, or "biliousness." Nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery." By all druggists.

STOVE up yet?—Chicago Times. Thank you; we don't get stove up.—Oil City Derrick.

WHO has not seen the fair, fresh young girl transformed in a few months into the pale, haggard, dispirited woman? The sparkling eyes are dimmed, and the ringing laugh heard no more. Too often the causes are disorders of the system which Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" would remedy in a short time. Remember, that the "Favorite Prescription" will unfailingly cure all "female weaknesses," and restore health and beauty. By all druggists. Send three stamps for Dr. Pierce's treatise on Diseases on Women (96 pages). Address WORLD'S MEDICAL ASSO'N, Buffalo, N. Y.

THE MARKETS.

CINCINNATI, November 16, 1883.

LIVE STOCK—Cattle—common	$2 00	@	[illegible] 00
Choice butchers	4 25	@	4 85
HOGS—Common	3 75	@	4 35
Good packers	4 25	@	4 70
SHEEP	3 50	@	4 25
FLOUR—Family	4 50	@	4 90
GRAIN—Wheat—Longberry red	1 11	@	1 12
No. 2 red	1 07	@
Corn—No. 2 mixed	51	@
Oats—No. 2 mixed	30	@	30½
Rye—No. 2	59¼	@
HAY—Timothy No. 1	9 50	@	10 00
HEMP—Double dressed	8½	@
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	11 50	@	11 75
Lard—Current make	7-40	@	7-60
BUTTER—Fancy Dairy	24	@	25
Prime Creamery	25	@	34
FRUIT AND VEGETABLES—
Potatoes per bar. from store	1 25	@	1 30
Apples, prime, per barrel	2 50	@	3 00
NEW YORK.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 00	@	3 50
Good to choice	4 40	@	7 00
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 spring	1 07	@
No. 2 red	1 11½	@
Corn—No. 2 mixed—new	60½	@	62¼
Oats—mixed	35	@	37
PORK—Mess	12 00	@	12 50
CHICAGO.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 50	@	4 25
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 00	@	1 05
Corn—No. 2	48⅝	@	49⅜
Oats—No. 2	28¼	@	28⅜
Rye	56½	@
PORK—Mess	10 75	@	10 80
LARD—Steam	7-50	@	7-52½
BALTIMORE.
FLOUR—Family	$5 00	@	6 00
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 07¾	@	1 08
Corn—mixed	60	@
Oats—mixed	36	@	38
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	12 75	@
Lard—Refined	9	@
LOUISVILLE.
FLOUR—A No 1	$ 4 50	@	4 75
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red, new	1 02	@
Corn—mixed	50	@
Oats—mixed	30½	@	31
PORK—MESS	12 00	@
INDIANAPOLIS.
WHEAT—No. 2. red, new	$ 1 01	@	1 02
CORN—mixed	49	@
OATS—mixed	28	@
LIVE STOCK—Cattle
Butchers' stock	2 75	@	3 00
Shipping cattle	5 25	@

A VIRGINIA thief escaped from jail by crawling through a stove-pipe. Wonder if he was sooted for that method of escape.—Williamsport Grit.

MY SON, aged nine years, was afflicted with Catarrh; the use of Ely's Cream Balm effected a complete cure. W. E. HAMMAN, Druggist, Easton, Pa.

ACCORDING to an unascertained entomologist, a mosquito resembles charity when it begins to hum.—Rochester Post-Express.

RUSHMORE, O.—Dr. A. Page says: "I have prescribed Brown's Iron Bitters in several instances, and in each case obtained good results."

EVERY father should paddle his own; can you?—N. Y. News.

AN effective medicine for kidney diseases, low fevers and nervous prostration, and well worthy of a trial, is Brown's Iron Bitters.

SLIGHT of hand—A maiden's refusal.—Detroit Post.

THE RESTORATION to health of our child we considered uncertain. When two weeks old she caught cold. For 18 months was not able to breathe through her nostrils. Upon using Ely's Cream Balm her difficulty is removed; she breathes naturally. Mr. and Mrs. J. M. SMITH, Owego, N. Y.

NEVER lie on the left side—in fact, never lie at all.—N. Y. Independent.

CLUTSVILLE, ALA.—Dr. W. Carter says, "I have used Brown's Iron Bitters in my own family for indigestion with great benefit."

THOUGH the East River bridge is without a rival, it has two piers.—N. Y. Graphic.

A HUMAN FIRE.

The Phenomenon of a Burning Mine Repeated in the Physical System.

A few years ago one of the most important coal mines in Pennsylvania caught fire. It started slowly but soon obtained such headway that it spread through the greater portion of the entire mine. To flood it with water would extinguish the fire, but well nigh ruin the mine; and still the flames continued to increase. At that juncture a young man stepped forward and suggested that all the entrances and vent holes of the mine be covered and secured, thus shutting off the supply of air. His advice was followed and the flames were finally subdued.

To compare the condition of this mine with many phases of the human system, is most natural and appropriate. "Fire in the blood" is not a mere expression, it is a most serious fact. How it originates, it may be impossible to any; but that it burns and rages with an increasing fury, the one who is its victim only too painfully knows. The blood is the life. It is designed by nature to purity, strengthen and sustain the system. It is too often made the channel through which poison and death are transported. Poisonous acids coming through the veins and arteries inflame and cause a fire just as real as the one which existed in the mine. They burn and irritate, causing the brain to become weak and the nerves unstrung; they carry pains to the muscles and leave agonies in the joints; they bring destruction instead of strength; they devastate the very portions of the body that most require help, and they hasten the approach of death in its most horrible form. These things have been felt by innumerable people who have been the victims of rheumatic disorders, and the agonies they have endured confirm this description.

There is but one way by which this fire in the blood can be extinguished, and that is by shutting off the supply of these poisonous acids. The lactic, lithic and uric acids come in to the blood through the liver and kidneys, and they remain in solution in the blood producing inflammatory rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, neuralgia, gout and all rheumatic fevers and affections. When they are deposited as gritty crystals in and near the joints, they cause articular rheumatism; when in the muscles, muscular rheumatism and lumbago; when in the tissues covering the nerves, sciatica; when in the face, head and nerves generally, neuralgia. In every case they are painful; in most instances, dangerous. Inflammatory rheumatism is likely to locate in some joint and become chronic, or suddenly attack the brain or heart, causing apoplexy or heart-disease. The fire in the blood must be extinguished—the supply must be shut off. This can only be done by guarding the portals to the blood—the kidneys and liver; and no means have ever been found for accomplishing this which can equal Warner's Safe Rheumatic Cure. It acts directly upon the seat of the disorder; it extinguishes the fire by controlling the supply and removing the cause.

The well known standing of H. H. Warner & Co., of Rochester, N. Y., the remarkable success which Warner's Safe Cure has achieved, being indorsed by no less a personage than Dr. Robert A. Gunn, Dean of the United States Medical College, New York, and the fidelity with which they have carried out all their promises to the public should be a sufficient warrant that the above statements are true. They, however, guarantee to cure ninety-five per cent. of all rheumatic troubles, especially acute, knowing full well that the demonstrated power of the remedy justifies them in so doing. Nothing can be fairer than this, and those who suffer in the future from rheumatism with such an offer before them, do so on their own responsibility, and can blame no one if living pain and untimely death are the results.

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer

Is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from dandruff, restore gray hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which Sulphur, Sugar of Lead and Nitrate of Silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. JOHN D. PARK & SONS, Wholesale Agents, Cincinnati, Ohio, and C. N. CRITTENTON, N. Y.

I HAVE been using Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) and find it to be the best remedy of the kind that I have ever been able to get, and I have tried them all.
JOHN TISCHER, 3d U. S. Cavalry.

IF a cough disturbs your sleep, take Piso's Cure for Consumption and rest well.

IF SUCCESS be the true test of merit, it is a settled fact that "Brown's Bronchial Troches" have no equal for the prompt relief of Coughs, Colds, and Throat troubles. Sold only in boxes. Price 25 cents.

I HAVE known and watched the use of Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) for over fifty years, and never have known or heard of its failure to cure any case of Blood Poison when properly taken.
H. L. DENNARD, Perry, Ga.

IF afflicted with Sore Eyes, use Dr. Isaac Thompson's Eye Water. Druggists sell it. 25c.

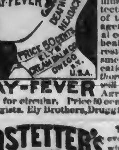
Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar
Always cures a cough, cold or influenza.
Pike's toothache drops cure in one minute.

St. Jacobs Oil

THE GREAT GERMAN REMEDY
For Pain!
Relieves and cures
RHEUMATISM,
Neuralgia,
SCIATICA, LUMBAGO,
BACKACHE,
Headache, Toothache,
SORE THROAT,
QUINSY, SWELLINGS,
SPRAINS,
Soreness, Cuts, Bruises,
FROSTBITES,
BURNS, SCALDS,
And all other bodily aches and pains.
FIFTY CENTS A BOTTLE.
Sold by all Druggists and Dealers. Directions in 11 languages.
The Charles A. Vogeler Co.
(Successors to A. VOGELER & CO.)
Baltimore, Md., U.S.A.

CANCERS, Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Rheumatism, and all Blood diseases, cured by Loose's Extract Red Clover. Send for circulars and testimonials. J. M. LOOSE & CO., Monroe, Mich.

CATARRH



ELY'S CREAM BALM when applied by the finger into the nostrils, will be absorbed, effectually cleansing the head of catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions. It allays inflammation, protects the membrane of the nasal passages from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores taste and smell. A few applications relieve. A thorough treatment will positively cure. Agreeable to use.

HAY-FEVER

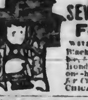
Send for circular. Price 50 cents by mail or at druggists. Ely Brothers, Druggists, Owego, N.Y.

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS

Though shaken in every joint and fiber with fever and ague, or bilious remittent, the system may yet be freed from the malignant virus with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Protect the system against it with this beneficent anti-spasmodic, which is furthermore a supreme remedy for liver complaint, constipation, dyspepsia, [illegible]

Sawing Made Easy

[illegible] MONARCH LIGHTNING SAWING MACHINE [illegible] AGENTS WANTED. [illegible] MONARCH MANUFACTURING CO., [illegible] Chicago, Ill.



A $65 SEWING MACHINE For $18.00.
WITH ALL ATTACHMENTS!
Black Walnut Drop Leaf Table, 4 drawers and cover box, hundreds of other articles one-half usual prices. Send for Circulars and Price-Lists.
CHICAGO SCALE CO., Chicago.

DR. HORNE'S ELECTRIC BELT

DR. HORNE'S ELECTRIC BELT.

Cures Nervousness, Rheumatism, Paralysis, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Kidney, Spine and Liver diseases, Gout, Asthma, Heart Disease, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Erysipelas, Catarrh, Piles, Epilepsy, Impotency, Prolapsus Uteri, Diabetes, etc. RUPTURE CURED BY ELECTRICITY, only Electric Truss in the world. Agents wanted in every town. Send for Circular. Dr. W. J. HORNE, Inventor, 191 Wabash Av. Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS WANTED To sell the PIONEER HISTORY OF AMERICA, by A. L. MASON and PROF. J. C. RIDPATH. 1032 Imperial Octavo pages, 100 magnificent illustrations. Specimen Pages FREE. JONES BROS. & CO., Pub., Cincinnati, O.

"THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST."
SAW MILLS, ENGINES THRESHERS, Horse Powers,
(For all sections and purposes.) Write for Free Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

WANTED A WOMAN
of sense and energy to attend to our business in her locality. Not too young preferred. To a suitable person will pay a salary of $35 to $50 a month. Business experience not necessary. References exchanged.
GAY BROS. & CO., 16 Barclay St., New York.

2806 Lbs. W'ght O. Two Ohio IMPROVED CHESTER HOGS. Send for description of this famous breed, Also Fowls, L. B. SILVER, CLEVELAND, O.

$250 A MONTH, made in leisure moments. Outfit sent; no money required until sold. Agents Wanted, Male and Female. Many have made fortunes. Address, ROTHCHILD & CO., ST. STEPHEN New Brunswick, Canada. Postage, 2c.

NO MATTER What your business is, you can just as well be our agent and make more money. Write for full particulars free. JOS. S. HALL & CO., Box 699, New York City.

PATENTS NO PATENT, NO PAY! R. S. & A. P. LACEY, Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C. Full instructions and Hand-Book of Patents sent free.

CINCINNATI COLLEGE OF MUSIC and School of Oratory, 305 Race. Home comforts, parental care, best instruction, boarding department. For circulars add. Mrs. D. N. GEPPERT, Cincinnati, O.

PATENTS promptly procured in all countries. American Patent Agency, 188 Fifth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

$250 A MONTH. Agents Wanted. 90 best selling articles in the world. 1 sample FREE. Address JAY BRONSON, DETROIT, MICH.

STAMMERING | and all Impediments in
STUTTERING | Speech cured at VOCAL INSTITUTE, 253 W. Fifth St., Cincinnati. Send for circular.

AGENTS make money selling our Family Medicines; no capital required. STANDARD CURE CO., 197 Pearl St., NEW YORK.

AGENTS Wanted. Squatter Sovereign, or Kansas in the '50's. Send 40 cts. in stamps for outfit. COUTANT & NEWMAN PUB. CO., Chicago.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STINSON & Co., Portland, Me.

COLEMAN BUSINESS COLLEGE, Newark, N. J. Terms $40. Positions for graduates; write for circular.

$72 A WEEK. $12 a day at home easily made. Costly outfit free. Address True & Co., Augusta, Me.

"DRINK FAIR, BETSEY, WOTEVER YOU DO."
—Martin Chuzzlewit.

TEA CLUB ORDERS.

We have made a specialty for five years of giving away as Premiums, to those who get up clubs for our goods, Dinner and Tea Sets, Gold Band Sets, Silverware, etc. Teas of all kinds, from 30 to 75 cents per pound. We do a very large Tea and Coffee business, besides sending out from 60 to 90 CLUB ORDERS each day. SILVER-PLATED CASTERS as Premiums with $5, $7 and $10 orders. WHITE TEA SETS with $10 orders. DECORATED TEA SETS with $15. GOLD BAND or MOSS ROSE SETS of 44 pcs., or DINNER SETS of 106 pcs., with $20 orders, and a Host of other Premiums. Send us Postal and mention this Paper, and we will send you full Price and Premium List. Freight Charges average 75 cents per 100 lbs. to points West. GREAT LONDON TEA CO., 803 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

Beware.

of the continued use of mercury and potash for the treatment of Blood and Skin diseases—they never cure, and nearly always injure or totally ruin the general health.

A WELL-KNOWN DRUGGIST.

I have seen a great many cases cured with Swift's Specific who had tried all sorts of treatment. In fact, I have never known it to fail when taken properly. I sell a large quantity of it, and for all diseases that are dependent on blood poison or skin humor. It cures PIMPLES AND BLOTCHES ON THE SKIN, and makes the complexion fair and rosy. As for blood taint, here is no such word as fail. It cures cases that have long withstood other sorts of treatment, and without any of those recurring troubles that generally follow mercurial and other so-called cures.
T. L. MASSENBURG, Macon, Ga.

Our treatise on Blood and Skin Diseases mailed free to applicants. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO.,
Drawer 3, Atlanta, Ga.

BOYS Christmas Is Coming! CHRISTMAS!

And if you wish a fine present to give some friend, you can obtain one by securing a new subscriber for one or more of D. Lothrop & Co's popular magazines; you can easily do this, as they are graded to suit all ages. For babies there is BABYLAND, with large beautiful pictures, merry jingles and stories, only 50c. For little folks just beginning to read for themselves there is OUR LITTLE MEN and WOMEN, with its seventy-five full page pictures (and hundreds of smaller ones) a year, and the brightest of reading, only $1 a year. For boys and girls to read on Sunday and week days, THE PANSY WEEKLY, edited by "Pansy" herself, and a most entertaining union of picture and text, only 75c a year. For the young folks and all the family, the "prince of magazines" WIDE AWAKE, the ideal treasure of the best in modern literature, and art, only $2.50 a year. 32 pp. premium list free.

NEW YEARS D. LOTHROP & CO., BOSTON. GIRLS

HOP PLASTER

This porous plaster is famous for its quick and hearty action in curing Lame Back, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Crick in the Back, Side or Hip, Neuralgia, Stiff Joints and Muscles, Sore Chest, Kidney Troubles and all pains or aches either local or deep-seated. It Soothes, Strengthens and Stimulates the parts. The virtues of hops combined with gums—clean and ready to apply. Superior to liniments, lotions and salves. Price 25 cents or 5 for $1.00. Sold by druggists and country stores. Mailed on receipt of price. Hop Plaster Company, Proprietors, Boston, Mass.

A GREAT SUCCESS

☞ The best family pill made—Hawley's Stomach and Liver Pills. 25c. Pleasant in action and easy to take.

ST. PATRICK'S SALVE
TRY IT USE IT
It relieves at once Burns, Piles, Chapped Hands or Lips, Corns, Bunions, Scalds, Bruises, Soreness of feet, hands, eyes, etc.; Itching from any cause. 25c. Ask your druggist, or send to 92 Fulton Street, N. Y.

S.-S. CHRISTMAS ENTERTAINMENTS.
Suggestions for Decorations, Entertainments and Gifts.
A collection of suggestions from leading Sunday-school workers in various parts of the country, containing something of interest to every Sunday-school superintendent. Nothing like it ever issued before. Price, 25c. Will send free to any one sending us a list of all the Sunday-school Superintendents in the place. DAVID C. COOK, 46 Adams street, Chicago, Ill.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good.
Use in time. Sold by druggists.
25 100

PILES "Anakesis" gives instant relief, and is an infallible cure for Piles. Price $1 from druggists, or sent prepaid by mail. Samples free. Ad. "ANAKESIS," Makers, Box 2416, New York.

CANCER AND TUMORS Treated scientifically and cured without the knife. Book on treatment sent free. Drs. Gratigny & Norris 304 W. 4th St., Cincinnati, O.

Lady Agents can secure permanent employment and good salary selling Queen City Skirt and Stocking Supporters, etc. Sample outfit Free. Address Queen City Suspender Co., Cincinnati, O.

$66 A WEEK in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. Addr's H. Hallett & Co., Portland, Me.

ASTHMA, Neuralgia Cured. FREE to poor. Add. Dr. Ralston, Cape Girardeau, Mo.

DIPHTHERIA

CROUP, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, Neuralgia, Rheumatism. JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT (for Internal and External Use) will instantly relieve these terrible diseases, and will positively cure nine cases out of ten. Information that will save many lives sent free by mail. Don't delay a moment. Prevention is better than cure. JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT CURES Influenza, Hoarseness, Hacking Cough, Whooping Cough, Diarrhea, Dysentery, Cholera Morbus, Kidney Troubles, and Lame Back. Sold everywhere. Circulars sent FREE. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

Worn, Weary, and Wretched.

"As weak as a cat" is an expression frequently used by debilitated sufferers who are trying to tell how forlorn they feel. It is an incorrect expression, for a cat is one of the most agile and vigorous animals in existence. It would be more correct to say, "as weak as a limp old rag," for that gives the idea of utter inability to hold one's self up. The weary person who feels thus is generally worn, worried, woeful, and wretched.

Sometimes it is a case of overwork, and sometimes of imperfect nourishment. The blood in the system of a person who is "as weak as a rag" is in a wretchedly thin condition. It needs iron, to impart richness, redness, and strength. This is to be had by taking BROWN'S IRON BITTERS, the only safe and proper preparation of iron in connection with gentle and powerful tonics. The physician and the druggist can tell the worn and weary how valuable a remedy BROWN'S IRON BITTERS has been found in actual every-day use.

11

If you are Interested

In the inquiry—Which is the best Liniment for Man and Beast?—this is the answer, attested by two generations: the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT. The reason is simple. It penetrates every sore, wound, or lameness, to the very bone, and drives out all inflammatory and morbid matter. It "goes to the root" of the trouble, and never fails to cure in double quick time.

Mason & Hamlin Organs.

New Illustrated Catalogue, (40 pp. 4to) for season of 1883-4, including many new styles; best assortment of the best and most attractive organs we have ever offered, and at lowest prices, $22 to $600, for cash, easy payments or rented. Sent free.

MASON & HAMLIN ORGAN & PIANO CO.

Boston, 154 Tremont St. | New York, 46 East 14th St. | Chicago, 149 Wabash Ave.

VOL. XX 1884
DEMOREST'S MONTHLY MAGAZINE
ILLUSTRATED WITH
Original Steel Engravings, Photogravures & Oil Pictures.
Send twenty cents for one copy, and you will certainly subscribe Two Dollars for a year and get ten times its value.
W. Jennings Demorest, Publisher, 17 East 14th St., New York.
$2 $2
THE BEST
SOLD BY ALL NEWSDEALERS AND POSTMASTERS.

HAIR Wigs & Waves sent C.O.D. anywhere. Wholesale & Retail. Price-list free. Goods guaranteed. B. C. STREHL, 157 Wabash-av., Chicago.

A. N. K.—E. 952

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOLUME IX. BURLINGTON, KY., WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 28, 1883. NUMBER 5.

SONG OF THE JERSEY.

With fingers tired and stiff,
With muscles swollen and sore,
A maiden stood in a gros grain silk,
Viewing her Jersey o'er.
Sad, sad, sad,
Then wickedly winking her eye,
She cried aloud, like a lunatic mad:
"I'll put you on or die."

Stretch, stretch, stretch,
With her tongue most bitten in two,
And stretch, stretch, stretch,
Till her head came peeping through,
With moans and sighs and tears,
With tears and sighs and moans,
She pawed the air, fell over a chair,
And filled the room with groans.

Sick, sick, sick,
She lay for a week in bed,
Sick, sick, sick,
With a pain that racked her head;
While in a closet dark
The naughty Jersey laid,
'Twas torn to shreds, 'twas rent in twain,
And sorry was the maid.
—Washington Capitol.

UNCLE JEHORAM;

or,

Mrs. Monteith's Wedding Gift.

"Girls, girls!" cried I triumphantly, waving an old-fashioned yellow envelope in the sunny September air. "I've got a letter from Uncle Jehoram!"

"Open it!" cried Nelly Pinkham, who was my first bridesmaid.

"Do let us hear what he says!" chimed in Alice Eden, my second.

So I sat down on the big canvas-covered traveling trunk, with my hair all down my back. I had just unfastened it for Nelly to experiment a little with the bridal wreath—and with the bevy of girls clustering eagerly around me I broke the seal of Uncle Jehoram's letter, and read it aloud with all the elocutionary airs and graces that I had learned at Madame Benton's "Institute."

Dear Niece, (it said, in a queer little cramped hand like the characters on a Chinese tea-chest) yours of 21st instant duly received. Am glad to hear that you are to be married to a worthy young man who is able to support you. Accept my good wishes. By this day's express I send a present which I hope you may find useful, and no more at present from your affectionate uncle,

JEHORAM JOHNSON.

"There!" cried I. "What do you think of that?"

Alice Eden clapped her dimpled hands.

"The old darling!" cried she. "It's a real Cashmere shawl, Nanny, you may be very certain."

"Or perhaps a Persian rug," said Nelly Pinkham, "all dim blues and greens and delicious blotches of yellow."

"The deed of a house and lot," said Mary Moxley.

"Diamonds, most likely," interposed Juliet Grayson, "or real Oriental pears, each one as big as a tear-drop."

"He's very rich, isn't he?" said Alice.

"Of course he is," said I, "or at least I've always heard so."

"And an old bachelor?"

"Yes, an old bachelor."

"But he doesn't say whether or not he's coming to the wedding."

"Oh, of course he'll come," said I.

"What is he like?" asked Nelly, thoughtfully.

I burst out laughing.

"Do you know, girls," said I, "that I never saw him in my life."

And then Harry came in with a delicious little bouquet of white rosebuds, and of course that put everything else out of our heads. For my hair had to be twisted up in a hurry, and Harry would insist on seeing the wedding wreath and veil on, and an exquisite tete-a-tete set of real pink Sevres came in from Mrs. Mentagu Jackyll, and we never thought of Uncle Jehoram until the next day, when there was a prodigious peal at the door-bell, just as we were all sitting down to a gypsy sort of tea in the old schoolroom—the parlors and dining-room were in the hands of the confectioner's men—and Betty, the maid, made her appearance with a puzzled expression of face.

"It's a bundle, ma'am," said she, "came by express, with Mr. Jehoram Johnson's compliments on a card."

I jumped up, oversetting a cup of tea and a plate of peaches and cream in my excitement.

"Bring it here, Betty," I cried, "at once."

"Bless your dear heart, miss," said Betty, "it 'ud take four men to lift it. The expressman he swore awful when he lifted it up the steps, and said as it ought to be paid double rates."

We looked at each other in a sort of delightful bewilderment.

"It must be something very valuable," said Juliet, breathlessly.

"A sewing-machine, perhaps," suggested Harry.

"Nonsense!" cried Alice. "As if a rich old uncle would send anything as commonplace and poky as that!"

"Well, perhaps it might help to solve the riddle somewhat," said Harry, gravely, "if we were to go out and look at it."

At this suggestion we all rushed out en masse.

There, in the middle of the marble-paved hall, stood a huge, oblong bundle, some three feet high and wide in proportion.

"No wonder the expressman swore!" said Harry, with a shrug of his shoulders. "It's carpeting."

"Oh, the dear old creature!" cried Nelly. "A real Aubusson, from Paris. Oh, do open it, somebody!"

Harry slowly produced from his vest pocket a tortoise-shell handled knife, and ripped the coarse covering which enveloped the parcel. We all started back.

"A rag carpet!" exclaimed my husband-elect.

"A common, coarse thing, only fit for a dust-man's kitchen!" cried Nelly Pinkham; while Alice Eden, who had worked herself up into a high state of nervous expectation, burst into tears.

"Who ever heard of such a thing?" said Juliet Grayson, disdainfully. "The horrid, mean old miser!"

"Girls," cried I, recovering myself as best I could, "you must not talk so. Uncle Jehoram meant it all in kindness. I dare say he thought I could make it useful—and I mean to accept it in the same spirit in which it was offered."

Harry stooped down and gave me a kiss.

"You're a dear, sensible little thing," said he, "and Uncle Jehoram has reason to be proud of his niece."

"But you'll never put it on exhibition with the other presents," said Alice, incredulously.

"Of course I shall," said I.

And I did. And the girls never knew of the little private "cry" I had all by myself when they thought I was selecting the prettiest flowers to decorate the big bride-cake; for I had expected something very nice from the rich old bachelor uncle whom I had never seen, and somehow the bundle of striped red carpeting was a disappointment.

But the eventful day came, with its white satin bows and odor of hot-house flowers and rustle of silks and laces, and Uncle Jehoram's rag carpet occupied a place of honor among the silver teapots and china services and embroidered sofa pillows and countless pretty gimcracks that burdened the "present table."

We had been married for about half an hour, and I was standing beside Harry under the great floral bell receiving the congratulations of my friends, when a queer little brown-faced man, in a faded wig and a suit of clothes that exactly matched his complexion, walked up to me, bowing low.

"Wish you much joy, Mrs Monteith," said he.

"Thank you, sir," said I, trying to remember who he was, and failing altogether.

But I had made up my mind he must be the eccentric Methodist minister who lived around the corner, and who was in the habit of going where he pleased, whether he was invited or not.

"I've been looking at your wedding presents," said he. "Curious thing, that bundle of rag carpet," pointing to it with his knobby walking stick. "Shouldn't have supposed you'd have put that among your pretty gimcracks."

"It is rather a strange gift," said my husband, "particularly as it came from a rich old curmudgeon who—"

But I checked Harry with a look.

"From a dear relative of mine," said I, "whose kind remembrance gratifies me beyond expression."

"Oh!" said the little brown man, looking from Harry to me with keen, bright eyes, like those of a bird, "you're pleased with it, then?"

"More pleased than I can express," I answered, earnestly.

"Humph!" commented the little old man. "Would you object to having it lifted down and unrolled? I've some curiosity to look at the pattern."

It was a strange request, but we scarcely knew how to refuse it, and presently the gay stripes of the rag carpet were unrolled on the floor before the astonished eyes of our wedding guests, yard upon yard, backward and forward, until, from the very heart of the tightly packed cylinder, out fell a small black leather box.

"Eh?" said the little brown man, pouncing on it more like a bird than ever. "What is this? Not diamonds?"

Diamonds in good truth. The scintillating blaze of a neck-lace—the glitter of solitaire ear-drops that nearly dazzled my eyes.

"Uncle Jehoram! It is Uncle Jehoram!" cried I, the scales suddenly falling from my mental vision.

"Niece!" said the little man, as he ceremoniously hung the sparkling chain around my neck, "if you had scornfully rejected the old man's homely present and sent it back to him, as some young women would have done, you would never have discovered the secret of the old family diamonds." "Niece, you are a sensible girl, and I congratulate your husband on the possession of a treasure more precious than rubies."

And on this Uncle Jehoram Johnson made a curious little bow, like a jack-knife shutting itself up, and disappeared among the crowd. And from that moment to this I have never seen him, although he writes me a kindly letter every year, declining all invitations to visit us.

"I am best by myself," he writes. "When I die, you will find that I have not forgotten you. Until then let me live on like the solitary old oyster that I have taught myself to be."

And the rag carpet covers the floor of our second guest-chamber, which is furnished after a substantial style, and the diamonds are the envy and admiration of all my female friends.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Square Man.

During the cloth-house and wholesale clothing-house failures of September, a retail dealer in Cleveland shut up shop and announced his failure, with an offer to pay ten cents on the dollar.

"See here, Jake," said an acquaintance, "there are some ugly reports about your failure."

"Ish det bossible!"

"Did any of these New York houses owe you anything?"

"Oh, no!"

"Did you owe any of them?"

"Not a cent."

"Well, then, why should their misfortune affect you? You don't fail every time an Eastern house goes under, do you?"

"Mr. Schmidt, you doan' onderstand der case, and I vhill oxblain. My brudder Isaacs was mit one of der busted firms."

"Well, what of it?"

"Isaacs vhas werry sensitive—werry. If Isaacs vhas busted and I vhas doing a rushing peesness he would grieve to death. I fail oudt of respect to his feelings. My wife vhas also werry sensitive, and if I offer more ash ten per cent., she goes into a decline. Dot vhas how I vhas fixed, and I like eferybody to know I vhas shust as square a man as efer had a brudder Isaacs."—Wall Street News.

—Prof. Holeman, of Philadelphia, has made experiments in the effect of sound on the colors and shapes of soap bubbles. Being reflected on a screen, they were at first a blueish. An intonation of the voice through a tube connected with a bubble first brought out a number of black spots on the reflection: and these were succeeded by a bright green mingled with pink. The same tone always caused the same formation, but had no control over the color.—N. Y. Sun.

—At a wedding in Lockport, N. Y., recently the organist played among other selections, the "For I'm to be married to-day."

—The Pennsylvania Steel Works turn out enough steel rails in a day to lay eight miles of track.—Philadelphia Record.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

—A Frenchman has patented a machine for the use of concentrated solar rays as a general motive power.

—A Wilmington (S. C.) mechanic has built a buggy on the bicycle principle, the spokes and tires being of steel. It works nicely.—Chicago Times.

—Toad raising is a profitable Austrian industry. The creatures are produced for the London market, where they are sold for $15 or $20 per hundred, and are bought by gardeners and agriculturists for use in destroying obnoxious insects.

—At Oakland, Cal., the iron dust created by the Pacific Nail Works, amounting to five tons a day, is now utilized and twenty-five per cent. of it made into steel by the same process that black sand is manufactured into that metal.—San Francisco Call.

—Erie, Pa., intends to utilize the natural gas which lies beneath her soil. Gas can be secured along the lake shore, anywhere at from 700 to 1,000 feet, and the supply is so strong that it frequently finds its way up through the ground through springs, and in several places along the shore of the lake it comes bubbling up through sixty feet of water. —Pittsburgh Post.

—Mr. Meyer, of Paris, claims to have invented a paper indestructible by fire. Specimens have been exhibited which had previously been placed for four hours in a pottery furnace. Mr. Meyer has also invented incombustible colors and ink. The invention is likely to be of great value, and the incombustible paper will be in demand for wills, deeds, account books, etc.

—Fires have been started in two of the four new blocks at the Warsaw (N. Y.) Salt-works, and the others will follow. This is now the largest and most complete salt-manufacturing establishment in the United States. The buildings cover about three acres. The company expects to manufacture about 1,000 barrels of salt per day, and to double the capacity soon.—Syracuse Journal.

—Maine, it is claimed, stands fourth among the thirty-eight States in the number of water-wheels and the amount of water-power she has in use. In her quarrying industries she ranks first in granite and third in slate. In ship-building she is third in the list. Her fisheries are fourth in importance. Her production of manufactured lumber is only exceeded by six States. In paper manufacture she is sixth in importance. In the production of tanned leather she is third. In the manufacture of boots and shoes is fifth in importance. In cotton manufacture she is also fifth, and in the manufacture of woolen goods and mixed textiles she ranks seventh.—Boston Herald.

PITH AND POINT.

—If there is any good in a man it is bound to come out; but it should not come out all at once and leave the man empty.—N. O. Picayune.

—A blue-stocking has written an essay on "The Disadvantage of Being Pretty." Most girls are good natured and willing to put up with the disadvantages.—Chicago Tribune.

—A broker named Epps has run away from London leaving debts to the amount of $400,000, and is believed to have come to America. An international Epps owed.—Rochester (N. Y.) Express.

—"Look out, that steer is wild," said a Chicago policeman, as an enormous bovine tore down the street. "I should think he would be," exclaimed a bystander, "with such a crowd chasing him."—Boston Times.

—In setting a hen a farmer made a mistake and put a number of porcelain eggs under the fowl. She is doing the best she can, but her eyes have a far-away gaze, and she looks like a man who has just bitten off the end of a cigar and has no match.—The Dairy.

—Mr. Van Twiller has just been shot in an affray at Baton Rouge. If his name had been Van Winkle, and he had been eviscerated with a bowie knife, there might have been a chance for a paragrapher make a joke about Rip Van Winkle. But as it is——.—Boston Post.

—Literary: Wanted—A story of burglary or ghosts in which the night is not very dark without, and the wind does not blow in fitful gusts, and the old oak in front of the house does not groan dismally. On the receipt of such we agree to return the manuscript.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

—The cheapest and simplest gymnasium in the world—one that will exercise every bone and muscle in the body—is a flat piece of steel, notched on one side, fitted tightly into a wooden frame, and after being greased on both sides with a bacon rind, rubbed into a stick of wood laid lengthwise of a sawbuck.—Exchange.

—Judge Haliburton relates that when once traveling in the provinces a man thus explained to him how he was in the same profession as lawyers: "I am a wrecker. I am Lloyds' agent, and live on the misfortunes of others; so do you. When a vessel is wrecked it is my business to get her off, or to save the property. When a man is entangled among the shoals or quicksands of the law, your duty is similar. We are both wreckers, and therefore members of the same profession The only difference is, you are a lawyer and I am not."—Chicago Journal.

—Murphy heard cows in his orchard the other night, and, slipping out the back way, appeared suddenly near the front steps and yelled: "He-ah Tige! He-ah Tige! He-ah!" Just then a figure rushed past, cleared two fences, and vanished in the gloom. "Take 'im! take 'im!" screamed the old man; but his daughter Miranda, who had unaccountably appeared on the scene, secured the dog by the collar and refused to let go. "What ye doin'?" yelled the old man; "don't ye know them cows has been in here three or four times?" "Oh, pa!" was the answer, "but this was only a calf." The old man was pacified, but Adolphus, who was standing out in the road awaiting developments, wasn't, and Mirandy will never understand the coldness that has sprung up between them.—Chicago Tribune.

Our Young Folks.

PEEK-A-BOO!

The cunningest thing that's baby can do
Is to play for the very first time, Peek-a-boo!

It will hide its little pink face in its hands,
Then crow, and show that it understands

What nurse and mamma, and papa, too,
Mean when they hide and cry: "Peek-a-boo!"

Oh, what a wonderful thing it is,
When they find that baby can play like this!

And they every one listen, and think it true
That the baby's gurgle means Peek-a-boo!

I wonder if any one ever knew
A baby who never played Peek-a-boo?

'Tis old as the world is. I believe
Cain was taught it by Mother Eve.

For Cain was an innocent babe once, too,
And I am sure he played Peek-a-boo.

And the whole world full of the children of men
Have all of them played that game since then.

And while the sun shines and the skies are blue,
Babies will always play Peek-a-boo.
—Ella Wheeler, in Harper's Young People.

ABOUT BOYS.

Cousin Ellen advised that the next John Spicer lecture be upon the subject of boys. Then some one expressed the opinion that it would be well for John Spicer to catch himself and put himself in the row and hear his own lecture, but as no lecturer could stand up in front and lecture and at the same time be sitting in a row, hearing, it was decided that John Spicer should catch himself, and put himself in a row, and that then cousin Ellen herself should deliver the lecture. This accordingly was done. John Spicer caught himself and put himself in the row, and Cousin Ellen delivered the lecture, as follows:

Boys are found in Europe, Asia, Africa, America, Australia and other places. Some wear clothes and some do not. The latter are natives of hot countries. The well-known and familiar American boy wears clothes, and wears them a good deal; wears them out, as one may say, not meaning out-doors, but out. Boys of this species, so far as I have known them, have a great deal to do; steady business all the year round; indeed, some are so hurried, so pressed for time, they can scarcely wait to dress in the morning, and sometimes hurry so fast as to get their clothes on behind-side before, in which case they generally take them off again. Their employment is different at different times of the year. In the winter they drive a brisk business in ice and snow. Hurrah for a coast or a skate! Up and away! No time to be lost. The coast needs filling in, or smoothing off, or digging out, or water poured over it. Snow houses are to be made, snow men to be molded. Hurry is the word. A thaw may come. The ice may melt in the pond, the school-bell may ring, is sure to ring. Meals have to be eaten. On with cap and mittens. No time to waste.

Business dull in the spring? Not at all. Spring brings its work. Rubber boots are in demand. There is valuable slosh to be waded in. The water power in the gutters is to be turned in. Chip boats are to be launched on it, dams of mud and stones built across for a "flow." The last snowballing is to be done before the sun shall melt the snow every bit away. Snow gone, the bare ground is put to instant use. Hoops are to be driven on it, tops spun upon it, marbles rolled upon it. Willow whistles are to be cut and blown through. Windmills to be whittled out and nailed up. Wind power is made use of in whirling these round and in flying kites. The kite business in itself is a large one, and includes cutting, framing, shaping, whittling, string-hunting and bobtying. Also the boat business is large, taking in all the rigging and sail-making.

Next comes summer! Hurrah now for the woods and the hills and the fields and the ponds and the seashore! Tramp, tramp, tramp, the boys are marching along the seashore. Oh, so much to do! Shells to be found, stones to be gathered into pockets. Water warm? Yes. Off clothes and go in swimming. Now go on, tramp, tramp, tramp; crab shells, and horse-shoe shells, and live creatures from puddles, all to be gathered into handkerchiefs; beach grasses to be gathered, boats to be rocked in. Just one moment for a stretching out on the warm sands. Ripple, ripple, sound the waves. Off clothes again and go in swimming. Now away to the woods. Tramp, tramp, the boys are marching, marching among the buttercups and daisies, chasing butterflies, running races up in the pastures over the hills and far away, picking berries, climbing trees, swinging on the boughs, gathering cat-o'-nine-tails. Here's a pond. Get some pond lilies. There's a turtle. Catch him. Down he goes under! Off clothes and go in swimming. Here's a brook; fish with a pin fish-hook. No fish? No, not a fish. Sit on the bank and tell stories—fish stories, bear stories, circus stories, Fourth of July stories, any kind. There goes a great butterfly. Quick! Quick! over fences, down, up, over, across. There he is! No, he's gone. Another brook—go in wading. What's that straggling over the stone wall? A squash vine? Yes. Now squash-vine trumpets. Toot, toot, toot, the boys are marching, marching across the fields, through the orchards, picking up apples, smelling the hay, climbing into hay wagons. There's a well; tug at the ropes, down goes a bucket, up comes the other, dripping, pitching, spilling over upon the mossy well stones. A drink all round. Was ever anything so cold and so w ? The sun is getting low. Pleasant thoughts of a far-away supper table ready and waiting in a far-away home. And now, tramp, tramp, tramp, the boys are marching home, home, and to bed to rest, let us hope, for the summer business must go on next day, and next, and next, because there is much to do, and summer is passing swiftly away, and autumn will arrive before the boys will be half ready to begin upon their jack-o'-lanterns, and to go a-nutting, and play foot-ball and base-ball, and other balls, and ride velocipedes, and all there is to be done before the snow flies. Heigho! Steady work and plenty of it all the year around. For besides the regular business, the odd times are to be filled in with hide-and-seek, prison bar, touch the goal, jumping, climbing, last-tagging, playing horse, mumble-the-peg, whittling, hammering, story reading, playing card games, checkers, dominoes.

Oh, the American boy is a busy, busy boy,
A boy exceedingly busy is he!
From morning to night he finds his delight
In being as busy as busy can be!

There are many varieties of the American boy. There are the rough kind and the gentle kind; the polite and the impolite; the truthful and the untruthful; the generous, and the stingy; the obliging, and the disobliging; the honorable, and the mean; the outspoken, and the sneaking. Dear me, how many kinds there are, and what a nuisance a boy can make of himself, if he chooses! Take, for instance, the big-feeling boy. Perhaps you know just how he come into the house, loud-mouthed, important, giving his orders, telling what he wants and doesn't want, what he likes and doesn't like; what he will have and won't have; snubbing his mother and sisters, domineering over the little ones, speaking rudely to the hired help, disturbing everybody. You can't hurl a bootjack at him, for such is not the custom, but a bootjack would do him good if it could let him know what a nuisance he is. Some boys seem to think it makes them manly to act in this way. Poor, ignorant simpletons! They do not know that the greatest and noblest men are surest to be gentle in manner, respectful to women, to reverence their mothers, and to treat everybody well. Everybody, the poor and poorly clothed not excepted. Clothes do not make the man or the woman, or the boy or the girl. Neither does the occupation. A poor laborer, poorly clothed, may be a much nobler person than a rich idler, finely clothed. Boys do not always think of this.

I will tell you what kind of a boy I like. The boy that I like is wide awake, spry, eager for out-doors and for all sorts of sport, always plays fair, will not lower himself so much as to cheat, is not big-feeling, is not a sneak, is not afraid of pain, speaks the truth, no matter how much it goes against him, would hate to get into bed with himself if he had done a mean thing, is willing to do anybody a favor even if it cause him some trouble, is well-mannered at home, kind to the little ones, respectful to the older ones, and treats everybody well. And all this is just as true of the girl that I like as of the boy. I know girls that I like, and I know boys that I like. Some of them are in my audience, and were I acquainted with you all, very likely I should like you all. I hope so. —Mrs. A. M. Diaz, in Wide Awake.

Lost Johnny—A True Story.

The little village of C—— is situated eighteen miles from Boston. Quite a number of years ago there went through its quiet streets and into the houses the cry: "A child is lost! lost! lost!" Yes, little Johnny, four years old, had disappeared from that part of the face of the earth. There is so much room and there are so many places; how children and things will sometimes vanish from sight! One so young as the boy just named could not have strayed far away. But, "Oh! where is he? where is he?" was the wail wrung from out the hearts of the family.

Now it is to be remembered that no tramps were ever seen around in that quarter. If so, one such vagabond might have caught up a darling, small fellow when he was out at play a short distance from the door, and clapped him under his tunic in order to sell him back to his parents in a few days, if such a piece of traffic could be effected. If such a thought was born in the minds of the afflicted household or of the neighbors, it was born to die the same instant. Again, bears and woods were no more in that region. The wells! the wells! All the people of C—— looked into their holes in the ground made for holding water. Nobody was hid away there. It was not the custom of Johnny to put the cat in the well, neither had he on this occasion dropped in there himself.

Sometimes, on board of a ship at sea, the shout goes up: "A man overboard!" There he is, plain to be seen, struggling in the slippery waters and buffeting with the hungry waves. There is no doubt where he is. So, as quick as a flash, or before many flashes could occur, the boat is lowered and pushed to the tumbling ocean waves where the man overboard is. But how different is the case of the lost baby in the village of C——! A dreadful uncertainty overhangs his whereabouts. Whither shall the runners run? There is hurrying to and fro that all ends in nothing. Though scores of anxious voices call again and again, no answer comes back, any more than if Johnny were at the bottom of a fifty-barrel cistern of water, or were whisked off by a tornado to Nova Scotia.

There is a story in a school-book, used fifty years ago, of a little child restored to her distressed mother by the aid of a dog. His master, an old Indian, happened along under similar circumstances to those connected with this true incident. The Indian called for the shoes which the child had last worn. He then put the leather trotters in contact with the dog's nose. That was enough. He took the scent and followed the steps of the little wanderer to the other end of the line of pursuit. But perhaps Johnny had no other shoes than those then on his feet. So, in that case, all the dogs and Indians in America could not help the searchers.

Well, was Johnny ever found in the land of the living? Yes, that terrible commotion in the streets, like everything else, came to an end with the happy discovery of the curly-headed, dimple-cheeked four-year-old. While family and friends were looking all about the neighborhood, in pig-pens, stable, cistern and well—were peeping into every corner of his home (especially the preserve closet), making sure that he was not curled up in the rocking-chair, nor on the capacious sofa—Johnny lay fast asleep under the sofa, where he was found!—Christian Union.

—The White House now contains portraits of all the Presidents of the United States, except Mr. Buchanan.—Washington Star.

Religious.

TRANSMUTATION.

With wondrous skill the dear Lord brings,
From all things, good to me—
And full of tender, faithful love
He proves Himself to be.

Though Care upon me lays her hand,
And others sit at ease,
While I toil on 'mid heat and dust,
Or buffet heavy seas—

Although I shrink beneath pain's touch,
Drink sorrow's bitter draught,
Or stand beside a grave, where once
The happy daisies laughed—

Still by His Heavenly alchemy,
Fullness grows out of loss—
And though the fire may hotly burn,
It but consumes the dross.

The duties of each busy day
Are channels all for peace;
While little blessings on their banks,
Grow in a rich increase.

Where I have dreaded hunger, there
I've always found enough—
And Oh, the soul views!—far and grand—
What if the path is rough?

Shape me, O Master! I am clay,
Thou hast the potter's art
To fashion a work beautiful
Out of my stained heart.

From likeness unto like, mold Thou
My nature, till I stand
A perfect vessel, meet for use
In the Eternal Land.
—Hannah Coddington, in S. S. Times.

Sunday-School Lessons.

FOURTH QUARTER.

Nov. 25	David and Goliath	1 Sam. 17:38-51
Dec. 2	David's Enemy—Saul	1 Sam. 18: 1- 6
Dec. 9	David's 'Friend—Jonathan	1 Sam. 20:32-42
Dec. 16	David Sparing His Enemy	1 Sam. 24: 1-17
Dec. 23	Death of Saul and Jonathan	1 Sam. 31: 1-13
Dec. 30	Review.

THE PERMANENT IN RELIGION.

The religious newspapers, and even the pulpits, are so full of the discussion of debatable points in theology that it is not strange that common people sometimes gets the impression that there is no certainty in religion; that theology is not truth, but only what people think about truth; that religious philosophy is a kaleidoscope in which the figures change with every generation, and that all theological differences and disputes concern only the way in which the bits of colored glass shall be arranged so as to produce the most pleasing affect. It is not strange that they sometimes conclude that science is the known, and theology the unknown; that there is assurance and permanence of conviction in the arts and sciences, but none in religion. The disputants have only themselves to thank for this impression; but it is a false one. The changes in theological opinions have been far less than in scientific opinions; and the debatable points in theology, as compared with the assured and positive convictions, are but as the currents in the ocean compared with its immovable foundations and its unchanging shores. The great essentials of religious belief have been held with substantial unity of conviction from the days of Abraham to the present day; the variations have been either in modes of statements, in philosophical explanations of the unquestioned truths, or in clearer and more spiritual apprehension of those truths themselves. They have been the changes incident to the moral and spiritual growth of the race: the change of the tree from its birth in the bursting seed to the fragrant glory of the orchard or the umbrageous glory of the grove; of the river from its cradle among the hills to its manhood industry in the valley below.

That there is one God, not Gods many and Lords many; that He is a Personal God, with intelligence and emotion, not a mere generic and impersonal law; that He permeates and animates all nature, yet is more than nature, as the soul pervades and animates the body, yet is more than the body; that He is a just, true, righteous God, governed himself by these great moral laws which He has written in the hearts and consciences of His children for their government; that He is the Father of mankind, has given to them birth, provides them with food, raiment and shelter, and embraces them in His infinite sympathies, mercy and love; that He has revealed Himself to mankind in the universal conscience, in special prophets and apostles, and chiefest of all, in Jesus Christ, His Son: that He is revealed as a God who pardons and cures sin, undoing for us, if we will let Him, our own undoing, and giving us back our squandered inheritance and our wasted life; that He would have all men to love Him, and, loving Him, the universal Father, to love each other in a universal brotherhood; that He would have all men, by repentance ceasing to do evil, and by faith learning to do well, come into a knowledge of Him, fellowship with Him, live in Him—this is the universal and unchanged faith of the whole people of God; unchanged, except in the clear apprehension of it, from the day when God first perceived that the Seed of the woman should bruise the Serpent's head, till this hour, when, bruised and bleeding, that old Serpent lies beating his life out upon the ground in the agony of a useless and hateful wrath. It is the faith of Jew and Christian; of Romanist and Protestant; of Old Theology and New Theology; of the first century and of the nineteenth century. The ages have seen natural science teaching the earth to be a plane, and the starry heavens a vault whose movements foretold the destiny of man; political economy teaching that Kings ruled by Divine right, and the people were their children, whose only right was the right to obey God's vicegerent; successive literatures arise, flourish and die, to be buried in successive layers of fossil forms in dead languages; philosophy pass through every form, from the spiritualism of Plato to the materialism of Maudsley; but throughout all these ages, Religion, changing her vestments, her manner of speech, her methods of instruction, has calmly taught the same great Divine truths—the unity, the personality, the righteousness, the forgiving kindness, the eternal fatherhood, of God. If there has been any virtue in Old Theology, it is because it has made these truths real to the spiritual apprehension of men. If there is to be any virtue in New Theology, it will be because it will clear away some hindrances to their acceptance, and will make them clearer, and the faith in them more intelligent and more spiritual.

And the great work of the minister is to make these truths real in the apprehension of mankind. It is not to debate the doubtful; it is to make clear the certain. It is not to defend old theories or to propound new ones; it is to make truth vital in human experience. It is not to maintain theories of the atonement, either new or old; it is to preach the forgiveness of sins. It is not to formulate a new theodicy; it is to make of every hearer an Enoch walking with God. Each age must, indeed, deliver this message in its own way, and each apostle in his own dialect. It is the glory of an age of spiritual liberty, like our own, that we hear every man in our own tongue wherein we were born. But though there are many dialects, there is but one Gospel; though the river that flows from the Garden of God is parted into many heads, the source is one and the waters are one—for the source of all is God, and the waters of all are the waters of the River of Life.—Christian Union.

Scientific Accuracy of the Bible.

Dr. Samuel Kinns, the author of "Moses and Geology," has for some little time past been giving a series of lectures in the drawing rooms of the aristocracy of England on "The Marvelous Scientific Accuracy of the Bible." The last took place at the Earl of Shaftesbury's, and was attended by a large and very distinguished company. Dr. Kinns, in carrying his audience through his course of reasoning described the various geological strata and the story told by the fossil plants and animals of the earth's condition during the various epochs of its history. He especially interested them, however, in his description of fifteen creative events which he showed were placed by Moses in the correct order of sequence according to the latest discoveries in science. These events, which are very concisely stated in "Moses and Geology," were summarily described in the review of "Moses and Geology," which appeared in the Record of March 22, 1882. Dr. Kinns then proved that the number of changes that can be made in the order of fifteen things is more than a billion—viz., 1,307,674,368,000—and, therefore, if Moses placed fifteen important creative events in their proper order without the possibility of traditional help, as most of them happened millions of years before man was created, it is a very strong proof of his inspiration, for group them as one may, and take off a further percentage for any scientific knowledge possessed by him, still the chances must be reckoned by hundreds of millions against his giving the order correctly without a special revelation from God. To lead his auditors to appreciate this, Dr. Kinns mentioned that a clock beating seconds would take over 30,000 years to tick a billion times; and that if any fifteen different events could be written down once in every ten minutes it would take twenty-four millions of years to write all the variations that could be made in their order, writing them day and night without intermission, and to further illustrate it, he distributed slips of paper for each to write down the first fifteen letters of the alphabet in order known only to himself, something in this order:

g m h d a j b k c f e n i o l

and not one corresponded with his. He told them that if all the people in the world were to try to imitate his unknown order, there would be still a thousand chances to one that the whole twelve hundred million attempts would be incorrect.

Or, in other words, if all the people in a thousand worlds, each having a population equal to our own, were to try, there would still be a probability that not one list would agree in sequence with the unknown list. After this he asked how will the skeptic explain the marvelous, nay miraculous, accuracy in sequence of the Mosaic cosmogony.—London Record.

Wise Sayings.

—He that is unwilling to serve God in pain and patience, is unworthy of so good a Master.—Young Christian's Pocket-Book.

—Were the sun of prosperity always to shine upon us we should soon forget our Father's house, our heritage above. —Rutherford.

—Faith is the blossom of the soul; it makes the hope of a future life a bright reality, and brings departed friends in speaking distance.

—Character is not cut in marble—it is not something solid and unalterable. It is something living and changing, and may become diseased as our bodies do.—George Eliot.

—It is no exaggeration to say that each great movement for good in the Christian Church has coincided with fresh study of the Bible. It was so with the great fathers of the first ages, with Origen, and the masters of Alexandria; it was so with Jerome and Augustine; it was so in the tenth, the fourteenth and the sixteenth centuries. At each crisis deeper investigation of Scripture found new treasures which answered to the wants of a new society. And by God's help it will be so now. The power of the Bible is unchanged and inexhaustible. It speaks with authority to societies and to men; it speaks with sympathy; it speaks with authority because it speaks with sympathy; because it speaks with a human voice, through men and to men, in many fashions, and in many parts. Let us emphasize this thought. We commonly describe the Bible as a "Book." It is a Book, one Book; and it is more. The first title which was given to it in the West was "Bibliotheca Divina," and it is indeed a Divine Library, rich in every region of human interest, rich in every variety of human record.—Prof. Westcott.

—A gentleman of Santa Barbara, Cal., has in his cabinet of curiosities several sets of false teeth, exhumed from the graves of aborigines on the Santa Barbara Islands. They are formed each from a shell, which is fashioned to fit the roof of the mouth, and could be adjusted outside of the gums.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL, Publishers.
BURLINGTON, : : KENTUCKY.

Insults to Turgeneff's Body.

The following was told me by one who happened to be in the train that brought Turgeneff's body to St. Petersburg, and I had better give it as nearly as possible in my informant's own words:

"As you know, M. Stasulevitch, editor of the European Messenger, was the delegate of the funeral committee sent to the German frontier to receive Turgeneff's remains. When he reached Werjbelovo, the Russian frontier station, on Thursday, and got out on the platform, a gendarme officer at once presented himself and said that he had been instructed to attend on him. M. Stasulevitch told the officer that he did not want him, but the officer replied that, whether he wanted him or not, such were his orders, so Stasulevitch had to submit to be saddled with the gendarme. The train with the body arrived in the evening. Stasulevitch asked the gendarme when it would start again for St. Petersburg, and was bluntly told that he, the gendarme, had been further instructed to detain the body until Monday. 'What are you going to do with it then?' 'Put it into a stable-shed near by.' 'Put it into a shed!' ejaculated Stasulevitch, 'when there's a church in the village!' 'The priest,' responded the gendarme, 'has refused to have it.' 'Well, then,' said Stasulevitch, perfectly astounded at this treatment of the great author's remains, 'show me the shed.' The gendarme showed him the shed, and to his further amazement he found the dirty place full of sheep and pigs. 'Well,' said Stasulevitch, 'if no better place than this can be found to shelter Turgeneff's bones, I shall make my bed here, too, by the side of the coffin.' Before the gendarmes could carry out their plan, Stasulevitch found the priest of the village church and learned that what the gendarme officer had said was a lie. The priest at once had the body removed with all due ceremony to the sanctuary, much to the disgust of the police, who were doing all they could to prevent crowds from collecting and making any processions.

"On Sunday morning early, when the body was to be sent on to St. Petersburg, the gendarmes went to take it away to the train before any one was about, so as to prevent any crowding and fuss; but the priest had the keys. On the gendarmes asking him for them, the priest, who was a bold man, gave up the keys at once, but added that if the body were taken away in that disgraceful manner he would immediately telegraph to the Metropolitan Archbishop that they had committed sacrilege by stealing the sanctified remains of an orthodox Christian from the sanctuary of the church. This threat frightened the gendarmes almost out of their lives and they let the body alone. It was then transported to the train in procession in the proper way. At the station hundreds of telegrams had arrived from all parts inquiring the time of its arrival, but by official instructions no answers were returned until Stasulevitch sent them on his own account, even telegraphing out of revenge to all kinds of places that had not even asked for information. You see what this everlasting opposition between public and official interest leads to. All the way up to St. Petersburg the stations were crowded day and night with eager watchers for the funeral train. When it arrived they fell down on their knees and kissed the coffin, which was in a wagon that could be opened at the side toward the platform. At many places the clergy performed service over it. On all these occasions the gendarmes completely lost their heads. They had been ordered to prevent all demonstrations and they rang the departure bell in the middle of the service to get the train away, but happily the conductor would not blow his whistle while the priests were praying, and so the train remained. At one station in the dead of night, Stasulevitch was much afraid that there would be accidents, as the crowds of people pressed upon the carriage to kiss the bier, which could scarcely be seen in the darkness. He bethought himself of a good plan. He shouted for a little girl to be handed over to him out of the crowd, which was done. He then made the little girl kiss the coffin, and, presenting her to the crowd, told them to be satisfied by kissing her, as the train could not wait any longer."—St. Petersburg Cor. London Times.

A Jewish Rip Van Winkle.

Choni ha-Maagol was all his life unable to understand the Biblical passage, "When the Lord turned again the captivity of Zion, we were like them that dream." (Ps. 126, 1). "Can seventy years be regarded as a dream? How is it possible," he asked, "for a man to remain for seventy years asleep?" One day, while on a journey, he saw a man planting a carob tree, and asked him how long a period he expected would elapse before the tree became fruitful. "Seventy years," was the reply. "Do you then expect to live seventy years and to eat of the fruit?" "When I entered the world," was the answer, "I found carob trees in abundance. Even as my fathers planted for me in like manner shall I also plant for those that are to come after me." Choni sat down to his meal, and a deep sleep fell upon him, and he slumbered. The rock closed up around him and he was hidden from the sight of men. And thus he lay for seventy years. When he awoke and rose to his feet, lo! he beheld a man eating of the fruit of the very carob tree that he had seen planted. Choni asked: "Dost thou know who it was that planted this tree?" "My grandfather." Then Choni knew that he had slept on for seventy years. He went to his house and asked where the son of Choni ha-Maagol was. "His son," they told him, "is dead. His grandson you can see if you will." "I am Choni ha-Maagol!" he exclaimed; but no one believed him. He thence turned his steps to the House of Learning and he heard the Rabbis saying: "We have resolved this difficulty as we used to do when Choni ha-Maagol was alive;" for, in times past, when Choni went to the meeting, he was able to expound every subject under discussion. "I am Choni ha-Maagol!" he cried for the second time. But again none would believe him, neither did they treat him with honor. Broken-hearted, he left the haunts of men and prayed for death, and his prayer was answered. "This," says Ravah, "is the meaning of the saying: To the friendless man death cometh as a blessing."—Jewish Chronicle.

A Cattle King and a Lord.

Information reached us yesterday from a passenger who came in on the train, who was an eye-witness to almost a bloody struggle between a Billings cattle man and an English lord, at the Queen's Hotel, Winnipeg, a few days ago. The cattle man, who had just sold a train load of cattle in Chicago at a high market price, concluded that he would, in company with his family, visit the noted city across the boundary line. Arriving at that place he put up at the hotel, and during the evening took his family to a place of amusement. In the meantime the titled man from across the Atlantic called at the office of the hotel for quarters. Every room in the house was occupied, but the clerk found a room for his English guest, or at least he thought he had, and consequently removed several lariats, a six-shooter, "chaps" and valises belonging to the Billings man from the room which he had engaged, and the English lord retired, not dreaming that in a few moments he would be aroused from his peaceful slumber at the point of a Colt's six-shooter. Such, however was the case. The room was called for and the reply from the clerk was: "It's occupied by an English lord."

"The dickens you say!" was the cool answer from the noble Montana man.

"You see," says the clerk, "we always in this country make room for an Englishman in preference to any Americans, and a cot in the hallway ought to suit Montanians, whose means are limited."

"Limited be blowed!" was the reply; "I've got enough cash here in my weasel-skin to buy all the hotels in this town, and besides have ten thousand head of cattle ranging in the Judith country of Montana," and away he went to bring forth the man who had taken possession of his room. The panels of the door were broken with the butt of the six-shooter, and the cry of "murder" attracted the attention of the police and made a general stampede among the guests of the house. The herd of guests were corraled by the cattle king, who made an explanation of what caused the disturbance, and the English lord left the house muttering an oath that he never again would intrude on the rights of any man who hailed from Montana.—Miles City (Mon.) Journal.

American Purchasers and Parisian Tradesmen.

I have always been very ready to espouse the cause of the American purchaser against the Parisian tradesmen, and especially against the petty tricks of the dressmakers of this city. But I regret much to be compelled to say that right and justice are not always on the side of my countrymen, or rather of my countrywomen, since it is unusually the members of the fair sex who become involved in these controversies. For American ladies as customers some time indulge in an exasperating course of action that is little understood on this side of the water, and is, in consequence resented vigorously. One of these peculiarities is an undue exercise of the feminine privilege of changing one's mind. I have known one of my countrywomen to go to one of the leading houses of Paris, to select certain articles, taking them absolutely and without reserve, to order sundry changes to be made in them, and then, on the following morning, to send word that she would not take any of them. In one case an American lady bought and paid for a set of costly furniture, and then, after it had been packed and sent to Havre for shipment, she wanted to return it and to get back her money. In another instance a lady ordered a superb dress from Worth, and because the corsage did not fit when it was sent home, she refused altogether to take the dress, and threw it on his hands, while admitting that the defect was one that could perfectly have been remedied. And recently one of the prominent dressmakers of Paris called on me to give me the particulars of a case which had just occurred within her own experience. A wealthy American lady had called at her establishment and had ordered a cloak, selecting herself the velvet, the lining, the fur wherewith it was to be trimmed, and the model after which it was to be made. The price was agreed upon, the garment was made, was tried on and found to fit perfectly, and then the lady sent it back, saying that she "had changed her mind and concluded that she did not want the cloak." Now, in this case the return of the article simply involved a considerable pecuniary loss to the dressmaker, as the cloak was a costly one, and having been made to fit the person who ordered it there was not much chance of its exactly suiting any one else.—Paris Cor. Philadelphia Telegraph.

Petroleum Chewing Gum.

"Did you know that three-quarters of the chewing-gum that tires the jaws of the rising generation in the United States is now made from petroleum?" said a manufacturing confectioner to a reporter the other day.

The reporter did not know it.

"Oh, yes," said the confectioner. "Petroleum first knocked the spots off of the whale-oil business of New England, and now it is clipping into its spruce and tamarack gum industry at a fearful rate. Here's a lump of petroleum we have just received." The confectioner slapped his hand on a large block that resembled a piece of marble. "A few days ago," said he, "that came out of the ground in Pennsylvania, a dirty, greenish-brown fluid, with a smell that could knock an ox down. The oil refiners took it and put it through a lot of chemical processes that I don't know anything about, and after taking out a large percentage of kerosene, a good share of naphtha, considerable benzine, a cart load or so of tar, and a number of other things with names longer than the alphabet, left us this mass of nice clean wax. There isn't any taste to it, and no more smell than there is to a china plate.

"We will take this lump, cut it up, and melt it in boilers. This piece will weigh two hundred pounds. We add thirty pounds of cheap sugar to it, and flavor it with vanilla, wintergreen, peppermint, or any pleasant essential oil. Then we turn it out on a marble table and cut it into all sorts of shapes with dies. After it is wrapped in oiled tissue paper and packed in boxes it is ready for the market. You can imagine that somebody is chewing gum in this country when I tell you that a lump like this one will make ten thousand penny cakes, and we use one up every week. There are dozens of manufacturers using almost as much of the wax as we do.

"I believe this petroleum chewing gum, if honestly made, is perfectly harmless, and that is more than can be said of some of the gums made from the juices of trees, especially the imported article."—N. Y. Sun.

HOME AND FARM.

—Cider made from late apples is of better quality and possesses more body than that made from early apples; it will also keep much longer.—Chicago Tribune.

—A farm of twenty-seven acres near Rochester, N. Y., is entirely devoted to raising cabbages. The receipts this year were $5,400.

—Fowls delight to scratch in loose ground, and if a portion of their yard is dug up at intervals it will afford them the exercise they so much need.—Exchange.

—It is well known that pruning an orchard too severely does far more harm than good. All that is necessary is to remove the dead limbs and unfruitful branches. An important part of fruit-culture is to know when to let the trees alone.—Toledo Blade.

—Cream fritters, as an entree with roast beef and vegetables, are made just the same as if they were to be eaten with sirup. The cream is a gravy made of butter and flour, with boiling water poured over. A little sugar should be added, and a few drops of vanilla.—N. Y. Post.

—Salve for Chapped Hands: Three drachms white beeswax; three drachms spermaceti; two ounces olive oil; three drachms gum camphor. Put into a tin cup; place on back of range, where they will melt slowly. Stir often. When well-mixed, pour into a china cup. Rub on the hands every night.—Prairie Farmer.

—A little time and trouble used in removing the seeds from grape sauce will pay a large interest. After the grapes have cooked sufficiently so that the seeds separate readily from the sauce through a colander, then with a spoon remove the seeds as far as possible, put the skins back with the juice to cook until they are soft, and skim off any seeds that rise to the top.

—Six hundred pounds of land phosphate was put on about one acre and a quarter of land, which had been pastured quite a number of years to sheep; after thoroughly harrowing, the rows were marked out three feet apart, the hills being about two feet apart. The potatoes were cut small, one and two eyes on a piece, and two pieces put in a hill. These potatoes were planted early and hoed once with a horse-hoe. I dug 140 bushels of smooth potatoes, big and little.—Farmer, Anson, Me.

—White Mountain Cake: One cupful of white sugar, half a cupful of butter, half a cupful of sweet milk, half a cupful of corn-starch, one cupful of sifted flour, the whites of six eggs. Beat the butter and sugar to a cream, add the milk, mix two teaspoonfuls of baking powder with the flower and stir it slowly in; then the corn-starch, and lastly the whites of eggs beaten to a stiff froth. Use a little vanilla for flavoring.—The Household.

—At the last annual meeting of the National Wool-Growers' Association, the secretary, Mr. W. G. Markham, was re-elected, but immediately resigned, owing to severe strictures by leading members of the Association on his position respecting the reduction of the tariff on wool. Mr. Garland, the late President, and Mr. Markham favored the reduction, while a majority of the Wool-Growers' Association desire a restoration of the tariff of 1867—a desire which is not likely to be gratified.—N. Y. Examiner.

Health and House Plants.

Oftener than otherwise it is safe to reverse the popular maxims and prejudices, since, as it would seem, their basis is ignorance and sensual gratification. Whatever appears to favor the indulgence of the lower appetites—generally more or less vitiated—apparently is formulated into a favorite maxim, eagerly adopted by the masses, as a rule of conduct. This is well illustrated in reference to the popular notion that plants are unfavorable in their effects in the sleeping apartment and in the rooms of the sick. If this popular prejudice has any force or importance it is when the odor of a plant is so strong as to be unpleasant to the very sensitive sick, the unpleasantness indicating its impropriety in that individual case.

Scientific facts assure us and convince the discriminating that such are the relations of the animal creation and the vegetable world that the one can not exist without the other, each contributing to the sustenance of the other. Breathing, combustion, fermentation, putrefaction and still other processes are constantly exhausting the more vitalizing element of the air—oxygen—distributing its chemical constituents, at the same time producing a deadly gas—carbonic—which, aside from certain compensating processes, might soon render the air unfit for respiration. This gas—so deadly to animal life that it is scarcely possible to have it enter the human lungs in its pure state on account of suffocation—is an important element of nutrition to the vegetable kingdom, that, indeed, from which all woody fiber is made. In this and other respects the three kingdoms are mutually dependent each upon the other, each necessary to the sustenance and existence of the other. The nourishment consumed by the animal kingdom must come from the vegetable, originally, so the vegetable kingdom must be sustained by the animal.

This was finely and fully illustrated by the scientific experimentor who put a mouse and a plant in a tight jar, air-tight, the two living as one could not alone—each feeding the other. We have no better purifiers than the light of the sun, moving air, and the leaves of plants and trees.—Golden Rule.

Death From the Scratch of a Cat.

Sir John Humphreys held an inquest at the Lord Raglan Tavern, St. Ann's Road, Mile end Old Town, recently, on the body of Louisa Cain, aged seventy-three. John Cain said the deceased, who was his wife, about three weeks ago went to put the cat in an out-house, when the animal scratched her on the hand; the deceased afterward became poorly, and went and saw a doctor, who prescribed for her, but she got gradually worse and died on Thursday morning. Previously the deceased was in good health, and he had no doubt her death was caused through the scratch. Mr. Joseph Francis Porter, surgeon, said when he saw the deceased she was suffering from an injury between the thumb and first finger, and erysipelas supervened. Death was consequent on the scratch. The jury returned a verdict of accidental death.—Pall-Mall Gazette.

—The recent Boston cat show had a Doctor Tom, a large yellow feline that has served eighteen years in a drug store. A cross-eyed cat was named Butler in honor of the Chief Magistrate of Massachusetts. There was a tiger-cat that weighed twenty-five pounds. A deaf cat had one blue and one yellow eye.—Boston Post.

"A" and "An."

A correspondent writes to us: "Why does the author of the amusing note on some journalist new version of the "Parturiunt Montes" line talk about "a hexameter"? There are writers who similar say (or rather write, for to speak such things would be too difficult), "a hotel," "a habitual," etc., "a historical," etc., and so on. The rule on the subject is, I believe, that whenever in a word beginning with an h the accent falls on the second syllable, the aspirate shall be preceded not by "a," but by "an." "An hexameter" is euphonious. "A hexameter" is simply impossible. If no rule on the subject existed it would be necessary to invent one. But the rule just given will be found sufficient in every case. As no one out of a national school or board school is supposed to study English grammar (which to men of classical education "comes by nature," (like Dogberry's reading and writing), it will perhaps not be thought offensive on my part if I point out that in words like "union," "university," "unicorn," in which the letter u forms a syllable by itself, the indefinite article used in connection with it should be not "an," but "a." "An unicorn," "an university," are almost as ugly combinations as "a hotel" or "a hexameter."—St. James' Gazette.

Petrified Pumpkins.

The California papers are telling a story about petrified pumpkins in Mendocino County. The report is that a farmer, some years ago, had a lot of pumpkins washed away by a freshet down a ravine, and for a number of years the pumpkins were observed where the water had lodged them, but no one had ever thought they had turned to stone, until the other day a man attempted to pick one of them up, when he discovered that it was very heavy and had turned to stone. About fifty more were in the same condition. The story may be true, but it offers no special inducement for agriculturists to raise paving stones on pumpkin vines. Some pumpkins are of no special good, except to sling at cats, but as the supply is too small to be used with advantage, they will not be used. If California will find a process for making pies out of her petrified pumpkins, the boarding-house keepers of the country will rise up and call her blessed.—Boston Globe.

—The Princess of Wales and her sisters were photographed during their recent visit home, standing beneath a tree in their old playground, the garden of Castle Bernstoff. The photograph has been chromographed and gone all over the land.

—A Columbia, (Fla.,) woman left her babe at home alone all day, and when she returned, found that the ants had crawled into its mouth, nose, eyes and ears, and killed it.

The Little Model Republic.

VALPARAISO, CHILI.—Senor Ricardo Stuven, a leading commission merchant of this city, after having exhausted all other remedies has been completely cured of rheumatism by the use of St. Jacobs Oil, the great pain-banisher. He makes this public.

THE first doctor of divinity is said to have been "O. Fiddle, D. D."

The Billous,

dyspeptic or constipated, should address, with two stamps for pamphlet, WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASS'N, Buffalo, N. Y.

THE . for putting the : has , again.—Boston Star.

Pioneer History of America.

This splendid volume of 1032 pages crowded with elegant and striking full-page illustrations has just been issued by Jones Bros. & Co., Cincinnati. This extensive work has connected historical value as well as thrilling narrative interest. The author is a perspicuous and dramatic writer, and carries each recital forward to an absorbing climax. The hundred engravings are not only well drawn, but are full of thought, suggestion and feeling. The work is written in the best, most graphic, historical style, which, combined with the intensely interesting facts detailed, will hold the attention of the reader throughout. No other book on Pioneer Life approaches it in vividness of description, purity and vigor of style, accuracy of detail and fascination of the story. The excellent introduction by Dr. Ridpath, written in his proverbially accurate and fascinating manner, is a good contribution to the volume. The publishers, who are an old and reliable firm, want agents to take orders for the work.—Cincinnati Commercial-Gazette.

GIRLS, when an eligible youth pops the question, never say: "I should blush to twitter." Always observe: "I scream to ejaculate."—Detroit Post.

IF you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have frequent headache, mouth tastes bad, poor appetite, tongue coated, you are suffering from torpid liver, or "biliousness." Nothing will cure you so speedily and permanently as Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery." By all druggists.

STOVE up yet?—Chicago Times. Thank you; we don't get stove up.—Oil City Derrick.

WHO has not seen the fair, fresh young girl transformed in a few months into the pale, haggard, dispirited woman? The sparkling eyes are dimmed, and the ringing laugh heard no more. Too often the causes are disorders of the system which Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" would remedy in a short time. Remember, that the "Favorite Prescription" will unfailingly cure all "female weaknesses," and restore health and beauty. By all druggists. Send three stamps for Dr. Pierce's treatise on Diseases on Women (96 pages). Address WORLD'S MEDICAL ASSO'N, Buffalo, N. Y.

THE MARKETS.

CINCINNATI, November 16, 1883.

LIVE STOCK—Cattle—common	$2 00	@ 3 00
Choice butchers	4 25	@ 4 85
HOGS—Common	3 75	@ 4 35
Good packers	4 25	@ 4 70
SHEEP	3 50	@ 4 25
FLOUR—Family	4 50	@ 4 90
GRAIN—Wheat—Longberry red	1 11	@ 1 12
No. 2 red	1 07	@
Corn—No. 2 mixed	51	@
Oats—No. 2 mixed	30	@ 30¼
Rye—No. 2	59½	@
HAY—Timothy No. 1	9 50	@10 00
HEMP—Double dressed	8½	@
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	11 50	@11 75
Lard—Current make	7-40	@ 7-60
BUTTER—Fancy Dairy	24	@ 25
Prime Creamery	25	@ 34
FRUIT AND VEGETABLES—
Potatoes per bar. from store	1 25	@ 1 30
Apples, prime, per barrel	2 50	@ 3 00
NEW YORK.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 00	@ 3 50
Good to choice	4 40	@ 7 00
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 spring	1 07	@
No. 2 red	1 11½	@
Corn—No. 2 mixed—new	60¾	@ 62¼
Oats—mixed	35	@ 37
PORK—Mess	12 00	@12 50
CHICAGO.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 50	@ 4 25
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 00	@ 1 05
Corn—No. 2	48¾	@ 49¾
Oats—No. 2	28¼	@ 28¾
Rye	58½	@
PORK—Mess	10 75	@10 80
LARD—Steam	7-50	@ 7-52½
BALTIMORE.
FLOUR—Family	$5 00	@ 6 00
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 07¾	@ 1 08
Corn—mixed	60	@
Oats—mixed	36	@ 38
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	12 75	@
Lard—Refined	9	@
LOUISVILLE.
FLOUR—A No 1	$4 50	@ 4 75
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red, new	1 02	@
Corn—mixed	50	@
Oats—mixed	30½	@ 31
PORK—MESS	12 00	@
INDIANAPOLIS.
WHEAT—No. 2, red, new	$1 01	@ 1 02
CORN—mixed	49	@
OATS—mixed	28	@
LIVE STOCK—Cattle
Butchers' stock	2 75	@ 3 00
Shipping cattle	5 25	@

A VIRGINIA thief escaped from jail by crawling through a stove-pipe. Wonder if he was sooted for that method of escape.—Williamsport Grit.

MY son, aged nine years, was afflicted with Catarrh; the use of Ely's Cream Balm effected a complete cure. W. E. HAMMAN, Druggist, Easton, Pa.

ACCORDING to an unascertained entomologist, a mosquito resembles charity when it begins to hum.—Rochester Post-Express.

RUSHMORE, O.—Dr. A. Page says: "I have prescribed Brown's Iron Bitters in several instances, and in each case obtained good results."

EVERY father should paddle his own; can you?—N. Y. News.

AN effective medicine for kidney diseases, low fevers and nervous prostration, and well worthy of a trial, is Brown's Iron Bitters.

SLIGHT of hand—A maiden's refusal.—Detroit Post.

THE RESTORATION to health of our child we considered uncertain. When two weeks old she caught cold. For 18 months was not able to breathe through her nostrils. Upon using Ely's Cream Balm her difficulty is removed; she breathes naturally. Mr. and Mrs. J. M. SMITH, Owego, N. Y.

NEVER H... in the left side—in fact, never lie at all.—N. Y. Independent.

CLUTSVILLE, ALA.—Dr. W. Carter says, "I have used Brown's Iron Bitters in my own family for indigestion with great benefit."

THOUGH the East River bridge is without a rival, it has two piers.—N. Y. Graphic.

A HUMAN FIRE.

The Phenomenon of a Burning Mine Repeated in the Physical System.

A few years ago one of the most important coal mines in Pennsylvania caught fire. It started slowly but soon obtained such headway that it spread through the greater portion of the entire mine. To flood it with water would extinguish the fire, but well nigh ruin the mine; and still the flames continued to increase. At that juncture a young man stepped forward and suggested that all the entrances and vent holes of the mine be covered and secured, thus shutting off the supply of air. His advice was followed and the flames were finally subdued.

To compare the condition of this mine with many phases of the human system, is most natural and appropriate. "Fire in the blood" is not a mere expression, it is a most serious fact. How it originates, it may be impossible to say; but that it burns and rages with an increasing fury, the one who is its victim only too painfully knows. The blood is the life. It is designed by nature to purify, strengthen and sustain the system. It is too often made the channel through which poison and death are transported. Poisonous acids coming through the veins and arteries inflame and cause a fire just as real as the one which existed in the mine. They burn and irritate, causing the brain to become weak and the nerves unstrung; they carry pains to the muscles and leave agonies in the joints; they bring destruction instead of strength; they devastate the very portions of the body that most require help, and they hasten the approach of death in its most horrible form. These things have been felt by innumerable people who have been the victims of rheumatic disorders, and the agonies they have endured confirm this description.

There is but one way by which this fire in the blood can be extinguished, and that is by shutting off the supply of these poisonous acids. The lactic, lithic and uric acids come in to the blood through the liver and kidneys, and they remain in solution in the blood producing inflammatory rheumatism, sciatica, lumbago, neuralgia, gout and all rheumatic fevers and affections. When they are deposited as gritty crystals in and near the joints, they cause articular rheumatism; when in the muscles, muscular rheumatism and lumbago; when in the tissues covering the nerves, sciatica; when in the face, head and nerves generally, neuralgia. In every case they are painful; in most instances, dangerous. Inflammatory rheumatism is likely to locate in some joint and become chronic, or suddenly attack the brain or heart, causing apoplexy or heart-disease. The fire in the blood must be extinguished—the supply must be shut off. This can only be done by guarding the portals to the blood—the kidneys and liver; and no means have ever been found for accomplishing this which can equal Warner's Safe Rheumatic Cure. It acts directly upon the seat of the disorder; it extinguishes the fire by controlling the supply and removing the cause.

The well known standing of H. H. Warner & Co., of Rochester, N. Y., the remarkable success which Warner's Safe Cure has achieved, being indorsed by no less a personage than Dr. Robert A. Gunn, Dean of the United States Medical College, New York, and the fidelity with which they have carried out all their promises to the public should be a sufficient warrant that the above statements are true. They, however, guarantee to cure ninety-five per cent. of all rheumatic troubles, especially acute, knowing full well that the demonstrated power of the remedy justifies them in so doing. Nothing can be fairer than this, and those who suffer in the future from rheumatism with such an offer before them, do so on their own responsibility, and can blame no one if living pain and untimely death are the results.

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer

Is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from dandruff, restore gray hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which Sulphur, Sugar of Lead and Nitrate of Silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. JOHN D. PARK & SONS, Wholesale Agents, Cincinnati, Ohio, and C. N. CRITTENTON, N. Y.

I HAVE been using Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) and find it to be the best remedy of the kind that I have ever been able to get, and I have tried them all.
JOHN TISCHER, 3d U. S. Cavalry.

IF a cough disturbs your sleep, take Piso's Cure for Consumption and rest well.

IF SUCCESS be the true test of merit, it is a settled fact that "Brown's Bronchial Troches" have no equal for the prompt relief of Coughs, Colds, and Throat troubles. Sold only in boxes. Price 25 cents.

I HAVE known and watched the use of Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) for over fifty years, and never have known or heard of its failure to cure any case of Blood Poison when properly taken.
H. L. DENNARD, Perry, Ga.

IF afflicted with Sore Eyes, use Dr. Isaac Thompson's Eye Water. Druggists sell it. 25c.

Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar
Always cures a cough, cold or influenza.
Pike's toothache drops cure in one minute.

St. Jacobs Oil
THE GREAT GERMAN REMEDY For Pain!
Relieves and cures RHEUMATISM, Neuralgia, SCIATICA, LUMBAGO, BACKACHE, Headache, Toothache, SORE THROAT, QUINSY, SWELLINGS, SPRAINS, Soreness, Cuts, Bruises, FROSTBITES, BURNS, SCALDS, And all other bodily aches and pains.
FIFTY CENTS A BOTTLE. Sold by all Druggists and Dealers. Directions in 11 languages.
The Charles A. Vogeler Co. (Successors to A. VOGELER & CO.) Baltimore, Md., U.S.A.

CANCERS, Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Rheumatism, and all blood diseases, cured by Loose's Extract Red Clover. Send for circulars and testimonials. J. M. LOOSE & CO., Monroe, Mich.

CATARRH
ELY'S CREAM BALM CURES COLD IN HEAD
CATARRH
ROSE-COLD
HAY-FEVER
DEAFNESS HEADACHE
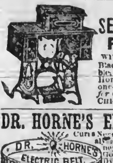
PRICE 50 CENTS
ELY'S CREAM BALM CO. OWEGO N.Y. U.S.A.
HAY-FEVER

ELY'S CREAM BALM when applied by the finger into the nostrils, will be absorbed, effectually cleansing the head of catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions. It allays inflammation, protects the membrane of the nasal passages from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores taste and smell. A few applications relieve. A thorough treatment will positively cure. Agreeable to use. Send for circular. Price 50 cents by mail or at druggists. Ely Brothers, Druggists, Owego, N.Y.

Though shaken in every joint and fiber with fever and ague, or bilious remittent, the system may yet be freed from the malignant virus with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Protect the system against it with this beneficent anti-spasmodic, which is furthermore a supreme remedy for liver complaint, constipation, dyspepsia, debility, rheumatism, kidney troubles and other ailments. For sale by all Druggists and Dealers generally.

Sawing Made Easy
Monarch Lightning Sawing Machine!
Sent on 30 Days Test Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

A boy 16 years old can saw logs FAST and EASY. MILES MURRAY, Portage, Mich., writes: "Am much pleased with the MONARCH LIGHTNING SAWING MACHINE. I sawed off a 30-inch log in 2 minutes." For sawing logs into suitable lengths for family stove-wood, and all sorts of log-cutting, it is peerless and unrivaled. Illustrated Catalogue, Free. AGENTS WANTED. Mention this paper. Address MONARCH MANUFACTURING CO., 163 E. Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.



A $65 SEWING MACHINE For $18.00.
WITH ALL ATTACHMENTS: Black Walnut Drop-Leaf Table, 5 drawers and cover box. Hundreds of other articles one-half usual prices. Send for Circulars and Price Lists. CHICAGO SCALE CO., Chicago.

DR. HORNE'S ELECTRIC BELT

Cures Nervousness, Rheumatism, Paralysis, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Kidney, Spine and Liver diseases, Gout, Asthma, Heart Disease, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Erysipelas, Catarrh, Piles, Epilepsy, Impotency, Prolapsus Uteri, Diabetes, etc. RUPTURE CURED BY ELECTRICITY. Only Electric Truss in the world. Agents wanted in every town. Send for Circular. Dr. W. J. HORNE, Inventor, 191 Wabash Av. Chicago, Ill.

AGENTS WANTED To sell the PIONEER HISTORY OF AMERICA, by A. L. MASON and PROF. J. C. RIDPATH. 1032 Imperial Octavo pages, 100 magnificent illustrations. Specimen Pages FREE. JONES BROS. & CO., Pub., Cincinnati, O.

"THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST."
SAW MILLS, ENGINES THRESHERS, HORSE POWERS,
(For all sections and purposes.) Write for Free Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

WANTED A WOMAN
of sense and energy to attend to our business in her locality. Not too young preferred. To a suitable person will pay a salary of $35 to $50 a month. Business experience not necessary. References exchanged.
GAY BROS. & CO., 16 Barclay St., New York.

2806 Lbs. Weight
Of Two Ohio IMPROVED CHESTER HOGS. Send for description of this famous breed. Also Fowls.
L. B. SILVER, CLEVELAND, O.

$250 A MONTH, made in leisure moments. Outfit sent; no money required until sold. Agents Wanted. Male and Female. Many have made fortunes. Address ROTHCHILD & CO., ST. STEPHEN New Brunswick, Canada. Postage, 2c.

NO MATTER What your business is, you can just as well be our agent and make more money. Write for full particulars free. JOS. S. HALL & CO., Box 699, New York City.

PATENTS NO PATENT, NO PAY! R. S. & A. P. LACEY, Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C. Full instructions and Hand-Book of Patents sent free.

CINCINNATI COLLEGE OF MUSIC and School of Oratory, 305 Race. Home comforts, parental care, best instruction, boarding department. For circulars add. MRS. D. N. GAPPERT, Cincinnati, O.

PATENTS promptly procured in all countries. American Patent Agency, 188 Fifth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

$250 A MONTH. Agents Wanted. 90 best selling articles in the world. 1 sample FREE. Address JAY BRONSON, DETROIT, MICH.

STAMMERING and all Impediments in STUTTERING Speech cured at VOCAL INSTITUTE, 253 W. Fifth St., Cincinnati. Send for circular.

AGENTS make money selling our Family Medicines; no capital required. STANDARD CURE CO., 197 Pearl St., NEW YORK.

AGENTS Wanted. Squatter Sovereign, or Kansas is the '50's. Send 40 cts. in stamps for outfit. CONGER & NEWMAN PUB. CO., Chicago.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STINSON & CO., Portland, Me.

COLEMAN BUSINESS COLLEGE, Newark, N. J. Terms $40. Positions for graduates; write for circular.

$72 A WEEK. $12 a day at home easily made. Costly outfit free. Address True & Co. Augusta, Me.

"DRINK FAIR, BETSEY, WOTEVER YOU DO."
—Martin Chuzzlewit.

TEA CLUB ORDERS.
We have made a specialty for five years of giving away as Premiums, to those who get up clubs for our goods, Dinner and Tea Sets, Gold Band Sets, Silverware, etc. Teas of all kinds, from 30 to 75 cents per pound. We do a very large Tea and Coffee business, besid s sending out from 60 to 90 CLUB ORDERS each day. SILVER-PLATED CASTERS as Premiums with $5, $7 and $10 orders. WHITE TEA SETS with $10 orders. DECORATED TEA SETS with $15. GOLD BAND or MOSS ROSE SETS of 44 pcs., or DINNER SETS of 106 pcs., with $20 orders, and a Host of other Premiums. Send us Postal and mention this Paper, and we will send you full Price and Premium List. Freight Charges average 75 cents per 100 lbs. to points West. GREAT LONDON TEA CO., 803 Washington Street, Boston, Mass.

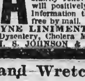
Beware.
of the continued use of mercury and potash for the treatment of Blood and Skin diseases—they never cure, and nearly always injure or totally ruin the general health.
A WELL-KNOWN DRUGGIST.
I have seen a great many cases cured with Swift's Specific—some who had tried all sorts of treatment. In fact, I have never known it to fail when taken properly. I sell a large quantity of it, and for all diseases that are dependent on blood poison or skin humor. It cures PIMPLES AND BLOTCHES ON THE SKIN, and makes the complexion fair and rosy. As for blood taint, there is no such word as fail. It cures cases that have long withstood other sorts of treatment, and without any of those recurring troubles that generally follow mercurial and other so-called cures.
T. L. MASSENBURG, Macon, Ga.
Our treatise on Blood and Skin Diseases mailed free to applicants. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Drawer 3, Atlanta, Ga.

BOYS Christmas is Coming! CHRISTMAS!
And if you wish a fine present to give some friend, you can obtain one by securing a new subscriber for one or more of D. LOTHROP & Co's popular magazines; you can easily do this, as they are graded to suit all ages. For babies there is BABYLAND, with large beautiful pictures, merry jingles and stories, only 50c. For little folks just beginning to read for themselves there is OUR LITTLE MEN and WOMEN, with its seventy-five full page pictures (and hundreds of smaller ones) a year, and the brightest of reading, only $1 a year. For boys and girls to read on Sunday and week days, THE PANSY WEEKLY, edited by "Pansy" herself, and a most entertaining union of picture and text, only 75c a year. For the young folks and all the family, the "prince of magazines," WIDE AWAKE, the ideal treasure, of the best in modern literature, and art, only $2.50 a year. 32 pp. premium list free.
NEW YEARS AND GIRLS
D. LOTHROP & CO., BOSTON.

HOP PLASTER
This porous plaster is famous for its quick and hearty action in curing Lame Back, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Crick in the Back, Side or Hip, Neuralgia, Stiff Joints and Muscles, Sore Chest, Kidney Troubles and all pains or aches either local or deep-seated. It Soothes, Strengthens and Stimulates the parts. The virtues of hops combined with gums—clean and ready to apply. Superior to liniments, lotions and salves. Price 25 cents or 5 for $1.00. Sold by druggists and country stores. Mailed on receipt of price. Hop Plaster Company, Proprietors, Boston, Mass.
A GREAT SUCCESS

☞ The best family pill made—Hawley's Stomach and Liver Pills. 25c. Pleasant in action and easy to take.

ST. PATRICK'S SALVE
TRY IT USE IT
It relieves at once Burns, Piles, Chapped Hands or Lips, Corns, Bunions, Scalds, Bruises, Soreness of feet, hands, eyes, etc.; Itching from any cause. 25c. Ask your druggist, or send to 92 Fulton Street, N. Y.



S.-S. CHRISTMAS ENTERTAINMENTS.
Suggestions for Decorations, Entertainments and Gifts.
A collection of suggestions from leading Sunday-school workers in various parts of the country, containing something of interest to every Sunday-school superintendent. Nothing like it ever issued before. Price, 25c. Will send free in any one sending us a list of all the Sunday-school Superintendents in the place. DAVID C. COOK, 46 Adams street, Chicago, Ill.

25 PISO'S CURE FOR 100
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good.
Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION.

PILES "Anakesis" gives instant relief, and is an infallible cure for Piles. Price $1 from druggists, or sent prepaid by mail. Samples free. Ad. "ANAKESIS," Makers, Box 2416, New York.

CANCER AND TUMORS Treated scientifically and cured without the knife. Book on treatment sent free. Drs. Gratigny & Norris, 204 W. 4th St., Cincinnati, O.

Lady Agents can secure permanent employment and good salary selling Queen City Skirt and Stocking Supporters, etc. Sample outfit Free. Address Queen City Suspender Co., Cincinnati, O.

$66 A WEEK in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. Addr's H. Hallett & Co., Portland, Me.

ASTHMA, Neuralgia Cured. FREE to poor. Add. Dr. Ralston, Cape Girardeau, Mo.

DIPHTHERIA
CROUP, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, Neuralgia, Rheumatism. JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT (for Internal and External Use) will instantly relieve these terrible diseases, and will positively cure nine cases out of ten. Information that will save many lives sent free by mail. Don't delay a moment. Prevention is better than cure. JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT CURES Influenza, Hoarseness, Hacking Cough, Whooping Cough, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Cholera Morbus, Kidney Troubles, and Lame Back. Sold everywhere. Circulars sent FREE. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

Worn, Weary, and Wretched.
"As weak as a cat" is an expression frequently used by debilitated sufferers who are trying to tell how forlorn they feel. It is an incorrect expression, for a cat is one of the most agile and vigorous animals in existence. It would be more correct to say, "as weak as a limp old rag," for that gives the idea of utter inability to hold one's self up. The weary person who feels thus is generally worn, worried, woeful, and wretched.
Sometimes it is a case of overwork, and sometimes of imperfect nourishment. The blood in the system of a person who is "as weak as a rag" is in a wretchedly thin condition. It needs iron, to impart richness, redness, and strength. This is to be had by taking BROWN'S IRON BITTERS, the only safe and proper preparation of iron in connection with gentle and powerful tonics. The physician and the druggist can tell the worn and weary how valuable a remedy BROWN'S IRON BITTERS has been found in actual every-day use.
11

If you are Interested
In the inquiry—Which is the best Liniment for Man and Beast?—this is the answer, attested by two generations: the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT. The reason is simple. It penetrates every sore, wound, or lameness, to the very bone, and drives out all inflammatory and morbid matter. It "goes to the root" of the trouble, and never fails to cure in double quick time.

Mason & Hamlin Organs.
New Illustrated Catalogue, (40 pp. 4to) for season of 1883–4, including many new styles; best assortment of the best and most attractive organs we have ever offered, and at lowest prices, $22 to $600, for cash, easy payments or rented. Sent free.
MASON & HAMLIN ORGAN & PIANO CO.
Boston, 154 Tremont St.; New York, 46 East 14th St.; Chicago, 149 Wabash Ave.

VOL. XX 1884
DEMOREST'S MONTHLY MAGAZINE
ILLUSTRATED WITH Original Steel Engravings, Photogravures & Oil Pictures.
Send twenty cents for one copy, and you will certainly subscribe Two Dollars for a year and get ten times its value.
W. Jennings Demorest, Publisher, 17 East 14th St., New York.
$2 $2
THE BEST
SOLD BY ALL NEWSDEALERS AND POSTMASTERS.

HAIR Wigs & Waves sent C.O.D. anywhere. Wholesale & Retail. Price-list free. Goods guaranteed. B.C.STREHL, 157 Wabash-av., Chicago.

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOLUME IX. BURLINGTON, KY., WEDNESDAY, NOVEMBER 28, 1883. NUMBER 5.

SONG OF THE JERSEY.

With fingers tired and stiff,
With muscles swollen and sore,
A maiden stood in a gros grain silk,
Viewing her Jersey o'er.
Sad, sad, sad,
Then wickedly winking her eye,
She cried aloud, like a lunatic mad:
"I'll put you on or die."

Stretch, stretch, stretch,
With her tongue most bitten in two,
And stretch, stretch, stretch,
Till her head came peeping through,
With moans and sighs and tears,
With tears and sighs and moans,
She pawed the air, fell over a chair,
And filled the room with groans.

Sick, sick, sick,
She lay for a week in bed,
Sick, sick, sick,
With a pain that racked her head;
While in a closet dark
The naughty Jersey laid,
'Twas torn to shreds, 'twas rent in twain,
And sorry was the maid.
—Washington Capital.

UNCLE JEHORAM;

or,

Mrs. Monteith's Wedding Gift.

"Girls, girls!" cried I triumphantly, waving an old-fashioned yellow envelope in the sunny September air. "I've got a letter from Uncle Jehoram!"

"Open it!" cried Nelly Pinkham, who was my first bridesmaid.

"Do let us hear what he says!" chimed in Alice Eden, my second.

So I sat down on the big canvas-covered traveling trunk, with my hair all down my back. I had just unfastened it for Nelly to experiment a little with the bridal wreath—and with the bevy of girls clustering eagerly around me I broke the seal of Uncle Jehoram's letter, and read it aloud with all the elocutionary airs and graces that I had learned at Madame Benton's "Institute."

Dear Niece, (it said, in a queer little cramped hand like the characters on a Chinese tea-chest) yours of 21st instant duly received. Am glad to hear that you are to be married to a worthy young man who is able to support you. Accept my good wishes. By this day's express I send a present which I hope you may find useful, and no more at present from your affectionate uncle,

JEHORAM JOHNSON.

"There!" cried I. "What do you think of that?"

Alice Eden clapped her dimpled hands.

"The old darling!" cried she. "It's a real Cashmere shawl, Nanny, you may be very certain."

"Or perhaps a Persian rug," said Nelly Pinkham, "all dim blues and greens and delicious blotches of yellow."

"The deed of a house and lot," said Mary Moxley.

"Diamonds, most likely," interposed Juliet Grayson, "or real Oriental pears, each one as big as a tear-drop."

"He's very rich, isn't he?" said Alice.

"Of course he is," said I, "or at least I've always heard so."

"And an old bachelor?"

"Yes, an old bachelor."

"But he doesn't say whether or not he's coming to the wedding."

"Oh, of course he'll come," said I.

"What is he like?" asked Nelly, thoughtfully.

I burst out laughing.

"Do you know, girls," said I, "that I never saw him in my life."

And then Harry came in with a delicious little bouquet of white rosebuds, and of course that put everything else out of our heads. For my hair had to be twisted up in a hurry, and Harry would insist on seeing the wedding wreath and veil on, and an exquisite tete-a-tete set of real pink Sevres came in from Mrs. Montagu Jackyll, and we never thought of Uncle Jehoram until the next day, when there was a prodigious peal at the door-bell, just as we were all sitting down to a gypsy sort of tea in the old school-room—the parlors and dining-room were in the hands of the confectioner's men—and Betty, the maid, made her appearance with a puzzled expression of face.

"It's a bundle, ma'am," said she, "came by express, with Mr. Jehoram Johnson's compliments on a card."

I jumped up, oversetting a cup of tea and a plate of peaches and cream in my excitement.

"Bring it here, Betty," I cried, "at once."

"Bless your dear heart, miss," said Betty, "it 'ud take four men to lift it. The expressman he swore awful when he lifted it up the steps, and said as it ought to be paid double rates."

We looked at each other in a sort of delightful bewilderment.

"It must be something very valuable," said Juliet, breathlessly.

"A sewing-machine, perhaps," suggested Harry.

"Nonsense!" cried Alice. "As if a rich old uncle would send anything as commonplace and poky as that!"

"Well, perhaps it might help to solve the riddle somewhat," said Harry, gravely, "if we were to go out and look at it."

At this suggestion we all rushed out en masse.

There, in the middle of the marble-paved hall, stood a huge, oblong bundle, some three feet high and wide in proportion.

"No wonder the expressman swore!" said Harry, with a shrug of his shoulders. "It's carpeting."

"Oh, the dear old creature!" cried Nelly. "A real Aubusson, from Paris. Oh, do open it, somebody!"

Harry slowly produced from his vest pocket a tortoise-shell handled knife, and ripped the coarse covering which enveloped the parcel. We all started back.

"A rag carpet!" exclaimed my husband-elect.

"A common, coarse thing, only fit for a dust-man's kitchen!" cried Nelly Pinkham; while Alice Eden, who had worked herself up into a high state of nervous expectation, burst into tears.

"Who ever heard of such a thing?" said Juliet Grayson, disdainfully. "The horrid, mean old miser!"

"Girls," cried I, recovering myself as best I could, "you must not talk so. Uncle Jehoram meant it all in kindness. I dare say he thought I could make it useful—and I mean to accept it in the same spirit in which it was offered."

Harry stooped down and gave me a kiss.

"You're a dear, sensible little thing," said he, "and Uncle Jehoram has reason to be proud of his niece."

"But you'll never put it on exhibition with the other presents," said Alice, incredulously.

"Of course I shall," said I.

And I did. And the girls never knew of the little private "cry" I had all by myself when they thought I was selecting the prettiest flowers to decorate the big bride-cake; for I had expected something very nice from the rich old bachelor uncle whom I had never seen, and somehow the bundle of striped red carpeting was a disappointment.

But the eventful day came, with its white satin bows and odor of hot-house flowers and rustle of silks and laces, and Uncle Jehoram's rag carpet occupied a place of honor among the silver teapots and china services and embroidered sofa pillows and countless pretty gimcracks that burdened the "present table."

We had been married for about half an hour, and I was standing beside Harry under the great floral bell receiving the congratulations of my friends, when a queer little brown-faced man, in a faded wig and a suit of clothes that exactly matched his complexion, walked up to me, bowing low.

"Wish you much joy, Mrs Monteith," said he.

"Thank you, sir," said I, trying to remember who he was, and failing altogether.

But I had made up my mind he must be the eccentric Methodist minister who lived around the corner, and who was in the habit of going where he pleased, whether he was invited or not.

"I've been looking at your wedding presents," said he. "Curious thing, that bundle of rag carpet," pointing to it with his knobby walking stick. "Shouldn't have supposed you'd have put that among your pretty gimcracks."

"It is rather a strange gift," said my husband, "particularly as it came from a rich old curmudgeon who—"

But I checked Harry with a look.

"From a dear relative of mine," said I, "whose kind remembrance gratifies me beyond expression."

"Oh!" said the little brown man, looking from Harry to me with keen, bright eyes, like those of a bird, "you're pleased with it, then?"

"More pleased than I can express," I answered, earnestly.

"Humph!" commented the little old man. "Would you object to having it lifted down and unrolled? I've some curiosity to look at the pattern."

It was a strange request, but we scarcely knew how to refuse it, and presently the gay stripes of the rag carpet were unrolled on the floor before the astonished eyes of our wedding guests, yard upon yard, backward and forward, until, from the very heart of the tightly packed cylinder, out fell a small black leather box.

"Eh?" said the little brown man, pouncing on it more like a bird than ever. "What is this? Not diamonds?"

Diamonds in good truth. The scintillating blaze of a neck-lace—the glitter of solitaire ear-drops that nearly dazzled my eyes.

"Uncle Jehoram! It is Uncle Jehoram!" cried I, the scales suddenly falling from my mental vision.

"Niece!" said the little man, as he ceremoniously hung the sparkling chain around my neck, "if you had scornfully rejected the old man's homely present and sent it back to him, as some young women would have done, you would never have discovered the secret of the old family diamonds." "Niece, you are a sensible girl, and I congratulate your husband on the possession of a treasure more precious than rubies."

And on this Uncle Jehoram Johnson made a curious little bow, like a jack-knife shutting itself up, and disappeared among the crowd. And from that moment to this I have never seen him, although he writes me a kindly letter every year, declining all invitations to visit us.

"I am best by myself," he writes. "When I die, you will find that I have not forgotten you. Until then let me live on like the solitary old oyster that I have taught myself to be."

And the rag carpet covers the floor of our second guest-chamber, which is furnished after a substantial style, and the diamonds are the envy and admiration of all my female friends.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Square Man.

During the cloth-house and wholesale clothing-house failures of September, a retail dealer in Cleveland shut up shop and announced his failure, with an offer to pay ten cents on the dollar.

"See here, Jake," said an acquaintance, "there are some ugly reports about your failure."

"Ish dot bossible!"

"Did any of these New York houses owe you anything?"

"Oh, no!"

"Did you owe any of them?"

"Not a cent."

"Well, then, why should their misfortune affect you? You don't fail every time an Eastern house goes under, do you?"

"Mr. Schmidt, you doan' onderstand der case, and I vhill oxblain. My brudder Isaacs was mit one of der busted firms."

"Well, what of it?"

"Isaacs vhas werry sensitive—werry. If Isaacs vhas busted and I vhas doing a rushing beesness he would grieve to death. I fail oudt of respect to his feelings. My wife vhas also werry sensitive, and if I offer more ash ten per cent., she goes into a decline. 'Dot vhas how I vhas fixed, and I like eferybody to know I vhas shust as square a man as efer had a brudder Isaacs."—Wall Street News.

—Prof. Holeman, of Philadelphia, has made experiments in the effect of sound on the colors and shapes of soap bubbles. Being reflected on a screen, they were at first a bluish. An intonation of the voice through a tube connected with a bubble first brought out a number of black spots on the reflection: and these were succeeded by a bright green mingled with pink. The same tone always caused the same formation, but had no control over the color.—N. Y. Sun.

—At a wedding in Lockport, N. Y., recently the organist played among other selections, the "For I'm to be married to-day."

—The Pennsylvania Steel Works turn out enough steel rails in a day to lay eight miles of track.—Philadelphia Record.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

—A Frenchman has patented a machine for the use of concentrated solar rays as a general motive power.

—A Wilmington (S. C.) mechanic has built a buggy on the bicycle principle, the spokes and tires being of steel. It works nicely.—Chicago Times.

—Toad raising is a profitable Austrian industry. The creatures are produced for the London market, where they are sold for $15 or $20 per hundred, and are bought by gardeners and agriculturists for use in destroying obnoxious insects.

—At Oakland, Cal., the iron dust created by the Pacific Nail Works, amounting to five tons a day, is now utilized and twenty-five per cent. of it made into steel by the same process that black sand is manufactured into that metal.—San Francisco Call.

—Erie, Pa., intends to utilize the natural gas which lies beneath her soil. Gas can be secured along the lake shore, anywhere at from 700 to 1,000 feet, and the supply is so strong that it frequently finds its way up through the ground through springs, and in several places along the shore of the lake it comes bubbling up through sixty feet of water. —Pittsburgh Post.

—Mr. Meyer, of Paris, claims to have invented a paper indestructible by fire. Specimens have been exhibited which had previously been placed for four hours in a pottery furnace. Mr. Meyer has also invented incombustible colors and ink. The invention is likely to be of great value, and the incombustible paper will be in demand for wills, deeds, account books, etc.

—Fires have been started in two of the four new blocks at the Warsaw (N. Y.) Salt-works, and the others will follow. This is now the largest and most complete salt-manufacturing establishment in the United States. The buildings cover about three acres. The company expects to manufacture about 1,000 barrels of salt per day, and to double the capacity soon.—Syracuse Journal.

—Maine, it is claimed, stands fourth among the thirty-eight States in the number of water-wheels and the amount of water-power she has in use. In her quarrying industries she ranks first in granite and third in slate. In ship-building she is third in the list. Her fisheries are fourth in importance. Her production of manufactured lumber is only exceeded by six States. In paper manufacture she is sixth in importance. In the production of tanned leather she is third. In the manufacture of boots and shoes is fifth in importance. In cotton manufacture she is also fifth, and in the manufacture of woolen goods and mixed textiles she ranks seventh.—Boston Herald.

PITH AND POINT.

—If there is any good in a man it is bound to come out; but it should not come out all at once and leave the man empty.—N. O. Picayune.

—A blue-stocking has written an essay on "The Disadvantage of Being Pretty." Most girls are good natured and willing to put up with the disadvantages.—Chicago Tribune.

—A broker named Epps has run away from London leaving debts to the amount of $400,000, and is believed to have come to America. An international Epps owed.—Rochester (N. Y.) Express.

—"Look out, that steer is wild," said a Chicago policeman, as an enormous bovine tore down the street. "I should think he would be," exclaimed a by-stander, "with such a crowd chasing him."—Boston Times.

—In setting a hen a farmer made a mistake and put a number of porcelain eggs under the fowl. She is doing the best she can, but her eyes have a far-away gaze, and she looks like a man who has just bitten off the end of a cigar and has no match.—The Dairy.

—Mr. Van Twiller has just been shot in an affray at Baton Rouge. If his name had been Van Winkle, and he had been eviscerated with a bowie knife, there might have been a chance for a paragrapher make a joke about Rip Van Winkle. But as it is——.—Boston Post.

—Literary: Wanted—A story of burglary or ghosts in which the night is not very dark without, and the wind does not blow in fitful gusts, and the old oak in front of the house does not groan dismally. On the receipt of such we agree to return the manuscript.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

—The cheapest and simplest gymnasium in the world—one that will exercise every bone and muscle in the body —is a flat piece of steel, notched on one side, fitted tightly into a wooden frame, and after being greased on both sides with a bacon rind, rubbed into a stick of wood laid lengthwise of a sawbuck.—Exchange.

—Judge Haliburton relates that when once traveling in the provinces a man thus explained to him how he was in the same profession as lawyers: "I am a wrecker. I am Lloyds' agent, and live on the misfortunes of others; so do you. When a vessel is wrecked it is my business to get her off, or to save the property. When a man is entangled among the shoals or quicksands of the law, your duty is similar. We are both wreckers, and therefore members of the same profession. The only difference is, you are a lawyer and I am not."—Chicago Journal.

—Murphy heard cows in his orchard the other night, and, slipping out the back way, appeared suddenly near the front steps and yelled: "He-ah Tige! He-ah Tige! He-ah!" Just then a figure rushed past, cleared two fences, and vanished in the gloom. "Take 'im! take 'im!" screamed the old man; but his daughter Miranda, who had unaccountably appeared on the scene, secured the dog by the collar and refused to let go. "What ye doin'?" yelled the old man; "don't ye know them cows has been in here three or four times?" "Oh, pa!" was the answer, "but this was only a calf." The old man was pacified, but Adolphus, who was standing out in the road awaiting developments, wasn't, and Mirandy will never understand the coldness that has sprung up between them.—Chicago Tribune.

Our Young Folks.

PEEK-A-BOO!

The cunningest thing that a baby can do
Is to play for the very first time, Peek-a-boo!

It will hide its little pink face in its hands,
Then crow, and show that it understands

What nurse and mamma, and papa, too,
Mean when they hide and cry: "Peek-a-boo!"

Oh, what a wonderful thing it is,
When they find that baby can play like this!

And they every one listen, and think it true
That the baby's gurgle means Peek-a-boo!

I wonder if any one ever knew
A baby who never played Peek-a-boo?

'Tis old as the world is. I believe
Cain was taught it by Mother Eve.

For Cain was an innocent babe once, too,
And I am sure he played Peek-a-boo.

And the whole world full of the children of men
Have all of them played that game since then.

And while the sun shines and the skies are blue,
Babies will always play Peek-a-boo.
—Ella Wheeler, in Harper's Young People.

ABOUT BOYS.

Cousin Ellen advised that the next John Spicer lecture be upon the subject of boys. Then some one expressed the opinion that it would be well for John Spicer to catch himself and put himself in the row and hear his own lecture, but as no lecturer could stand up in front and lecture and at the same time be sitting in a row, hearing, it was decided that John Spicer should catch himself, and put himself in a row, and that then cousin Ellen herself should deliver the lecture. This accordingly was done. John Spicer caught himself and put himself in the row, and Cousin Ellen delivered the lecture, as follows:

Boys are found in Europe, Asia, Africa, America, Australia and other places. Some wear clothes and some do not. The latter are natives of hot countries. The well-known and familiar American boy wears clothes, and wears them a good deal; wears them out, as one may say, not meaning out-doors, but out. Boys of this species, so far as I have known them, have a great deal to do; steady business all the year round; indeed, some are so hurried, so pressed for time, they can scarcely wait to dress in the morning, and sometimes hurry so fast as to get their clothes on behind-side before, in which case they generally take them off again. Their employment is different at different times of the year. In the winter they drive a brisk business in ice and snow. Hurrah for a coast or a skate! Up and away! No time to be lost. The coast needs filling in, or smoothing off, or digging out, or water poured over it. Snow houses are to be made, snow men to be molded. Hurry is the word. A thaw may come. The ice may melt in the pond, the school-bell may ring, is sure to ring. Meals have to be eaten. On with cap and mittens. No time to waste.

Business dull in the spring? Not at all. Spring brings its work. Rubber boots are in demand. There is valuable slosh to be waded in. The water power in the gutters is to be turned in. Chip boats are to be launched on it, dams of mud and stones built across for a "flow." The last snowballing is to be done before the sun shall melt the snow every bit away. Snow gone, the bare ground is put to instant use. Hoops are to be driven on it, tops spun upon it, marbles rolled upon it. Willow whistles are to be cut and blown through. Windmills to be whittled out and nailed up. Wind power is made use of in whirling these round and in flying kites. The kite business in itself is a large one, and includes cutting, framing, shaping, whittling, string-hunting and bobtying. Also the boat business is large, taking in all the rigging and sail-making.

Next comes summer! Hurrah now for the woods and the hills and the fields and the ponds and the seashore! Tramp, tramp, tramp, the boys are marching along the seashore. Oh, so much to do! Shells to be found, stones to be gathered into pockets. Water warm? Yes. Off clothes and go in swimming. Now go on, tramp, tramp, tramp; crab shells, and horse-shoe shells, and live creatures from puddles, all to be gathered into handkerchiefs; beach grasses to be gathered, boats to be rocked in. Just one moment for a stretching out on the warm sands. Ripple, ripple, sound the waves. Off clothes again and go in swimming. Now away to the woods. Tramp, tramp, the boys are marching, marching among the buttercups and daisies, chasing butterflies, running races up in the pastures over the hills and far away, picking berries, climbing trees, swinging on the boughs, gathering cat-o'-nine-tails. Here's a pond. Get some pond lilies. There's a turtle. Catch him. Down he goes under! Off clothes and go in swimming. Here's a brook; fish with a pin fish-hook. No fish? No, not a fish. Sit on the bank and tell stories—fish stories, bear stories, circus stories, Fourth of July stories, any kind. There goes a great butterfly. Quick! Quick! over fences, down, up, over, across. There he is! No, he's gone. Another brook—go in wading. What's that straggling over the stone wall? A squash vine? Yes. Now squash-vine trumpets. Toot, toot, toot, the boys are marching, marching across the fields, through the orchards, picking up apples, smelling the hay, climbing into hay wagons. There's a well; tug at the ropes, down goes a bucket, up comes the other, dripping, pitching, spilling over upon the mossy well stones. A drink all round. Was ever anything so cold and so wet? The sun is getting low. Pleasant thoughts of a far-away supper table ready and waiting in a far-away home. And now, tramp, tramp, tramp, the boys are marching home, home, and to bed to rest, let us hope, for the summer business must go on next day, and next, and next, because there is much to do, and summer is passing swiftly away, and autumn will arrive before the boys will be half ready to begin upon their jack-o'-lanterns, and to go a-nutting, and play foot-ball and base-ball, and other balls, and ride velocipedes, and all there is to be done before the snow flies. Heigho! Steady work and plenty of it all the year around. For besides the regular business, the odd times are to be filled in with hide-and-seek, prison bar, touch the goal, jumping, climbing, last-tagging, playing horse, mumble-the-peg, whittling, hammering, story reading, playing card games, checkers, dominoes.

Oh, the American boy is a busy, busy boy,
A boy exceedingly busy is he!
From morning to night he finds his delight
In being as busy as busy can be!

There are many varieties of the American boy. There are the rough kind and the gentle kind; the polite and the impolite; the truthful and the untruthful; the generous, and the stingy; the obliging, and the disobliging; the honorable, and the mean; the outspoken, and the sneaking. Dear me, how many kinds there are, and what a nuisance a boy can make of himself, if he chooses! Take, for instance, the big-feeling boy. Perhaps you know just how he come into the house, loud-mouthed, important, giving his orders, telling what he wants and doesn't want, what he likes and doesn't like; what he will have and won't have; snubbing his mother and sisters, domineering over the little ones, speaking rudely to the hired help, disturbing everybody. You can't hurl a bootjack at him, for such is not the custom, but a bootjack would do him good if it could let him know what a nuisance he is. Some boys seem to think it makes them manly to act in this way. Poor, ignorant simpletons! They do not know that the greatest and noblest men are surest to be gentle in manner, respectful to women, to reverence their mothers, and to treat everybody well. Everybody, the poor and poorly clothed not excepted. Clothes do not make the man or the woman, or the boy or the girl. Neither does the occupation. A poor laborer, poorly clothed, may be a much nobler person than a rich idler, finely clothed. Boys do not always think of this.

I will tell you what kind of a boy I like. The boy that I like is wide awake, spry, eager for out-doors and for all sorts of sport, always plays fair, will not lower himself so much as to cheat, is not big-feeling, is not a sneak, is not afraid of pain, speaks the truth, no matter how much it goes against him, would hate to get into bed with himself if he had done a mean thing, is willing to do anybody a favor even if it cause him some trouble, is well-mannered at home, kind to the little ones, respectful to the older ones, and treats everybody well. And all this is just as true of the girl that I like as of the boy. I know girls that I like, and I know boys that I like. Some of them are in my audience, and were I acquainted with you all, very likely I should like you all. I hope so. —Mrs. A. M. Diaz, in Wide Awake.

Lost Johnny—A True Story.

The little village of C—— is situated eighteen miles from Boston. Quite a number of years ago there went through its quiet streets and into the houses the cry: "A child is lost! lost! lost!" Yes, little Johnny, four years old, had disappeared from that part of the face of the earth. There is so much room and there are so many places; how children and things will sometimes vanish from sight! One so young as the boy just named could not have strayed far away. But, "Oh! where is he? where is he?" was the wail wrung from out the hearts of the family.

Now it is to be remembered that no tramps were ever seen around in that quarter. If so, one such vagabond might have caught up a darling, small fellow when he was out at play a short distance from the door, and clapped him under his tunic in order to sell him back to his parents in a few days, if such a piece of traffic could be effected. If such a thought was born in the minds of the afflicted household or of the neighbors, it was born to die the same instant. Again, bears and woods were no more in that region. The wells! the wells! All the people of C—— looked into their holes in the ground made for holding water. Nobody was hid away there. It was not the custom of Johnny to put the cat in the well, neither had he on this occasion dropped in there himself.

Sometimes, on board of a ship at sea, the shout goes up: "A man overboard!" There he is, plain to be seen, struggling in the slippery waters and buffeting with the hungry waves. There is no doubt where he is. So, as quick as a flash, or before many flashes could occur, the boat is lowered and pushed to the tumbling ocean waves where the man overboard is. But how different is the case of the lost baby in the village of C——! A dreadful uncertainty overhangs his whereabouts. Whither shall the runners run? There is hurrying to and fro that all ends in nothing. Though scores of anxious voices call again and again, no answer comes back, any more than if Johnny were at the bottom of a fifty-barrel cistern of water, or were whisked off by a tornado to Nova Scotia.

There is a story in a school-book, used fifty years ago, of a little child restored to her distressed mother by the aid of a dog. His master, an old Indian, happened along under similar circumstances to those connected with this true incident. The Indian called for the shoes which the child had last worn. He then put the leather trotters in contact with the dog's nose. That was enough. He took the scent and followed the steps of the little wanderer to the other end of the line of pursuit. But perhaps Johnny had no other shoes than those then on his feet. So, in that case, all the dogs and Indians in America could not help the searchers.

Well, was Johnny ever found in the land of the living? Yes, that terrible commotion in the streets, like everything else, came to an end with the happy discovery of the curly-headed, dimple-cheeked four-year-old. While family and friends were looking all about the neighborhood, in pig-pens, stable, cistern and well—were peeping into every corner of his home (especially the preserve closet), making sure that he was not curled up in the rocking-chair, nor on the capacious sofa—Johnny lay fast asleep under the sofa, where he was found!—Christian Union.

—The White House now contains portraits of all the Presidents of the United States, except Mr. Buchanan.—Washington Star.

Religious.

TRANSMUTATION.

With wondrous skill the dear Lord brings,
From all things, good to me—
And full of tender, faithful love
He proves Himself to be.

Though Care upon me lays her hand,
And others sit at ease,
While I toil on 'mid heat and dust,
Or buffet heavy seas—

Although I shrink beneath pain's touch,
Drink sorrow's bitter draught,
Or stand beside a grave, where once
The happy daisies laughed—

Still by His Heavenly alchemy,
Fullness grows out of loss—
And though the fire may hotly burn,
It but consumes the dross.

The duties of each busy day
Are channels all for peace;
While little blessings on their banks,
Grow in a rich increase.

Where I have dreaded hunger, there
I've always found enough—
And Oh, the soul views!—far and grand—
What if the path is rough?

Shape me, O Master! I am clay,
Thou hast the potter's art
To fashion a work beautiful
Out of my stained heart.

From likeness unto like, mold Thou
My nature, till I stand
A perfect vessel, meet for use
In the Eternal Land.
—Hannah Coddington, in S. S. Times.

Sunday-School Lessons.

FOURTH QUARTER.

Nov. 25—David and Goliath	1 Sam. 17:38-51
Dec. 2—David's Enemy—Saul	1 Sam. 18: 1- 6
Dec. 9—David's Friend—Jonathan	1 Sam. 20:32-43
Dec. 16—David Sparing His Enemy	1 Sam. 24: 1-17
Dec. 23—Death of Saul and Jonathan	1 Sam. 31: 1-13
Dec. 30—Review.

THE PERMANENT IN RELIGION.

The religious newspapers, and even the pulpits, are so full of the discussion of debatable points in theology that it is not strange that common people sometimes gets the impression that there is no certainty in religion; that theology is not truth, but only what people think about truth; that religious philosophy is a kaleidoscope in which the figures change with every generation, and that all theological differences and disputes concern only the way in which the bits of colored glass shall be arranged so as to produce the most pleasing affect. It is not strange that they sometimes conclude that science is the known, and theology the unknown; that there is assurance and permanence of conviction in the arts and sciences, but none in religion. The disputants have only themselves to thank for this impression; but it is a false one. The changes in theological opinions have been far less than in scientific opinions; and the debatable points in theology, as compared with the assured and positive convictions, are but as the currents in the ocean compared with its immovable foundations and its unchanging shores. The great essentials of religious belief have been held with substantial unity of conviction from the days of Abraham to the present day; the variations have been either in modes of statements, in philosophical explanations of the unquestioned truths, or in clearer and more spiritual apprehension of those truths themselves. They have been the changes incident to the moral and spiritual growth of the race; the change of the tree from its birth in the bursting seed to the fragrant glory of the orchard or the umbrageous glory of the grove; of the river from its cradle among the hills to its manhood industry in the valley below.

That there is one God, not Gods many and Lords many; that He is a Personal God, with intelligence and emotion, not a mere generic and impersonal law; that He permeates and animates all nature, yet is more than nature, as the soul pervades and animates the body, yet is more than the body; that He is a just, true, righteous God, governed himself by these great moral laws which He has written in the hearts and consciences of His children for their government; that He is the Father of mankind, has given to them birth, provides them with food, raiment and shelter, and embraces them in His infinite sympathies, mercy and love; that He has revealed Himself to mankind in the universal conscience, in special prophets and apostles, and chiefest of all, in Jesus Christ, His Son; that He is revealed as a God who pardons and cures sin, undoing for us, if we will let Him, our own undoing, and giving us back our squandered inheritance and our wasted life; that He would have all men to love Him, and, loving Him, the universal Father, to love each other in a universal brotherhood; that He would have all men, by repentance ceasing to do evil, and by faith learning to do well, come into a knowledge of Him, fellowship with Him, live in Him—this is the universal and unchanged faith of the whole people of God; unchanged, except in the clear apprehension of it, from the day when God first perceived that the Seed of the woman should bruise the Serpent's head, till this hour, when, bruised and bleeding, that old Serpent lies beating his life out upon the ground in the agony of a useless and hateful wrath. It is the faith of Jew and Christian; of Romanist and Protestant; of Old Theology and New Theology; of the first century and of the nineteenth century. The ages have seen natural science teaching the earth to be a plane, and the starry heavens a vault whose movements foretold the destiny of man; political economy teaching that Kings ruled by Divine right, and the people were their children, whose only right was the right to obey God's vicegerent; successive literatures arise, flourish and die, to be buried in successive layers of fossil forms in dead languages; philosophy pass through every form, from the spiritualism of Plato to the materialism of Maudsley; but throughout all these ages, Religion, changing her vestments, her manner of speech, her methods of instruction, has calmly taught the same great Divine truths—the unity, the personality, the righteousness, the forgiving kindness, the eternal fatherhood, of God. If there has been any virtue in Old Theology, it is because it has made these truths real to the spiritual apprehension of men. If there is to be any virtue in New Theology, it will be because it will clear away some hindrances to their acceptance, and will make them clearer, and the faith in them more intelligent and more spiritual.

And the great work of the minister is to make these truths real in the apprehension of mankind. It is not to debate the doubtful; it is to make clear the certain. It is not to defend old theories or to propound new ones; it is to make truth vital in human experience. It is not to maintain theories of the atonement, either new or old; it is to preach the forgiveness of sins. It is not to formulate a new theodicy; it is to make of every hearer an Enoch walking with God. Each age must, indeed, deliver this message in its own way, and each apostle in his own dialect. It is the glory of an age of spiritual liberty, like our own, that we hear every man in our own tongue wherein we were born. But though there are many dialects, there is but one Gospel; though the river that flows from the Garden of God is parted into many heads, the source is one and the waters are one—for the source of all is God, and the waters of all are the waters of the River of Life.—Christian Union.

Scientific Accuracy of the Bible.

Dr. Samuel Kinns, the author of "Moses and Geology," has for some little time past been giving a series of lectures in the drawing rooms of the aristocracy of England on "The Marvelous Scientific Accuracy of the Bible." The last took place at the Earl of Shaftesbury's, and was attended by a large and very distinguished company. Dr. Kinns, in carrying his audience through his course of reasoning described the various geological strata and the story told by the fossil plants and animals of the earth's condition during the various epochs of its history. He especially interested them, however, in his description of fifteen creative events which he showed were placed by Moses in the correct order of sequence according to the latest discoveries in science. These events, which are very concisely stated in "Moses and Geology," were summarily described in the review of "Moses and Geology," which appeared in the Record of March 22, 1882. Dr. Kinns then proved that the number of changes that can be made in the order of fifteen things is more than a billion—viz., 1,307,674,368,000—and, therefore, if Moses placed fifteen important creative events in their proper order without the possibility of traditional help, as most of them happened millions of years before man was created, it is a very strong proof of his inspiration, for group them as one may, and take off a further percentage for any scientific knowledge possessed by him, still the chances must be reckoned by hundreds of millions against his giving the order correctly without a special revelation from God. To lead his auditors to appreciate this, Dr. Kinns mentioned that a clock beating seconds would take over 30,000 years to tick a billion times; and that if any fifteen different events could be written down once in every ten minutes it would take twenty-four millions of years to write all the variations that could be made in their order, writing them day and night without intermission, and to further illustrate it, he distributed slips of paper for each to write down the first fifteen letters of the alphabet in order known only to himself, something in this order:

g m h d a j b k c f e n i o l

and not one corresponded with his. He told them that if all the people in the world were to try to imitate his unknown order, there would be still a thousand chances to one that the whole twelve hundred million attempts would be incorrect.

Or, in other words, if all the people in a thousand worlds, each having a population equal to our own, were to try, there would still be a probability that not one list would agree in sequence with the unknown list. After this he asked how will the skeptic explain the marvelous, nay miraculous, accuracy in sequence of the Mosaic cosmogony.—London Record.

Wise Sayings.

—He that is unwilling to serve God in pain and patience, is unworthy of so good a Master.—Young Christian's Pocket-Book.

—Were the sun of prosperity always to shine upon us we should soon forget our Father's house, our heritage above. —Rutherford.

—Faith is the blossom of the soul; it makes the hope of a future life a bright reality, and brings departed friends in speaking distance.

—Character is not cut in marble—it is not something solid and unalterable. It is something living and changing, and may become diseased as our bodies do.—George Eliot.

—It is no exaggeration to say that each great movement for good in the Christian Church has coincided with fresh study of the Bible. It was so with the great fathers of the first ages, with Origen, and the masters of Alexandria; it was so with Jerome and Augustine; it was so in the tenth, the fourteenth and the sixteenth centuries. At each crisis deeper investigation of Scripture found new treasures which answered to the wants of a new society. And by God's help it will be so now. The power of the Bible is unchanged and inexhaustible. It speaks with authority to societies and to men; it speaks with sympathy; it speaks with authority because it speaks with sympathy; because it speaks with a human voice, through men and to men, in many fashions, and in many parts. Let us emphasize this thought. We commonly describe the Bible as a "Book." It is a Book, one Book; and it is more. The first title which was given to it in the West was "Bibliotheca Divina," and it is indeed a Divine Library, rich in every region of human interest, rich in every variety of human record.—Prof. Westcott.

—A gentleman of Santa Barbara, Cal., has in his cabinet of curiosities several sets of false teeth exhumed from the graves of aborigines on the Santa Barbara Islands. They are formed each from a shell, which is fashioned to fit the roof of the mouth, and could be adjusted outside of the gums.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL,
Proprietors.

BURLINGTON, KY. NOV. 28. 1883.

ADVERTISING RATES.

Column	1 year	$80
[illegible]	[illegible] "	40
[illegible]	[illegible] "	20
[illegible]	[illegible] "	20
[illegible]	[illegible] "	10
[illegible]	[illegible] "	6

For announcing candidates, $5. Obituary poetry, 5 cents per line. Obituary notices 20 lines free; over that number (excepting the announcement of the death) 3 cents per line.
Tributes of respect from lodges, &c., $1 50

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One year	$1 50
Six months	75
Three months	40

THE Presidential bee now buzeth in many hats.

IF Longabaugh's theory about oil is correct, Boone county has a very good location in the belt.

TO MORROW is Thanksgiving day, and all you are expected to do is to give thanks and—eat turkey.

THE McKenzie-Risenr feud was revived in Morgan county last week by a regular pitched battle, but nobody was hurt.

AT Pine Hill, this State, W. C. Mullins waylaid Tilford Black, when William Black came along and was mortally wounded.

GOV. PORTER, of Indiana, did not do a very extensive pardoning business last year. He granted only two pardons during the year.

GOV. BUTLER can get up the neatest Thanksgiving proclamation of any man in the United States; and it does not read like the writing of an infidel, either.

VIRGINIA's apple crop this year was immense, and apples there are ranging from $1 50 to $2 per barrel. The purchasers are unable to secure barrels and the fruit is being shipped in bulk.

HOGGISH—Select butchers and heavy shippers, $4 70@5 00; fair to good packers, at $4 60@4 85; fair to good light, $4 40@4 75; common, $3 75@4 35; culls, $3 00@3 80; stock hogs, $3 50@4 25.

ON the 22d inst., Henry Watterson, editor of the Louisville Courier-Journal, delivered an address at Cooper Institute, New York, on the relation of revenue reform to the parties. He was introduced by Henry Ward Beecher, who said that he believes that the protective system is a grinding oppession.

THE Democrats have had their Presidential ticket headed by an Eastern man in every campaign since the war, and have elected but one, and he was not inaugurated. It is about time they were giving some Western man a chance to carry the democratic banner through one campaign. By the change the result could be no worse than it has been. Let the ticket be turned "end for end" once.

THE Lawrenceburg Register says in regard to the oil business which is creating an excitement over there:

"Considerable excitement was created here on Monday by the announcement that Mr. S. S. Longabaugh, of Pennsylvania, was in the city for the purpose of prospecting and boring for oil in this vicinity. This gentleman comes here as the representative of a large stock company, organized among the oil men of Northern Pennsylvania, which company was gotten up for the purpose of developing what is known among them as "wild cat country." Mr. Longabaugh has a map of a belt of country extending from New York to New Mexico. This belt of country is fifty miles wide, and the center of it is the 45th degree line, and this city is situated right on that line."

"The theory of the parties is that oil is to be found in this belt of land. They do not profess to have any surface indications, and do not rely much on such indications. Mr. Longabaugh has been in the oil business for fifteen years, and evidently knows the business from "end to end." He developed the first oil well in Alleghany county, New York, which is the most valuable producing county in that State. He does not ask any bonus or financial aid from any one; the company he represents have the money and propose to do the work. All they want is a lease on two thousand acres of land, for which they are willing to pay a cosideration, or they will enter into a contract to pay a royalty of one-tenth the oil, if it should be found in paying quantity, for the use of the land. This is evidently a fair proposition. Work in sinking the wells will begin as soon as the ground can be secured and machinery shipped here. Mr. Longabaugh is confident that the scheme will be successful, as the truth of his theory has been verified wherever the experiment has been made. The future will tell whether "there is millions in it" or not. Until that time arrives we are sitting on the ragged edge of expectancy, and land owners are preparing to tie their dirt to a balloon in case the prospectors do 'strike oil.'"

THOSE opposed to the election of Hon. John G. Carlisle to the Speakership have become so desperate in their struggle to defeat him as to resort to an effort to raise the sectional issue, and are shouting lustily that at this particular juncture the Democratic party can not afford to jeopardize its chances of success in 1884, by elevating a man south of Mason & Dixon's line to the position of Speaker. The southern Democracy has heard this cry for many years, and has all the while responded in solid column when northern Democrats have called upon them. They have quietly submitted to what their brethren in the north would have them believe be the best for the party ever since the smoke of battle disappeared from their territory, and, thus far, they have failed to see any great achievements wrought out by the constant selection of northern Democrats for office for fear of the sectional issue. The south has opened its eyes to a fact that so long as it submits on the account of is geographical location and demands no recognition at the hands of the northern Democracy, just so long will it continue to have nothing further than the right to vote for those the northern Democrats want put in office. A large majority of the electoral votes cast for the Presidential candidates northern Democrats present, comes from south of Mason & Dixon's line, but it won't do for a candidate for any of the small offices to be so unfortunate as to be an inhabitant of the sunny clime; for he will be at once knocked on the head by the sectional issue.

WASHINGTON LETTER.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Nov. 26, 1883.

[Special to the Recorder.]

The most absorbing topic at the National Capital is the three-cornered fight for Speaker of the House. The trinity of Randall, Cox and Carlisle, illustrates faith, hope and charity. Those familiar with the Scriptures can easily make the application, and ascertain which is the greatest. Pending such an important canvass few members are here. From those on the ground careful and impartial inquiry reveals the following state of facts:

At this time Carlisle seems to have the lead. A member from Michigan said that the delegation from that State would prefer Cox to any other candidate, but they feared to give him even a complimentary vote, lest it should so divide the vote as to cause the election of Randall. The prospect, therefore, is, he said, that all those opposed to Randall would concentrate on one candidate, and that will be Carlisle. Personally, Cox is very popular, but many of those who like him best seem to have pledged themselves to Carlisle. Randall's candidacy has been severely damaged I find by the sectional issue cry, attributed to some of his champions, but which he denies. Randall has all the high tariff members. He has other potent influences. The railroads, telegraph lines and iron mills are giving him a pull which counts. The principal objections I find urged against Randall by prominent Democrats, not members of the House, are that while Speaker of the House in the Forty-sixth Congress he killed off most of the important and necessary legislation; that through his manipulations the Forty-sixth Congress did less work than any Congress for fifty years, and that his false economy and cheese-paring policy while Speaker, lost the next election to the Democrats. Your correspondent does not state that these things of him are true, but as statements now made against him. Most of the members now here are low tariff men, and differ with Mr. Randall on that question.

There is to be a stupendous lobby here this winter. The act to forfeit certain railroad land grants and permit the private citizen to build his home on the public lands, the act to establish a postal telegraph system, and the act to regulate interstate commerce will bring to this city the agents and lobbyists of the railroads and telegraph companies in the country.

THE successor of W. N. Hogan, Representative-elect of Grant county, and who was forced to resign on account of the feeble condition of his health, will be elected on the 24th of next month. The election will come just in time to give the boys a good send off for the holidays.

A SCHEME to defraud the taxpayers has been discovered in the City Auditor's office in Cincinnati. The plan was to increase the assessed valuation of property of some of the large taxpayers, and then for a commission get the excessive taxes refunded. Two clerks that were under the last Auditor are suspected, and the City Council has directed the Auditor to use all the means necessary to apprehend the guilty parties.

THE following is a complete answer to Senator Mahone's blood and thunder article in regard to the Virginia election:

"The sensus of 1880 showed Virginia to have 334,000 votes, of which 206,000 are white and 128,000 colored. The Democrats lacked 62,000 of polling the white vote, while the Mahoneites lacked less than 2,000 of polling the entire negro vote. The few thousand of negroes who voted with the Democrats stand as an offset to the white Repudiationists who cast their ballots with Mahone. These figures offer their own comment."

AN invaluable tonic for the nerves, muscles, and digestive organs, producing strength and appetite, is Brown's Iron Bitters.

REV. W. B. SMITH, Grafton, Mass., says: "I have derived benefit from using Brown's Iron Bitters for a low state of blood."

FLORENCE, GA.—Dr. W. B. Prather says: "Brown's Iron Bitters has given satisfaction in every instance I have known it used."

Tobacco Market.

Cincinnati, Friday, Nov. 23, 1883

G'n Trash and Lugs	$2 00@	$4 00
Common Trash	4 50	6 00
Colory Trash	7 00	9 50
Good Br't Trash	10 00	15 00
Fine Br't Trash	16 00	19 00
Dark Lugs	5 00	7 00
Common Lugs	7 00	9 50
Colory Lugs	10 00	12 00
Good Stripping Lugs	13 00	16 50
Fine Str'p'g Lugs	17 00	21 50
Common Leaf	6 00	11 50
Com. Med. Leaf	12 00	14 50
Good Med. Leaf	15	19 50
Good Br't Leaf	20 00	24 75
Fine Br't Leaf	25 00	27 50
Fancy Bright Leaf	28 00	34 50
Com Lug Fillers	7	11 50
Good Lug Fillers	12 00	16 00
Fine Lug Fillers	17 00	21 00
Com. Med. Fil'rs	12 00	16 00
Good Med. Fil'rs	17	19 50
Good L'f Fillers	20 00	24 50
Fine Leaf Fillers	25 00	27 50
Fancy Leaf Fillers	28 00	00 00

THE LOUISVILLE WEEKLY
COMMERCIAL.
LIVE, PROGRESSIVE, POPULAR.
The Cheapest and Best Family Newspaper in the South,
ONLY $1.00 A YEAR.
All the News—Agricultural Department—Children's Corner—Complete Market Reports—Sparkling Miscellany—Thrilling Stories.
INTERESTING, INSTRUCTIVE, USEFUL,
To Old and Young alike. Subscribe for it.

A SPLENDID OFFER
THE

ONLY $3.50.

The New Waterbury Watch, Stem Winding, Nickle Case, handsome, durable and warranted to keep perfect time. RETAIL PRICE THE WORLD OVER, $3.50.

THE COMMERCIAL FOR ONE YEAR AND THIS WATCH FOR ONLY $3.50, THE TWO FOR THE PRICE OF ONE.

The Waterbury Watch Company has a National reputation for making the best cheap Watch in the World, not one is sent from the Factory without having been run for six days and carefully regulated. It runs 27 hours with one winding, and will last for years.

This is the Farmer's Watch, the Miner's Watch, the Laborer's Watch, the Boy's Watch, the School Girl's Watch—in fact, everybody's Watch.

Upon receipt of $3.50 by registered letter or money order, the Watch will be forwarded by mail or express with charges prepaid, and the COMMERCIAL, will be mailed regularly for one year, postage free.

ANOTHER OFFER.

For a Club of twelve Subscribers to the WEEKLY COMMERCIAL and $12.00, the getter up of the Club will be presented, all charges prepaid, with one of the Watches, which will cost $3.50 anywhere and everywhere. Send for sample copies and go to work.

Address
THE COMMERCIAL,
LOUISVILLE, KY.

THE MARVELLOUS WEBBER SINGING DOLL.

"A PRIMA DONNA IN EVERY HOME."

A Mechanical Wonder.

Last year we first introduced this CHARMING NOVELTY to the children of America and it is safe to assert that no Toy ever devised attained such immediate popularity; fully aware of its merit we had thousands of Dolls ready for the Holiday trade notwithstanding which the supply was exhausted early in December, and hundreds of children who came to our store were disappointed. We have been accumulating stock for the past nine months and shall endeavor this year to fill all orders the day of receipt. The Doll has been improved in every way since last year. Instead of the stiff German body as in all imported Dolls our Doll has an AMERICAN MADE BODY with limber joints so that it will sit easily and gracefully in any position. The arm is of Finest Kid with separate fingers. These are positively the finest bodies ever put in a Doll, they are of graceful and natural shape, and much better and more expensively made than the best imported bodies which they will out-wear many times. The Waxen Heads with long hair are of the best French and German make made especially for this Doll and they are as beautiful as life, long hair, beautiful eyes and delicately tinted cheeks. We consider them the finest Doll's Heads ever imported into this country, and that without the Wonderful Singing Attachment the doll alone is well worth the entire price. The Singing Attachment is concealed within the body. It is one of the most ingenious inventions of the age. Its shape and location are shown in the right hand engraving. It is a Perfect Musical Instrument, finely made, not liable to get out of order and so arranged that a slight pressure causes the Doll to sing one of the following airs: "Home sweet home," "Greenville," "I want to be an angel," "There is a happy land," "Sweet bye and bye," "Bonnie Doon," "How can I leave thee?" "A B C Song," "America," "Thou, thou reign'st" (German), "Frohe Botschaft" (German), "Tell Aunt Rhoda," "Buy a broom," "Yankee Doodle," "Coming thro' the Rye," "God bless the Prince of Wales," "Grandfather's Clock," "Child's Song," "Last Rose of Summer," "Joyful Message" (German), "Old Folks at Home," "Pop Goes the Weasel," "So many Stars" (German), "Sleep my Child" (German), "When I a little bird," "Cradle's Empty," "God save the Queen." Walking and talking dolls have long been made, but they are expensive, soon out of order and do not afford the little ones half the pleasure and entertainment that our Wonderful Singing Doll does, which is the Greatest Novelty in CHILDREN'S TOYS EVER PRODUCED and is the most beautiful and appropriate present that can be made to a child. We can furnish three sizes No. 1, 22 inches high, price $2.75. No. 2, 24 inches high, larger head price $3.25. No. 3, 26 inches high, OUR BEST DOLL, price $4.00. These Prices include Boxing. All three sizes are equally perfect and complete, but the larger the doll the larger the singing attachment and better head. Sent to any address on receipt of price. Fine embroidered Chemise 25 cts. extra. THE TRADE SUPPLIED. Address all orders to THE MASSACHUSETTS ORGAN CO., No. 57 Washington Street, Boston, Mass., U. S. A.

☞ FINE COSTUMES for these dolls with underclothing lace trimmed, finely made, $2.00 to $5.00 extra.

High Prices All Sat DoWn On and Crushed Out of Existence!

COLTER'S Shoe Department is turning out stacks and piles of good solid Boots and Shoes, and the best all-Leather solid Goods. This house now shows the best and double the amount of stock that was ever kept in Rising Sun, is doing a strictly cash business, and selling Boots and Shoes at the same low per cent. that Dry Goods are sold at. People are getting tired of paring exclusive shoe dealers' prices for Boots and Shoes when they can go to COLTER'S general store and get the best of goods at the same profits that Dry Goods are sold at

"I told you to go to COLTER'S. I told you that you could get good solid goods at Colter's, and at reasonable prices. Here I have toiled day after day to get a little money ahead, and you went to———and paid them regular shoe dealers' prices for those boots, and now look at them. Three dollars and twenty-five cents gone, and look at those boots. If you had gone to Colter's, as I told you to you would have got a better pair for Two Dollars and Fifty cents."

"Well, Father, I went to Colter's and they were so busy I went out, expecting to go back. But seeing a shoe store that wasn't busy, I just got them there. Next time I'll go to Colter's and wait till my turn comes."

CLOTHING AND OVERCOATS.

Over Twenty-five Hundred Full Suits of Ready-Made Clothing and over Fifteen Hundred Overcoats to select from and get a fit

At COLTER'S MAMMOTH CHEAP CASH STORE,
—Rising Sun, Indiana.—

Men's Full Suits, commencing at $4 a suit and up to $6, $7, $10, $12, and as high as $22. Grand snaps in

OVERCOATS.

Men's Overcoats, commencing at $2 25 and up to $5 for a real good, warm and durable Coat; next grade at $6 to $9; next $10 to $16. Always try COLTER'S for Clothing.

CLOAKS AND JACKETS

DOLMANS AND Ulsterettes.

"Well Mary, I am glad you had supper ready when I came home. When a person goes to town and is busy buying goods all day, she comes home feeling very tired and hungry." "Yes, indeed, Jane, I expected you would feel tired and need refreshments, so I had tea ready for you. Where did you trade?" "Where did I trade?" "Yes." "Why, at Colter's; yes, indeed, every time, and I guess nearly everyone else trades there too, from the way the store was jammed to day. I tell you, Mary, there were no less than 100 people in that store trading this day. The first room we go in was full, the Cloak room was jammed full and the Millinery room was crowded the Boot and Shoe room had a rush, and I was surprised when they took me up stairs to get a bit of floor oil cloth. I believe there were more than a dozen persons up there buying Overcoats, Pants, some buying Hats, some a Suit of Clothes and some buying two or three suits. Yes, indeed, they do business in that house, I'm a tellin' you. It kept a nice looking gray whiskered man busy making change." "Well, how are goods selling now?" "Cheaper than I ever saw them. Colter is making an extra effort to sell more goods than they did last year, and is offering extra inducements. I bought good Sheeting at 7 and 8 cents, splendid Canton Flannel at 10 to 11 cents. Thread 4c. Shoefield's Yarn 75c. a pound. Flannels 30, 37 to 40c, all-Wool Blankets $4 and $5. I got a nice Dolman for $9. Jennie's Hat with two Feathers on for $2, Floor Oil Cloth 25c, Jennie's Shoes, custom-made, sewed Calf, for $2, Johnnie's Boots at $2 60, and they are extra. I don't know what all I did get. You should all trade at Colter's

BOOTS AND SHOES
At COLTER'S
Mammoth Cheap Cash Store,
RISING SUN, INDIANA.

Solid Goods at Bottom Prices
IS OUR MOTTO,

And by standing to this rule we gain trade year after year. When we sell one pair of Solid Boots or Shoes, that invites the Customer back again. Patronize

COLTER'S,
MAMMOTH
CHEAP CASH STORE,
Rising Sun, - Ind.

County Directory.

OFFICERS.

Assessor—G. M. Riley.
County Surveyor—W. E. Vest.
School Commissioner—D. M. Snyder.
Coroner.—Dr. A. A. Murat, Constance.

COURTS.

CIRCUIT COURT meets the 2d Monday in April and first Monday in October, P. U. Major, Judge; W. L. Riddell, Clerk A. G. DeJarnette, Commonwealths Attorney; W. L. Riddell, Trustee Jury Fund.

COUNTY COURT meets the first Monday in every month. L. H. Dills, Judge; S. W. Tolin, County Attorney. M. T. Garnett, Clerk; J. R. Clutterbuck, Sheriff, T. W. Finch and W. T. German, Deputy Sheriffs.

QUARTERLY COURT meets the first Monday in March, June, September and December. The officers of the County Court preside.

COURT OF CLAIMS meets the first Monday in November.

MAGISTRATES' COURTS are held in March, June, September and December, as follows:

Bellevue—M. B. Green, first Saturday, and T. H. Sutton, third Monday. J. M. Moody, Constable.

Burlington—E. H. Baker, Thursday after first Monday, and Oscar Gaines, fourth Monday. R. H. Sandford, Constable.

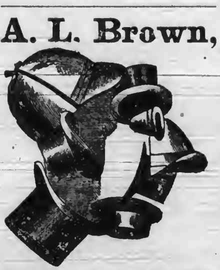
Carlton A. G. McConnell, Wednesday after second Monday, and B. H. Ryle, Saturday after third Monday. Walter Ryle, Constable.

Petersburg—Jos. Hensley, Wednesday after first Monday, and L. A. Loder fourth Saturday. Geo. Comer, Constable.

Union—M. C. Norman, Thursday after third Monday, and H. Bannister, Thursday after second Monday. A. D. Riley, Constable.

Beever—W. M. Rouse, Friday after the third Monday, and

A. L. Brown,



THE HATTER,
Cor. Pike and Washington Streets
COVINGTON, - - KY.

Has always on hand a large variety of Men's, Boys' and Children's Hats, and prices GUARANTEED to be as low as the lowest.

Gents' Furnishing Goods a Specialty.

BOONE HOUSE,
BURLINGTON, KY.
C. L. CRISLER, Prop'r

No pains spared in the accommodation of guests. The table supplied with the delicacies of the season. Stock well cared for. dec. 20-1y

W. J. RICE,
CARPENTER & BUILDER,
BULLITSVILLE, KY.
Is prepared Raise or Move
EITHER LOG or FRAME BUILDINGS
On Short Notice,
And at the Lowest Possible Figures.
33-tf Your orders respectfully solicited

LUMBER.

Goe. M. Bedinger & Co.,
Erlanger, - - Ky.

We keep constantly on hand all kinds of Lumber, Laths and Shingles. Also Builder's supplies of all kinds.

—Come and see Us.—
may 9-tf

INSURE AT HOME
The Farmers' Mutual Fire
INSURANCE COMPANY
Of Boone County
Is now completely organized and receiving applications for insurance.
Its Rates are Lower
Than those of any other Company, and it gives the farmers of Boone County a
HITHERTO UNKNOWN ADVANTAGE
In keeping their property insured.
EVERY FARMER IN THE COUNTY
should take a policy at once.

N. S. WALTON, President, Petersburg, Ky.
J. H. WALTON, Secretary, Constance, Ky.
R. RANDALL, Treasury.

DIRECTORS.
LEGRAN GAINES, Jeff Utz,
JNO. M. MOODY.

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS
FOR THE LIVER
And all Billous Complaints
Safe to take, being purely vegetable; no griping. Price 25 cts. All Druggists.

FREE!
RELIABLE SELF-CURE.
A favorite prescription of one of the most noted and successful specialists in the U. S. (now retired) for the cure of Nervous Debility, Lost Manhood, Weakness and Decay. Sent in plain sealed envelope free. Druggists can fill it. Address DR. WARD & CO., Louisiana, Mo.

INCORPORATED UNDER THE LAWS OF MISSOURI.
CENTRAL MEDICAL & SURGICAL INSTITUTE
OF ST. LOUIS, MO.
SUCCESSORS TO DR. BUTTS' DISPENSARY. OFFICE & ROOMS, No. 920 LOCUST ST.
CHAS. L. LaBARGE, M.D., Pres't & Physician in Charge.
NELSON CHESMAN, Treas. & Business Manager.

This Institute has ample facilities and an experienced Faculty. While it succeeds to a large business, which has been established for years, it will aim to extend its medical and surgical practice, giving skillful and scientific treatment to CHRONIC DISEASES of the Head, Spine, Lungs and Air Passages, Heart, Liver, Stomach and Bowels, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Consumption and Asthma. BLOOD IMPURITIES, inherited or caused by impure association, Scrofula, Fever Sores, Ulcers, etc. DEFORMITIES of the Limbs, Spinal Curvature, Wry-Neck, Diseases of the Joints, Piles, Fistula, Rupture, etc. WEAKNESS and wasting diseases in old and young men, also all diseases of the genito-urinary organs. FEMALE irregularities and weaknesses, causing pain in the back or side, etc.

Personal interviews with patients are always preferred. Those unable to visit the Institute will be furnished with blank lists of questions that will aid them in making a full statement of their cases and if not requiring a surgical operation they can be successfully treated by correspondence, and medicines sent by mail or express. To enable us to send proper list of questions applicants should give a brief statement of their trouble.

(The Treasurer of the corporation is of Nelson Chesman & Co., Advertising Agents, and refers to the publisher of this or any other newspaper in the United States or Canada regarding responsibility.)

Consultation at Office or by mail free and invited

HALL'S
Vegetable Sicilian
HAIR RENEWER

was the first preparation perfectly adapted to cure diseases of the scalp, and the first successful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many imitators, but none have so fully met all the requirements needful for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp. HALL'S HAIR RENEWER has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its unparalleled success can be attributed to but one cause: the entire fulfilment of its promises.

The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction.

The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, cures all humors, fever, and dryness, and thus prevents baldness. It stimulates the weakened glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The affects of this article are not transient, like those of alcoholic preparations, but remain a long time, which makes its use a matter of economy.

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE
FOR THE WHISKERS

Will change the beard to a natural brown, or black, as desired. It produces a permanent color that will not wash away. Consisting of a single preparation, it is applied without trouble.

PREPARED BY
R. P. HALL & CO., Nashua, N.H.
Sold by all Dealers in Medicines.

FOR ALL THE FORMS
OF Scrofulous, Mercurial, and Blood Disorders, the best remedy, because the most searching and thorough blood-purifier, is
Ayer's Sarsaparilla.
Sold by all Druggists; $1, six bottles, $5.

TUTT'S
PILLS
TORPID BOWELS,
DISORDERED LIVER,
and MALARIA.

From these sources arise three-fourths of the diseases of the human race. These symptoms indicate their existence: Loss of Appetite, Bowels costive, Sick Headache, fullness after eating, aversion to exertion of body or mind, Eructation of food, Irritability of temper, Low spirits, A feeling of having neglected some duty, Dizziness, Fluttering at the Heart, Dots before the eyes, highly colored Urine, CONSTIPATION, and demand the use of a remedy that acts directly on the Liver. As a Liver medicine TUTT'S PILLS have no equal. Their action on the Kidneys and Skin is also prompt; removing all impurities through these three "scavengers of the system," producing appetite, sound digestion, regular stools, a clear skin and a vigorous body. TUTT'S PILLS cause no nausea or griping nor interfere with daily work and are a perfect

ANTIDOTE TO MALARIA.
Sold everywhere, 25c. Office, 44 Murray St., N.Y.

TUTT'S HAIR DYE.
GRAY HAIR OR WHISKERS changed instantly to a GLOSSY BLACK by a single application of this DYE. Sold by Druggists, or sent by express on receipt of $1.
Office, 44 Murray Street, New York.
TUTT'S MANUAL OF USEFUL RECEIPTS FREE.

VIGOROUS HEALTH FOR MEN
THE PASTILLE CURE TRADE MARK FOR NERVOUS DEBILITY.
TESTED FOR 5 YEARS
by use in thousands of cases. Founded on scientific medical principles, it has been growing in favor and reputation while its numerous competitors have invariably failed. The direct application of this remedy to the seat of the disease makes its specific influence felt without delay. The natural functions of the human organism are restored. The animating elements of life which have been wasted are given back. The buoyant energy of the brain and muscular system renders the patient cheerful; he gains strength with rapidity.

NERVOUS DEBILITY, organic weakness, and numerous obscure diseases, baffling the skill of best physicians, result for youthful indiscretion, too free indulgence, and over brain work.

Do not temporise while such enemies lurk in your system. Take a remedy that has cured thousands, and does not interfere with you attention to business or cause any pain or inconvenience.

(Send for a Descriptive Pamphlet giving Anatomical Illustrations, which will convince the most sceptical that they can be restored to perfect manhood, and fitted for the duties of life, same as if never affected. Sent free to any one.) Remedy sold ONLY by the

HARRIS REMEDY CO. MF'G. CHEMISTS.
306½ N. 10th. St. ST. LOUIS, MO.
One Month's treatment $3. two months $5. three months $7

PARKER'S
HAIR BALSAM

A beneficial dressing preferred to similar articles because of its purity and rich perfume. It Restores to Gray Hair the Youthful Color & prevents dandruff and falling of the hair. 50c. & $1. Hiscox & Co., N.Y.

FLORESTON
Excels the finest flower extracts in richness. Delicate, very lasting. No odor like it. Be sure you get FLORESTON Cologne, signature of Hiscox & Co., N. Y., on every label. 25 and 75 cts., at druggists and dealers in perfumes.
COLOGNE

INJECTION
SANTINELI
Cures all recent and chronic secret diseases of the Urinary passages in both sexes. Directions in all languages. $1.00 a bottle Druggists, or sent by express on receipt of price secure from observation. Fairmount Chemical Co. Cincinnati, Ohio, U. S. A. Sold by W. F. McKim.

PAYSON'S INDELIBLE INK
Is the BEST. No preparation. Used with any clean pen for marking any fabric. Popular for decorative work on linen. Received Centennial MEDAL & Diploma. Established 50 years. Sold by all Druggists, Stationers & News Agt's.

Local News.

Magic Tooth-powder.

Peerless Baking-powder.

Prepare the turkeys for to-morrow.

Last week furnished good suicide weather.

"More rain, more rest," don't apply to printers.

Glycerine Lotion for Chapped Hands, Lips and Faces.

H. Clay White, of Williamstown, was in town Monday.

One of Mr. Graham's wagon horses died the other day.

The Governor remitted Jeff Edding's fine and imprisonment for carrying a pistol.

Rabbi Stuckey is delivering his last year's crop of tobacco to Clore & Snyder this week.

Keene Robbins, proprietor of the Sandford House, has been very sick for several days.

A new lot of Dress Goods and Ladies' Underwear just received at Heyn's, Rising Sun, Ind.

Standard time is very popular with the young men—they can stay later of a Sunday night.

Ayer's Ague Cure is warranted to cure all cases of malaria. Sold by all druggists. Price one dollar.

Demoist's Magazine for December is a perfect jem as to literature for the ladies, and the price is only $2 a year.

John Conner drove a large lot of turkeys through town Saturday. They'll make many lips smack to-morrow.

Gunpowder creek tore up jack last Wednesday night, destroying considerable corn and fencing in its mad career.

Heyn & Bro., Rising Sun, Ind., are doing a thriving business this fall. Just think of it, they sold 64 Overcoats in one day.

For Schofield's Jeans, Flannels and Yarns at Heyn & Bro., Rising Sun, Ind. is the only reliable place, good Jeans for 40 cents.

Heyn & Bro., are taking the lead in Dolmans and Cloaks. To look at them and see the prices is to buy. Rising Sun, Indiana.

Sherman's Mince-meat, Green Apples, choice Dryed Prunes, Apples and Peaches for sale at the Burlington Drug and Grocery Store.

For real Schofield Blankets go to Heyn & Bro., Rising Sun, and if you ask for them you will get no other. Price $5 and upwards.

SSSSSSSSXXXXXXX33333333

Turn the above line upside down and discover the difference in the looks of the letters and figures.

It was not a protracted meeting at St. Georgia's Chapel, last week, as people supposed. It was a "protracted endeavor," whatever that is.

Hon. G. V. Rouse was in town last Saturday. His many friends will be glad to learn that he is in better health than he has been for a long time.

During the year immediately preceding the last term of the Boone Circuit Court, the County Clerk recorded 336 deeds and 93 mortgages on real estate.

O. P. Conner sold his tobacco, last week, to Clore & Snyder, getting seventeen dollars for the best grade, which is the highest price we have heard of being paid in the county this fall.

B. W. Adams, of the Union neighborhood, has been quite sick of a fever, but the last reports were that he was getting better. Blufe has a host of friends who will be glad to hear of his being out again.

Nice tombstones or monuments at the graves of the departed, are marks of respect which should not be neglected. Hurschart & Co., Lawrenceburg, Ind., have just what you want. John Beall of Hebron, is their agent.

This week W. R. Terrill puts on a new passenger conveyance from Burlington to Erlanger. The "cabin" is after a new pattern, being built especially for furnishing light, and is adorned with numerous modern paintings.

We call your attention to Colter's new advertisement in this issue. But it is hardly necessary, as the people are always on the look-out for the new attractions which he is constantly putting in his mammoth establishment.

The south end of the county seems to have the advantage in getting the high prices for tobacco. There is no question but what they can produce as fine tobacco down there as anywhere in the State, and they cultivate it extensively.

Our turkey brokers Crisler & Sandford and Rice & Westbay were up with the lark Monday morning, and commenced collecting their stock of thanksgiving meat for shipment to the city. They had about 200 head of the fowls.

Our city council has not determined whether it will adopt the time of the nineteenth meridian as the standard. It makes no difference whether it does or not, there will be no confusion among the railroads and other industries at this point.

John W. Rice, of Bellevue, was in town Saturday, conveying a portion of his real estate to his brother Solon. Mr. Rice leaves, this week, for Kansas, where he will probably take his family and locate next spring. We do not like to lose such worthy citizens, but guess we'll have to submit to it.

Boys, if you want to continue your career of single cussedness, you must commence practicing and get command of that little monosyllable, "No;" for leap year is close at hand, and, of course, you expect to be assailed from all directions by propositions to become the stay and protector of the delicate and helpless female.

The Sunday-school has decided to have a christmas tree, and to raise funds for that purpose, a soliciting committee has been turned loose upon a generous public, and when approached by them you may as well shell out the amount you intend to donate. The school will be largely attended the remainder of the year.

The following persons have been licensed to marry this month: Ben P. Hume, 26, farmer, Kenton county, and Minnie Conner, 26; Lewis DeMarque, 25, farmer, and Susie Ransler, 20; John Knipfer, 23, farmer, and Mary E. Drew, 21; S. S. McWethy, 24, cooper, and Theresa McNeely, 22; Phillip Tallafero, 62, druggist, and Harriet M. McHatton, 51.

Joe Reed came near throwing his audience, at the Boone House, the other day, into convulsions by his appearance as landlady. His costume was remarkable for the evidence of service it displayed, while he wielded the broom so scientifically that servants have actually become jealous of him. He narrowly escaped being booted off the premises for a crazy woman.

The other day a horse lay on the street very sick, and surrounded by a crowd of thirty or forty men, each of whom was liberal with prescriptions for the relief of the suffering animal. Having heard numerous remedies proposed, the horse concluded to remain longer was to be doctored to death, and he gave a flounce, gained his feet and struck for the country, where the army of vetinaries ceased to trouble. Sagacious animal.

It is said that country editors wear a belt to hold up their pants, instead of suspenders. When they get word from home that there is nothing for dinner, they simply tighten up one hole, and feel to full for utterance—Ex.

We deny the charge—it's an infamous no-such-a-thing, and the author of the vile slander ought to be booted up and down the continent for a fortnight. Everybody knows that country editors are as fat as fiddle strings, both in person and purse, and don't have to be told that their larder is famine stricken.

In opening the doors of the Universalist church Sunday morning, the pastor, Rev. C. C. Conner, stated that the church was organized at this place seven years ago, having for its membership the apostolic number, twelve, and that the number had been increased to forty-one, and was in perfect harmony in every particular. In response to the invitation Mr. Allen Souther and Mrs. C. L. Crisler united with the church, which gives it a membership of forty-three at this place. The pastor designated the fourth Saturday in May as a day for the observance of the ordinance of baptism; but in case a candidate shall desire an earlier day, his or her wishes will be acceded to.

NGEIHBORHOOD NEWS.

Huntsville.

Farmers are as busy as bees cribbing their corn and getting winter wood.

The small grain is looking well in this vicinity.

Some of the farmers of this neighborhood sold their tobacco for $16.

O. W. Green, of Rising Sun, was around last week, with his sewing machines.

A. M. Acra, of Burlington, was visiting friends here Sunday.

Miss Lizzie Acra, of Scattersville, was the guest of Mr. R. Acra and wife last week.

Waterloo.

This has been a delightful fall, since the drouth the pastures has put forth a green appearance and the small grain is looking fine.

Farmers are now busy shucking and cribbing their corn.

Ambros Bradford has put up a stone chiminey too his residence, which is quite an improvement.

Mr. Cotts, the tobacco merchant, of McsVille, was around last week, picking up all of the lose tobacco in this neighborhood.

John Kite and family have moved back to the Big Bone neighborhood.

Joseph Satchel has rented the Kite property near this place.

R. O. Rice and wife, of Burlington, were visiting Mrs. Emily Green last Saturday and Sunday.

Walier Marshall is the happiest man in this vicinity, it is a boy.

Bullittsville.

Miss Nellie McGregor and Miss Mollie Kinsley, of Cincinnati, were the guests of Miss Anna Clore, the latter part of last week.

Alvin Corn is having an addition built to his barn, which will add to its appearance.

This little town boasts of a very fine barber shop.

Clore & Snyder are buying considerable tobacco.

J. D. Conner had some of his carpenter tools stolen one night last week.

The streets in our town are in a bad condition since the late rains.

It is rumored that there will be a telegraph line from this place to Hebron in the near future.

Mrs. Chas. Balsly was highly entertained by a number of young folks last Saturday evening.

Normansville.

A few evenings since, Signor Chillo and little brother, Geo. Chillo, both of whom are natural ventriloquists, arrived at this place and gave an interesting entertainment in the old school building, which, since the completion of the new house has been fitted up and serves excellently for an opera house.

Mrs. Saunders, of Winfield, W. Va., is visiting her brother-in-law, Mr. D. L. Saunders, of this place.

Miss Susie Woodyard, who has been for several weeks with friends here, will return to her home and friends at Broadhead, Ky., in a few days.

Mr Hugh Matson, of Walton, has been making frequent visits to our town.

Mr. C. Gibson and family, of Missouri, have been visiting the family of Mr. J. W. Kennedy.

The Masonic Hall, of Hamilton Lodge, is at last finished and has just been received by the commissioners.

Beaver Lick.

The big freshet of last week did considerable damage in its course, especially in the valleys of Big Bone, where corn was standing ungathered. A lot of fencing, timber and other valuable property were swept away by that raging, famous old stream, Big Bone Creek.

As Mr Z. T. Baker was leisurelly wending his way along the meanderings of Gum Branch recently, something of a bright she'ly appearance caught his attention, which, upon close inspection proved to be the butt of a mastodon tusk of huge dimensions, protruding from the bank of the stream. Z. T. soon raised its tuskship from its bed where it, in all probability had been resting for lo, these many centuries. He forthwith conveyed it to his private museum, where he takes pleasure in showing it to the curious, gratis.

Babe Stevenson, one of Covington's young huxters, came through here last week with his big, new wagon filled with choice Thanksgiving turkeys.

The past week has been unfavorable for work on our pike, the road being too wet to handle. Superintendent Piatt has begun digging for the piers of a bridge across Gum Branch at this place. It will be a pretty big affair, having one forty foot span. Many thanks are due our commissioners who have performed their duty with unceasing diligence.

Our local tobacco buyers are still scouring the "deadnings" in search of the filthy weed; they seem determined to grasp every "crap" before it gets any lower. For their benefit we hope the boom in prices will, like Tennyson's river, "Go on forever."

Florence.

I would offer an apology for failing to contribute anything last week in the way of news (for we always have something, whether good or bad), if I entertained for a moment the thought that the reading public had suffered any material loss by my tardiness. But, as I noticed the RECORDER making its usual welcome visitations in "full dress," suffering no discomfiture whatever, I concluded that if I should secede, this beautiful planet of ours would still make its annual and diurnal revolutions; and our great country, with its agricultural, manufacturing, mechanical and banking interests, still stand at the head of the nations, and THE BOONE COUNTY RECORDER be as eagerly sought for as ever. Even our good-humored contributor from Plattsburg, who has been a "little off" of late, had filed in again with his ever interesting and spicy articles. I was in the act of complaining, but heard that he was lately married, and, of course, I can appreciate his condition, and pardon him for any dereliction of duty in the way of writing, when there are so many little duties to attend to in his new relation, such as getting dry stove-wood, tying up the clothes-line, churning, &c.

I had an item or two for last week, and I had spread out my paper and seized on my pen, when I was startled by a loud wrap on the door, followed by the interrogatory, "Mr.—, will you please loan me your RECORDER?" "Certainly," said I. Started to write again; "Halloo!" was sounded at the fence. I answered the call. "Have you this week's RECORDER?" "Just loaned it to Mr. —." "Can I get it when he is through with it?" "You can" I tried to write again—another call. "Ma says 'please loan her the Burlington paper, that she will take good care of it and send it back.'" "Tell your mamma, as soon as it gets home, she can have it, with pleasure." Thus, one wanted to see if the potato crop would ever give out; another, what price Conner & Sleet were paying for hogs and cattle and a third, what Frank Walton is paying for tobacco. Some wanted to know whom ManGarnett had licensed to marry; some, how many additions at the great revivals, and who were the belles and beaux at the parties, while a few wanted to see if their claims were allowed. A thousand wants are wanted, and the paper is the place to get them supplied. By the time I got through with this little entertainment, I was too late for the mail. Now, we don't object to loaning our paper—for they are all going to subscribe soon—but this kind of business won't buy the editor's good wife a new dress, nor paregoric for the babies (I'm not certain as to the number, but being enthusiastic on the subject of babies, I always use the plural form). If you are sick, $1 50 invested in the RECORDER will tell you the remedy. If you want to buy a farm in the county, the same will tell you where to find it. Would you be familiar with the agricultural and commercial intercourse of the country, only $1 50. If you would marry a wife for riches, the RECORDER will show you the locality, and you'll get your money back. If for love, you won't want it back. Do you want to be sent to the legislature two consecutive terms? take the RECORDER. In short, if you would know everything that is transpiring in the county, and the important news of the whole country, subscribe. Aside from the addition to the social and family circle, and the literary and monetary advantages thus afforded, pride of county should stimulate every citizen to support his own paper. Just think of it! Boone county, named in honor of Col. Daniel Boone, the old pioneer, who watched by the cradle of this now great Commonwealth, and shielded it from the savage hostilities with his body, the mortal remains of whom now sleep in a chosen spot in the beautiful cemetery at Frankfort, Ky. Nor is this all. We have the honor of receiving the visit of the first white woman of Kentucky—Mrs. Mary Ingles in 1756; the first Baptist preacher, the Rev. John Tanner, about 1790, who founded Tanner's Station, now the pleasant town of Petersburg; the first Baptist church, organized in 1794 at Bullittsburg, the first members being Rev. Lewis Dewees, John Hall and his wife, Elizabeth, Chichester Mathews and his wife, Agnes, Jos. Smith and wife, Leannah, all of whom were the principal residents of North Bend. Since which time nature has bestowed her blessings upon us with a lavish hand. And shall we not respond by publishing to the country our progress and developments through our home journal? The readers will please pardon this desultory article, as it is purely gratuitous. I have adopted the axiom or Rev. Sam'l Glassford, viz.: A crooked stick thrown will strike in more places than a straight one.

Those rascals tried T. L. Swetnam's store again on Saturday night or Sunday morning—though I don't suppose they would break the Sabbath. They used an auger around the lock, but found too much iron, so they fell back for repairs.

GAS OMETER.

Judge Riddell's daughter, Mrs. Elizabeth Gibbs, of Ind., is his guest.

An early train on the Southern run over a man near Erlanger, Monday morning, killing and fearfully mangling him. He was a stanger, and his companion was a jug of whisky.

BORN—On the 26th inst., to F. A. Hall and wife, a fine daughter that kicked the beam at 10½ pounds.

Now, dear readers, this event calls for an addition of 500 new subscribers to the RECORDER.

Out on the Prairie.

Concerning Something Better than Mrs. Toodles' Wheelbarrow—And the Reasons Why.

When a certain Commissary-General complained to the Duke of Wellington that Sir Thomas Picton had declared he would hang him if the rations for that General's division were not forthcoming at a certain hour, the Duke replied;

"Ah! did he indeed go so far as that? Did he say he'd hang you?"

"Yes my lord."

"Well, General Picton is just the man to keep his word. You'd better get the rations up in time"

But to get rations or anything else up in time one must know when to lay his hand on them. As Mr. Toodles said about the coffin which he had bought at auction and brought home to his wife:

"If anything should happen, my dear, it will be so handy to have in the house."

Being in the great wholesale drug house of William Hart, in Elgin, Ill., one day, Mr. G. H. Sherman, the photographer of that place, remarked, concerning PARKER'S TONIC "I have used it in my family for two years, and I unhesitatingly pronounce it the best medicine we have ever used. It is handy to have in the house, and we are never without it."

Culled from the mass of reasons why Mr. Sherman was right, be good enough to consider these: First, PARKER'S TONIC, is delicious to the palate; second, it invigorates, but does not promote a love for strong drink; third, it cures Coughs and Colds by inciting the torpid organs into healthy action, and opening all the pores of the skin; fourth, it purifies the Blood, thus curing Kidney Liver and Lung diseases and Rheumatism; fifth—

But take it into your house, and it will speak for itself. Once used, will change it for nothing else. Physicians commend it. Price, 50 cents and $1. Hiscox & Co., Chemist, New York.

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Boone Circuit Court, Ky.

Stewart Baker Plff.
vs
James Marshall, Deft.
} Notice of sale in equity

By virtue of a judgment and order of sale of the Boone Circuit Court, rendered at the Oct., term thereof, 1883, in the above cause, the undersigned will, on Monday, the 3d day of Dec., 1883, at 1 o'clock p. m., or thereabout (being County Court day) proceed to offer for sale at public auction, to the highest bidder, on a credit of 6 and 12 months at the Court-house door, in the town of Burlington, the property mentioned in the judgment to wit:

Being a portion of the farm on which the defendant James Marshall now resides near Richwood church this county and is bounded thus: Beginning at a mulberry tree a corner between the James Marshall and James Rice tracts of land; thence with the line dividing the same N 77¼ W 4.08 ch. to a stone near the edge of the Richwood pike a corner between James Marshall and L. B. Stephens; thence S 1½ W 23.80 ch. to a stake; thence N 59 E 28.12 ch, to a stake in Robt. Cleek's line; thence with his line N 4 E 21 ch. to a stone; thence S 59 W 24.30 ch. to the beginning containing 50 acres.

Or sufficient thereof to produce the sums of money so ordered to be made. The purchaser will be required to give bonds with approved security, for the payment of the purchase money, to have the force and effect of a judgment, bearing legal interest from the day of sale, according to law. Bidders will be prepared to comply promptly with these terms. Amount to be raised by sale, $825 85

Bonds payable to the undersigned.

W L RIDDELL, M C B C C

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Boone Circuit Court, Ky.

Virginia M. Huey, &c. Plffs.
vs
Laura Huey, Deft.
} Notice of sale in Equity.

By virtue of a judgment and order of sale of the Boone Circuit Court, rendered at the Oct., term thereof, 1883, in the above cause, the undersigned will, on Monday, the 3d day of Dec. 1883, at 1 o'clock p. m., or thereabout (being County Court day) proceed to offer for sale at public auction, to the highest bidder, on a credit of 6, 12 & 18 mos. at the Court-house door in the town of Burlington, the property mentioned in the judgment to wit:

101 acres of land being the farm upon which William S. Huey resided at the time of his death and now occupied by John Humphrey and bounded by the lands of T. P. Marshall, the Bradfords, J. T. Ryle, Geo. Smith, &c.

The purchaser will be required to give bonds with approved security, for the payment of the purchase money, to have the force and effect of a judgment, bearing legal interest from the day of sale, according to law. Bidders will be prepared to comply promptly with these terms.

Bonds payable to the undersigned.

W L RIDDELL, M C B C C.

BACKLOG SKETCHES, our large 16 page paper, filled with charming serials, stories, choice miscellany etc., is sent 3 mos. on trial for 25 cents; and we send every subscriber FREE our new HOLIDAY PACKAGE, consisting of 10 pieces popular music 10 interesting games, 1 pack of age and fortune-telling cards; 1 pack "Hold to Light" cards, 1 pack fun & flirtation cards, 1 set chromo cards, 13 new tricks in magic 5 new puzzles, game of fortune, the mystic oralce, 25 ways to get rich, Heller's wonderful delusion cards, etc., etc. Endless amusement! Agents wanted. Sample paper for stamp. BACKLOG PUBLISHING CO., Augusta, Me.

For Sale.

House and lot in Hebron, Boone county, Kentucky. This is a very comfortable house located near the center of the town. The lot contains one acre. For further particulars call on or address LYSTRA AYLOR,
Hebron, Ky.

Posted.

We the undersigned hereby give notice that our farms are posted against hunters:

Templeton Gaines,	J C Jenkins,
J E Duncan,	Oscar Gaines,
G C Gaddy,	Ben Clore,
Noah Craven,	Wm. Clore,
C S Balsly,	A S Gaines,
George Gaines,	C S Gaines.
Absalom Aylor,	J. B. Winstoh,

Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned has been duly appointed and qualified as assignee in trust for the benefit of the creditors of Wm. N. Aylor. All persons indebted to said assignor will make immediate payment, and creditors will present their claims duly proven according to law to the undersigned at No. 7 Pike Str., Covington, Ky. R. L. CRIGLER,
5-4t Assignee.

WANTED BOOK Canvassers.

MALE and FEMALE

To engage in the sale of our new and important works of standard character. large profits and immense selling qualities. We offer a permanent and lucrative business. Address The CINCINNATI PUBLISHING CO.,
174 W. Fourth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Free! Cards and Chromos.

We will send free by mail a sample set of our large German, French, and American Chromo Cards, on tinted and gold grounds, with a price list of over 200 different designs, on receipt of a stamp for postage. We will also send free by mail as samples, ten of our beautiful Chromos, on receipt of ten cents to pay for packing and postage; also enclose a confidential price list of our large oil chromos. Agents wanted. Address F. GLEASON & Co., 46 Summer Street, Boston, Mass.

A MUSICAL INSTRUMENT

that will play any tune, and that any one, even a child, can operate.

$7 for $3.50.

The Organette has gained such a world-wide reputation that a lengthy description of it is not necessary. It will be sufficient to say that it is a PERFECT ORGAN that plays mechanically all the sacred airs, popular music, songs, dances, etc. etc. It consists of three strong bellows and set of reeds with EXPRESSION box and SWELL. A strip of perforated paper represents the tune, and it is only necessary to place the paper tune in the instrument, as shown in the picture, and turn the handle, which both operates the bellows and propels the paper tune. The perforations in the paper allow the right reeds to sound and a perfect tune is the result, perfect in time, execution, and effect, without the least knowledge of music being required of the performer; even a little child can operate it; as is shown in the picture, a little girl is playing a song and her playmates are singing the words. It is tuned in the key best suited for the human voice to sing by. It interests and entertains both old and young, assists in training the voice and AFFORDS HOURS OF SOCIAL AMUSEMENT. The Organette is perfectly represented by the picture. It is made of solid black walnut, decorated in gilt, and is both handsome and ornamental. The price of similar instruments has hitherto been $8, and the demand has constantly increased until now there are over 75,000 in use. We are encouraged to place the Organetta on the market at this greatly reduced price, believing that the sale will warrant the reduction. The Organetta though similar in construction is an improvement upon our well-known Organette, which sells for $8 and $10. It contains the same number of reeds and plays the same tunes. Our offer is this: On receipt of $7 we will send the Organnetta by express to any address, and include FREE $2.50 worth of music, or on receipt of $5 we will send it with over $1.50 worth of music FREE, or for $3.50 we will send it with small selection of music FREE. The price includes boxing and packing. These are agent's prices, and we will appoint the first purchaser from any town our agent, if he so desires. Address,

AN ORCHESTRA IN EVERY HOME.

The Massachusetts Organ Co., 57 Washington Street, Boston, Mass., U. S. A.

J. W. KIRKPATRICK & SON,
—BURLINGTON, KY.—

UNDERTAKERS

We have purchased a nice new hearse, and are prepared to attend funerals in regular city style, at the lowest prices.

ROBERT B. REED
Attorney at Law.
OFFICE AT - - UNION, KY.

F. RIDDELL,
ATTORNEY at LAW
BURLINGTON, KY.
Office over Dudley Rouse's Store.

ALBERT W. GAINES,
Attorney and Counselor at Law,
LAWRENCEBURG, - - - IND.

Will practice in the courts of Boone county, Ky., Cincinnati, Ohio, Dearborn and adjoining counties, Ind. dec-6-82

W. E. VEST,
COUNTY SURVEYOR
WALTON, KY.

Is prepared to do all kinds of surveying. All orders sent him through the mail to Walton, will receive his prompt attention.

E. E. IGOE,

Resident Dentist,
Rising Sun, Ind.
WITH
J. P. Ulrey.
Monday and Tuesday at Rising Sun, Ind.

L. O. NORMAN. [illegible]

NORMAN and STEPHENS,
ATTORNEYS at LAW,
UNION, BOONE CO., KY.

Will practice in the Courts of Boone Kenton and adjoining counties. Collections solicited and made throughout the State. 24 tf 81

DR. A. B. HARRY AN

RESIDENT DENTIST.
Aurora, Indiana.
(Office Over Postoffice)
With J P. ULREY.

Dr. ULREY'S days, Wednesday and Saturday. Office open at all hours. 8-1y

J. J. Landram. G. G. Hughes.

LANDRAM & HUGHES.
ATTORNEYS at LAW.

Will practice in the Boone Circuit Cour and the Court of Appeals. Prompt attention given to Collections, on application t G. G. Hughes, Burlington, Ky.

S. W. TOLIN,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
BURLINGTON, - - Y

Office in Court-house on 2d floor.

Will manage litigation in any of the Courts of the State, contracts and other legal instruments drawn up at reasonable rates. A prompt an studious attention given to business intrusted to my care. A trial solicited. 12-1y

H. KASSEN & CO.
(Formerly of Covington.)
—Dealers in Fine—
BOOTS AND SHOES,
106 W. 5th Street.
CINCINNATI, - - - OHIO.

Custom made work a Specialty. A perfect Fit Guaranteed. dec. 20-1y

AURORA
MARBLE
AND GRANITE
WORKS,
Aurora, Ind

Will have constantly on hand
Marble and Granite Monuments,
Italian & American Headstones, &c.

I am ready to do all kinds of Stone Work on short notice and at low prices Hoping to receive the patronage of Boone County, I am respectfully,

F. W. KASSEBAUM.

FALL FALL FALL FALL

AND

Winter Clothi'g

Clothing of the best goods, well trimmed, in the latest styles, made under my direct supervision and sold at lower prices than are asked for badly made, shoddy goods at other places. Call and be assured.

A splendid line of Suitings. Suits MADE to order on short notic .

H. F Blase,
540 Madison St. - COVINGTON. KY.

Stop! Don't Read This.

S. C BUCHANAN takes this method of notifying his patrons that he has enlarged his room and now has the best and most complete stock of Drugs in the county, consisting of Drugs and Medicines, Standard Patent Medicines, &c.

Notions and Fancy Goods, Combs, Brushes, Toilet Powders Perfumery, Toilet and Medicated Soaps.

Also Spices of all kinds, Flavoring Extracts in bulk, Horse and Cattle Powders and many other things that we have not the room to mention here. If you call for anything not in Stock we will get it for you at the regular price, if it takes all the profit.

When in need of anything give us a call, at the Petersburg Duru Store, and be convinced that our Prices are as Low or LOWER than can be found.

Don't Read Any Further.

M.L. SWETNAM. HUBERT NEED.

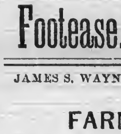
SWETNAM & NEAD,
(SUCCESSOR TO ALONZO GRAVES)

LIVERY AND BOARDING STABLE
AND TRANSFER LINE.
79 Pike Street, Covington, Ky.

Horses Kept by the Day, Week or Month.
Horses and Buggies for Hire.
Stock of all kinds Bought and Sold.
Best Care Taken of Horses entrusted to our Keeping.

All Orders for Hauling Promptly Attended to.

MOTHER NOBLE'S



HEALING SYRUP.
20 Million Bottles sold in 10 years. A certain Cure for Dyspepsia, all Diseases of the Kidneys, Liver, Stomach, Blood, Skin and Bowels.
Can Produce Thousands of Letters proving its Curative Powers.
AN OLD AND LONG TRIED REMEDY.
LABORATORY 77 AMITY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.
FOR SALE BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

Cornease.—The King of Corn Killers. The most desperate Corns, BUNIONS, WARTS &c., SPEEDILY cured. Price 25 Cents.

Footease.—An Unfailing Remedy for Hot, Swollen and Tender Feet, Chilblains, &c. Price 25 Cents.
Cornease Manuf'g Co., 236, 5th Ave. Place, N. Y. City.
For Sale by Agents, Druggists and Shoe Dealers.

JAMES S. WAYNE, President. JNO. L. SANDFORD, Cashier
CAPITAL $300,000.
FARMERS AND TRADERS
NATIONAL BANK.
Covington, Kentucky.

DIRECTORS.

James S. Wayne, M. C. Motch, Sam Hind, E. J. Hickey, E. J. Green
J. S. Matson, J. H. Mersman, J. L. Sandford, L. H Dills, F. P. Helm
L. C. Stephens.

The general operations of banking transacted upon the most favorable terms. collections made on all points in the United States.

The Business and Accounts of Farmers are Especially Solicited by this Bank. dec. 20-6m

City Flouring Mills
RISING SUN, INDIANA.

FLOUR EXCHANGED FOR WHEAT OR CASH. THE HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR GOOD WHEAT.

mar7-tf23 J. W. Talbott.

UNDERTAKING.

We keep Constantly on Hand all sizes of
Burial Cases and Caskets,
And having just received a beautiful
NEW HEARSE,
Which can be had at a reasonable price when desired.
PRICES GUARANTEED LESS THAN CITY PRICES.
DAVIS BROS., - - HEBRON, KY.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL, Publishers.

BURLINGTON, : : KENTUCKY.

An Auctioneer's Miss.

Soon after an auction-store on Monroe avenue had opened for business the other morning an old farmer and his wife dropped in and began inspecting goods. The auctioneer thereupon mounted his box and began:

"Ladies and gentlemen, I desire to call your attention to this sample pair of suspenders. Who starts them at fifteen cents?"

"Did you hear him call me a lady?" whispered the woman to her old man.

"And he called me a gentleman!" replied the husband, as he grinned his delight.

"Who says fifteen cents to start 'em going? Who says? Who says? You can't buy 'em anywhere else in the world for half a dollar! Don't want 'em, eh? Very well; here's a hat which was never made for less than seventy cents. Who starts it at a quarter—a quarter—a quarter? Ladies and gentlemen, who bids?"

"Called me a lady again!" cackled the woman, as she nudged her husband.

"Yes, but he bore on pretty heavy when he said gentlemen," replied the man.

"I guess he knows a lady when he sees her!" she tartly remarked.

"Perhaps he does, and perhaps it's all soft-soap. Don't be stuck up."

"Or, perhaps you want a watch," continued the auctioneer. "Let me show you a reliable time-keeper which cost $8 by the dozen. Who starts it at $1? Ladies and gentlemen, let me hear a bid!"

"That's three times he has called me a lady!" grinned the woman. "I've allus told yer I was just as much a lady as if I lived in the city."

"He's soft-soaping."

"I don't believe it."

"Of course he is. Have you got silks and jewelry and white hands and a gay bonnet? You ain't no lady, and you orter know it!"

"Then you ain't no gentleman!"

"Yes, I am! He bore on when he said it. He said ladies just because that begins the sentence."

"So you don't want a watch?" queried the man on the box. "All right—all right. What you don't want don't buy. Here's a bankrupt stock of table linen, and over there is a box of cowhide boots at your own price. Will the lady step this way while the man examines the boots?"

"There, there," gasped the woman. he means me, and he called me a lady!"

"Yes, and bust his pictur' he called me a man!" growled the husband. "Susan, come along!"

"Where to?"

"Out of this!"

"Oh, no!"

"You jog! If you don't come along you'll foot it home! When an auctioneer begins to soft-soap a gentleman's old woman and insult the gentleman himself it's time to go, towels or no towels!"

"My dear friends—ladies and gentleman—" called the auctioneer, but he was too late. The man marched out, head erect, and shoulders up, and the wife followed with her finger in her mouth and a coy, pleased look on her face.—Detroit Free Press.

Early Forms of Fever and Ague.

In the early days of the country the paroxysms were more distinctly marked than now, and the intermission more distinct also. Thus it was no uncommon thing for persons afflicted with ague to be around and attending to their avocations on their well days. The cold stage continued from half an hour to an hour or more, when the fever came on and continued three or four hours. The sweating stage then set in, and passed off in varied periods, varying from two or three to four or five hours, often leaving the patient apparently well. "Shaking ague" was a common term. The cold stage, or chill, sometimes became so violent as to cause the teeth to chatter, the knees to smite together, and the whole body to shake and quiver as if in convulsions. This type was most easily managed.

The distinctive types were quotidian, or every day ague; tertian, or every-other-day ague; and quartan, as when the attacks came on every fourth day. When the paroxysm occurred twice each day, with the alternate ones lighter, it was a double quotidian; if once one day and two on the alternate day, it was a quotidian and tertian running together. The quartan also occasionally became mixed with the other types. Sometimes either of the types gave way to another and distinct type.

These were the early forms of "fever and ague," or chills and fever, sixty years ago and more. They are scarcely recognized now. A distinctly intermittent case is seldom seen in these years, and an old-time shake not at all. The malarial attacks of the present assume the remittent and continued forms and have difficult and dangerous complications. Why this is so is an inquiry for the medical profession. It may be suggested, however, that the greater severity and persistence of modern cases indicates an increased intensity of the poison.

The treatment of the ague during the pioneer age, which may be fixed from 1800 to about 1825, was almost wholly domestic, especially in the more rural sections of the country. The doctors had little to do with it. There were not many of them, and they were confined to the county seats. The remedies were bitter barks and roots, mostly made into what was called "bitters," by infusing them in whisky. Sometimes sweating and emetics were used with advantage. Charms and amulets, and incantations were, by a few, resorted to, and were actually believed sometimes to be efficacious. As prophylactics, or preventatives, wild cherry bark, dogwood bark, columbo root, and the snake roots, were used as bitters, by infusion in whisky. There were few families who did not have their bitter's bottle, or jug, and drank from it in the morning during the sickly season.

In some localities, where ague was most prevalent, the people so confidently looked for its return in August and September, that they actually took time by the forelock and set their houses in order, so as to be ready to begin to shake when the time came round. The writer recalls a time when, without one exception, every member of his father's family had the ague at the same time. And there were afternoons, when the fever was up, that not one out of a family of eight was able to go four rods to the spring for cold water.—Dr. H. Scott, in Toledo Blade.

—From all accounts, at least five thousand hotels will be built in Georgia this year, each larger than the other.—Atlanta Constitution.

HOME AND FARM.

—Tillage operations tend to increase plant food in the soil.

—Basswood trees which grow rapidly and make beautiful roadside trees are not to be excelled as bee food.—N. Y. Herald.

—The chickens most likely to fatten well are those first hatched in the brood and those with the shortest legs. Long-legged fowls as a rule are by far the most difficult to fatten.—Chicago Journal.

—A good way to extract the juice of beef for an invalid is to broil the beef on a gridiron for a few minutes, and then squeeze the juice from it with a lemonade squeezer; put a little salt with it. This may be given as the sick one prefers, cold or hot, or it may be frozen and given in small lumps.—Exchange.

—To avoid liability to crusting with salt the churning should be done at as low a temperature as it will bear; and by reducing the temperature when the butter begins to form to fifty-four or fifty-five degrees the butter will form in fine granules and be in its purest and best condition. Butter should always be churned and gathered in this way to get the best quality.—The Household.

—The relative profit is much greater from a small flock than a large one, says the Rural Home. The grain farmer, no matter how few his acres, can make money by keeping a few sheep. There is always room for them somewhere, and they consume and turn into money food that otherwise would waste. But he must be careful not to overstock.

—For boiled bread pudding, crumb your stale bread into a pudding-pail, cover with sweet milk and set by the stove to warm and soften. Then to every quart of the milk and bread add two well-beaten eggs, half a cupful of sugar and a handful of raisins, or sweet dried fruit of any kind. Do not have your pail full, as it needs some room to rise. Put the cover on tightly, set into boiling water, and do not allow it to stop boiling until it is done.—N. Y. Post.

—Mutton pie makes a welcome dish for the children's dinner; cold roast or broiled mutton should be used for this purpose. Trim off nearly all the fat, cut the clean meat in small pieces and put it in a pudding-dish; if you have any gravy or soup stock pour that over it; put in a little butter, and season with pepper and salt, and a little parsley chopped fine; cover the top with a thick paste made just as you make baking-powder biscuits; brown nicely in the oven.—Detroit Post.

—Have horse stables warm enough so that the horse will scarcely ever need a blanket. An earth floor is preferable, but if of wood, have the stalls nearly or quite level, and slatted to keep dry. No rack to draw hay from, but a box or manger of medium height in which to insert his head freely, with tubes from above coming into opposite ends for hay and grain. By all means have the room of good height, well lighted and ventilated, windows in front of stalls if possible, with space wide enough for a walk. a desirable access to the stalls when a horse is cast or vicious.—Prairie Farmer.

Forethought in Farming.

Perhaps of all the industrial people farmers exhibit the least forethought in regard to their work. The changing of the seasons warn them to be ready to put in this crop or harvest that; but beyond a little skill in these farm operations, a large proportion of the farmers do not work to the best advantage; and the reason of it is because they do not plan their work previous to its commencement—they have very little method or system, especially about the small things of the farm. If a merchant or a newspaper publisher or a real estate dealer was to be correspondingly heedless in his business, he would become bankrupt in a short time. A constant devising, a shrewd, calculation of the time to be employed in this job or in that, a careful employment of the "slack" days in numerous little important pieces of repairing, hauling, digging, etc., are needed to keep a strong grasp on the farm and not let it get the start of you. The real estate dealer or the average lawyer goes to his office in the morning, attends to his large correspondence, keeps his necessary business engagements (duties as hard in themselves to conduct in an orderly way as are farm operations), and goes home at night unharassed by thoughts of unperformed work that will hinder him in some busy season. It is because they have trained, orderly minds. The farmer may claim that the number of different things on the farm demanding attention is much greater than in any other calling. While this may be disputed, yet even granting it, there yet remains the truth that most farmers do not show an equal amount of administrative ability with the business men of the cities They may be "chock" full of more hard days' work than the city office people, but they can not make the work round up so well, and present so finished an appearance.

Thus how many farmers there are who fail to employ the spare time after corn-husking in attending to such seemingly but by no means unimportant things as mending a harness, repairing a fence or shed, examining the tools and implements, and oiling, painting and mending them if necessary; in looking after the fuel supply for the next year; in digging an ugly-looking stump, or removing a bad heap of stone and rubbish; in beautifying the house and grounds; and in many other matters, some of which, if not attended to then, may be the cause of serious loss of time and a sad outburst of impolite language in the busiest part of the year.

A great mistake lies in supposing that good farm management does not require a thinking, orderly and able mind as well as other pursuits. It is just because the farmers, as a class, are not of that description that they are not adequately represented in our representative halls, and do not seem to wield their proper share of influence. The higher the ideal of agriculture becomes, and it is yearly rising, the more is the fact recognized that it requires no mean order of ability to properly manage a farm. There is room in it for all, and it affords a chance for the development of the higher qualities of the mind.—Lansing Republican.

—They have a peculiar but effective way of adjusting drunken brawls at the new camp Anaconda, in Montana. It is accomplished as follows: When one of a gang fills up and concludes he can whip the whole United States, his most intimate friend takes him out in the rear end of the saloon, "puts a head on him," and then quietly assists him to bed. The remedy is a good one and ought to come into general use.—Chicago Times.

—In a communication to the Academie des Sciences, M. Krechel has drawn attention to a new method of adulterating milk. It consists in adding to it an aqueous solution of glucose having the same density.

Algerian Desert Grass.

If nothing else prospers in Algeria, at least the culture of desert grass seems to promise an increasing source of wealth to the colony. There are two kinds of this alfa grass—the Stipa tenacissima and the Lygeum spartium—both plentiful on the shores of Spain and Algeria. It is computed that a million of hectares of the high plateaux bordering the Sahara are covered with these grasses, not to speak of vast tracts of the Tell. It is only within recent years that the exportation of alfa has reached high figures, in 1881 upward of 200,000 tons being shipped for Europe. The price also has proportionately increased; but not in the manufacture of paper alone is this grass so valuable—various textures are made of it, notably very pretty substantial curtains, sold at a few shillings the pair. The colonists, however, demand greater facilities of transport in order fully to develop this industry, which must still be considered in its early stage. The grass requires no care when once planted, but can only be cut in the third year. Cotton rag is mixed with the fibre in order to afford a softer, more yielding texture.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Cotton Seed Oil.

It is only a very few years since cotton seed was looked upon as waste material, to be put out of the way with as little expense as possible. Great heaps of the seed could be seen near every cotton gin in the South. Scarcely any one thought of or attempted to utilize it. But a great change has recently taken place in regard to the value of this seed, and now it is considered a valuable part of the crop, for it is not only employed as a general fertilizer in many plantations, but thousands of tons are sold at the oil mills, and after the oil is expressed the cake is utilized for feeding almost all kinds of stock. It is shipped not only to all parts of our own country, but large quantities go to Europe. Oil mills are being erected in all the cotton-growing States, and in some quite a large number have been in operation for several years. One firm in Arkansas is reported to have eight mills either finished or in process of erection. One of these, now in full operation at Fort Smith, turns out thirty-six barrels of oil per diem. There is a good demand and at remunerative prices for all the oil and cake that can be produced, and it is likely to continue for many years to come.—N. Y. Sun.

In Court.

"I would not believe that man under oath," said a witness, excitedly.

"Do you know him well?" was asked.

"No; I never spoke to him."

"Do you know that he ever broke an oath?"

"Well, no."

"Then why do you believe that his testimony is unreliable?"

"Because he is the man that comes around every month to inspect my gas meter.—Philadelphia Call.

—The report that a lion was loose in the neighborhood of London, O., turns out to have had this origin: Some waggish fellows at Lafayette, full of sport, made what they call a "bull-fiddle," by stretching a sheepskin over a nail-keg, through which they put a thong of rawhide, and by the use of a bow and resin they could produce the sound which alarmed the people and sounded like a lion's roar. This they carried around at night, and when in a good place gave the fiddle a tuning, sending terror to those who heard its beastly noise.

—A correspondent seeks information as to the origin of the accordion. It dates back to a period as remote as that of the "missing link" between the monkey and man. It is probably an invention of the latter, and a reasonable explanation is that the inventor, after having been driven out of every community into which he wandered, finally laid the responsibility of the invention on the link. This would go far to account for the fact that it has been missing ever since.—New York Herald.

—On a rocky cliff, in the town of Warren, Conn., sixty miles north of Bridgeport, whose summit is 2,000 feet above the level of Long Island Sound, a tower 125 feet high is to be erected, in which is to be placed a powerful telescope. From the summit of the cliff on a clear day a fine view can be had of the surrounding country for a distance of 100 miles. When the tower is erected it is believed that the Brooklyn Bridge, the Palisades of the Hudson, and many other distant points can be seen.—Boston Post.

—An old sportsman gives a great deal of advice to young shooters relative to the things to avoid in handling a gun, and concludes by admonishing them to do their hunting with a base ball bat. There are a good many old hunters who would be more successful if they adopted the suggestion.—Chicago Herald.

THE MARKETS.

CINCINNATI, November 23, 1883.

LIVE STOCK—Cattle—common	$2 00	@ 2 75
Choice butchers	4 00	@ 4 75
HOGS—Common	3 70	@ 4 30
Good packers	4 50	@ 4 75
SHEEP	3 75	@ 4 50
FLOUR—Family	4 50	@ 4 90
GRAIN—Wheat—Longberry red	1 10	@ 1 12
No. 2 red	1 04	@ 1 06
Corn—No. 2 mixed	50¼	@ 50¾
Oats—No. 2 mixed	30¼	@ 31
Rye—No. 2	58½	@ 59
HAY—Timothy No. 1	9 50	@10 00
HEMP—Double dressed	8¼	@
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	11 50	@11 75
Lard—Prime steam	7-55	@
BUTTER—Fancy Dairy	24	@ 25
Prime Creamery	25	@ 34
FRUIT AND VEGETABLES—
Potatoes per bar. from store	1 25	@ 1 30
Apples, prime, per barrel	2 50	@ 3 00
NEW YORK.
FLOUR—State and Western	$2 90	@ 3 40
Good to choice	4 40	@ 7 00
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 spring	1 08	@
No. 2 red	1 09¾	@ 1 10¾
Corn—No. 2 mixed	59½	@ 60¾
Oats—mixed	36	@ 38½
PORK—Mess	12 25	@12 50
CHICAGO.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 50	@ 4 25
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	98	@ 1 00
Corn—No. 2	49½	@ 49¾
Oats—No. 2	29	@ 29½
Rye	57¼	@
PORK—Mess	11 50	@11 60
LARD—Steam	7-60	@ 7-65
BALTIMORE.
FLOUR—Family	$5 00	@ 5 75
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 07½	@ 1 07¾
Corn—mixed	57	@ 58
Oats—mixed	37	@ 39
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	12 75	@
Lard—Refined	9	@
LOUISVILLE.
FLOUR—A No1	$ 4 70	@ 4 75
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red, new	1 02¼	@ 1 03
Corn—mixed	52	@
Oats—mixed	30½	@ 31
PORK—MESS	12 00	@
INDIANAPOLIS.
WHEAT—No. 2. red, new	$ 1 01	@
CORN—mixed	50	@
OATS—mixed	29¾	@
LIVE STOCK—Cattle
Butchers' stock	2 75	@ 3 00
Shipping cattle	5 25	@

A Partially Dead Man.

The Morning Herald, Baltimore, Md., states: Major B. S. White, of this city, describes his miraculous cure as follows: "I have been a partially dead man for ten years. Doctors attributed my sufferings to the enlargement of certain glands. The quantity of medicine I took without relief would be sufficient to set up a first-class apothecary shop. Finally St. Jacobs Oil was recommended. I had my spinal column thoroughly rubbed with it. All those knots, kinks and stiffness have passed away, and I am myself again."

A PAIR of suspenders—The hangman and his assistant.—The Judge.

JOPLIN, MO.—Dr. J. B. Morgan says: "I find that Brown's Iron Bitters gives entire satisfaction to all who use it."

CHICAGO papers call Cincinnati the "Plaster Paris of America."

Our Progress.

As stages are quickly abandoned with the completion of railroads, so the huge, drastic, cathartic pills, composed of crude and bulky medicines, are quickly abandoned with the introduction of Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets," which are sugar-coated, and little larger than mustard seeds, but composed of highly concentrated vegetable extracts. By druggists.

IF you have nothing to do, get it done as quickly as you can.

RHEUMATISM, disordered blood, general debility, and many chronic diseases pronounced incurable, are often relieved by Brown's Iron Bitters."

CAN an upright man be downright honest?—Chicago Tribune.

Tennyson's "May Queen."

Who knows that if the beautiful girl who died so young had been blessed with Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" she might have reigned on many another bright May-day. The "Favorite Prescription" is a certain cure for all those disorders to which females are liable. By druggists.

IS THE black man who runs the three-card game a native of Monte-negro?

FAIRFIELD, IOWA.—Dr. J. L. Myers says: "Brown's Iron Bitters is the best iron preparation I have ever known in my thirty years of practice."

HOW OLD is a tree when it reaches the foli-age?—Merchant Traveler.

I WAS TROUBLED with Chronic Catarrh and gathering in my head, was very deaf at times, had discharges from my ears, and was unable to breathe through my nose. Before the second bottle of Ely's Cream Balm was exhausted I was cured, and to-day enjoy sound health. C. J. CORBIN, 923 Chestnut st., Field Manager, Philadelphia Pub. House, Pa.

BOUND to make a man cross—Getting to the other side of the street.

IF the blood be impoverished, as manifested by pimples, eruptions, ulcers, or running sores, scrofulous tumors, swellings or general debility, take Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery." Sold by druggists.

THE Chicago girl who wears number tens is still able to stand considerable x-her-size.—Boston Traveler.

SWIFT'S SPECIFIC (S. S. S.) has cured me of hereditary Scrofula of the worst type. The medicine is more than you claim for it, and I hope any who doubt will write to me. E. C. HAWES, JR., Clarksville, Ga.

REDDING'S Russia Salve has proved its efficiency by a test of 75 years' constant use. Try it.

I USED Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) for a bad case of Blood Poison from Malaria, and am satisfied that it saved my life, as I was given up to die. C. G. SPENCER,
Sup't Gas Works, Rome, Ga.

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer

Is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from dandruff, restore gray hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which Sulphur, Sugar of Lead and Nitrate of Silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. JOHN D. PARK & SONS, Wholesale Agents, Cincinnati, Ohio, and C. N. CRITTENTON, N. Y.

HIS OWN EXECUTOR.

A Well-Known Gentleman's Philanthrophy and the Commotion Caused by One of His Letters.

[Rochester Democrat and Chronicle.]

We published in our local columns yesterday morning a significant letter from a gentleman known personally or by reputation to nearly every person in the land. We have received a number of letters protesting against the use of our columns for such "palpable frauds and misrepresentations;" therefore, to confirm beyond a doubt the authenticity of the letter, and the genuineness of its sentiments, a reporter of this paper was commissioned to ascertain all the possible facts in the matter. Accordingly he visited Clifton Springs, saw the author of the letter, and with the following result:

Dr. Henry Foster, the gentleman in question, is 63 or 64 years of age and has an extremely cordial manner. He presides as superintendent over the celebrated sanitarium which accommodates over 500 guests and is unquestionably the leading health resort of the country. Several years ago this benevolent man wisely determined to be his own executor, and, therefore turned over this magnificent property worth $300,000 as a free gift to a board of trustees, representing the principal evangelical denominations. Among the trustees are Bishop A. C. Coxe, Protestant Episcopal, Buffalo; Bishop Mathew Simpson, Philadelphia, Methodist Episcopal; President M. B. Anderson, of the University of Rochester; Rev. Dr. Clark, Secretary of the A.B.C.F.M., Boston. The benevolent purpose of the institution is the care: 1st—of evangelical missionaries and their families whose health has been broken in their work. 2d—of ministers, of any denomination, in good standing; 3d—of members of any church; who otherwise would be unable to secure such care and treatment. The current expenses of the institution are met by the receipts from the hundreds of distinguished and wealthy people who every year crowd its utmost capacity. Here come men and women who were once in perfect health, but neglected the first symptoms of disease. The uncertain pains they felt at first were overlooked until their health became impaired. They little realized the danger before them, nor how alarming even trifling ailments might prove. They constitute all classes, including ministers and bishops, lawyers, judges, statesmen, millionaires, journalists, college professors and officials from all parts of the land.

Drawing the morning Democrat and Chronicle from his pocket, the reporter remarked: "Doctor, that letter of yours has created a good deal of talk, and many of our readers have questioned its authenticity."

"To what do you refer?" remarked the doctor.

"Have you not seen the paper?"

"Yes, but I have not had time to read it yet."

The reporter thereupon showed him the letter, which was as follows:

CLIFTON SPRINGS SANITARIUM CO.,
CLIFTON SPRINGS, N.Y., Oct. 11, 1883.

DEAR SIR: I am using Warner's Safe Cure, and I regard it as the best remedy for some forms of kidney disease that we have. I am watching with great care some cases I am now treating with it, and I hope for favorable results.

I wish you might come down yourself, as I would like very much to talk with you about your sterling remedy and show you over our institution.

Yours truly,
[Signed] HENRY FOSTER, M. D.

"I do not see why anybody should be skeptical concerning that letter," remarked the doctor.

"Isn't it unusual for a physician of your standing and influence to commend a proprietary preparation?"

"I don't know how it may be with others, but in this institution we allow no person to dictate to us what we shall use. Our purpose is to cure the sick, and for that work we use anything we know to be valuable. Because I know Warner's Safe Cure is a very valuable preparation, I commend it. As its power is manifested under my use, so shall I add to the completeness of my commendation."

"Have you ever analyzed it, doctor?"

"We always analyze before we try any preparation of which we do not know the constituents. But analysis, you know, only gives the elements; it does not give the all important proportions. The remarkable power of Warner's Safe Cure undoubtedly consists in the proportions according to which its elements are mixed. While there may be a thousand remedies made of the same elements, unless they are put together in proper proportions, they are worthless as kidney and liver preparations.

"I hope some day to meet Mr. Warner personally, and extend fuller congratulations to him on the excellence of his preparations. I have heard much of him as the founder of the Warner Observatory, and as a man of large benevolence. The reputed high character of the man himself gave assurance to me in the first place that he would not put a remedy upon the market that was not trustworthy; and it was a source of a good deal of gratification to me to find out by actual experiment that the remedy itself sustained my impression."

The conclusion reached by Dr. Foster is precisely the same found by Dr. Dio Lewis, Dr. Robert A. Gunn, ex-Surgeon-General Gallagher and others, and proves beyond a doubt, the great efficacy of the remedy which has awakened so much attention in the land and rescued so many men, women and children from disease and death.

DON'T Die in the House. "Rough on Rats," clears out rats, mice, flies, roaches, bed-bugs. 15c.

YOU would use St. Patrick's Salve if you knew the good 'twould do you.

Wells' "Rough on Corns." 15c. Ask for it. Complete, permanent cure. Corns, bunions.

COUGHS, HOARSENESS, SORE THROAT, etc., quickly relieved by BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES. A simple, effectual and superior remedy. Sold only in boxes.

Skinny Men. "Wells' Health Renewer" restores health and vigor, cures Dyspepsia.

Flies, roaches, ants, bed-bugs, rats, mice, crows, cleared out by "Rough on Rats." 15c.

Colden's Liquid Beef Tonic

Cures fever, ague and biliousness. Take Colden's; no other.

Stinging, irritation, all Kidney and Bladder Complaints, cured by "Buchu-Paiba." $1.

EVEN rival manufacturers admit that the best pianos in this or any country are made by Steinway & Sons, New York City.

FIRST effectual, then good to take, then cheap—Piso's Cure for Consumption.

ST. JACOBS OIL
TRADE MARK

THE GREAT
GERMAN REMEDY
FOR PAIN.
CURES
Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica
Lumbago, Backache, Headache, Toothache,
Sore Throat, Swellings, Sprains, Bruises,
Burns, Scalds, Frost Bites,
And All Other BODILY PAINS and ACHES.
Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere. Fifty Cents a bottle. Directions in 11 Languages.
THE CHARLES A. VOGELER CO.,
(Successors to A. VOGELER & CO.) Baltimore, Md., U.S.A.

CATARRH ELY'S CREAM BALM
when applied by the finger into the nostrils, will be absorbed, effectually cleansing the head of catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions. It allays inflammation, protects the membrane of the nasal passages from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores taste and smell. A few applications relieve. A thorough treatment will positively cure. Agreeable to use.
HAY-FEVER
Send for circular. Price 50 cents by mail or at druggists. Ely Brothers, Druggists, Owego, N.Y.

HOSTETTER'S
CELEBRATED STOMACH
BITTERS
Though shaken in every joint and fiber with fever and ague, or bilious remittent, the system may yet be freed from the malignant virus with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Protect the system against it with this beneficent anti-spasmodic, which is furthermore a supreme remedy for liver complaint, constipation, dyspepsia, debility, rheumatism, kidney troubles and other ailments. For sale by all Druggists and Dealers generally.

DR. HORNE'S ELECTRIC BELT
Cures Nervousness, Rheumatism, Paralysis, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Kidney, Spine and Liver diseases, Gout, Asthma, Heart Disease, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Erysipelas, Catarrh, Piles, Epilepsy, Impotency, Prolapsus Uteri Diabetes, etc. RUPTURE CURED BY ELECTRICITY. Only Electric Truss in the world. Agents wanted in every town. Send for Circular. Dr. W. J. HORNE, Inventor, 191 Wabash Av. Chicago, Ill.

FRINGED X-MAS CARDS
Fringed Christmas CARDS. We will send six Christmas Cards, beautiful colors, trimmed with silk fringe, no two alike, by mail, post paid, for 38 cts. William M. Donaldson & Co., Cincinnati, O.

Lady Agents can secure permanent employment and good salary selling Queen City Skirt and Stocking Supporters, etc. Sample outfit Free. Address Queen City Suspender Co., Cincinnati, O.

2806 Lbs. W'ght Of Two Ohio IMPROVED CHESTER HOGS, Send for description of this famous breed, Also Fowls, L. B. SILVER, CLEVELAND, O.

DYKE'S BEARD ELIXIR
Forces luxuriant Mustache, Whiskers, or hair on bald heads in 20 to 30 days. No injury. Easily used. Beats the world. 3 or 4 Pkgs. does the work. Will prove it or forfeit $100.00. Price per Package with directions sealed and post paid 25 cents, 3 for 60c. stamps or silver. L. L. SMITH & CO., Agents, Palatine, Ill.

CINCINNATI COLLEGE OF MUSIC and School of Oratory, 305 Race. Home comforts, parental care, best instruction, boarding department. For circulars add. Mrs. D. N. GEPPERT, Cincinnati, O.

PATENTS promptly procured in all countries. American Patent Agency, 188 Fifth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

GROCERS My immense success in SELLING CRACKERS has been in making only the best. Once used always used. Send for samples. H. L. BAUMAN, Dayton, O.

AGENTS Wanted. Squatter Sovereign, or Kansas in the '50's. Send 40 cts. in stamps for outfit. COBURN & NEWMAN PUB. CO., Chicago.

HAIR Wholesale and retail. Send for price-list. Goods sent C. O. D. Wigs made to order. E. BURNHAM, 71 State Street, Chicago.

FREE By return mail. Full Description Moody's New Tailor System of Dress Cutting MOODY & CO, Cincinnati, O.

$250 A MONTH. Agents Wanted. 90 best selling articles in the world. 1 sample FREE. Address JAY BRONSON, DETROIT, MICH.

AGENTS make money selling our Family Medicines; no capital required STANDARD CURE CO., 197 Pearl St., NEW YORK.

$65 A MONTH and BOARD for three live Young Men or Ladies, in each county. Address P. W. ZIEGLER & CO., Philadelphia.

Young Men learn TELEGRAPHY here and we will give you a situation. Circulars free. VALENTINE BROS., Janesville, Wis.

OPIUM and WHISKY HABITS cured at home without pain. Book of particulars sent free. B. M. WOOLLEY, M. D., Atlanta, Ga.

AGENTS Coin Money by selling Dr. Chase's Family Physician and Second Receipt Book. $2. Address A. W. HAMILTON & CO., Ann Arbor, Mich.

Good Pay for Agents. $100 to $200 per mo. made selling our fine Books & Bibles. Write to J. C. McCurdy & Co., Cincinnati, O.

$4,444 a Year at home. Terms and costly outfit free. Address H. A. ELLS & Co., Chicago.

Sure Cure Epilepsy or Fits in 24 hours. Free to poor. DR. KRUSE, 2844 Arsenal St., St. Louis, Mo.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STINSON & Co., Portland, Me.

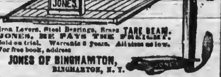
$72 A WEEK. $12 a day at home easily made. Costly outfit free. Address TRUE & Co., Augusta, Me.

Mason & Hamlin Organs.
New Illustrated Catalogue, (40 pp. 4to) for season of 1883-4, including many new styles; best assortment of the best and most attractive organs we have ever offered, and at lowest prices, $22 to $600, for cash, easy payments or rented. Sent free.
MASON & HAMLIN ORGAN & PIANO CO.
Boston, 154 Tremont St.; New York, 46 East 14th St.; Chicago, 149 Wabash Ave.

AURORA ILL. CANCER INSTITUTE. Established, 1872; Incorporated, 1880. For the Cure of Cancers, Tumors, Ulcers, Scrofula and SKIN DISEASES, without the use of knife or LOSS OF BLOOD, and little pain. For INFORMATION, CIRCULARS AND REFERENCES, address DR. F. L. POND, Aurora, Kane Co., Ill.

SHARP PAINS Crick, Sprains, Wrenches, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Pleurisy Pains, Stitch in the Side, Backache, Swollen Joints, Heart Disease, Sore Muscles, Pain in the Chest, and all pains and aches either local or deep-seated are instantly relieved and speedily cured by the well-known Hop Plaster. Compounded, as it is, of the medicinal virtues of fresh Hops, Gums, Balsams and Extracts, it is indeed the best pain-killing, stimulating, soothing and strengthening Porous Plaster ever made. Hop Plasters are sold by all druggists and country stores. 25 cents or five for $1.00. Mailed on receipt of price. Hop Plaster Co., Proprietors and Manufacturers, Boston, Mass. HOP PLASTER

☞ Coated tongue, bad breath, sour stomach and liver disease cured by Hawley's Stomach and Liver Pills, 25 cts.



Iron Levers, Steel Bearings, Brass TARE BEAM. JONES, HE PAYS THE FREIGHT. Sold on trial. Warrants 5 years. All sizes as low. For free book, address
JONES OF BINGHAMTON,
BINGHAMTON, N. Y.

I CURE FITS!
When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post-Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you.
Address DR. H. G. ROOT, 183 Pearl St., New York.

The Golden Prize for 1884
Is now ready and will be sent free to any one on receipt of a stamp for postage. The book contains numerous engravings, and such valuable information as every lady and gentleman ought to know. This book will also show you how to become the owner of many valuable articles without costing you a cent, such as Gold and Silver Watches, Clocks, Organs, Sewing Machines, all kinds of Silver Ware, &c. Address F. GLEASON & Co., 46 Summer St., Boston, Mass.

ABSOLUTELY THE BEST. WILSON'S LIGHTNING SEWER!
Two thousand stitches a minute. The only absolutely first-class Sewing Machine in the world. Sent on trial. Warranted 5 years. Send for Illustrated Catalogue and Circular. Agents Wanted. THE WILSON SEWING MACHINE CO., Chicago or New York.

CHRISTMAS ENTERTAINMENTS DECOR. SONG. ENTERTAINMENTS GIFTS.
A-A CHRISTMAS ENTERTAINMENTS. Suggestions for Decorations, Entertainments and Gifts. A collection of suggestions from leading Sunday-school workers in various parts of the country, containing something of interest for every Sunday-school superintendent. Nothing like it ever issued before. Price, 25c. Will send free to any one sending us a list of all the Sunday-school Superintendents in the place. DAVID C. COOK, 46 Adams street, Chicago, Ill.

Rupture!
"WHITE'S PATENT LEVER TRUSS" is a perfect instrument for the cure of Hernia. The use of steel springs, so hurtful, is avoided. An inward and upward power is obtained at the Spot where it is needed. No pressure on the back. Pamphlets free. Special rates to the trade. Address
WHITE'S PATENT LEVER TRUSS CO., 711 Broadway

CONSUMPTION.
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address.
DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., New York.

ROOFING. TIN PLATES, SHEET IRON,
Sheet Copper, and Brass Wire, Rivets, &c. Fine Solder and Genuine Babbitt Metal. Full information about qualities given.
MERCHANT & CO., 521 Cherry Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

AGENTS WANTED EVERYWHERE to sell the best Family Knitting Machine ever invented. Will knit a pair of stockings with HEEL and TOE complete in twenty minutes. It will also knit a great variety of fancy-work for which there is always a ready market. Send for circular and terms to the Twombly Knitting Machine Co., 163 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

25 PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 100

"THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST." SAW MILLS, ENGINES THRESHERS, Horse Powers,
(For all sections and purposes.) Write for Free Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

If and If.

"If you are suffering from poor health or languishing on a bed of sickness, take cheer, if you are simply ailing, or if you feel weak and dispirited, without clearly knowing why, Hop Bitters will surely cure you."

"If you are a Minister, and have overtaxed yourself with your pastoral duties, or a Mother, worn out with care and work, or a man of business or laborer weakened by the strain of your everyday duties, or a man of letters, toiling over your midnight work, Hop Bitters will surely strengthen you."

"If you are suffering from over eating or drinking, any indiscretion or dissipation, or are young and growing too fast, as is often the case."

"Or if you are in the workshop, on the farm, at the desk, anywhere, and feel that your system needs cleansing, toning, or stimulating, without intoxicating, if you are old, blood thin and impure, pulse feeble, nerves unsteady, faculties waning, Hop Bitters is what you need to give you new life, health, and vigor."

If you are costive or dyspeptic, or suffering from any other of the numerous diseases of the stomach or bowels, it is your own fault if you remain ill.

If you are wasting away with any form of Kidney disease, stop tempting death this moment, and turn for a cure to Hop Bitters.

If you are sick with that terrible sickness Nervousness, you will find a "Balm in Gilead" in Hop Bitters.

If you are a frequenter, or a resident of a miasmatic district, barricade your system against the scourge of all countries—malaria, epidemic, bilious and intermittent fevers—by the use of Hop Bitters.

If you have rough, pimply, or sallow skin, bad breath, Hop Bitters will give you fair skin, rich blood, the sweetest breath, and health. $500 will be paid for a case they will not cure or help.

That poor, bedridden, invalid wife, sister, mother, or daughter, can be made the picture of health by a few bottles of Hop Bitters costing but a trifle.

DEMOREST'S ILLUSTRATED MONTHLY. Yearly subscription, $2.00. Or send fifty cents in stamps for three numbers. The Model Parlor Magazine of the world, combining the essentials of all others. The increasing popularity of Demorest's Monthly Magazine, a popularity extending over nineteen years, is ample proof that each succeeding year finds it improved in its vitality, beauty and attractiveness; thus meriting the enthusiastic encomiums bestowed upon it by its wide circle of intelligent and critical readers. The peculiar features of this Magazine render it absolutely indispensable in the family circle. Its mission is to refine, elevate and instruct. Not only does it show how home can be beautified and adorned, but it points out the way by which the qualities of head and heart can be so cultivated that they will shed around the beneficent light of intellectual and moral beauty. Thus it is a safe family guide, a counselor and friend. So varied and instructive are its departments, combining, as they do, Literature, Art, Architecture, Poetry, Floriculture, House and Home Matters, Work Table, Fashions, Editorials on Topics of the Day, Kitchen, Ladies' Club, Reviews of New Books, that it forms a valuable compendium of desirable and useful information for everybody. Its Literary Department is richly stored with Serials, Shorter Tales, Biographical and Historical Sketches, Essays, Editorials, Poems and Miscellaneous Articles, from the pens of the best writers; thus furnishing the most choice and popular literature of the day. Its Artistic Department possesses unusual interest. It is illustrated with beautiful Art Pictures in Oil of rare delicacy of finish, or well executed Steel and other Engravings of celebrated pictures by world-renowned artists of ancient and modern times, and Fashion Illustrations which, for beauty, variety and reliability, are not equaled by one of any magazine in the world. Its Scientific, Architectural, Floricultural, Household and Fashion Departments are equally full and attractive; the whole forming a Magazine which most admirably combines the useful and ornamental, the instructive and entertaining, and which for beauty, utility, originality and cheapness is without a peer in the field that it occupies. Demorest's Monthly Magazine can be purchased of any Bookseller or Newsdealer, or Railroad Station; price Twenty Cents, or from the publisher, W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, 17 East 14th St., New York. Yearly, Two Dollars. Now is the time to subscribe.

VIGOR,
HEALTH
AND LIFE
Is found in the Great Modern Discovery,
DR. SCOTT'S
Coca, Beef and Iron
(With Phosphorus.)
Possessing marvelous curative virtues in all forms of Nervous Debility, Brain, Heart and Nervous Diseases, Dyspepsia, Weak Lungs, Impoverishment of the Blood, Incipient Paralysis, Nervous Headache, Sleeplessness, Convulsions, St. Vitus' Dance, Opium Habit, Alcoholism, Kidney, Bladder and Urinary Weakness, Nervous Weakness and Losses, Prostatitis or otherwise, and all ailments brought about by excesses that exhaust the Force and Energy of the Brain and Nervous System. Sold by all Druggists at $1 per bottle; 6 Bottles, $5.
JOHN D. PARK & SONS, General Agents, Cincinnati, O.
☞ In obscure and complicated diseases requiring skill and experience, consult DR. SCOTT, 518 Wyandotte street, Kansas City, Mo.
Send stamp for the Messenger of Health, and read of wonderful cures effected by Coca, Beef and Iron.

AGENTS WANTED To sell the PIONEER HISTORY OF AMERICA, by A. L. MASON and PROF. J. C. RIDPATH. 1032 Imperial Octavo Pages. 110 magnificent illustrations. Specimen Pages FREE. JONES BROS. & CO., Pub., Cincinnati, O.

It is a well-known fact that most of the Horse and Cattle Powder sold in this country is worthless; that Sheridan's Condition Powder is absolutely pure and very valuable. Nothing on Earth will make hens lay like Sheridan's Condition Powder. Dose, one teaspoonful to each pint of food. It will also prevent and cure CHICKEN CHOLERA, Hog Cholera, &c. Sold everywhere, or sent by mail for 25 cents in stamps. Also furnished in large cans, for breeders' use, price $1.00; by mail, $1.20. Circulars sent FREE. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.
MAKE HENS LAY

THE HARD-WORKING MAN.

He was a hard-working man, and for a good many years he had been working twice as hard as any man ought to work.

He said he had a splendid constitution, and that he could stand it.

He forgot that as years passes on the waste of the system is much greater than in youth, while the repair of it is less.

He became weak, debilitated, nervous, and despondent. He regarded the future with dread, and said he had worked himself into an untimely grave.

But he was not taken to the cemetery at all. Instead of that, a good friend brought him some Brown's Iron Bitters.

He began to pick up strength. That was what he wanted. Brown's Iron Bitters enriched his failing blood and put new life into him. It toned up his digestive organs so that his food began to nourish him and do him good. Most heartily does he recommend Brown's Iron Bitters. 13

For Two Generations
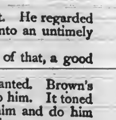
The good and staunch old stand-by, MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT, has done more to assuage pain, relieve suffering, and save the lives of men and beasts than all other liniments put together. Why? Because the Mustang penetrates through skin and flesh to the very bone, driving out all pain and soreness and morbid secretions, and restoring the afflicted part to sound and supple health.



For full Particulars write The Swift Specific Co. Atlanta Ga.

DRY TETTER.
For years I was afflicted with Dry Tetter of the most obstinate type. Was treated by many of the best physicians; took quantities of mercury, potash and arsenic, which, instead of curing the Tetter, crippled me up with mineral poison and rheumatism. The Tetter continued to grow worse, and the itching almost made me crazy. In this condition I was induced to take Swift's Specific, and the result was as astonishing as it was gratifying. In a few months the Tetter was entirely well, the Mercurial Poisoning all out of my system and I was a well man—and due only to Swift's Specific. All like sufferers should take it.
JAMES DUNNING, Louisville, Ky.
Our treatise on Blood and Skin Diseases mailed free to applicants. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO.,
Drawer 3, Atlanta, Ga.

PILES "Anakesis" gives instant relief, and is an infallible cure for Piles. Price $1 from druggists, or sent prepaid by mail. Samples free. Ad. "ANAKESIS," Makers, Box 2416, New York.

$66 A WEEK in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. Addr's H. Hallett & Co., Portland, Me.

PATENTS NO PATENT, NO PAY! R. S. & A. P. LACEY, Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C. Full instructions and Hand-Book of Patents sent free.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOLUME IX. BURLINGTON, KY., WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 5, 1883. NUMBER 6.

WHAT FOUR MAIDENS CAUGHT.

Four marrying maidens summering went,
Each cast her little net;
Returning, they relate to "Ma"
What fortune each has met.

"O, ma!" said intellectual Jane,
"I caught a college man;
No money—but his stock of brains
Would load a caravan."

"O, ma!" remarked young Sophy Ann,
"I caught a splendid dude;
No brains—but lots and lots of cash,
And bluest sort of blood."

"O, ma!" said delicate Louise,
"I gained some strength and health;
I also caught a journalist
Whose brains will gain him wealth."

"No time to fish had I," said Nan
(Some thirty-four years old),
"Yet staying out to watch these girls
I caught a dreadful cold."
—Boston Budget.

STRASBURG CLOCK.

A Wonderful Piece of Mechanism—Evolutions of Its Automata—The Savior and the Twelve Apostles—A Life-Like Chanticleer.

The Strasburg clock has always had a prominent place in all books on the "wonders of mechanics" and has been written and talked about so much that one has an idea that it is one of the most wonderful pieces of mechanism ever put together by the hand of man. And I guess it is tolerably complicated. What with indicating the seconds, minutes, hours, days of the week and months, and setting in motion a complete planetarium and perpetual calendar, besides holding a sort of a marionette show once in the twenty-four hours, one must, perforce, admit that the man who built it must have had his wits about him and was not to be sneezed at as a mechanic. But then, one hears comparatively little about the really wonderful parts of the clock. Writers some way or other, have always sort of slurred over the planetariums, calendars and such things, and have given their whole attention to the automata which go through their evolutions at noon every day. So that one more than expects to see a wonderful exhibition when the hour and minute hands point to the figure twelve on its dial, and gives hardly a thought or a glance to the rest of the clock. What a glorious thing it would be if one had this clock set up in his hallway. Besides having the correct time, he would be totally independent of almanacs and the like, in keeping track of moonlight nights and the day of the week and month. The only thing needed to make the clock a perfect substitute for a modern almanac would be a patent-medicine and ancient-joke attachment. But then, Yankee ingenuity would soon apply these if the happy owner desired it. Besides all these advantages and disadvantages, the clock is so constructed that all of its different parts regulate themselves and also adapt themselves to the revolutions of the seasons for an almost unlimited number of years. So that, with this clock in its possession, a family would be safe from those periodical disturbances which call up so much ill feeling when all hands start in to regulate the clock. It would soon pay for itself in the saving which it would accomplish in ill temper and family jars. But if it ever broke down, as clocks often do, it would bankrupt anybody but a millionaire to get it mended.

THE CLOCK AND ITS PREDECESSORS.

The clock, as it now stands, is not the original one; in fact it is the grandson—or, if one wants to be a little Germanized in his expressions, the granddaughter—of the Strasburg horological pioneer. The present clock was begun in 1838 and was finished four years later. The man who had the matter in hand rejoiced in the uncommon name of Schwilgue. The immediate predecessor of the present clock stopped short in 1789, after a long run of 218 years. It was constructed by a man who was compelled to go through life bearing the name of Dasypodius. The grandmother of the present clock was ticking merrily away and numbering the life seconds of men who lived and died in the thirteenth century. Just when it was built no one seems to have any settled idea; and the name of the maker is also lost, though if one may judge by his successors' queer names, it is safe to say that his cognomen must have been a regular jaw-dislocator and tongue-paralyzer. The present clock, though the lineal descendant of the two preceding ones, contains but little of the works of these two—which, one may well suppose, were pretty well worn out by their long use, as well as being, in all probability, tolerably clumsy in the beginning. Only a few of the less important wheels which were contained in the handiwork of Mr. Dasypodius still do duty in that of Mr. Schwilgue; while the case, with the exception of a few decorations and a couple of paintings, is entirely new—that is, new in 1838. So that when one wonders at the skill of that master workman who constructed so wonderful a piece of machinery so long ago, when man, compared to the craftsmen of to-day, is supposed to have been a sort of mechanical barbarian, he wonders at something which has no foundation in fact and wastes lots of time in sentimentalizing.

WAITING TO SEE THE AUTOMATA.

The little wooden images connected with the clock and going through their performance in illustration of a Biblical event, and, allegorically, the flight of time, have really given the Strasburg clock its reputation. Every writer and observer has followed the fashion set by the first one who wrote about them—to whom in all probability, they did appear wonderful—and praises their evolutions without stint. So that when one hears or thinks of the "Strasburg clock" he has a mental picture of a splendid pageant of automatons, which are so skillfully and deftly constructed and whose every motion is so perfectly natural as to almost deceive even the most observant. That is, I had that sort of a mental picture, and when one goes to see the clock he goes to see the wonderful pageant and does not think a thought nor care a rap about the rest of it. That is, I went there with that idea, and I stepped into the dimly lighted transept of the great cathedral where the clock is and found myself on the outskirts of a large crowd of tourists of almost all nationalities, who stood with uncovered heads in the cool darkness of the place, anxiously waiting for the moment to arrive when, high noon having struck, they could see with their own eyes the things which had caused them so much wonderment when read from the pages of a book. It is rather an impressive moment, that's a fact. One goes there with his mind full of expectation, hardly knowing what to look for; stands there on the outskirts of an expectant crowd, hushed and silent save for now and then a shuffling of feet, as some tired pilgrim changes his position to rest himself, a suppressed whisper from some female pilgrim who can't keep still any longer, or a half-smothered sigh from some tourist who wonders when it will begin; stands therein the enshrouding gloom of the place, not knowing at what instant the performance may begin and catch him blinded with the darkness so that he can see nothing of it; stands there for long minutes, his eyes gradually becoming used to the gloom until the indistinct outlines of the dim shape in front of him gradually resolve themselves and he sees the famous clock in all its particulars, his eager eyes glancing hastily over it and taking it all in. But there is nothing very wonderful about the outside of the clock and one feels a little disappointed at the twelve or fifteen feet high and eight or ten broad structure, its front adorned with [illegible] dim decorations and cut up with [illegible]ous nooks, crannies, pigeon-holes and galleries and with several wooden figures five or six inches high stuck around over it. At one side stands a tower surmounted by the figure of a rooster—"chanticleer" the guide-book calls him—and containing the weights which give motive power to the whole mechanism. On the front of the main edifice, some three or four feet from the ground, are the dials which indicate the seconds, minutes, hours, days of the week and month and the movements of the planets.

THE HOUR OF TWELVE.

When the hour of noon comes there is a preliminary whirr of machinery set in motion and a silvery-toned bell begins to strike the four quarters of the hour. At each stroke of the bell the figure of an angel raises a hammer held in his right hand and strikes a bell held in the left. At first glance one would suppose the sounds came from the bell the angel holds, but this turns out to be an illusion, for one soon notices that the angel's hammer does not quite touch his bell when he makes his stroke, and that the sound and the stroke do not quite correspond in time. In short the angel's bell is a dummy bell and a wooden dummy bell at that. This discovery sort of rouses one's suspicions, and he notices that the angel's movements are stiff, hesitating and "woodeny," so to speak, and do not at all represent the movement of a human being, unless it be a human being badly stiffened by rheumatism. One comes to the conclusion that the angel is badly in need of oiling. At the side of the angel is the figure of a Genius, which, as soon as the fourth stroke comes from the bell, stiffly and jerkily turns over an hour-glass and resumes his former immovable position beside it. Higher up is the figure of Death represented by a skeleton, and around this skeleton are grouped figures representing Boyhood, Youth, Manhood and Old Age—the four quarters of the hour. The skeleton has a thigh-bone in his right hand, and with this bone—the head of it—he is supposed to strike the hours upon a bell at his side, but he really doesn't do anything of the kind. His bell is also a wooden one and his bone does not reach the bell by an eighth of an inch when he aims those slow, hesitating, jerky blows of his at it. Besides he gets a little premature once in awhile and strikes his bell before the real one goes off; at other times he is a little behind hand and brings his bone down an instant after the real bell has sounded. It would be superfluous to say that the skeleton not only needs greasing but also regulating.

THE SAVIOR AND HIS APOSTLES.

While the skeleton is going through with his dumb show and pretending to strike the twelve strokes of noon a door at the upper part of the clock suddenly pops open and a figure of the Savior appears and moves stiffly and jerkily forward a few inches. Then at the left hand of this figure another door opens with a snap and a figure of one of the Apostles appears. He springs forward a few inches, stops as if surprised to find himself in the presence of so many profane tourists, hesitates a single instant, as if debating whether to retreat or put a bold face on the matter and go ahead, finally resolves on the latter course, makes another jerk forward and advances unsteadily until opposite the Savior. Here he makes a full stop, turns suddenly with a snap which would decapitate a living man, faces the Savior, makes a clumsy movement which might pass for an obeisance if one did not know any better, receives the stiffly given benediction, jerks himself around to the left, resumes his halting, rheumatic journey toward an open door on the Savior's left and disappears. In the meantime another figure of another Apostle has followed that of the first, goes through with the same jerky, uncertain pantomime and takes his exit in the same rheumatic manner. So it goes on until all of the Twelve Apostles have passed in review. Then, the door having slammed behind the last Apostle, the figure of the Savior raises his wooden arms in a very wooden way, bestows a blessing on the assembled tourists—most of whom are sadly in need of a real one—and is whisked jerkily away. I hope that no one will accuse me of irreverence or blasphemy if I suggest that it would be a fine idea to extend the lubricating of the figures on the clock so as to take in at least the Twelve Apostles.

THE CHANTICLEER.

When the figure of the Apostle Peter appears the chanticleer on the summit of the weight-tower begins to bestir himself. He raises his head, ruffles the feathers on his neck in a very natural manner, claps his wings over his face until the whole cathedral re-echoes with the sound, claps them three separate, distinct and deliberate times, and proceeds to crow. His head goes far back, his breast protrudes, his beak opens to its widest extent, his white tongue shows plainly and he delivers his crow from out "his lofty and shrill-sounding throat" with that peculiar forward duck of the head one sees in the living barnyard champion. Twice does he repeat his crow, with all the accessories, and a pretty fair sort of a crow it is, too, even if it does sound a little like the first untutored attempts of the aspiring cockerel. But there is a peculiarity about him which strikes the observer as being rather queer. He goes through all the motions, but the crow does not sound until he is half-way through, and it continues an instant after he has resumed his position of repose. In short, the chanticleer is a dummy, too, and his crow comes, not out of his throat, but from an arrangement somewhere within the clock. He does not need greasing, but a little regulating would not hurt him. I know that it is rank heresy to talk of the famous "Strasburg clock" in such a plain, matter-of-fact way, but Californians are generally matter-of-fact people, and if there ever was a true-born Californian and one proud of the fact that one is the writer.—Strasburg Cor. San Francisco Chronicle.

The Growing Child.

The discussion of the formation and development of character can not be otherwise than interesting to the earnest mothers who turn to this column, and who must daily have this question in their own minds while bringing up their families. None more than they feel the need of wisdom to direct, of patience to labor untiringly and to wait, of well-balanced judgment and impartial decision in the duties and responsibilities resting upon them. So we offer no apology for presenting a few thoughts on a subject, trite indeed, but in the nature of things as fresh as each day's need and incapable of being worn out. Are we not all children? Are not the most "grown up" of us still forming and developing character? Still trying to "walk by the same rule and mind the same thing" as when our feet first sought the paths of virtue. Must we not still keep "chiseling away to keep the fine lines fine," to keep the inscriptions on our souls clear cut and clean from the mosses that custom and carelessness cause to grow over them?

We all know that the man who habitually and from principle speaks the truth believes that there may be truth-speaking people in the world beside himself. The student of human nature at once writes down one who is always accusing others of falsehood as incapable himself of adhering to the truth; one who is always suspecting the purity of others is himself impure. The honest man believes other men may be honest, while the thief doubts everybody. And this principle applies to every one of the virtues and vices. We are always ready to believe of others what we know to be true of ourselves. The liar will find excuses for his lying, the thief for stealing, and even the murderer thinks his crime ought to be condoned. No sooner has a man entered upon an evil course than he tries to excuse or justify himself, or palliate his misdoing. After a time his conscience becomes seared, and he rests easy in opinions that are conformed to his character.

A child that is taught and trained to tell the truth, to keep the Sabbath, to refrain from taking things that do not belong to him, to render unquestioning and ready obedience to his parents, reverence to the name and worship of God, will have very positive opinions concerning the right and wrong of these things. He can't help himself. His character forms his opinions. "Even a child is known by his doings, whether his work be pure, and whether it be right." Just here comes in the work of the father and mother, the teacher, the guardian. Many parents say, "O, I hope when John grows up he'll see the right way and come out all straight." But when John grows up, his character be will formed, and he will see the moral truth in the light of his character. Or, if he sees it in its true light, he may be compelled to say with Cicero, "I see the right and approve it, but I pursue the wrong."

Says one: "This child was born with a proclivity for theft, for falsehood, for anger, and can these original tendencies be taken out of him?" Perhaps not entirely, but right alongside these evil tendencies may be planted germs of principle, of impulse and action that shall by proper cultivation develop and overshadow and neutralize the evil tendencies. A great ambition will lift a man out of a thousand narrownesses and meannesses. A great love will consume in its fire the roots even of selfishness. Acquisitiveness may be checked by the cultivation of benevolence; exact conformity of words to facts may be taught in a great variety of ways; and as a failure to speak the exact truth is the commonest vice of childhood (and of all morally weak persons) it may be well to enlarge here on methods of teaching children to speak the truth. In the first place, the parent must set the example. If there are degrees in wickedness, it is more wicked to lie to a child than to an adult, yet many parents constantly deceive and prevaricate when dealing with their children. In the second place, the first and smallest departure from the truth in the child must be noticed and corrected, gently, kindly and from high moral conviction. The child should never be driven to tell an untruth by fear, and should in every case be made to know that his untruths do not in the least deceive. Learning to read with perfect accuracy will help a child tell the exact truth, because it will form in him the habit of calling words what they are, and train him in observing distinctions between things that are different, and between things that are similar but not identical. Teachers will observe that children who are careful to speak the truth are always better readers and better scholars than those whose word can not be depended on. Holding children to a high standard of recitation in their various studies aids in forming the habit of veracity.

It is only by the utmost painstaking, continued day after day and year after year, that great virtues grow from little seeds and great vices are choked, little by little, till they are finally extirpated. How long the labor, but how noble the reward! "He that goeth forth and weepeth, bearing precious seed, shall doubtless come again with rejoicing, bringing his sheaves with him."—N. Y. Tribune.

Our Young Folks.

HER MAJESTY.

She wears a royal, golden crown,
Our little, laughing, shy-faced queen,
The clust'ring curls o'er eyes of brown
Are bright as summer starlight's sheen.

She sways a scepter o'er us all,
And we obey each proud command;
For we are held in slavery's thrall
By that imperial, dimpled hand.

Her robes of state are pure as snow,
In every heart she finds a throne.
In all the land she has no foe;
The name of rebel is unknown.

Her loyal subjects, low and high,
Full many a costly tribute bring;
The glories of her kingdom, I,
Her humble poet-laureate, sing.

Around my neck her soft arms twine,
My song is smothered in her curls;
Her sweet, fresh lips are pressed to mine.
Oh, Baby—little queen of girls!
—Golden Days.

DOWN CELLAR.

Once, not very long ago, little Tommy Tucker cried because he couldn't have a whole mince pie and a big piece of cheese for his supper.

"Jack Horner did," he pouted.

"Then Jack had the stomach-ache afterwards," said Mamma Tucker. "You'd have to take castor oil, Tommy. How would you like that?"

But Tommy didn't have to take castor oil, because he didn't have the pie; and because he did'nt have the pie he got up in his high chair behind the door and cried as loud as he could cry. Wasn't he a foolish little boy?—because crying wouldn't help things a bit, you know.

After a while Tommy began to understand that, so he stopped crying and began to think, with his lips pouted out and a scowl on his face; and he thought he would go away and stay so that Mamma Tucker would think he was lost, and then she would feel, oh, dreadfully; and the next thing would be a mince pie for his supper.

"I'll go up to Uncle Dar's," said Tommy; but then he thought they would find him there, first thing. Besides, it was cold and stormy.

"I'll go down cellar and hide in the brick closet," said Tommy, then; and there was just where he did go, creeping down the stairs as easy as a mouse. He didn't believe anybody could hear him; but somebody did. Somebody saw him, too. It was Papa Tucker, who was stopping a leak in the cistern.

It was very dark in the brick closet, because there wasn't any way for the light to get in when Tommy had shut the little door behind him. The brick closet was made in one of the three great chimneys, under the parlor fire-place. Sometimes pies and cakes were kept there; but the pies and cakes and Tommy didn't happen in the closet at the same time. That was a trial, but Tommy didn't have a great while to think about it. The floor of the closet was hard, but Tommy was sleepy—it was past his bed-time—and while he was wondering why Mamma Tucker didn't come to find him, he went fast asleep.

I will tell you the reason Tommy Tucker's mamma didn't wring her hands and go looking up-stairs and down-stairs for her little boy, when she found he wasn't in his high chair behind the door. It was because Papa Tucker had seen Tommy and heard him; and knew just where he was.

"We'll have to teach him a little lesson," said Papa Tucker. So he didn't go to bed when everybody else did, but locked the cellar door and sat down before the fire to read, right over Tommy's poor little sleepy head.

By and by Tommy waked up. At first he couldn't think where he was, but pretty soon he remembered. Poor little Tommy Tucker! He was so hungry he didn't know what to do—because he hadn't had his supper, you know; and he ached dreadfully, the floor was so hard. But the floor didn't seem so hard to Tommy as the thought that his mamma hadn't tried to find him—nobody had tried to find him. And they had all gone to bed, and left him alone; he knew they had gone to bed—everything was so still.

Tommy began to cry again.

"Oh dear, dear me!" he wailed. "I wish I didn't be down here—I do!" But wishing, all alone, doesn't do any more good than crying; and may be Tommy wouldn't have done anything but wish, if he hadn't just at that minute heard a little rustle somewhere around—anyway he thought he did; and a rustle in a cellar where there isn't anything to rustle, you know, is a dreadful thing. So Tommy Tucker thought.

"Oh dear," he cried again; and he pushed open the closet door and went out and felt along in the dark to the cellar stairs; and he went up the cellar stairs and tried to open the door, which was locked, as I have already told you.

How Tommy screamed when he found he couldn't get out himself!

"Papa! mamma! O mamma!"

And, of course, then Papa Tucker came in haste to unlock the door.

"Why, Tommy," said he, "how came you here?"

"I—I was down in the brick closet," said Tommy, with a sob; "and I was scared—orfle scared. And I want a piece of bread and butter, papa—a big large piece."

And so that's what Tommy Tucker had for his supper—though his name wasn't really Tommy Tucker.—Youth's Companion.

A Talk with the Boys.

"I don't know what to do," said one just stepping from the threshold of boyhood. "My ability is not great. If I enter college there must be long years of preparation. The fitting school, the college, the professional school each demand their weary years.

"If I engage in mercantile business, I must commence at the bottom round, I must sweep the store and run errands and do up bundles. I must slowly rise if at all. How do I know I shall rise, I have no capital and my business capacity is not wonderful.

"If I engage in manufacturing, there, too, I must begin low if I would rise high. I must go into the lowest room of the mill. I must learn all of the disagreeable details of the business. It will take me years to learn, and after all I may fail.

"If I am to be a farmer I must have long years of disagreeable plodding. I must pick up stones and drive cows and water horses, and do a thousand unheard-of chores, before I am prepared to even run in debt for a farm and go into business for myself. It is a hard row to hoe. The field of life is a rocky one. I believe I'll settle down in my little corner, do as well as I can the humble work that comes to me, take the bitter with the sweet, be content with a lowly lot, and fling ambition to the winds. I am a common boy—I might as well recognize the fact now as ten years hence."

Let me speak, as a friend, who has traveled this rocky road many years before you. Let me tell my little story. Let me give you a big dose of that medicine so often prescribed, so seldom given—advice.

And first, I would say, the way is rough. There is no flowery path to success. The road to honor and usefulness is not a paved one. Whatever vocation you choose, be it law or medicine, or the ministry, or agriculture, or merchandise, it is work, work, hard work and up-hill work at that.

"I don't know what to do," you say.

It may not be time for a final decision. There are many lessons you ought to learn, no matter what pursuit in life you follow. Have you learned those? But if you feel that the time has really come, that you must decide and yet you can not, then ask advice, ask some one in whose judgment you have confidence. Think over it. Pray over it. Take it. Once taken, don't stop to look back. Go to work with a will. Don't say: "Oh, dear, I wish I had done something else;" or, "I am not suited to this business;" or, "I don't believe I shall succeed." Unless health fails, or facts show unmistakably that you are on the wrong track, push on.

"How do I know I shall rise?" you say.

Resolve that you will. Where there is a will there is a way.

Those who have made their mark in almost every calling are not those who have the quickest apprehension, nor the most retentive memory, nor the most nimble fingers, nor the most unerring judgment. They are those who have persevered. They did not fail, because they would not fail.

The boy who can work steadily, with one purpose in view, who can do little by little his work, and can keep on trying till he does it well, that boy has no right to say: I have no ability. He has ability, the highest kind of ability, and it is his duty to make the most of it. He owes it to himself. He owes it to the world. He owes it to his God, and to those he loves next to God.

Make, then, the most of yourself, my young friend. There is more good material than you think. The steel needs tempering, the iron needs working, and it will take time, but it is good solid ore. Work it well.

The strongest, the bravest, the best men have been those who had a hard row to hoe, and who hoed it. Hoe away, my boys. Pull out the weeds. Work hard. Don't be discouraged. There is sunshine on the hilltops. There are flowers by the roadside. You shall not want a loving word, and, if need be, a helping hand.—Golden Rule.

Johnnie's Recreation.

"Johnnie," said a father to his handsome young son one evening as they were sitting together, "can you count a billion?"

"Certainly, papa; that's no great feat," was the reply.

"Do you know how many make billion?" the father next queried.

"Not exactly; but I will see what Webster says in his dictionary. Here it is—'A million of millions; as many millions as there are units in a million.'"

"Now, my son, this is a very large number, and do you think you can count it?"

"Certainly I can."

"How long do you think it would take you if you do nothing else but count?"

"Perhaps all day, or easily in two days," replied the son.

"Take your slate and pencil and let us make a little calculation. As your tongue is very nimble, I will allow that you can count two hundred a minute. How many will this give you in an hour?" asked the father.

"Why, only twelve thousand."

"And how many in twenty-four hours?"

"Only two hundred and eighty thousand," replied the boy.

"This tells you that two days are not enough, even if you count without eating or sleeping, for it would only give you six hundred and seventy-six thousand, which is very far short of a million, you see."

"Give me a whole year and I will count it," said the son.

"If you do," said the good-natured father, with a twinkle in his eye, "I will give you a hundred pounds, and take you to France and Italy next summer. Come, use your pencil again, and see how far a year will carry you towards the billion, allowing that you work three hundred and sixty-five days, and twenty-four hours each day. Multiply two hundred and eighty-eight thousand counted in a day, by three hundred and sixty-five, and what result will you have?"

"Why, papa, only one hundred and five million, one hundred and twenty thousand. I give it up, for I believe I could not count it in my whole lifetime."

"This is very probable, my son; but now you are at it keep up the calculation, and find out how long it would take to count a billion. Be careful in your multiplications and additions, for a small mistake where the figures are so many will make a great difference in the result. I will look over you. You have made the calculation, and what result have you?"

"Perfectly amazing! To count a million times a million would most certainly take nine thousand five hundred and twelve years, twenty-four days, five hours and twenty minutes, at the rate of two hundred every minute."—Baptist Weekly.

—The meanest man has been found in Atlantic City, N. J. He pulled his daughter's teeth out to keep her from going with a young man.—N. Y. Sun.

Religious.

COME NEAR!

Come near to me! I need Thy glorious presence
Through the dense darkness of this troubled hour.
Shine on my soul, and fill it with the essence
Of Thy pervading and uplifting power.
Come near, come near to me!

Come nearer yet! I have no strength to reach Thee.
My soul is like a bird with broken wings.
Lean down from Thy fair heights of peace and teach me
The balm Thy touch to mortal beings brings.
Lean down, O God, lean down!

Come near! And yet if those eternal places
Hold greater tasks to occupy Thy hands,
Send Thy blest angels whose celestial faces
Smile sometimes on us from the spirit lands.
Send one, send one to me.

I must have help! I am so weak and broken
I can not help myself—I know not how.
That moral force of which so much is spoken
Will not sustain and fortify me now—
I must, I must have help!

Some outside aid, some strength from spirit sources,
We all must have, in hours like this, or die.
To One, to all, of those mysterious forces
Which men call God, I lift my voice and cry:
Come near, come near to me!
—Ella Wheeler, in Chicago Advance.

THE THEOLOGY OF THE HEART.

There is a dogmatic theology of the church creeds which has been derived with more or less of accuracy from the Scriptures, and teaches the existence, character and attributes of God. There is also a theology of the heart which is as old as humanity, and confirms all that the Scriptures teach of the existence and perfections of God. The belief that there is a God and the yearning to know Him are intuitive and universal. It was this heart-theology that led the psalmist to say: "As the hart panteth after the water brooks, so panteth my soul after Thee, O God. My soul thirsteth for God, for the living God." It was the same heart-hunger and belief that caused Job to say: "Surely I would speak to the Almighty, and desire to reason with God. O that I knew where I might find Him! that I might come even to His seat. I would order my cause before Him, and fill my mouth with arguments." It was an intuitive conviction of His existence that led the Greeks to erect an altar to the unknown God, and inspired the profound speculations of pagan Plato concerning His being and attributes.

St. Paul teaches that the common constitution of "all nations that dwell on the face of the earth" leads them to "seek the Lord, if haply they might feel after Him, and find Him." This perpetual search proves that atheism is repugnant to the human heart, and does violence to the moral nature of man. It is in conflict with his ineradicable instincts, desires and hopes, which all require a personal, living, loving God as the author, preserver, and savior of the race. God is the felt necessity of every rational soul. A sane man may imagine he has reason to doubt the existence of God, but his heart belies his conclusion by still yearning for the living God. Only the fool hath said in his heart, "There is no God." So universal is the longing for God and the belief in His existence that it is not without reason that many Christian thinkers doubt either the entire sanity or the entire sincerity of those who profess to agree with the fool. There is a strong probability that, notwithstanding their professions of atheism, few sane men are quite as far from God as they aver. Their hearts protest against their theory. In many cases the faith of childhood and of a godly ancestry lingers to utter the same protest; and where the deepest instincts of the soul unite with the influences of Christian nurture against it, a perfectly sincere and unwavering belief in atheism is impossible.

The heart clings to a belief in God as the only ground of hope for the future. To be without God is to be without hope in the world. If there is no almighty creator and preserver of man, there is no power to deliver him from death. If he does not possess an indestructible life derived from God he can not hope to survive the death of the body. The hopelessness of atheism is, therefore, essential to it. To unsophisticated minds, this hopelessness is appalling. It deprives the soul of its only sufficient support in sorrow, pain and death. It takes away the strongest incentive to noble endeavor and patient endurance. To those who sorrow without hope, the anguish of bereavement is unutterable, and the thought of their own death horrible. Few men can face death and annihilation with composure. Byron's assertion: "I have no conception of any existence which duration would not make tiresome," reveals his despair, rather than his satisfaction, at the prospect. Even the Stoics were sustained in their contempt of pain and death by the vain hope of eternal union with the immortal gods.

The loss of a great hope is like the setting of the sun: it leaves darkness behind. The confessions of Atheists reveal the fearful gloom of those who have lost faith in God and a future life. Strauss affirmed that he was going into darkness. The dying Atheist, Clifford, said: "I have lived to see the sun shining out of an empty sky." Another says: "The theory of Atheism in any shape is, scientifically considered, superfluous; and I am not ashamed to confess that, with this virtual negation of God, the universe to me has lost its soul of loveliness; and when at times I think, as think I must, of the appalling contrast between the hallowed glory of that creed which was once mine and the lonely mystery of existence as I now find it, I shall ever feel it impossible to avoid the sharpest pang of which my soul is susceptible."

In striking contrast to the gloom of atheism is the testimony of Heine, the German poet, who had lost his faith in God and a future life, but afterward regained it by the study of the Bible: "He who has lost his God may find H[illegible] again in this book; and he who [illegible] never known Him is here struck b[illegible] breath of the Divine word. Yes, I have returned back to God, like the prodigal son, after having kept the swine with the Hegelians for some time. Was it my wretchedness that drove me back? Perhaps a less miserable reason—a sort of Heavenly home-sickness fell upon me and drove me forth." It was the theology of the heart that led to the recovery of his lost hope. His moral nature could not be satisfied with the swine's food of atheism, but persisted in its yearning for the living God, who "satisfieth the longing soul, and filleth the hungry soul with His goodness."—N. W. Christian Advocate.

The Bible and the Monuments.

Sennacherib's own story adds much of interest to the Bible account. The Bible says that Sennacherib was at Lachish while Jerusalem was invested. We have an actual picture preserved, made by order of the Assyrian King, of his victory at Lachish. He does not claim to have captured Jerusalem, but only that he received tribute. The Bible says that Hezekiah gave him thirty talents of gold and three hundred talents of silver. Sennacherib, in his own account, says it was thirty talents of gold and eight hundred of silver. But there were two sorts of silver talents, a large talent and a small talent; and eight hundred of one is just equal to three hundred of the other, so that the two accounts tally to a shekel. In two cases in the Bible story of the Kings it has seemed like a plain mistake that Babylon is mentioned instead of Nineveh. How could Hezekiah have sent Ambassadors with presents to Meredach-baladan, King at Babylon, while Nineveh was the capital? The monuments solve the riddle. They tell the whole story of the revolt of Meredach-baladan at Babylon against the King at Nineveh. The Embassy sent to the rebel was a great political blunder, and Isaiah was right in rebuking it. The other case of difficulty is where the Bible tells us that Manasseh was taken captive by the King of Assyria and carried to Babylon. The annals of Esarhaddon are very imperfect, but they mention Manasseh as a tributary King, and we learn from them that he (Esarhaddon) was the only King of Assyria who held his court at Babylon. The Bible is confirmed on both these points. Before passing from the monuments of Assyria to those of Babylon, we may recall briefly the now well-known Moabite stone, with its remarkable confirmation of the Bible story. The Bible tells us that after the death of Ahab, and the accession of Jehoram, Mesha, King of Moab, rebelled. There was discovered, ten years ago, in Dibon, the capital of Moab, a stone column on which this very Mesha, otherwise unknown, had given an account, engraved nearly nine hundred years before Christ, of the success of his rebellion. In a long story, which reads like a chapter of the Bible, he tells of his victories, and how he captured the cities of Israel by the help of his god Chemosh.—S. S. Times.

Choice Extracts.

—The fewer the words the better the prayer.—Martin Luther.

—Polished steel will not shine in the dark; no more can reason, however refined and cultivated, shine efficaciously, but as it reflects the light of Divine truth shed from Heaven.

—Let not unworthiness scare the children of God. Parents love their children, and do them good, not because they see that they are more worthy than others, but because they are their own.—Archbishop Leighton.

—The best things are nearest; light in your eyes, flowers at your feet, duties at your hand, the path of God just before you. Then do not grasp at the stars, but do life's common work as it comes, certain that daily duties and daily bread are the sweetest things of life.

—There are no fires that will melt out our drossy and corrupt particles like God's refining fires of duty and trial, living as He sends us to live, in the open field of the world's sins and sorrows, its plausibilities and lies, its persecution and animosities and fears, its eager delights and bitter wants, if we still keep Him in view in all.—Bushnell.

—As the rays come from the sun, and yet are not the sun, even so our love and pity, though they are not God, but merely a poor, weak image and reflection of Him, yet from Him alone they come. If there is mercy in our hearts, it comes from the fountain of mercy. If there is the light of love in us, it is a ray from the full sun of love.—Kingsley.

—By going a few minutes sooner or later, by stopping to speak with a friend on the corner, by meeting this man or that, or by turning down this street instead of the other, we may let slip some impending evil, by which the whole current of our lives would have been changed. There is no possible solution to the dark enigma but the one word, "Providence."—Longfellow.

—In the long run we can do more by what we are, than by what we attempt; more by our characters than by our activities. To others as well as to ourselves, there is inspiration and inducement in a noble or a lovely character. If we stop and consider what it is which has done most to shape our thought and purpose in life, we shall see that it is some winsome and impressive character, which has been uplifted before us, and which has drawn us by its pre-eminent attractiveness, rather than any precept or injunction which has been spoken to us by instructors. And as it is with ourselves, so it will be with others. Everything that raises our personal standard of thought and purpose, everything that brings us nearer to the stature of the completed one in Christ, increases our power for good, and makes us more and more a power in the world about us. When we crave the privilege of doing for others, it is well for us to realize the privilege of being for others, and for our Master, whose assurance to his loved ones is: "Herein is My Father glorified, that ye bear much fruit, so shall ye be My disciples;" [illegible]t, that ye sow much seed, but that in [illegible] characters ye bear much fruit; [illegible] the fruit of the Spirit is in all goodness and righteousness and truth."—S. S. Times.

—The late Bishop Hunter, of the Mormon Church, was born and reared a Quaker.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL,
Proprietors.

BURLINGTON, KY. DEC. 5. 1883.

ADVERTISING RATES.

1 Column	1 year	$80
½ "	1 "	40
¼ "	1 "	20
1 "	¼ "	20
½ "	¼ "	10
¼ "	¼ "	6

For announcing candidates, $5. Obituary poetry, 5 cents per line. Obituary notices 20 lines free; over that number (excepting the announcement of the death) 3 cents per line.
Tributes of respect from lodges, &c., $1 50

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One year	$1 50
Six months	75
Three months	40

PROF TICE, the great weather prognosticator, died in St. Louis, on the 30th ult.

SOME of the land on this side of the river at Lawrenceburg ferry has been leased to the oil prospectors.

THE Speaker, Doorkeeper and the Clerk nominated by the caucus last Saturday night, at Washington, were born in Kentucky.

THE Speakership having been settled, the people of Kentucky will now turn their attention to the election of a United States Senator.

THE Frankfort Yeoman did not know that it was loaded when it went off on the Tom Henry question, on the 27th ult., and in the next issue it took a large dose of crow.

ABRAM S. HEWITT, of New York, is a candidate for President. His friends claim that he can command Tilden's strength, whom they consider physically unable to make a canvass.

HOGGISH—Select butchers and heavy shippers, $5 20@5 40; fair to good packers, at $5 00@5 30; fair to good light, $4 50@4 95; common, $3 50@4 45; culls, $3 00@3 75: stock hogs, $3 65@4 60.

JUDGE DENNY, of Lancaster, and chairman of the Republican executive committee of this State, shot and killed James H. Anderson one day last week. The Judge's defense is self-defense. Denny defended Phil B. Thompson for killing Walter S. Davis.

H. CLAY WHITE has been solicited to make the race for Representative to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of W. N. Hogan, of Grant county. Mr. White would make the county a good representative, and he has many friends in Boone, his native county, who would be glad to see him thus honored.

A NEGRESS, who was delirious from small-pox, made her appearance on the streets in Louisville one day last week, and exposed thousands of people to the dreadful disease. She was circulating on the principal streets about two hours before the authorities succeeded in having her captured and taken to the Eruptive Hospital.

THE Board of Health of this State is out in a circular addressed to the local Boards of Health, requesting them to urge vaccination and re-vaccination for the prevention of small-pox, which, during the past year, has given some localities in this State so much trouble. The Board wants decisive action taken that the scourge may be baffled at once upon its appearance in a community.

THE News Journal of the 2d inst., headlines under its rooster thusly:

He Crows! Because In Carlisle's Election as Speaker The Right of the People Triumphs Over the Might of Monopoly, Insuring an Honest Readjustment of the Robber Tariff, And a Cutting Down of Taxation to the Actual Needs of Government. The New Speaker's Sound and Conservative Views on the Duties of Democracy. Westward the Star of Empire Takes it Way, and Pennsylvania Mourns.

NOTWITHSTADING the fact that our country tobacco buyers have paid such high prices this season, there is complaint among them of deliveries in too high case. The preasant high prices in the country are due, in a great measure, to our home buyers, who are willing to work on smaller margin than those who bought before them, and they ought to be encouraged and upheld by their patrons. They have a remedy in docking, which they are resorting to quite freely, but it is difficult to estimate the damage done a crop of tobacco by handling it when too high, and it alway results in dissatisfaction. Tobacco, this early in the season, should be hung up as soon as it is stripped out and allowed to dry out, and then as it comes in, it may be bulked down on the sticks, and delivered in good winter order.

IN regard to the Capt. Tom Henry affair, the Frankfort Yeoman of the 27th ult., says, among other things:

"It has been understood in Frankfort for some time that Capt. Henry would assume no further personal control of the business of the office, the power to act in all matters having been delegated to these parties."

"The inability of Capt. Henry to abstain from liquor, and the scandal which results from his drunkeness, has made this arrangement necessary. The courts would not have tolerated his presence, and he had the discretion to arrange for the performance of the work by others. This we think he had a right to do, and if it satisfies the Judges, who are most concerned, it ought to satisfy others."

"From his past life and his late conduct, it is clear that Capt. Henry is not a proper man to have personal charge of a business involving so much."

In its next issue it virtually says, "We didn't intend to say that about you, Capt. Henry."

THOMAS J. HENRY, Clerk of the Court of Appeals, has been imbibing to such an extent as to wholy incapacitate him for business, and has, therefore, turned his office over to his two deputies, Gaines and Poore. Henry denies all the charges brought against him, and says they are made by his enemies who want him put out of office. It seems that the escapade that has gotten him into trouble is equally as disgraceful as that with which he was charged during his canvass. His recent conduct having rendered him liable to removal from office, the friends of Poore and Gaines who traded Henry into office, are alarmed, and claim that in as much as the affairs of the office are being promptly and satisfactorily administered by his two very efficient deputies, there is no necessity for Henry's removal. Such an argument does not ameliorate the law which says plainly what course shall be pursued when an officer's conduct is such as disqualifies him for his office. It matters not how efficient Henry's deputies are, when his conduct is such that it brings him within the perview of the statutes that provide for the removal of Clerks from office, he ought to be made go.

THE following is the number of votes each State cast for Speaker, in the caucus at Washington last Saturday night:

STATES	Carlisle.	Randall.	Cox.
Alabama	8	4	1
Arkansas	5	...
California	2	1	8
Connecticut	...	8	...
Delaware	1	...	...
Florida	1	...	...
Georgia	8	1	...
Illinois	7	...	1
Indiana	7	1	1
Iowa	8	...	1
Kentucky	8	...	...
Louisiana	4	1	...
Maryland	...	...	...
Massachusetts	1	...	2
Michigan	6	...	...
Mississippi	6	...	...
Missouri	11	...	2
Nevada	1	...	...
New Jersey	...	8	...
New York	...	6	18
North Carolina	4	2	...
Ohio	2	6	5
Pennsylvania	...	11	...
South Carolina	4	2	...
Tennessee	7	2	1
Texas	10	...	...
Virginia	1	8	...
West Virginia	2	1	...
Wisconsin	5	...	...
Total	108	52	30

Mr. Carlisle's election was made unanimous and being escorted to the hall where the caucus was held he made the following brief speech of thanks:

"Mr. Chairman, and Gentlemen of the Caucus: Your committee has just notified me of my unanimous nomination for Speaker of the House of Representatives of the Forty-eighth Congress; and I am here to thank you very briefly, and very earnestly, for the confidence reposed in me. If this had been a mere personal contest between me and either of the three distinguished gentlemen whose names were mentioned in connection with this nomination, I should have had little hope of success. They are all gentlemen of great ability, long experience, and undoubted integrity; and I assure them and their friends that this contest closes, so far as I am concerned, without the slightest change of the friendly personal relations heretofore existing between us."

After Mr. Carlisle's speech each of his opponents made short speeches in which they pledged a hearty cooperation with him in the discharge of the duties of Speaker.

4

MALARIA, indigestion, dyspepsia, heartburn, and general ill-health relieved by Brown's Iron Bitters.

SPARTA, TENN.—Dr. W. B. Cummings says: "I am strongly convinced of the efficacy of Brown's Iron Bitters, and recommend them."

LEWISVILLE, IND.—Rev. J. S. Cain says: "I used Brown's Iron Bitters for nervous prostration, and found it entirely satisfactory."

For Rent.

35 acres of land adjoining Lewisburg, Kenton county, Ky., 10 acres of which is fine tobacco land. On this land is a pear orchard of about 400 trees, select varieties. This land is all well suited for gardening or other tillage, and has on it a good house and other suitable conveniencies for a family residence—Enquire of RUFUS LIGHT, on the premises.

Out on the Prairie.

Concerning Something Better than Mrs. Toodles' Wheelbarrow—And the Reasons Why.

When a certain Commissary-General complained to the Duke of Wellington that Sir Thomas Picton had declared he would hang him if the rations for that General's division were not forthcoming at a certain hour, the Duke replied:

"Ah! did he indeed go so far as that? Did he say he'd hang you?"

"Yes my lord."

"Well, General Picton is just the man to keep his word. You'd better get the rations up in time"

But to get rations or anything else up in time one must know when to lay his hand on them. As Mr. Toodles said about the coffin which he had bought at auction and brought home to his wife:

"If anything should happen, my dear, it will be so handy to have in the house."

Being in the great wholesale drug house of William Hart, in Elgin, Ill., one day, Mr. G. H. Sherman, the photographer of that place, remarked, concerning PARKER'S TONIC "I have used it in my family for two years, and I unhesitatingly pronounce it the best medicine we have ever used. It is handy to have in the house, and we are never without it."

Culled from the mass of reasons why Mr. Sherman was right, be good enough to consider these: First, PARKER'S TONIC, is delicious to the palate; second, it invigorates, but does not promote a love for strong drink; third, it cures Coughs and Colds by inciting the torpid organs into healthy action, and opening all the pores of the skin; fourth, it purifies the Blood, thus curing Kidney Liver and Lung diseases and Rheumatism; fifth—

But take it into your house, and it will speak for itself. Once used, will change it for nothing else. Physicians commend it. Price, 50 cents and $1. HISCOX & Co., Chemist, New York.

Posted.

Notice is hereby given that our lands in Boone county, are posted and all persons ara warned not trespass thereon.

MRS. E. J. PIATT, JOHN McCONNEL.

For Sale.

Two good work horses, single or double, one is a black 16½ hands high, the other is a bay 15 hands high. For further information call on or address

RICHARD RYLE, Burlington, Ky.

Administrator's Notice,

Those having claims against the estate of W. S Ryle, dec'd., are hereby notified to present the same, proven as by law required, to the undersigned before December 25th, '83. B. H. STEPHENS, Adm'r.

For Sale.

House and lot in Hebron, Boone county, Kentucky. This is a very comfortable house located near the center of the town. The lot contains one acre. For further particulars call on or address LYSTRA AYLOR, Hebron, Ky.

Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned has been duly appointed and qualified as assignee in trust for the benefit of the creditors of Wm. N. Aylor. All persons indebted to said assignor will make immediate payment, and creditors will present their claims duly proven according to law to the undersigned at No. 7 Pike Str., Covington, Ky. R. L. CRIGLER, Assignee.

5-4t

Posted.

We the undersigned hereby give notice that our farms are posted against hunters:

Templeton Gaines,	J C Jenkins,
J E Duncan,	Oscar Gaines,
G C Gaddy,	Ben. Clore,
Noah Craven,	Wm. Clore,
C S Balsly,	A S Gaines,
George Gaines,	C S Gaines,
Absalom Aylor,	J. B. Winston,

TWO Fams for Sale.

One contains 36 acres, 9 acres of which is good creek bottom and 27 acres, hill land. This land is under good fence, well set in grass, has lasting water for stock, fine lot of timber, much of which is locust. It is part of the W. B. Ryle homestead, lies on Gunpowder Creek and joins Leander Setters.

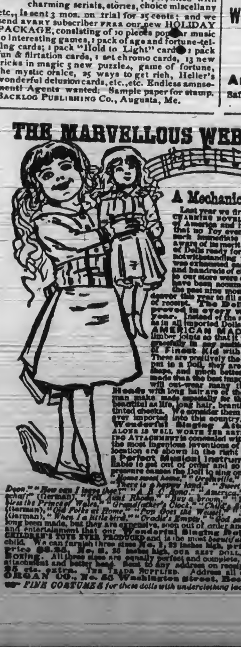
The other farm contains 126½ acres, is 2½ miles south west of Burlington, has all necessary buildings in good repair, fencing good, has a good well and cistern, besides never failing water for stock, a nice young orchard, and some hedge fence. This land is all in grass except 25 acres which ware cultivated in corn this year. For terms apply an the last named premises to

6-2m W. S. WHITE.

PATENTS.

For new inventions and novel designs obtained in the United States, Canada and Europe. Trade Marks and Copyright—Labels secured for Merchants and Manufacturers who wish protection against imitators of their goods, packages or articles of manufacture. We are located opposite the United States Patent Office, have quick access to its records, and can give prompt and reliable answers to inquiries. Of our firm one has had thirteen years' practice in the highest courts, another several years as an Assistant Examiner in the United States Patent Office and many years experience as solicitor of American and Foreign Patents. Fee reasonable and full satisfaction or no fee. Best reference given. Our little book "on patents" sent free on receipt of one cent stamp.
W. A. COULTER & CO., Solicitors of Patents,
23 St. Cloud Building, Washington, D. C.

BACKLOG SKETCHES, our large 16 page paper, filled with charming serials, stories, choice miscellany etc., is sent 3 mos. on trial for 25 cents; and we send every subscriber FREE our new HOLIDAY PACKAGE, consisting of 10 pieces popular music 10 interesting games, 1 pack of age and fortune-telling cards; 1 pack "Hold to Light" cards; 1 pack fun & flirtation cards, 1 set chromo cards, 13 new tricks in magic 5 new puzzles, game of fortune, the mystic oracle, 25 ways to get rich, Heller's wonderful delusion cards, etc., etc. Endless amusement! Agents wanted. Sample paper for stamp. BACKLOG PUBLISHING Co., Augusta, Me.



THE MARVELLOUS WEBBER SINGING DOLL.

A Mechanical Wonder.

"A PRIMA DONNA IN EVERY HOME."

A. L. Brown,

THE HATTER,

Cor. Pike and Washington Streets
COVINGTON, - - KY.

Has always on hand a large variety of Men's, Boys' and Children's Hats, and prices GUARANTEED to be as low as the lowest.

Gents' Furnishing Goods a Specialty.

BOONE HOUSE,

BURLINGTON, KY.

C. L. CRISLER, Prop'r.

No pains spared in the accommodation of guests. The table supplied with the delicacies of the season. Stock well cared for. dec. 20-1y

LUMBER.

Geo. M. Bedinger & Co.,

Erlanger, - - Ky.

We keep constantly on hand all kinds of Lumber, Laths and Shingles. Also Builder's supplies of all kinds.

—Come and see Us.—

may 9-tf

W. J. RICE,
CARPENTER & BUILDER,
BULLITSVILLE, KY.

Is prepared Raise or Move
EITHER LOG or FRAME BUILDINGS
On Short Notice.

And at the Lowest Possible Figures.

33-tf Your orders respectfully solicited

INSURE AT HOME

The Farmers' Mutual Fire
INSURANCE COMPANY
Of Boone County

Is now completely organized and receiving applications for insurance.

Its Rates are Lower

Than those of any other Company, and it gives the farmers of Boone County a

HITHERTO UNKNOWN ADVANTAGE

In keeping their property insured.

EVERY FARMER IN THE COUNTY

should take a policy at once.

N. S. WALTON, President, Petersburg, Ky.	J. H. WALTON, Secretary, Constance, Ky.

R. RANDALL, Treasury.

DIRECTORS.
LEGRAN GAINES, Jeff Utz,
JNO. M. MOODY.

WANTED BOOK Canvassers.
MALE and FEMALE

To engage in the sale of our new and important works of standard character, large profits and immense selling qualities. We offer a permanent and lucrative business. Address The CINCINNATI PUBLISHING CO., 174 W. Fourth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Free! Cards and Chromos.

We will send free by mail a sample set of our large German, French, and American Chromo Cards, on tinted and gold grounds, with a price list of over 200 different designs, on receipt of a stamp for postage. We will also send free by mail as samples, ten of our beautiful Chromos, on receipt of ten cents to pay for packing and postage; also enclose a confidential price list of our large oil chromos. Agents wanted. Address F. GLEASON & Co., 46 Summer Street, Boston, Mass.

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS
FOR THE LIVER
And all Billious Complaints

Safe to take, being purely vegetable; no griping. Price 25 cts. All Druggists.

High Prices All Sat Down On and Crushed Out of Existence!

COLTER'S Shoe Department is turning out stacks and piles of good solid Boots and Shoes, and the best all-Leather solid Goods. This house now shows the best and double the amount of stock that was ever kept in Rising Sun, is doing a strictly cash business, and selling Boots and Shoes at the same low per cent. that Dry Goods are sold at. People are getting tired of paring exclusive shoe dealers' prices for Boots and Shoes when they can go to COLTER'S general store and get the best of goods at the same profits that Dry Goods are sold at

"I told you to go to COLTER'S. I told you that you could get good solid goods at Colter's, and at reasonable prices. Here I have toiled day after day to get a little money ahead, and you went to——and paid the regular shoe dealers' prices for those boots, and now look at them. Three dollars and twenty-five cents gone, and look at those boots. If you had gone to Colter's, as I told you to you would have got a better pair for Two Dollars and Fifty cents."

"Well, Father, I went to Colter's and they were so busy I went out, expecting to go back. But seeing a shoe store that wasn't busy, I just got them there. Next time I'll go to Colter's and wait till my turn comes."

CLOTHING AND OVERCOATS.

Over Twenty-five Hundred Full Suits of Ready-Made Clothing and over Fifteen Hundred Overcoats to select from and get a fit

At COLTER'S MAMMOTH CHEAP CASH STORE,
—Rising Sun, Indiana.—

Men's Full Suits, commencing at $4 a suit and up to $6, $7, $10, $12, and as high as $22. Grand snaps in

OVERCOATS.

Men's Overcoats, commencing at $2 25 and up to $5 for a real good, warm and durable Coat; next grade at $6 to $9; next $10 to $16. Always try COLTER'S for Clothing.

CLOAKS AND JACKETS — DOLMANS AND Ulsterettes.

"Well Mary, I am glad you had supper ready when I came home. When a person goes to town and is busy buying goods all day, she comes home feeling very tired and hungry." Yes, indeed, Jane, I expected you would feel tired and need refreshments, so I had tea ready for you. Where did you trade?" "Where did I trade?" "Yes." "Why, at Colter's; yes, indeed, every time, and I guess nearly everyone else trades there too, from the way the store was jammed to day. I tell you, Mary, there were no less than 100 people in that store trading this day. The first room we go in was full, the Cloak room was jammed full and the Millinery room was crowded the Boot and Shoe room had a rush, and I was surprised when they took me up stairs to get a bit of floor oil cloth. I believe there were more than a dozen persons up there buying Overcoats, Pants, some buying Hats, some a Suit of Clothes and some buying two or three suits. Yes, indeed, they do business in that house, I'm a tellin' you. It kept a nice looking gray whiskered man busy making change." "Well, how are goods selling now?" "Cheaper than I ever saw them. Colter is making an extra effort to sell more goods than they did last year, and is offering extra inducements. I bought good Sheeting at 7 and 8 cents, splendid Canton Flannel at 10 to 11 cents. Thread 4c. Sheefield's Yarn 75c. a pound. Flannels 30, 37 to 40c, all-Wool Blankets $4 and $5. I got a nice Dolman for $9. Jennie's Hat with two Feathers on for $2, Floor Oil Cloth 25c, Jennie's Shoes, custom-made, sewed Calf, for $2, Johnnie's Boots at $2 60, and they are extra. I don't know what all I did get. You should all trade at Colter's.

BOOTS AND SHOES
At COLTER'S
Mammoth Cheap Cash Store,
RISING SUN, INDIANA.

Solid Goods at Bottom Prices
IS OUR MOTTO,
And by standing to this rule we gain trade year after year. When we sell one pair of Solid Boots or Shoes, that invites the Customer back again. Patronize
COLTER'S,
MAMMOTH
CHEAP CASH STORE,
Rising Sun. · Ind.

INCORPORATED UNDER THE LAWS OF MISSOURI.

CENTRAL MEDICAL & SURGICAL INSTITUTE
OF ST. LOUIS, MO.

SUCCESSORS TO Dr. BUTTS' DISPENSARY. OFFICE & ROOMS, No. 620 LOCUST ST.
CHAS. L. LaBARGE, M.D., Pres't & Physician in Charge.
NELSON CHEESMAN, Treas. & Business Manager.

This Institute has ample facilities and an experienced Faculty. While it succeeds to a large business, which has been established for years, it will aim to extend its medical and surgical practice, giving skillful and scientific treatment to CHRONIC DISEASES of the Head, Spine, Lungs and Air Passages, Heart, Liver, Stomach and Bowels, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Consumption and Asthma. BLOOD IMPURITIES, inherited or caused by impure associations, Scrofula, Fever Sores, Ulcers, etc. DEFORMITIES of the Limbs, Spinal Curvature, Wry-Neck, Diseases of the Joints, Piles, Fistula, Rupture, etc. WEAKNESS and wasting diseases in old and young men, also all diseases of the genito-urinary organs. FEMALE irregularities and weaknesses, causing pain in the back or side, etc.

Personal interviews with patients are always preferred. Those unable to visit the Institute will be furnished with blank lists of questions that will aid them in making a full statement of their cases and if not requiring a surgical operation they can be successfully treated by correspondence, and medicines sent by mail or express. To enable us to send proper list of questions applicants should give a brief statement of their trouble.

(The Treasurer of the corporation is of Nelson Chesman & Co., Advertising Agents, and refers to the publisher of this or any other newspaper in the United States or Canada regarding responsibility.)

Consultation at Office or by mail free and invited.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me. HORACE FAIRBROTHER."
Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours, MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."
159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."
Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.
JOSEPH WALDEN."
Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."
Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists.

TUTT'S PILLS

TORPID BOWELS, DISORDERED LIVER, and MALARIA.

From these sources arise three-fourths of the diseases of the human race. These symptoms indicate their existence: Loss of Appetite, Bowels costive, Sick Headache, fullness after eating, aversion to exertion of body or mind, Eructation of food, Irritability of temper, Low spirits, A feeling of having neglected some duty, Dizziness, Fluttering at the Heart, Dots before the eyes, highly colored Urine, CONSTIPATION, and demand the use of a remedy that acts directly on the Liver. As a Liver medicine TUTT'S PILLS have no equal. Their action on the Kidneys and Skin is also prompt; removing all impurities through these three "scavengers of the system," producing appetite, sound digestion, regular stools, a clear skin and a vigorous body. TUTT'S PILLS cause no nausea or griping nor interfere with daily work and are a perfect

ANTIDOTE TO MALARIA.

Sold everywhere, 25c. Office, 44 Murray St., N.Y.

TUTT'S HAIR DYE.

GRAY HAIR OR WHISKERS changed instantly to a GLOSSY BLACK by a single application of this DYE. Sold by Druggists, or sent by express on receipt of $1.
Office, 44 Murray Street, New York.
TUTT'S MANUAL OF USEFUL RECEIPTS FREE.

VIGOROUS HEALTH FOR MEN

THE PASTILLE CURE FOR NERVOUS DEBILITY

TESTED FOR 5 YEARS

by use in thousands of cases. Founded on scientific medical principles, it has been growing in favor and reputation while its numerous competitors have invariably failed. The direct application of this remedy to the seat of the disease makes its specific influence felt without delay. The natural functions of the human organism are restored. The animating elements of life which have been wasted are given back. The buoyant energy of the brain and muscular system renders the patient cheerful; he gains strength with rapidity.

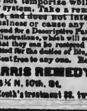
NERVOUS DEBILITY, organic weakness, and numerous obscure diseases, baffling the skill of best physicians, result for youthful indiscretion, too free-indulgence, and over brain work.

Do not temporize while such enemies lurk in your system. Take a remedy that has cured thousands, and does not interfere with you attention to business or cause any pain or inconvenience.

(Send for a Descriptive Pamphlet giving Anatomical Illustrations, which will convince the most sceptical that they can be restored to perfect manhood, and fitted for the duties of life, same as if never affected. Sent free to any one. Remedy sold ONLY by the)

HARRIS REMEDY CO. MF'G. CHEMISTS,
306½ N. 10th. St. ST. LOUIS, MO.

One Month's treatment $3. two months $5. three months $7



PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM

A beneficial dressing preferred to similar articles because of its purity and rich perfume. It Restores to Gray Hair the Youthful Color & prevents dandruff and falling of the hair. 50c. & $1. Hiscox & Co., N.Y.

FLORESTON

Excels the finest flower extracts in richness. Delicate, very lasting. No odor like it. Be sure you get FLORESTON Cologne, signature of Hiscox & Co., N. Y., on every label. 25 and 75 cts., at druggists and dealers in perfumes.

COLOGNE

FREE!
RELIABLE SELF-CURE.

A favorite prescription of one of the most noted and successful specialists in the U. S. (now retired) for the cure of Nervous Debility, Lost Manhood, Weakness and Decay. Sent in plain sealed envelope free. Druggists can fill it.
Address DR. WARD & CO., Louisiana, Mo.

PAYSONS INDELIBLE INK

Is the BEST. No preparation. Used with any clean pen for marking any fabric. Popular for decorative work on linen. Received Centennial MEDAL & Diploma. Established 50 years. Sold by all Druggists, Stationers & News Ag'ts.

Local News.

E. W. Smith is home for a few days.

The crowd in town Monday was very small.

Esq. Loder, of Petersburg, was in town, Tuesday.

A. W. Smith has a position in a large drug store in Sanford, Florida.

The weather the past few days has been the delight of the farmers.

Keene Robbin's father has been attending to Keene's business during his illness.

The corn bin at the Boone Hotel was relieved of its entire contents a few nights since.

A new lot of Dress Goods and Ladies' Underwear just received at Heyn's, Rising Sun, Ind.

Mr. Frank Kirk and sister, Miss Gussie, spent Thanksgiving day with Miss Maggie Rabb, of Rising Sun, Ind.

Ladies admire Ayers' Hair Vigor for the rich lustre it gives the hair. It restores color, and promotes growth.

Mr. S. P. Brady and wife are now citizens of Burlington. We are glad to welcome such citizens to the town.

Watts and Balsly are at home in the bosoms of their families again. They did not bring much Arkansas meat with them.

Heyn & Bro., Rising Sun, Ind., are doing a thriving business this fall. Just think of it, they sold 64 Overcoats in one day.

Those who live on dirt roads will deliver their tobacco to the buyers as soon as they can. They know how bad the roads get.

Geo. Kreylich and Sam Kyle, two of Kenton county's handsome and popular gallants are taking in Boone county this week.

For Schofield's Jeans, Flannels and Yarns at Heyn & Bro., Rising Sun, Ind. is the only reliable place, good Jeans for 40 cents.

Heyn & Bro., are taking the lead in Dolmans and Cloaks. To look at them and see the prices is to buy. Rising Sun, Indiana.

We find the card of Mr. William Sayers, of the Commonwealth, on our desk. We are sorry that we were absent when he called Monday.

For real Schofield Blankets go to Heyn & Bro., Rising Sun, and if you ask for them you will get no other. Price $5 and upwards.

The Grand Rapids, Michigan, Baseball club is negotiating with Quick, catcher for the Boones last season, for his services next season.

The Farmers' Insurance Company, has supplied itself with an abundance of policies, and its taking long strides in the insurance business.

Our turkey brokers did not realize enough on their Thanksgiving stock to start a bank, They didn't have license and couldn't cross the big bridge.

This week the squeal of the porkers has been heard in every direction as they started on their journey to the "scalding-box" and sausage mills.

A negro man from down among the Gunpowder deadnings delivered his tobacco here last week, for which he chucked $400 down into his breeches.

Z. T. Kelley, of East Bend, was in town Friday, increasing his supply of elbow-room by purchasing Mrs. Noah Craven's lot in the division of her father's estate.

On their return from Arkansas, Watts and Balsly met Garnett Riley with his produce boat at Cotton Wood Point, half way between Cairo and Memphis. All well and in the rain.

Peter Webb, colored, who has been a general errand dispatcher for the citizens of Burlington, has, at last become a bankrupt in health, and was last Monday assigned to the Poor-house.

John Reed, the wide-awake cigar maker, of Florence, was in town one day last week working up a sale for his cigars. By industry and square dealing John has worked up a good trade.

Nice tombstones or monuments at the graves of the departed, are marks of respect which should not be neglected. Hurschart & Co., Lawrenceburg, Ind., have just what you want. John Beall of Hebron, is their agent.

Mr. Frank Kirk brought to this office the other day an ear of corn that measured 13 inches in length and 8 inches in circumference, and has 1,006 grains. The corn was raised on Mrs. Rabb's farm, just below Bellevue, on the Indiana side.

Rubber slings have made their appearance, and window glass will begin making their disappearance. These rubber slings are both dangerous and a nuisance, and parents would be doing their neighbors a kindness if they would prevent their children's using them.

Mr. Wm. Jolly, a representative of the Maysville Masonic Mutual Insurance Company was canvassing among the brethren of the mystic tie at this place last week. He requested us to say that he was under many obligations to the fraternity in this county for their cordial reception.

It is said that on the first of next month Mrs. Green, proprietor of the Central Hotel, will retire from business, not on account of its failing to pay, but because the labor it requires on her part is more than she is able to perform. We have not learned what disposition, if any, she will make of her house.

Tom Cowen has taken a contract for building a line of plank fence for Esq. Baker on Gunpowder, and those having a lot of good, second-hand post-holes can dispose of them to Tom at figures a little arise of the market price.

The School Commissioner and examiners will be at this place on the 3d and 4th Saturday's in Dec. and January. Teachers will please avail themselves of this opportunity, as they will be the last examinations during the school year.

So great has been the success of the finance committee appointed by the Sunday-school Sunday week, that a full crop of fruit is assured for the Christmas tree, which will probably lessen the responsibility of Santa making so many chimney excursions in Burlington this year.

Turkey "culture" in this county has assumed considerable dimensions, and large flocks of that specie of gallinaceous fowl are to be found in every neighborhood. Their "accomplishment" of scratching for their own rations—even if it is on a neighbor's wheat stack—combines with their production cheapness and profit.

Fielding, a sachem who hails from off the hights that tower aloft and overlook the classic stream of Gunpowder, came to town Saturday, and had been here but a short time before he was decoyed into a back room, where he was held up and his pockets relieved of their contents. If Field will bring a sack of Mephitis Americana, and let the boys attempt to rob that once, he can thereafter come laden with hickory nuts without fear of molestation.

Taylor & Riggs will give away next Christmas 1 Fine Piano, 2 Gold Watches, 1 Sewing Machine, 1 Breech Loading Shot Gun, 1 Bicycle, 1 Velocipede, 1 Hobby Horse, 1 Rocking Chair, 10 Bolts Muslin. Will give one chance in above presents for every dollars worth you buy. Visit their six stores at Madison and Pike Streets, Covington, Ky. The drawing takes place Christmas week. This paper will publish the lucky numbers.

The blacksmith was found at his anvil; the merchant, behind the counter; the printer, at his case; the shoemaker, pegging away; the harness-makers, with needle and awl in hand; the lawyer, investigating authorities; the tobacco buyers, receiving the weed; and the teamster, with his wagon, at this place Thanksgiving day. The only thing out of the usual order was the dismissal of the schools, and a couple of tin cans following a country dog out of town at a 1:10 gait.

We have a letter dated 25th ult., at Brinkley, Ark., and from Watts and Balsly, Boone county nimrods. They had a delightful trip, enjoyed many exciting chases and captured considerable game, such as fawns, deer, panthers, wild cats, turkey, ducks and squirrels. A panther murdered one of Irwin's fine dogs, and Watts says Irwin shed tears and declared he would rather have lost his 400 mules. They dug a grave with their butcher knives, and laid in its last resting place Irwin's favorite, 900 miles away from home and among strangers. The boys say they have the wettest rains in Arkansas, they ever saw

There was very little business done in the County Court Monday:

W. L. Vest, Ed Ransome and W. E. Vest were appointed commissioners to divide the lands of James Vest among his heirs.

The commissioners in Nancy Snyder's land division filed their report which was confirmed and ordered to record.

Sydney Gaines, under 21 years of age, was released from paying poll tax.

James Hoffman's will was admitted to probate.

S. P. Brady was appointed public administrator and guardian for Boone county.

NGEIHBORHOOD NEWS.

Scattersville.

We are having fine weather for work.

We understand J. O. Huey is building a tenant house on his place.

Some of our neighbors have killed their hogs, while others are still feeding.

Mrs. Agnes Lawell, of Lexington, is visiting relatives in this vicinity.

Our batchelor friend, Peter Lawell has left our part of the country and gone over on the other side of the creek to make his future home.

Our roads are all cut to pieces by the farmers hauling corn and tobacco. There were five loads of the weed hauled through our little burg the past week.

Bullittsville.

James Steward and family, of Owensburg, Ind., are visiting Joel D. Conner's

The Bullittsville and Dry Creek Turnpike Company are having considerable stone put on this end of the pike.

Bullittsville wants a bank, public library and an opera house.

Miss Annie Clore entertained quite a number of her young friends the other night.

A large number of young folks assembled at John S. Gaines' Saturday night, and enjoyed themselves hugely.

James Clore, the favorite of our town, will not go to Florida this fall as reported.

Hebron.

Farmers have been taking advantage of the fine weather for gathering corn.

The old ticket for President and Vice-President is good enough.

The Hebron Sunday-school will have a Jacob's ladder Christmas day at 2 p. m.

Prof. I. J. Daughters is teaching a night school on Friday nights.

John Rucker and James Riley are building a large fish pond near Anderson's ferry.

The bad weather checked work on the Hebron pike.

Thomas Rouse's buggy spinnel broke last Sunday, and the buggy's dropping frightened the horse, and before he could be gotten under control, Mrs. Rouse and her little child were considerably injured.

The crop of stock-hogs will be short in this locality.

Saturday night George Hafer gave the young folks a nice entertainment.

The wedding season seems to have come to a close. [There's generally a calm just before a storm.—Ed.

Bellevue.

Having occasion lately to pass through various parts of this neighborhood we find an unusual amount of grain sown, most all of which has made a fine growth and is passing into the winter season in fine condition. Pastures that have been so abundant, for the past two months, are still furnishing good grazing. Stock of all kinds is in fine condition to enter the winter.

On account of the late season for planting, and the unusual wet fall, most of our farmers have the greater part of their corn in the field, the grains being to wet to house. Dry corn is selling at 45c per bushel,

Quite a number of fat hogs have been shipped from here since Nov. 1, we believe more than for several seasons past. Last week Conner & Walton shipped about 75 head of heavy hogs.

The tobacco buyers have been very busy the past two weeks sampling and prizing the weed in our neighborhood, and a number of crops have been sold at good prices.

Will Wingate and family now occupy the Moody house......B. F. Corbin and family expect to move into his new residence on Fifth and Sycamore Strs. this week ... J. W. Rice has gone West to look out a location for his future home......Several turkeys have seen their last Thanksgiving day...According to our old weather bird we are to have a wet, open winter. He says "A black forest, (that is trees bare of leaves) to Christmas will give us to michaelmas" Now, Mr. Eds. if we do not have those "14 snows" do not dub us that old prophet. It is only an old saying we repeat......Uncle Robt. McMurray died Monday morning of cancer of the stomach.

Plattsburg

James Fullilove, of Union, was here last Wednesday.

Jim Minor is very sick with measles.

Rev. Taylor of the Christian church is preaching at Ashbyfork every 4th Sunday.

Mrs. Martha Foster and daughter, Annie are visiting relatives in this vicinity.

Jack Icenogle put two bdgs. of tobacco on the breaks not long ago, one brought $14 per cwt. and the best $16 75.

Clay Hersley is talking of starting a first-class sample room in Lawrenceburg, Ind.

Mark Twain's latest work is very interesting reading, but, we would prefer a copy of T. L. Swetnam's poem, title, St. Jame's Old Boy.

On the Rucker farm just west of W. H. Grants, are two branches of water in the same field, and running along side of each other, one directly south and the other north.

Sim Baldon has been a tobacco raiser for twenty-five years, and he says he raised the finest crop this year he ever raised. He sold for $15 all around

Gen. Williams and Joe Blackburn are both good Democrats, but, we prefer Judge Lindsay for U. S. Senator, as John G. Carlisle is off.

There seems to be a mist or something of the kind following the sun, which causes a very brilliant light in the West just after sunset. Look, and what your eyes see your heart is sure to believe.

Dr. E. L. Grant is the largest tobacco raiser in this part of the county. His crop this year is estimated at 32,000 pounds.

Chas. Sebree and Jack Finn could not agree as to whose hogs should have the grass in Finn's pasture, so they agreed to settle it Sullivan-Slade style. A ring was formed and the two young Sampsons went in. One of them now carries his smiling aparatus in a sling while the other is minus a finger.

Petersburg.

Frank Colcher was the guest of Judge Shepherd last Sunday. The Judge says Frank lives in the South.

J. D. Norris has leased 50 acres of his land for oil purposes.

Elder Taylor assisted by Elder Howe began a series of meetings at the Christian church on Tuesday night, Dec. 4th. Quite an interesting meeting is expected, as they are both able speakers.

Ask Maj. Stott and Ed Chapin how the insurance business is.

Several of the boys took in the hop at Aurora, Thursday night.

The sewer is now completed and is quite a success. Thanks to the trustees.

Mr. Longabaugh, representative of the Pennsylvania and New York Oil and Gas Company, has leased several tracts of land in this neighborhood with the intention of sinking oil wells.

Frank Cox, who has been confined to his bed for several days, is able to be on duty again.

From the shooting of anvils, fireworks, and the noise made generally, a person would suppose that Christmas, New Year, the fourth of July and all other holidays had combined and arrived last Saturday night.

Since the oil fever has been raging property has increased in value 100 per cent. This place is older than Cincinnati, but if we find oil, the Queen City will not be a circumstance.

Elder Taylor preached in the Christian church, Thanksgiving day.

Capt. Bradley received a fine pair of deer horns from Montana, last week.

John Carson has purchased a fine saddle and harness horse. He's a beauty.

Harry Piper is in town.

Congress is now making ready for business.

The protracted effort at St. George's Chapel continues to protract.

Business with the local Insurance Company was very brisk Monday.

The juvenile population has commenced gossipping about Santa Claus.

Read all the farmers' advertisements this week. There are several new ones this week.

Rev. Dicken's health would not admit of his filling his regular appointment last Sunday night.

The dispatch reporting Carlisle's nomination, Saturday night, made Covington extremely hilarious.

The sun has not adopted the standard time yet, and continues to rise and set as of yore. But we know of a "son" that has adopted the "standard" time, and he still continues to set and rise as before.

We understand that Prof. Gallagher, assisted by other teachers, will give an entertainment in the Morgan Academy during the latter part of the holidays. The programme will consist of music and literary exercises.

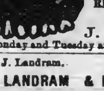
Thieves visited the Florence vicinity again last Saturday night, and attempted to enter Mr. Abel Carpenter's house by way of the cellar, but changed their notion and left without any booty. Mr. Carpenter and his old musket were on guard that night, and had they got in he'd had a regular picnic with them. They had better luck at Erlanger, and stole some money from a Mr. Riggs, but were given the bounce at Dr. Stevenson's.

ROBERT B. REED
Attorney at Law.
OFFICE AT - UNION, KY.

F. RIDDELL,
ATTORNEY at LAW
BURLINGTON, KY.
Office over Dudley Rouse's Store.

ALBERT W. GAINES,
Attorney and Counselor at Law,
LAWRENCEBURG, - - - IND.
Will practice in the courts of Boone county, Ky., Cincinnati, Ohio, Dearborn and adjoining counties, Ind. dec-6-82

W. E. VEST,
COUNTY SURVEYOR
WALTON, KY.
Is prepared to do all kinds of surveying. All orders sent him through the mail to Walton, will receive his prompt attention.



E. E. IGOE,
Resident Dentist,
Rising Sun, Ind.
WITH
J. P. Ulrey.
Monday and Tuesday at Rising Sun, Ind.

S. J. Landram. G. G. Hughes.
LANDRAM & HUGHES,
ATTORNEYS at LAW.
Will practice in the Boone Circuit Cour and the Court of Appeals. Prompt attention given to Collections, on application t G. G. Hughes, Burlington, Ky.

DR. A. B. HARRY AN
RESIDENT DENTIST.
Aurora, Indiana.
(Office Over Postoffice)
With J P. ULREY.
Dr. ULREY'S days, Wednesday and Saturday. Office open at all hours. 8-1y

L. C. NORMAN. [illegible]
NORMAN and STEPHENS,
ATTORNEYS at LAW,
UNION, BOONE CO., KY.
Will practice in the Courts of Boone Kenton and adjoining counties. Collections solicited and made throughout the State. 24 tf 81

S. W. TOLIN.
ATTORNEY AT LAW
BURLINGTON, - - Y
Office in Court-house on 2d floor.
Will manage litigation in any of the Courts of the State, contracts and other legal instruments drawn up at reasonable rates. A prompt an studious attention given to business intrusted to my care. A trial solicited. 12-1y

H. KASSEN & CO.
(Formerly of Covington.)
—Dealers in Fine—
BOOTS AND SHOES,
106 W. 5th Street,
CINCINNATI, - - - OHIO.
Custom made work a Specialty. A perfect Fit Guaranteed. dec. 20-1y

AURORA MARBLE AND GRANITE WORKS,
Aurora, Ind.
Will have constantly on hand
Marble and Granite Monuments,
Italian & American Headstones, &c.
I am ready to do all kinds of Stone Work on short notice and at low prices Hoping to receive the patronage of Boone County, I am respectfully,
F. W. KASSEBAUM.

HEYN AND BRO,
Rising Sun, Indiana.

Great reduction in prices of all Seasonable Goods.

DON'T FAIL TO SEE THE BARgains offered in Overcoats And READY MADE CLOTHING To Suit Everybody.

All Prices Marked Down.

A full line of Ladies' Black and Light Colored
Cloaks,
Dolmans,
Newmarkets,
and Jackets,
In all grades, at prices that will make them sell.

Owing to the advance of the season we are making sacrifices in order to reduce Stock, as it is our aim not to carry any goods over for next year. We are selling BLANKETS, SHAWLS, FLANNELS, and JEANS at astonishingly low prices

Our Stock of Domestic Cotton Goods at wholesale prices: Canton Flannel commonly sold at 10c. at 7½c. and other grades in proportion. See our Calicos at 5c. and you will buy them. Indigo Blue Calico, commonly sold at 9 and 10 cents, now 7½ cents. A full line of Ladies' and Gents' Furnishing Goods and Knit Goods, to dispose of. We mean and do business, and it will be to everybodys advantage to give us a call.

HEYN & BRO.
Rising Sun, Ind.

A MUSICAL INSTRUMENT
that will play any tune, and that any one, even a child, can operate.

The Organette has gained such a world-wide reputation that a lengthy description of it is not necessary. It will be sufficient to say that it is a PERFECT ORGAN that plays mechanically all the sacred airs, popular music, songs, dances, etc. etc. It consists of three strong bellows and set of reeds with EXPRESSION box and SWELL. A strip of perforated paper represents the tune, and it is only necessary to place the paper tune in the instrument, as shown in the picture, and turn the handle, which both operates the bellows and propels the paper tune. The perforations in the paper allow the right reeds to sound and a perfect tune is the result, perfect in time, execution, and effect, without the least knowledge of music being required of the performer; even a little child can operate it, as is shown in the picture, a little girl is playing a song and her playmates are singing the words. It is tuned in the key best suited for the human voice to sing by. It interests and entertains both old and young, assists in training the voice and AFFORDS HOURS OF SOCIAL AMUSEMENT. The Organette is perfectly represented by the picture. It is made of solid black walnut, decorated in gilt, and is both handsome and ornamental. The price of similar instruments has hitherto been $8, and the demand has constantly increased until now there are over 75,000 in use. We are encouraged to place the Organette on the market at this greatly reduced price, believing that the sale will warrant the reduction. The Organette though similar in construction is an improvement upon our well-known Organette, which sells for $8 and $10. It contains the same number of reeds and plays the same tunes. Our offer is this: On receipt of $7 we will send the Organette by express to any address, and include FREE $2.50 worth of music, or on receipt of $5 we will send it with over $1.50 worth of music FREE, or for $3.50 we will send it with small selection of music FREE. The price includes boxing and packing. These are agent's prices, and we will appoint the first purchaser from any town our agent, if he so desires. Address,

$7 for $3.50.

AN ORCHESTRA IN EVERY HOME.
The Massachusetts Organ Co., 57 Washington Street, Boston, Mass., U. S. A.

FALL
AND
Winter Clothi'g

Clothing of the best goods, well trimmed, in the latest styles, made under my direct supervision and sold at lower prices than are asked for badly made, shoddy goods at other places. Call and be assured.

A splendid line of Suitings. Suits MADE to order on short notice.

H. F Blase,
540 Madison St, - COVINGTON, KY

Stop! Don't Read This.

S. C BUCHANAN takes this method of notifying his patrons that he has enlarged his room and now has the best and most complete stock of Drugs in the county, consisting of Drugs and Medicines, Standard Patent Medicines, &c.

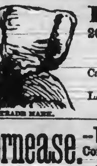
Notions and Fancy Goods, Combs, Brushes, Toilet Powders Perfumery, Toilet and Medicated Soaps.

Also Spices of all kinds, Flavoring Extracts in bulk, Horse and Cattle Powders and many other things that we have not the room to mention here. If you call for anything not in Stock we will get it for you at the regular price, if it takes all the profit.

When in need of anything give us a call, at the Petersburg Duru Store, and be convinced that our Prices are as Low or LOWER than can be found.

Don't Read Any Further.

M.L. SWETNAM. HUBERT NEED.
SWETNAM & NEAD,
(SUCCESSOR TO ALONZO GRAVES)
LIVERY AND BOARDING STABLE
AND TRANSFER LINE.
79 Pike Street, Covington, Ky.
Horses Kept by the Day, Week or Month.
Horses and Buggies for Hire.
Stock of all kinds Bought and Sold.
Best Care Taken of Horses entrusted to our Keeping.
All Orders for Hauling Promptly Attended to.

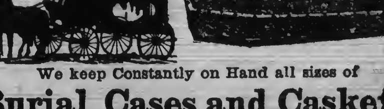


MOTHER NOBLE'S HEALING SYRUP.
20 Million Bottles sold in 10 years. A certain Cure for Dyspepsia, all Diseases of the Kidneys, Liver, Stomach, Blood, Skin and Bowels.
Can Produce Thousands of Letters proving its Curative Powers.
AN OLD AND LONG TRIED REMEDY.
LABORATORY 77 AMITY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.
FOR SALE BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

Cornease.—The King of Corn Killers. The most desperate Corns, BUNIONS, WARTS &c., SPEEDILY cured. Price 25 Cents.
Footease.—An Unfailing Remedy for Hot, Swollen and Tender Feet, Chilblains, &c. Price 25 Cents.
Cornease Manuf'g Co., 236, 5th Ave. Place, N. Y. City.
For Sale by Agents, Druggists and Shoe Dealers.

JAMES S. WAYNE, President. JNO. L. SANDFORD, Cashier
CAPITAL $300,000.
FARMERS AND TRADERS
NATIONAL BANK.
Covington, Kentucky.
DIRECTORS.
James S. Wayne, M. C. Motch, Sam Hind, E. J. Hickey, E. J. Green
J. S. Matson, J. H. Mersman, J. L. Sandford, L. H Dills, F. P. Helm
L. C. Stephens.
The general operations of banking transacted upon the most favorable terms. collections made on all points in the United States.
The Business and Accounts of Farmers are Especially Solicited by this Bank. dec. 20-6m

City Flouring Mills
RISING SUN, INDIANA.
FLOUR EXCHANGED FOR WHEAT OR CASH. THE HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR GOOD WHEAT.
mar7-tf28 J. W. Talbott.



UNDERTAKING.
We keep Constantly on Hand all sizes of
Burial Cases and Caskets.
And having just received a beautiful
NEW HEARSE,
Which can be had at a reasonable price when desired.
PRICES GUARANTEED LESS THAN CITY PRICES.
DAVIS BROS., - - HEBRON, KY.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL, Publishers.

BURLINGTON, : : KENTUCKY

A Rattlesnake Catcher.

John C. Geer, of Long Eddy, a veteran rattlesnake catcher, has just shipped four rattlers, averaging over four feet in length, to a museum in Rochester. Mr. Geer does a lively business in rattlesnakes. He catches them for traveling shows and menageries, and sells them at a good round price. His method of capture is very simple. With his feet encased in a pair of heavy cowhide boots, through which the fangs of the snakes can not penetrate, he goes out into the woods only a short distance from his farm-house. Armed with a heavy cane he walks along until he sees or hears a rattler. If it is coiled up a blow with the cane will straighten it out, and while it is uncoiled it can not strike. Holding it firmly back of the head with the cane, he slips a small hood of thick woolen cloth over its head and ties it fast. The snake can then wiggle and strike as much as it pleases—it is harmless. After two or three are captured they are put into a bag and carried home. There they are put into a box specially prepared for their reception, having a front of thick plate-glass. At first they are furious, and writhe and plunge about, striking at the sides of the box in a most extraordinary manner, but they finally quiet down and take kindly to their new quarters. They are fed three times a day regularly. Their food consists of frogs, mice, gophers, and sometimes small birds. Mr. Greer says August is the most dangerous of all months for capturing the snakes, because they are shedding their skins and can not see; and so do not give the customary three alarm rattles. "Snakes is curious," said Mr. Greer. "Snakes is curious and no mistake. These varmints never think of biting at any other time of the year without calling out a warning 'cept in August, and then they are fearfully touchy. I suppose it's because, as they can't see, they are afraid of being hurt all the time. More people get bit by rattlesnakes in August than in all the rest of the year put together. You see, the varmints, bein' so blind, don't know where they crawl to, and often they curl themselves up right alongside of a road, and sometimes in the middle of it. They are very sensitive, and the minute they hear any one near them they try to bite. That's why so many of these city folks who come up in the Sullivan County mountains for rest, as they call it, get poisoned, and once in a while die. Most of 'em dies from fright, though, 'cause with proper care they can always be cured. After dark is the meanest time with rattlers in August. You see, generally the rattler goes to sleep at sundown, or if he is awake he is afraid and keeps quiet. But in August his tender hide and his eyes pain him so he can't sleep well, and he is just as apt as not to stretch himself out on one of the footpaths. If he does you can just bet that the man or woman who comes in his way gets bit."—N. Y. Sun.

Is Water Power Disappearing in New England?

There has not been a time in many years when the water in the various streams and rivers has been so low as this season. Streams which have never given out before have been so low that they were practically worthless, and this emphasizes the fact that the steam engine is the coming power, for the long-vaunted water power of New England is giving out. Various causes have appeared to make the water power less, and even less than it was supposed to be, and these causes have been working all the time and increasing in practical effect, so that now it is giving out almost in every place of any account, with some very few exceptions, where the timber has not yet been cut off back in the sources of supply on the hills or mountains. The effect upon the goods trade upon this account is already appreciable, and there is a demand for the best kinds of cotton, which was not expected so early in the season, if we are to take all the views which are expressed upon this matter and put them together. The curtailment of production on account of the drought will work in the present state of the market, a very great advantage, and really it will be out of the reach of buyers to make a very large break in prices of manufactured cottons, for the reason that the supply is very much cut down at present. In this way it will make a brighter fall trade and a better outlook for the winter trade, more especially if we have such a winter as we have had in two or three instances where the water has not been in its usual quantity until almost spring, instead of early in the fall, as usual, and it will be another instance of exceptional conditions to prevent the market from breaking down under the load of accumulated goods. One thing is far beyond question now, and that is that the water power of the Eastern States is fast fading away, and that it is less than it was a few years ago, and is growing less each and every year. Let us look, therefore, to steam with a clearer eye, and learn more of it, and how to handle it, so that we can keep up the busy wheels of the million of cotton spindles and thousands of sets of woolen machinery. Water power in the Eastern States is doomed, and it will not be long until we are a steam spinning section of the country.—Cotton, Wool and Iron.

A Pun Extraordinary.

They were talking of puns. She said when a man made a pun he was always proud of it, but when a woman made one she had the grace to be ashamed of it.

He said that woman was justly ashamed of her puns, for they were invariably wretched; that a woman could semi-annually make a good pun, but she had to bend her whole mind to it, and sometimes sit up all night to make it work smoothly, while man could always make a first-class pun off-hand.

She said it was no such a thing. She could make as good a pun on any word as fast as any horrid man.

"Well," said the skeptical wretch, "make a pun on horseshoe."

"If you talk until you're horseshoe can't convince me," said the feeble-minded woman.

And he died.—Oil City Derrick.

—Creamy sauce: Half a cupful of butter, one cupful of powdered sugar, one-fourth of a cup of cream or milk, one teaspoonful of vanilla or lemon extract. Beat the butter to a cream; add sugar gradually, beating it all the while. When light and creamy, add extract and cream a little at a time. This is a delicious sauce, and when well beaten will be white and foamy all through.—Boston Post.

Expensive Mining in Montana.

Near the Anaconda is the Colusa Mine—also copper. It runs its ore directly into smelting works of its own. For the year ended September 1 it had shipped 8,100 tons for export, which averaged 65 per cent. copper and 55 ounces silver per ton. Within five minutes' ride of the Anaconda are the Lexington, Alice and Moulton, all silver mines. The first named, after yielding $1,800,000 to its owners, was sold to a French company for $3,000,000. It runs sixty stamps. Its works cover several acres. Its monthly production of silver bullion now averages $1,106,000—about half profit. The Alice Mine produces $100,000 monthly, the Moulton $65,000, the Silver Bow Company $35,000, and so on through a long list of smaller properties, until the mind is bewildered, and millions begin to seem the unit of counting. The shipments of gold and silver bullion, chiefly the latter, average about $500,000 a month. The weekly shipments of copper ore and matte—as the product after smelting is called—averages 100 car-loads, or about 3,000 tons per month. There are forty mines equipped with steam-hoisting machinery, and over 100 smaller mines, all worked at a good profit.

While individuals by prospecting have made valuable discoveries, and attained a moderate competency, the great results mentioned above are only possible where enormous capital can be commanded for the development. Most of these great mines were sold by their first discoverers for $33,000 and less. Then capital stepped in, and began its work. One of those above expended $1,700,000 in preparation. One paid $95,000 freight on the machinery and material for its buildings. The silver ore in its reduction requires a ton of salt to each ten tons of ore. The salt costs $30 per ton. Each "pan" of 3,000 pounds of the ore prepared for the action of quicksilver requires 300 pounds of the latter article every hour. Wood costs $6.50 a cord. The Alice, Lexington and Moulton burn 3,300 cords per month. One mine returned $100,000 to the assessor as the value of its wood on hand. The Colorado and Montana smelters consume each 25,000 cords per year. Coke is brought from Pennsylvania for the smelters, and coal from Utah. The mines and reduction works employ about 2,500 workmen, and their weekly pay-roll is about half a million dollars.—Cor. Chicago Tribune.

Angora and Persian Cats.

"Are Angora cats getting to be fashionable for pets?" asked a reporter of an East-side dealer.

"O, yes, indeed," was the reply; "within the last month the demand has been quite large, and, strange to say, I sell as many by mail as I do in the city. Only yesterday I sent one to New Orleans, and last week one to Chicago. They seem to be rapidly taking the place of pugs. Come in and see the cats."

So saying, the reporter was shown into a room where a dozen or more animals with long tails and hair sweeping the floor were playing together or sleeping on hair cushions. Some were white, some tortoise, and others mouse-colored, or blue, in the parlance of the trade.

"There are also black and chinchilla cats," said the dealer. "These blue ones are the rarest, but the white cats seem to be greatest favorites. Some people maintain that only the white cats are the pure bred, but that is not so, as quite frequently white cats will have different colored kittens."

"What is the most valuable cat you have?"

"This large white Tom is the most expensive; he is worth $50. The other cats are worth from $40 to $50. The kittens are worth $20 for the males and $15 for the females."

The dealer then explained the difference between the Angora and Persian cats, which is very slight, the Persians having a longer face and longer ears. The animals are very delicate, and require great care in raising, colds being the chief enemies of the feline kind. Each cat must have a hair-cushion and be washed regularly and rubbed with cocoanut oil. Birds and scraped beef are found to be the best food for them. A few cats are imported from England, but most of them are raised by a man in Maine.

"Do you have any trouble in disposing of them?"

"O, no; I can sell more than I can get. A great many are bought for Christmas presents, and from now until New Year's the demand will be very large. I shall probably sell several hundred. Yes, the profit is good, especially on those I raise myself.—N. Y. Mail and Express.

How Tally is Kept of the People in Hotel Dining Rooms.

The opportunities for stealing a dinner in one of the big New York hotels are not promising. The arrangements have been so thoroughly perfected that it would be pleasanter for a man to suffer the pangs of incipient starvation than risk the mental wear and tear and physical harm incident to the theft.

For some years hotel beats flourished in New York. They lounged about the corridors of their favorite hostelries, often had their letters addressed to the office, and were so much on hand that the employes of the house supposed they were regular patrons. Then the hotels began a regular crusade against them, and they have been relegated to the free lunch counters of the more prosperous saloons.

The same system is now in vogue at all of the city hotels. The head waiter is the sentry of the dining room. Five minutes before the dinner hour a list of the guests of the hotel is sent up stairs by the clerk. On the list is the number of every room in the house with the name of the occupant (if any) opposite. The head waiter stands by the door, and when a guest comes in he is asked quietly the number of his room. He gives it, and the waiter instantly sends him to a table. The man, if he thinks of it at all, supposes that the number of his room has something to do with his seat and passes on. The instant his back is turned the head waiter consults his list, and if the room of the number given is vacant, or if it is occupied by some one known to the waiter, he goes at once to the man, and while deftly rearranging the napkin or placing the knives and forks in neat rows, asks him seductively his name. If the name fails to clear away the doubt the clerk is sent for. He may recognize the man. If he does not an investigation is made at once, and if the man is proved a fraud he is taken out and handed over to the police.

The head waiters of the hotels are usually men of great discrimination, and accurate judges of character. They seldom make mistakes, but when they do slip up their errors are clothed in such suavity and gentleness that even the professional beats can not get angry with them.—N. Y. Sun.

HOME AND FARM.

—Eggs are often laid before the shell has had time to form. Sometimes it is caused by overfeeding, the ovaries being stimulated beyond their natural degree, and sometimes on account of deficiency of calcareous matter.—Troy Times.

—It is a good plan to make a little pair of sleeves to draw over the baby's arms when he is playing on the floor; a rubber cord may be run in the top if care is taken not to have it too tight; sleeves made of stockinet draw on and off easily.—N. Y. Post.

—Lumps felt in cows' teats are caused, says the Mirror and Farmer, by impure circulation of the blood. Give the following: Emetic tartar, four drams, iodide of potassium, four drams; mixed and divided into eight powders. Give one night and morning in bran. Do not feed any corn meal or vegetables.

—Steak pie: Cut a tender steak into thin slices and sprinkle them with a little finely-chopped mushroom, onion and parsley, season well with pepper and salt, rubbing the seasoning thoroughly over them on both sides; then roll up each slice of beef. Put into a saucepan a layer of bacon, then the rolls and just enough water to cover them: simmer gently until tender, but not overdone, with the lid on the saucepan. Have ready a pie dish lined and bordered with paste, put in the meat and a few hard-boiled eggs quartered; reduce the gravy, pour it over the meat, cover with paste and bake in a quick oven.—N. Y. Herald.

—A new pest has come to trouble the farmers of the Guadalupe and Oso Flaco region, San Luis Obispo County, Nev., which they call the "bean bird," as it is very destructive to the fields of that plant, and in the past season has totally destroyed the beans of some fields and greatly injured all. The bird resembles the wren, is a tiny little animated lump of gray feathers, appearing in great numbers, but not in dense flocks, never alight in trees, but make their nests and roost in the ground.—Chicago Times.

—A mixture which is excellent for removing grease spots and stains from carpets and clothing is made of two ounces of ammonia, two ounces of white castile soap, one ounce of glycerine, one ounce of ether: cut the soap fine, dissolve in one pint of water over the fire; add two quarts of water. This should be mixed with water in the proportion of a teacupful to one ordinary-sized pail of water. Mix thoroughly and wash soiled garments in it. For removing spots use a sponge or clean flannel cloth, and with a dry cloth rub as dry as possible. Woolen goods may be made to look bright and fresh by being sponged with this.—Boston Transcript.

—As a matter of economy and good management, says the Rural Messenger, be sure to have a rat-proof crib. This can be done at very little trouble or expense. Build the house of skinned poles or lattice-work plank; let the sills rest on small blocks four feet high, capped with sheets of tin or large tin pans inverted, and be guarded to leave nothing leaning against the house but a step-ladder, and this must be kept under the house except when in use to get out corn. This being done, you will no longer be pestered with the filth and waste of rats and mice. This is the year to have you a cheap rat-proof crib and help to save your shelled corn crop.

The Mechanical Efforts of Roots.

The true mechanical efforts of roots are exerted in their struggle for progress through the soil, and examples for illustration are many. To understand the magnitude of their work, we must bear in mind that each root displaces an amount of soil equal to its own bulk. Take for instance a crop of mangel wurzels, and imagine what an upheaval must have been produced in the soil by the growth of its enormous mass. The whole surface of the field is raised and its particles loosened.

In practical questions of the farm, this power is of value. Those who give turnips and mangels a place in their system of rotation, do so ostensibly for their feeding value, but beyond this their mechanical effect is also of much importance.

The most striking results of the mechanical power of roots are seen when they come in contact with the most resisting obstacles. They have been unearthed from compact gravelly soil, where the struggle for room had been so fierce that they became distorted out of all natural shape. It is not unusual to find trees growing in the clefts of ledges showing unmistakably that the expansion of the roots has forced the rock apart. A case is cited, on good authority, of a root of the sugar maple that had pushed its way under a rock weighing nearly two tons, and by its enlargement lifted it entirely from its bed. Trees have been observed growing on the bare rock, resting upon their roots which ran out into the soil on either side, and yet these roots, supporting the enormous weight of the tree, formed each year new growth on their underside, and lifted the tree by the space of its thickness until seven inches of wood had been formed under the severe pressure.—Mr. W. E. Stone, in American Agriculturist.

Frozen Grass.

Frozen grass is not wholesome food. The hoar frost upon it chills the stomach and causes indigestion. It is not that the grass has been frozen, but its frozen condition, which is injurious, and the injury arises from the chilling of the stomach and the blood. The blood is soon chilled. One may discover this by pouring ice-cold water upon his wrists when heated, in the hot summer weather, when he will very soon feel the cool current flowing through his whole body. This sudden cooling may be easily overdone and produce serious mischief, driving the blood to the brain and causing fatal apoplexy, or at least alarming giddiness and pressure. In the cow's stomach the cold from frozen food or ice-cold water produces the same effect. The blood is driven from the stomach, digestion is arrested in consequence, and the animal may have an attack of apoplexy which is commonly known as "staggers." But although this may not happen, the digestive function is paralyzed and there is danger of impaction of the stomach, which is commonly known as dry murrain. One can not be too careful in avoiding this danger by keeping the cows in until the frost has disappeared and the grass has been warmed by the sun. The same care should be observed with sheep and horses, and especially colts, which are quite easily injured in this way.—N. Y. Times.

—David Lincoln, a pioneer of Chautauqua County, New York, though seventy-two years old, can lift readily a thousand pounds, and there is not a youth in Mayville, where he lives, that can chop a big hickory log in two as quickly as he.—Buffalo Express.

Let Well Enough Alone.

"Now, sir," said an Austin aurist to a gentleman whose wife's organs of hearing were being treated, "I can safely assure you that one of your wife's ears is as well as ever, and I hope to soon have the other one in the same condition."

"O, don't mind that, I beg of you," said the husband.

"Don't mind it! What do you mean?" exclaimed the surprised physician.

"Let her remain as she is now. Give her back to me in her present condition. I want her so that there will be no danger of what I say to her going into one ear and coming out of the other. If she keeps one ear stopped up, she will become a very wise woman. She will know as much as I do after awhile."—Texas Siftings.

He was Misunderstood.

"I have something—particular—to say to you, Miss Edith," said Elmer de Garcelone, as he drew himself where he could watch the firelight play in her face. "Well, I've been expecting—something—of the kind," replied Edith, and she tried to stare a live coal out of countenance. "There's a change come over my prospects—I'm no longer the wealthy de Garcelone who paid you court at Saratoga the past season." "Don't mention it. I know all. I have determined that I shall still be true to you." "Heavens! but that's just what I don't want you to be. I've fixed up a match with Ethel de Bullion, worth a million and a half, and I just dropped in to tell you about it." Breach of promise suit now on.—Hartford Post.

—The Kingston Whig says that the Marchioness of Lansdowne, who succeeds the Princess Louise as the first lady in the Dominion, by virtue of being the wife of the Governor-General, is the youngest daughter of the present Duke of Abercorn, who claims direct descent from the Stuarts, and who is the "living image" of the luckless Charles I. She is not by any means a handsome woman, but she is intensely aristocratic looking. She is one of the great leaders of fashion in the upper ten thousand. As Lady Hamilton she resided with her father during his occupancy of the office of Viceroy of Ireland, where she was exceedingly popular with the inner set of English officials.

—A paper in Mount Carmel, Mo., records the the marriage of a gentleman and lady for the third time though they had never been divorced, and had lived together for seven years. The first time they were married they procured their license to marry in Edwards County, and unthinkingly crossed over the line into White and had the ceremony performed. Learning of their mistake they the same time day returned to Edwards and a second ceremony was gone through with. The man is a Catholic, and, as those of that faith do not regard a marriage as binding unless performed by a priest (and Sunday being the first time they had found it convenient to find such a person), to please him another ceremony was performed.

—A victorious defeat: "Miss Belle Fisher—"I cannot tell you how sorry I am! I never suspected for a moment that——" Young Jameson, from Indiana—"Oh! that's all right; don't let that worry you. Why, Miss Fisher, I have been refused by nine girls in one summer! I pop to 'em before they are ready—they, of course, say no, but generally in a way that might mean yes later." Miss B. F.—"That is not the case this time, I assure you." Young J.—"Oh, that's what they always say, and I pretend to take it au serieux. Gives me time to think it over, you know. Isn't this a glorious afternoon?"—Life.

—By the will of Oakes Ames a large fund was left for the benefit of the children of North Easton, Mass. The trustees have decided to continue to use some of this money in subscriptions for a magazine for every family having school children in the village. In order that the children of other parts of the township may enjoy the same privilege, Lieutenant-Governor Ames has contributed for the third year the amount needed to furnish them also with magazines. There are four hundred and thirty-two copies of magazines distributed in Easton.—Boston Herald.

—In Paris a light cane is considered an indispensable part of the outfit of the fashionable theater-goer, who takes it to his seat; the umbrella, however, is strictly banished even from the minor theaters by a police regulation which dates from the reign of Louis Phillippe, the "umbrella" king.

A Voice From the Northwest.

MILWAUKEE, WIS.—The Daily Sentinel, which is the leading morning paper of this State, writes: "St. Jacobs Oil, the wonderful remedy for rheumatism, has been used by a large number of people in this city, and with effect truly marvelous."

THE impecunious man who married an heiress always spoke of her as a capital wife.

THE MARKETS.

CINCINNATI, November 30, 1883.

LIVE STOCK—Cattle—common	$2 00	@ 2 75
Choice butchers	4 00	@ 4 75
HOGS—Common	3 70	@ 4 30
Good packers	4 50	@ 4 75
SHEEP	3 75	@ 4 50
FLOUR—Family	4 60	@ 5 00
GRAIN—Wheat—Longberry red	1 10	@ 1 11
No. 2 red	1 04	@ 1 05
Corn—No. 2 mixed	53½	@
Oats—No. 2 mixed	32	@
Rye—No. 2	60	@ 61
HAY—Timothy No. 1	10 00	@10 50
HEMP—Double dressed	8½	@
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	13 00	@13 25
Lard—Prime steam	7-70	@
BUTTER—Fancy Dairy	24	@ 25
Prime Creamery	25	@ 34
FRUIT AND VEGETABLES—
Potatoes per bar. from store	1 25	@ 1 30
Apples, prime, per barrel	2 50	@ 3 00
NEW YORK.
FLOUR—State and Western	$2 85	@ 3 30
Good to choice	3 50	@ 4 20
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 spring	1 06	@
No. 2 red	1 11¾	@ 1 12¾
Corn—No. 2 mixed	62¾	@ 64
Oats—mixed	35	@ 38
PORK—Mess	12 25	@12 50
CHICAGO.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 50	@ 4 25
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	98	@ 1 00
Corn—No. 2	53	@ 53¾
Oats—No. 2	30	@
Rye	58	@
PORK—Mess	12 80	@12 90
LARD—Steam	7-60	@ 7-65
BALTIMORE.
FLOUR—Family	$5 00	@ 5 75
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 07½	@ 1 07¾
Corn—mixed	57	@ 58
Oats—mixed	37	@ 39
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	13 25	@
Lard—Refined	9	@
LOUISVILLE.
FLOUR—A No. 1	$4 00	@ 4 50
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red, new	1 04½	@
Corn—mixed	52	@
Oats—mixed	30½	@ 31½
PORK—MESS	13	@
INDIANAPOLIS.
WHEAT—No. 2 red, new	$1 03	@
CORN—mixed	51½	@
OATS—mixed	29½	@
LIVE STOCK—Cattle—
Butchers' stock	2 75	@ 3 00
Shipping cattle	5 25	@

"A Drop of Joy in Every Word."

DR. R. V. PIERCE, Buffalo, N. Y.: Three months ago I was broken out with large ulcers and sores on my body, limbs and face. I procured your "Golden Medical Discovery" and "Purgative Pellets" and have taken six bottles, and to-day I am in good health, all those ugly ulcers having healed and left my skin in a natural, healthy condition. I thought at one time that I could not be cured. Although I can but poorly express my gratitude to you, yet there is a drop of joy in every word I write. Yours truly,

JAMES O. BELLIS, Flemington, N. J.

"Discovery" sold by druggists.

ENGLISHMEN when traveling through the boundless West are struck with the enormous amount of land to the acre.—Chicago Herald.

FROM MAJOR DOWNS, Military Instructor, Mt. Pleasant Academy, Sing Sing, N. Y.: During the very cold weather I was suffering with Catarrh. My head and throat ached so severely that I was obliged to keep quiet. Ely's Cream Balm was suggested. Within an hour from the first application I felt relieved, the pain began to subside. In a few days I was entirely cured. W. A. DOWNS.

SAID an English peer, amid the Pyramids: "I see that here mummy's the word."

DR. R. V. PIERCE'S "Golden Medical Discovery" cures every kind of humor, from the common pimple or eruption to the worst scrofula.

Four to six bottles cure salt-rheum or tetter.

One to five bottles cure the worst kind of pimples on the face.

Two to four bottles clear the system of boils, carbuncles and sores.

Five to eight bottles cure corrupt or running ulcers and the worst scrofula.

By druggists, and in half-dozen and dozen lots at great discount.

A WIFE is a blessing; hence a dumb wife is an unspeakable one.

WEAK lungs, spitting of blood, consumption and kindred affections, cured without physician. Address for treatise, with two stamps, WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y.

THE canned fruit market is said to be jammed.—N. Y. News.

NEW BERN, N. C.—Rev. G. W. Offley says: "I have taken Brown's Iron Bitters, and consider it one of the best medicines known."

IS a discarded lover a beau not?—Oil City Derrick.

REMARKABLE for overcoming diseases caused by impure water, decaying vegetation, etc., is Brown's Iron Bitters.

BILL-COLLECTING is easier said than "dun."—Chicago News.

ROCK HILL, S. C.—Rev. J. S. White says: "I used Brown's Iron Bitters for general debility. It restored me to strength and vigor."

IT takes a "bucket shop" to make a man turn pale.—The Eye.

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer

Is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from dandruff, restore gray hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which Sulphur, Sugar of Lead and Nitrate of Silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. JOHN D. PARK & SONS, Wholesale Agents, Cincinnati, Ohio, and C. N. CRITTENTON, N. Y.

IF afflicted with Sore Eyes, use Dr. Isaac Thompson's Eye Water. Druggists sell it. 25c.

PISO'S CURE will cure Coughs, Asthma, Bronchitis and Consumption. 25 cents.

SWIFT'S Specific (S. S. S.) has relieved me of an obstinate case of Dry Tetter, which had troubled me for twenty-five years, and had baffled all sorts of treatment.

REV. I. R. BRANHAM, Macon, Ga.

THE greatest Engine in the world is the new Baxter portable, in use all over the world. Descriptive circulars free. Address J. C. TODD, 17 Barclay, St., New York.

TESTED BY TIME. For Throat Diseases, Colds, and Coughs, BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES have proved their efficacy by a test of many years. Sold only in boxes.

AFTER long Mercury and Potash treatment, I found myself a cripple from Mercurial Rheumatism. Tried Hot Springs two years without relief, and was finally cured sound and well by the use of Swift's Specific (S. S. S.)

CHAS. BERG,
Hot Springs, Ark.

Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar

For coughs and colds is renowned. Pike's toothache drops cure in one minute.

St. Jacobs Oil

THE GREAT GERMAN REMEDY
For Pain!
Relieves and cures
RHEUMATISM,
Neuralgia,
SCIATICA, LUMBAGO,
BACKACHE,
Headache, Toothache,
SORE THROAT,
QUINSY, SWELLINGS,
SPRAINS,
Soreness, Cuts, Bruises,
FROSTBITES,
BURNS, SCALDS,
And all other bodily aches and pains
FIFTY CENTS A BOTTLE.
Sold by all Druggists and Dealers. Directions in 11 languages.
The Charles A. Vogeler Co.
(Successors to A. VOGELER & CO.)
Baltimore, Md., U. S. A.

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED

STOMACH BITTERS

Though shaken in every joint and fiber with fever and ague, or bilious remittent, the system may yet be freed from the malignant virus with Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Protect the system against it with this beneficent anti-spasmodic, which is furthermore a supreme remedy for liver complaint, constipation, dyspepsia, debility, rheumatism, kidney troubles and other ailments. For sale by all Druggists and Dealers generally.

CATARRH ELY'S CREAM BALM

when applied by the finger into the nostrils, will be absorbed, effectually cleansing the head of catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions. It allays inflammation, protects the membrane of the nasal passages from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores taste and smell. A few applications relieve. A thorough treatment will positively cure. Agreeable to use.

HAY-FEVER

Send for circular. Price 50 cents by mail or at druggists. Ely Brothers, Druggists, Owego, N.Y.

NEVER BEFORE SEEN IN THIS COUNTRY.
ONLY A SMALL QUANTITY OFFERED.
London Colored Christmas and New Year's Cards.
Size, seven inches long, four inches wide. Ten cents each, three for twenty-five cents. Sold in England for double the money. Mailed, postage free, on receipt of price. UTILE DULCI PUBLISHING CO. Box 2, New York P. O.

PATENTS NO PATENT, NO PAY! R. S. & A. P. LACEY, Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C. Full Instructions and Hand-Book of Patents sent free.

PATENTS promptly procured in all countries. American Patent Agency, 183 Fifth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

PHOTOGRAPHS (originals) sent for 25c. Postal Note. Dealers supplied. C. L. Ritsmann, 943 B'way, N. Y.

CHICAGO SCALE CO.
2 TON WAGON SCALE, $40. 3 TON, $50.
4 Ton $60, Beam Box Included.
240 lb. FARMER'S SCALE, $5.
The "Little Detective," ¼ oz. to 25 lb. $3.
300 OTHER SIZES. Reduced PRICE LIST FREE.
FORGES, TOOLS, &c.
BEST FORGE MADE FOR LIGHT WORK, $10.
40 lb. Anvil and Kit of Tools, $10.
Farmers save time and money doing odd jobs.
Blowers, Anvils, Vices & Other Articles
AT LOWEST PRICES, WHOLESALE & RETAIL.

ST. PATRICK'S SALVE
TRY IT USE IT
It relieves at once Burns, Piles, Chapped Hands or Lips, Corns, Bunions, Scalds, Bruises, Soreness of feet, hands, eyes, etc.; Itching from any cause. 25c. Ask your druggist, or send to 83 Fulton Street, N. Y.

Free! Cards and Chromos.

We will send free by mail a sample set of our large German, French and American Chromo Cards, on tinted and gold grounds, with a price list of over 200 different designs, on receipt of a stamp for postage. We will also send free by mail, as samples, ten of our beautiful Chromos, on receipt of ten cents to pay for packing and postage; also inclose a confidential price list of our large oil chromos. Agents wanted. Address F. GLEASON & Co, 46 Summer Street, Boston, Mass.

DR. HORNE'S ELECTRIC BELT
Cures Nervousness, Rheumatism, Paralysis, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Kidney, Spine and Liver diseases, Gout, Asthma, Heart Disease, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Erysipelas, Catarrh, Piles, Epilepsy, Impotency, Prolapsus Uteri, Diabetes, etc. RUPTURE CURED BY ELECTRICITY. Only Electric Truss in the world. Agents wanted in every town. Send for Circular. Dr. W. J. HORNE, Inventor, 191 Wabash Av. Chicago, Ill.

CONSUMPTION.
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address.
DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., New York.

AGENTS WANTED To sell the PIONEER HISTORY OF AMERICA, by A. L. MASON and PROF. J. C. RIDPATH. 1032 Imperial Octavo pages, 300 magnificent illustrations. Specimen Pages FREE. JONES BROS. & CO., Pub., Cincinnati, O.

PILES "Anakesis" gives instant relief, and is an infallible cure for Piles. Price $1 from druggists, or sent prepaid by mail. Samples free. Ad. "ANAKESIS," Makers, Box 2416, New York.

CANCER AND TUMORS Treated scientifically and cured without the knife. Book on treatment sent free.
Drs. Gratigny & Norris
204 W. 4th St., Cincinnati, O.

"THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST."
SAW MILLS, ENGINES THRESHERS, Horse Powers,
(For all sections and purposes.) Write for Free Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

FREE CHRISTMAS PACKAGE.
To introduce our goods and secure future trade, we will send you free of charge, if you will send 20c in stamps for postage, etc., 5 pretty Christmas Cards, 5 nice New Year Cards, 1 lovely Birthday Card, a beautiful gilt-bound floral Autograph Album, illustrated with birds, flowers, ferns, etc., a handsome Photographic Portrait of all the Presidents of the United States neatly arranged in an album with a fac-simile Autograph of each, also our new Holiday Book.
BABCOCK & CO., Centerbrook, Conn.

PISO'S CURE FOR
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good.
Use in time. Sold by druggists.
CONSUMPTION.
.25 100

CANCERS, Scrofula, Salt Rheum, Erysipelas, Rheumatism, and all Blood diseases, cured by Loose's Extract Red Clover. Send for circulars and testimonials. J. M. LOOSE & CO., Monroe, Mich.

CINCINNATI COLLEGE OF MUSIC and School of Oratory, 305 Race. Home comforts, parental care, best instruction, boarding department. For circulars add. MRS. D. N. GEPPERT, Cincinnati, O.

$250 A MONTH. Agents Wanted. 90 best selling articles in the world. 1 sample FREE. Address JAY BRONSON, DETROIT, MICH.

PILES CURED in two to three days. Send for circular. Price, 50c per box. A. RAFFENSPERGER, Springfield, O.

HAIR Wigs & Waves sent C.O.D. anywhere. Wholesale & Retail. Price-list free. Goods guaranteed. B.C.STREHL, 157 Wabash-av., Chicago.

AGENTS make money selling our Family Medicines; no capital required. STANDARD CURE CO., 197 Pearl St., NEW YORK.

ASTHMA, Neuralgia Cured. FREE to poor. Add. Dr. Ralston, Cape Girardeau, Mo.

COLEMAN BUSINESS COLLEGE, Newark, N. J. Terms $40. Positions for graduates: write for circular.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address STINSON & Co., Portland, Me.

VIGOR, HEALTH AND LIFE
Is found in the Great Modern Discovery,
DR. SCOTT'S
Coca, Beef and Iron
(With Phosphorus.)
Possessing marvelous curative virtues in all forms of Nervous Debility, Brain, Heart and Nervous Diseases, Dyspepsia, Weak Lungs, Impoverishment of the Blood, Incipient Paralysis, Nervous Headache, Sleeplessness, Convulsions, St. Vitus' Dance, Opium Habit, Alcoholism, Kidney, Bladder and Urinary Weaknesses, Nervous Weakness and Losses, Prostatis or otherwise, and all ailments brought about by excesses that exhaust the Force and Energy of the Brain and Nervous System. Sold by all Druggists at $1 per bottle; 6 Bottles, $5.
JOHN D. PARK & SONS,
General Agents, Cincinnati, O.
☞ In obscure and complicated diseases requiring skill and experience, consult DR. SCOTT, 513 Wyandotte street, Kansas City, Mo.
Send stamp for the Messenger of Health, and read of wonderful cures effected by Coca, Beef and Iron.

Our Little Ones and The Nursery.

The most beautiful Magazine in the World for the Youngest Readers.
The Literary and Artistic success of the Age!
Every Article written expressly for its pages!
Every Picture made expressly for this work, by the best Artists.
The most valuable Premiums! A Premium for every subscription and renewal! Clubs with all Periodicals! Send Postal for our New Premium List!
Send Postal for a Free Specimen.
All Newsdealers sell it. Agents wanted.
One Year, $1.50. Single Copies, 15 cts.
Russell Publishing Co., 36 Bromfield St., Boston, Mass.

This porous plaster is absolutely the best ever made, combining the virtues of hops with gums, balsams and extracts. Its power is wonderful in curing diseases where other plasters simply relieve. Crick in the Back and Neck, Pain in the Side or Limbs, Stiff Joints and Muscles, Kidney Troubles, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sore Chest, Affections of the Heart and Liver, and all pains or aches in any part cured instantly by the Hop Plaster. ☞ Try it. Price 25 cents or five for $1.00. Mailed on receipt of price. Sold by all druggists and country stores.
HOP PLASTER
LAME BACK
Hop Plaster Company,
—Proprietors, Boston, Mass.—

☞ For constipation, loss of appetite and diseases of the bowels take Hawley's Stomach and Liver Pills. 25 cents.

Sawing Made Easy
Monarch Lightning Sawing Machine!
Sent on 30 Days Test Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.

A boy 16 years old can saw logs FAST and EASY. MILES MURRAY, Portage, Mich., writes: "Am much pleased with the MONARCH LIGHTNING SAWING MACHINE. I sawed off a 30-inch log in 2 minutes." For sawing logs into suitable lengths for family stove-wood, and all sorts of log-cutting, it is peerless and unrivaled. Illustrated Catalogue, Free. AGENTS WANTED. Mention this paper. Address MONARCH MANUFACTURING CO., 163 E. Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

NOVELTY, BEAUTY AND ARTISTIC EXCELLENCE. Fathers, mothers, brothers, sisters, cousins, aunts, uncles, lovers and friends will find a year's subscription to DEMOREST'S MONTHLY MAGAZINE the best illustration of friendly feeling, especially as a holiday present. This model magazine now combines the essential of all others, and only $2 yearly. Do not fail to see the splendid array of novelties, grand array of entertaining, useful and beautiful literary gems and artistic illustrations, to be found in the successive numbers. Sold everywhere; price, 20 cents or yearly $2. Address, W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, 17 East 14th Street, New York.

2806 Lbs. W'ght Of Two OHIO IMPROVED CHESTER HOGS, Send for description of this famous breed, Also Fowls. L. B. SILVER, CLEVELAND, O.

FREE TO F. A. M. Graphic Colored Engraving of an Ancient Initiation Scene from a newly discovered Egyptian Tablet, also, the large new illustrated Catalogue of Masonic books and goods, with bottom prices; also, an offer of very lucrative business to F. A. M. REDDING & CO., Masonic Publishers and Manufacturers, 731 Broadway, New York.

$72 A WEEK. $12 a day at home easily made. Costly outfit free. Address True & Co., Augusta, Me.

$102,400.00
GIVEN AWAY!
The Enormous Amount of $102,400 Actually Given Away to the Consumers of SPEAR-HEAD PLUG
Chewing Tobacco.
THE ARRAY OF GIFTS WE PROPOSE GIVING OUR PATRONS:
1920 Acres of Land in Dakota, Nebraska and Kansas........$28,800.00
12 Weber style 2 Grand Upright Pianos 9,600.00
120 Solid Gold Watches........ 15,000.00
500 The Wilson No. 3 Oscillating Shuttle Sewing Machines........ $25,000.00
12 Elegant Burdett Organs........ $2,400.00
120 U. S. Government Bonds........ 6,000.00
80 Silver Watches........ 2,800.00
1200 Meerschaum Pipes........ 4,800.00
2000 5 lb. boxes Spear-Head Tobacco 8,000.00
TOTAL AMOUNT,........$102,400.00
Ask your Dealer for SPEAR-HEAD PLUG and Circular fully explaining our Plan of Distribution.
P. J. SORG & CO., Middletown, Ohio.
CHEW SPEAR-HEAD AND GET A FARM!

DIPHTHERIA
CROUP, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, Neuralgia, Rheumatism. JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT (for Internal and External Use) will instantly relieve these terrible diseases, and will positively cure nine cases out of ten. Information that will save many lives sent free by mail. Don't delay a moment. Prevention is better than cure. JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT CURES Influenza, Hoarseness, Hacking Cough, Whooping Cough, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Cholera Morbus, Kidney Troubles, and Lame Back. Sold everywhere. Circulars sent FREE. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

13 Strike at the Bottle.

A nervous and disease-stricken old gentleman was sitting in his room on an easy-chair, his physician being at his side.

Said the old gentleman, "Now, doctor, you have been treating me for a long time, and haven't done me much good. I'm tired of all this. I want you to strike at the root of all my disorders."

Said the doctor, "Do you mean exactly what you say?"

"To be sure I do," said the venerable invalid.

"Well, here goes!" said the doctor;—and with one whack of his cane he broke to pieces the brandy-bottle which stood on the mantel.

The old gentleman was angry and excited, but he had a good answer ready for the doctor. "Doctor, if it hadn't been for your doctrine, I never would have got into the habit of drinking."

In Brown's Iron Bitters there is strength for the debilitated, refreshment for the nervous, and new life for the broken-down.

Foot and Ankle.
The EDSON ELECTRIC GARTER develops the FOOT and ANKLE into perfect form, supports and strengthens the limbs, adds marvellous grace and elasticity to the step.
It gives great ease and comfort in walking, riding or dancing, maintains and excites healthful circulation, dispels gout, rheumatics and neuralgic pains, subdues all cramps and stiffness of joints, relieves bloated limbs and feet.
Edsons' Electric Garter.
This matchless invention wholly supersedes every other form of Garter for Ladies, Gentlemen or Children's wear. They are worn with all the comfort of the best known garters, and are NOT MORE EXPENSIVE.
PRICE, in Finest Silk Webbing (usual colors), Stud and Buckle Clasp, 12, 13, 15 inch, $1.50; 17 inch, $2.00 per pair. Mailed to any address on receipt of money. Send for circular.
LONDON ELECTRIC FABRIC CO.,
81 Beekman Street, New York.

Poison.
Mercury and potash have made more cripples than war, pestilence and famine combined.
FOR LADIES.
I have been using for a month or two in my household, Swift's Specific (S. S. S.), the greater portion of it having been consumed by the female portion of my family, and with the happiest results. It acted like a charm on my wife, who had been in bad health for a long time, and for whom I have paid hundreds of dollars for doctors and medicines. It began to build her up from the first dose. Another female member of my family took it with equally satisfactory results. It is certainly the best tonic for delicate ladies that I have ever used, and I have tried them all. I have no doubt that want of exercise, close confinement in poorly ventilated houses, sewer gas poison and malarial poison often produce sickness among our wives, daughters and sisters, and I believe Swift's Specific is the remedy for all this sort of blood poisoning.
F. L. JONES, J. P., Quitman, Ga.
Our treatise on Blood and Skin Diseases mailed free to applicants. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO.,
Drawer 3, Atlanta, Ga.

$66 A WEEK in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. Addr's H. Hallett & Co., Portland, Me.

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOLUME IX. BURLINGTON, KY., WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 12, 1883. NUMBER 7.

THE MILKMAID.

A NEW SONG TO AN OLD TUNE.

Across the grass I see her pass;
She comes with tripping pace—
A maid I know—and March winds blow
Her hair across her face;—
With a hey, Dolly! ho, Dolly!
Dolly shall be mine,
Before the spray is white with May,
Or blooms the eglantine.

The March winds blow. I watch her go!
Her eye is brown, and clear;
Her cheek is brown, and soft as down
(To those who see it near!)—
With a hey, etc.

What has she not that they have got—
The dames that walk in silk!
If she undo her 'kerchief blue,
Her neck is white as milk.
With a hey, etc.

Let those who will be proud and chill!
For me, from June to June,
My Dolly's words are sweet as curds—
Her laugh is like a tune—
With a hey, etc.

Break, break to hear, O crocus-spear!
O tall Lent-lilies, flame!
There'll be a bride at Easter-tide,
And Dolly is her name.
With a hey, Dolly! ho, Dolly!
Dolly shall be mine—
Before the spray is white with May,
Or blooms the eglantine.
—Austin Dobson, in Harper's Magazine.

THE AUCTION OF MAIDENS.

"Althea! Althea! Where art thou!"

It was Beleses who called, in a stern and angry voice; and his daughter vainly strove to check her sobs in order that she might answer him; for the tears of maidens fell as easily then as now, and young hearts were as soft and old heads as full of plans for worldly gain and as forgetful of the power of love as in this year of our Lord, 1883; though the scene was Babylon, and the time five hundred years before the day on which the infant Jesus opened his eyes in the manger at Bethlehem.

"Althea! Althea!" called Beleses again; and Althea drew the veil of silver tissue across her face, and entered the presence of her father.

She stood before him, her willowy figure clad in rich stuff, her face faintly outlined beneath her veil, the dusky plaits of her long hair falling to her knees, and with bent head made him the reverence a girl always offered to her father. But she could not speak; sobs still choked her voice.

Beleses looked at her with mingled emotions. She was lovely as a dream, graceful as a willow branch; but she had resisted his command, opposed herself to his will. He stretched out his hand in a paternal caress, but ere he touched her anger overcame affection, and he struck her, though lightly, upon the shoulder.

"Again a drooping head?" he cried. "Again a weeping eye? Again an air as though I had given command that thou shouldst be put to death, instead of ordering all things well for thee? Why, girl, thou art seventeen, and unwed! In a year or two thy beauty will fade. Thou wilt be a maiden in the house of thy father, and a reproach to thy parents. And Arbaces is a man of might and rich beyond compare. Thou wilt have slaves, and jewels, and honor. Go to thy mother, girl, and tell her thou hast listened to my words, and bid her see that thy robes are of the finest and richest stuff. I grudge nothing when I give my daughter to Arbaces, for he will be a son to be proud of—a fitting spouse for thee, and thou must wed him."

But Althea at this uttered a little scream.

"Father," she cried, "I will never marry Arbaces. Rather I will take my own life. Arbaces is rich and powerful, and not ill to look upon, but to me he is nothing. Father, I love Balinea, and shame would be my portion should I wed one man while I loved another. And my Balinea would die. He has told me so. Father, have pity on me!"

But the old man only laughed sarcastically.

"Thy Balinea would die?" he answered. "The prate of a fortune-hunter, who has made a silly girl believe that he loves her. For the sake of this Balinea, who has neither money nor the esteem of men, nothing but a face like a woman's and the gift of song, which he shares with the wild birds, thou hast refused to wed more good men than I can now recall by name. This time I will be obeyed. I will consult an oracle as to the day of thy wedding, and on that day thou shalt become the wife of Arbaces."

"Not while there is poison in Babylon, or a river about its walls," said Althea. "I will live unwed, rather than disobey my father, but I will be the wife of no one but Balinea."

She spoke as only those speak who have formed unalterable resolutions, and her father listened with an angry comprehension of the fact.

"Thou canst be resolute, Althea," he said, "but so can I. Mark me, for what I say shall be so. If by to-morrow's dawn thou dost still repeat that which thou hast but just uttered, I will send thee this year to the auction of maidens, and there thou wilt be sold. Thou, the loveliest maiden to-day in Babylon, to whom bids for thee. Thou wilt bring a fine price—a portion for some ugly or deformed woman who has had no wooers; for at this auction of maidens, wisely instituted that the women of Babylon should all have husbands, while for the beauties rich men pay great sums, poor ones receive money to take to wife uncomely creatures, and so become rich. Thy Balinea may go thither if he pleases, and bid for the hunchbacked Gissa. He would gain a fortune so; but he will not be able to bid for thee; his purse is too small."

"Father! Father!" screamed Althea.

But old Beleses flung her from him as she clung to him, and left her lying prostrate on the floor. Sobbing and weeping, she crouched there until day faded and twilight fell. Then a female slave, bearing a silver lamp, entered the room, ushering in Althea's mother, Nasara, who much alarmed, had been searching everywhere for her child. She bent over the weeping girl, lifted her in her arms, and bore her away to her own chamber. There, amongst the silken pillows, she soothed her to rest, and to dreams of love and Balinea. But Nasara had no power to induce her husband to forgive this beautiful daughter, or to give her, with a fitting dowry, to the man she loved.

Time passed on, and brought the day of the year on which the auction of maidens was held in Babylon in those days. There were fifteen women to be sold to the highest bidder that day, and a great concourse had gathered in the open space devoted to that purpose, not only those who desired to pay for lovely wives or receive much needed money with unprepossessing ones were there, but many who came from curiosity; and through the crowd went the whisper that, in his anger, Beleses, one of the best-known citizens of Babylon, had sent his only daughter, the marvelous beauty, Althea, to be sold to whoso desired her for a wife.

Girls who were pretty and girls who were not sat together on a long stone bench, closely veiled and utterly silent. The auctioneer walked about with an air of importance. Anxious parents whispered to the children. An old man, with a long white beard, chuckled to himself over a bag of gold. A poor man, whose necessities were known to all Babylon, though he was virtuous and of good character, solemnly stared at the little crooked figure of Gissa, who had come to be sold of her own accord, and who, doubtless, would bring the greatest sum with her.

The green and white robe, belted with embossed silver about the taper waist of Althea; the white hands, the gorgeous armlets, the long earrings of rich gold, distinguished Althea from her companions, though she was closely veiled.

Those who were buyers were permitted to speak to the maidens. Arbaces approached Althea first.

"If all my fortune must be paid for thee I will win thee, beautiful Althea," he whispered.

She answered by a bitter laugh. Then, trembling and pale, Balinea came forward.

"Althea, best beloved," he whispered, "I have sold all I have, but the sum is a mere trifle. I shall lose thee, for thou art fairer than all the women of Babylon. Arbaces will have thee. Farewell. When thou art his I will kill myself;" but Althea caught him by the wrist.

"Listen, Balinea," she said. "When the time comes Arbaces will have none of me. Then thou also mayest refuse to take me. It is possible. Remain, but swear that thou wilt keep silence until I place my hand thus upon the other. Then, if still thou wouldst have me, cry out: "Give me Althea." If not, go thy way, and I will live a maiden in my father's home forever."

"What dost thou mean, Althea?" cried Balinea: but she made no answer.

And now the crowd was bidden to silence, and driven back to a certain distance—and a crier spoke thus:

"The rulers of Babylon, believing that women should be wed, for that they are feeble, helpless creatures, unfit to labor for themselves, unlearned and weak of will, so that they need protectors and directors, have instituted this auction of maidens, that no woman in Babylon need lack a husband. For the beautiful must a great price be paid, but with the ill-favored we give the sum paid for the others, that each man may have some advantage. To-day, our highest price is asked for Althea, daughter of our good citizen Beleses and his wife Nasara. Althea, unveil thyself."

Althea, at this bidding, arose and advanced. She lifted her white hand and tore the veil from her head. A shriek arose as she did so, and the lookers-on stood petrified. Instead of the beautiful face they expected to see, they saw a torn and bleeding countenance; and a head destitute of every hair. Two great braids, which she cast on the stones at her feet, alone remained of her plenteous tresses.

"People of Babylon!" she cried, "this have I done that I may not wed a man I hate! How now, Arbaces? Wilt thou bid for me?"

A roar arose from the crowd and Arbaces fell forward in a swoon, and was borne away by his friends. Balinea started forward, but was checked by the soldiers.

Again the crier spoke:

"She who was loveliest is now become the most hideous! Veil thyself, Althea."

Then another name was called. The sale proceeded. Vast sums were paid for two beauties; moderate prices for others. Even Gissa, with her little pointed face and pretty hair and eyes, was not too ugly in the eyes of the man who received a fortune at her hands. Only Althea remained unsought—too hideous for any to desire. And now she lifted her hand, and at the signal Balinea strode forward.

"Give me Althea," he said—"Althea who has done this for me—Althea, beautiful forever to my heart. Give her to me, and keep your base gold. I'll none of it."

But Althea, giving him her hand, and still remaining veiled, spoke quickly:

"I claim my portion," she said. "Such is the law of the Babylonian sale of maidens." And she gathered the gold into her veil as her lover led her away.

And so sayeth tradition, the gods smiled upon the lovers; and all Althea's beauty returned—the lovely hair grew long again, the wounds healed without a scar, and the constant Balinea had a lovely wife as well as a fortune. And though old Beleses might vex himself, he could alter nothing, for the woman who was sold at the yearly auction of maidens could not be taken from her husband. And they lived and loved for many happy years in the old city of Babylon.—Mary Kyle Dallas, in N. Y. Ledger.

—During the argument in the United States Supreme Court against the Brooklyn Bridge, Justice Miller said that it was a waste of time to argue upon obstructions to navigation apart from the fact whether Congress had authorized the obstructions; and Justice Gray drew from the counsel the admission that the Secretary of War was authorized by Congress to determine whether the bridge was a nuisance, and had decided that it was not, and had approved the plans. All of which goes to support the prediction that the bridge will not go.—Brooklyn Eagle.

—John Sellers an eccentric farmer near New Philadelphia, O., who never shaves nor cuts his hair or nails, has a flock of sheep which have not been shorn for six years, the old man contending that God gave them the wool to keep them warm.—Chicago Times.

SCIENCE AND INDUSTRY.

Jesse George is the pioneer peanut-raiser of Tennessee. He made his first crop in 1850, and now has immense fields under cultivation.

—Dr. Werner Siemens has demonstrated by experiment that intensely hot gases do not emit light, so that light given by heated gas must come from solid impurities.—Chicago Times.

—Some friend of mankind has invented a bed-room alarm by which the clerk in the office can wake a guest at any hour without sending a stalwart porter to alarm the entire hall.—Chicago Herald.

—Date palm trees have been successfully grown in California. They are of slow growth, and do not come up until the fourteenth year. A man in Salano County has two of the trees in bearing condition, with handsome crops of fruit on them.—San Francisco Chronicle.

—In bean-growing districts the crop is now mainly harvested by a machine drawn by a single horse, which cuts the stems of the beans just below the surface, leaving the crop standing. It greatly decreases the labor of harvesting and saves the bean stems and leaves from being mixed with dirt, as in the old method of hand-pulling.—Exchange.

—A new industry has recently sprung up in Eastport, Me., which consists in boxing herring. Seventy persons, mostly women, are employed in this work, and 12,000 fish are prepared every week. They are carefully freed from all cartilaginous matter, thoroughly cleansed, divided and packed in bunches in boxes lined with tinfoil.—Portland Argus.

—Judge Swan, who has passed some months on the Queen Charlotte Islands in the interest of the United States Fish Commission, reports the discovery of a new food fish, which he calls the black cod. He says it is one of the finest fish he has ever seen, and is caught in great numbers by dredging in deep water, and, when salted, is more tender and palatable than codfish.—N. Y. Tribune.

—The Scientific American mentions the decline in the price of copper as likely to lead to an increased demand for that material in building. At present the material for a copper roof costs only about half as much more as tin, and as the latter must be replaced and repainted about once in three years and in fifteen or twenty years needs replacing altogether, the copper, which never needs painting, and which is practically indestructible, is much the cheaper material in the end.

—Useful applications of electricity continue to multiply. One of the latest is to use it for running a pump for raising water. A machine invented in Vermont has been tested at Middlebury during the past summer, with very satisfactory results. It forced water from a creek through 700 feet of pipe up an elevation of eighty feet, delivering sixty gallons per hour. The comparative cost of this power over the wind-mill has not yet been determined, we believe; but it has the advantage of being constant, and doubtless will become, if it is not now, a cheap as well as an effective source of power.—N. Y. Examiner.

PITH AND POINT.

—The best recipe in the world for making buckwheat cakes is the one which tells the poor man how to get the buckwheat.—N. Y. Herald.

—One of the first things a new railroad acquires is a deficit. We don't know what it is used for, but it's part of the equipment the first year.—Burlington Hawkeye.

—The New Orleans Picayune thinks "Good common sense is better than a college education." Of course it is, and a good deal rarer and much harder to get.—Boston Transcript.

—No matter how long a man may have been called Bill, he rises to the dignity of William when he comes in for $100,000. There is a good deal of lift to money.—Chicago Inter-Ocean.

—Our national paper currency is said to be poisonous from being colored with arsenic. That's where the poor editor's revenge comes in. He doesn't have to handle the stuff.—Burlington Free Press.

—"My son," said old Precept, "don't take to writing poetry. When I was young, like you, I was smitten with a beautiful creature, and wrote her a poem. I never saw her again.—Boston Times.

—A man will burn his fingers lighting a cigar with a piece of paper and make no fuss about it, but when his wife asks him to set the tea-kettle over, and he takes hold of the warm handle, he is mad enough to wreck the kitchen.—Detroit Post.

—The owner of a pair of bright eyes says that the prettiest compliment she ever received came from a child of four years. The little fellow, after looking intently at her eyes a moment, inquired naively: "Are your eyes new ones?"

—A Kansas miller drowned himself in his mill-pond because a dam he had just built failed to collect water enough to turn the wheel. He exhibited good sense. Some men would have gone home and jawed their wives and kicked the dog clear across the room.—Norristown Herald.

—A lawyer upon a circuit in Ireland, who was pleading the cause of an infant plaintiff, took the child up in his arms and presented it to the jury suffused with tears. This had a great effect, until the opposite lawyer asked the child, "What makes you cry?" "He pinched me," answered the little innocent. The whole court was convulsed with laughter.

—"No, I am not honest," says Scribbins; "but I am dishonest from the best of motives. Suppose a man pays me forty dollars instead of thirty, and it's a mistake he might never discover. If I give him back the ten dollars, he will say to himself, 'There is an honest person. The world is not so bad, after all.' This will give him confidence in mankind, and the next man he deals with may cheat him out of his eyes. No, sir, I don't want to give any man confidence; it might wreck his whole fortune. I don't want my fellow-beings cheated, and I must continue to do nothing that will put them off their guard." Louisville Courier-Journal.

Our Young Folks.

CAT'S-CRADLE.

"It's criss-cross high, and it's criss-cross flat;
Then four straight lines for the pussy cat;
Then criss-cross under; ah, now there'll be
A nice deep cradle, dear Grandpa! See!

"Now change again, and it's flat once more—
A lattice-window! But where's the door!
Why, change once more, and, holding it so,
We can have a very good door, you know.

"Now over, now under, now pull it tight;
See-saw, Grandpa!—exactly right!"
So prattled the little one, Grandfather's pet,
As deftly she wrought. "See, now it's a net!

"But where did you learn cat's-cradle so well?"
She suddenly asked; and he could not tell.
He could not tell, for his heart was sore,
As he gravely said: "I have played it before."

What could the sweet little maiden know
Of beautiful summers long ago?
Of the merry sports, and the games he played,
When "Mamma," herself was a little maid?

What could she know of the thoughts that ran
Through the weary brain of the world-worn man?
But she knew, when she kissed him, dear Grandpa smiled,
And that was enough for the happy child.
—M. M. D., in St. Nicholas.

WHY WINNIE DID NOT GO.

"Oh! now tell me another story, please do, Uncle Will, before it is time for me to go to bed," Mabel pleaded, as her uncle seated himself in the parlor after tea. Uncle Will had read the Peter Parley books when he was a boy, so he knew just how to make delightful stories out of what little folks usually think is very dry, indeed.

But then anything that her beloved new Uncle Will told her would be pleasant to Mabel. Only a few months before he had married her dearest, best, sweetest auntie, who had always been good to her, and from that day, curious as it may seem, Mabel took him into her heart, and gave him just as much love as she did Aunt Alice, though auntie seemed to get just as much as before. And so there is no end of loving, is there? Nobody found it a very hard matter to love Uncle Will, he was so merry and bright, and there was no end to the things he knew and could tell about. Then he was unselfish; he would give up his own pleasure any time to amuse a child, or cheer up somebody in trouble.

Before Uncle Will could answer, grandma spoke up. She noticed that he had just pulled the evening paper from his pocket, so she said as she drew her rocking-chair near the fire—the very first fire that had crackled in the grate that autumn:

"Come over here, Mabel dear, I will tell you a story."

"Will it be nice, like Uncle Will's stories?" Mabel asked, coming slowly across the room.

"I will let you answer that question after I have told it," said grandma, reaching for her knitting-bag.

"Will it be a history story?" asked Mabel, again.

"What is a history story?"

"Why, all about something that truly happened a long time ago, to a truly somebody," said Mabel.

"Must it have happened a long time ago to make it history? Don't you know history is being made every day? You remember all about our dear President Garfield, don't you? It is only a short time since those sad days, but the story is published now in a book, and that is history."

"Oh, yes, I know," said Mabel, eagerly—some of the things Uncle Will had taught her just coming into her head—"I know; anything that happened hundreds of years ago is ancient history, and what happened lately or the last hundred years or so is called modern history."

"That is right," said grandma; well, now, I will tell you a story of modern history.

"Once upon a time—not a hundred years ago—there was a little girl by the name of Winnie.

"Her home was a handsome house in the city. There were many pleasant rooms in it, but on this particular morning, Winnie was sitting in the attic.

"She had not been sent there as a punishment, it was the place she chose to be. There was a pretty window in one end of the long low room. It had small panes of glass; some of them were colored. When the morning was chilly, Winnie liked to get off up there, for the sunshine came with a rosy light through the red glass. There was a large old chair by the window, and Winnie said it was a cozy place. So she had brought her slate and arithmetic and geography, to study her lessons. She always studied a couple of hours in the morning, then recited to Aunt Lena; after that the time was her own to walk or play as she chose. She curled herself up in the large chair, and opened her book, but did not look in it; she looked out of the window, and saw up in the eaves little brown sparrows fluttering and twittering. She dropped her books and climbed up on the chair and watched them a long time. At last she tried to count them, and that made her remember that she had better be learning her multiplication table, so she slid down into the chair again and opened her book.

"It was a queer kind of multiplication table she found, though. With one eye on her book, and the other roving about the room, it went something like this:

"'Seven times four are twenty-eight. I wonder if that's a big spider?'

"'Seven times five are thirty-five. What a funny looking old bureau that is!'

"'Seven times six are forty-two. I do b'lieve I hear a cricket!'

"'Seven times seven are forty-nine. Oh dear, what is the use of this old multiplication table?'

"'Seven times eight are fifty-six. Wonder if grandma's old chest is locked—mean to see!' and with that down went her book and away she skipped across the floor to the blue chest standing in the corner. It was quite large, but she tugged with all her might at the heavy lid and it flew open.

"She did not more than half expect it to, but somebody who had been there last had been careless and left the key in the lock.

"Winnie stood still a minute and stared in, her bright eyes very wide open with delight.

"'Oh! oh!' What treasures! Flowered brocade and gold-colored satin. A straw bonnet and a blue satin bonnet, laces and flowers, and slippers and fans

"Dear grandma had carefully kept some of the pretty things she used to wear when she was a girl, with rosy cheeks and brown hair, to show to her grandchildren when her cheeks should be wrinkled and her hair turned into white silk as it was now.

"Winnie had seen all these things before, but it was a long time ago, and grandma had taken them carefully out, just for a few minutes, and put them back again. It was not like having them all to yourself. She drew a long breath and looked around the room. It was all still, nobody would come up there; what if she just looked at them a little? It would do no harm, grandma wouldn't care; no, indeed, grandma loved her. So she lifted up the yellow satin dress. How it shimmered and shone, though it had lain there years and years, and it was so stiff and heavy it would almost stand alone. What a beauty it was! What if she should just slip it on for a minute? 'You ought to study your lessons right away,' conscience told her, but she answered: 'I will in a minute; I almost know that hard seven line now'—seven times nine are—are—well, I'll have time enough,' she gasped, as she tried hard to make the dress that had fitted the slender waist of her grandmother come together about her own stout little body. It was much too tight over another dress, and the sleeves were too long, but she pushed them up, then she slipped off her shoes and put on a pair of cunning little slippers with high heels, then tied on a big satin bonnet, and with a dainty little fan in her hand she was ready.

"She trailed up to an old looking-glass that hung on the wall, and was perfectly astonished. What a beautiful little lady she made with those pretty things on! She paraded up and down Broadway, smiled, and bowed, and courtesied, and then imagined that she was at a party sweeping about with a long train, chatting and laughing with most charming people. It became so real to Winnie that she actually talked it all out. She sailed up to a bag of feathers, bowed low, and inquired after the health of Mrs. Fitzallan and her children.

"But hark! what noise was that? Was somebody coming? Yes, somebody was coming up stairs as fast as possible—two somebodys, and they walked straight into the room. It was mamma and Mr. Denise; Mr. Denise was an artist.

"A large old oil painting stood in the attic. It had been injured in some way and mamma wished him to see if it could be restored.

"Poor Winnie! She gathered up her long trail and scampered as fast as she could, with such high heels clattering behind her. It was of no use to try to hide, though, they were right upon her. Mr. Denise laughed heartily, and declared he must have her picture in that dress, but Winnie saw something in mamma's eyes that perhaps the gentleman did not. Mamma was certainly very much surprised, and not pleased.

"They soon went away, and just as Winnie had put the last thing back into the chest Aunt Lena's bell tinkled up the stairs as a signal that recitation hour had come.

"That afternoon, just after dinner, a fine carriage drew up before the door, and took in mamma, grandma and Aunt Lena; then it rolled off through handsome streets, out of the city, over smooth roads, to Clifton Park; a long ride on a lovely afternoon, that is what Winnie lost. This drive had been planned a week ago and she had looked forward to it with delight. But on they went among trees and flowers and sweet air, while she sat at home trying through her tears to make out 'seven times nine.'

"It was hard. But when mamma had heard her blundering and stumbling through her lesson, she had said to grandma: 'It will almost break my heart to leave that dear child at home this afternoon, but something must be done to break up this miserable habit she has of dallying over her lessons and playing, when she knows very well she should be hard at work. My little girl may better shed a few tears to-day than to grow up disobeying her conscience—'"

"Did she grow up to be a good woman?" Mabel asked.

"Ask Uncle Will," grandma said, with a sly glance that way.

"Did the artist ever paint her picture with the gold satin skirt and the blue satin bonnet?"

"Yes, he did."

"Have you ever seen it?"

"Yes; and so have you."

"Where?" said Mabel, with wide-open eyes.

"In this very room."

"Why grandma! Do you mean that picture over the piano? Why, that is Aunt Alice."

"Didn't you know," whispered grandma, "that your auntie had two names—Alice Winifred?"

"O-h!" said Mabel, and then she sank back in the large chair and looked at Aunt Alice sitting by her husband's side reading.

The gas light shown upon her bright hair and made it look like gold, and her white dress fell about her in soft folds. Her happy face looked as if she never disobeyed her conscience.

Mabel thought within herself: "I am glad I know that good, dear, sweet Aunt Alice was naughty sometimes. It won't seem such an im-pos-si-bil-ity for me to be good some time." But she only said: "Grandma, I believe I like modern history best, and I shall tell that story every single word to Joe and Teddy and Mabel when they come over to spend the day. Every word, grandma."—Mrs. C. M. Livingston, in The Pansy.

—Advertising made a fortune of a clear $4,000,000 for J. C. Ayer, and his wife inherited it. This teaches that the wives of business men should persuade them to advertise largely.—N. Y. Times.

—The works for building iron ships in San Francisco will be, the Bulletin says, the most extensive of any in the United States.

Religious.

THE RUSTY VANE.

Such a lovely day,
Sky unclouded blue,
Like an arching mirror with
Glory shining through.
Wind like airy wine,
Soft as lover's kiss,
Everywhere the sense
Of growth and life and bliss.
Still one sulky vane
Points to the north-east,
Like the skeleton
At the monarch's feast.

Though the sunshine lingers,
Grieving, as it were,
And with coaxing fingers
Every passing air
Urges it with gentle stress
Full of pitying ruth,
Toward the way of righteousness
And the point of truth,
Still the moveless weather-cock
Stands implacably.
Pointing to the due north-east,
Witnessing a lie.

And I think of souls I know,
Grim and out of joint,
Which, whatever wind may blow,
Keep the stormy point.
Deaf to every bird that sings,
Blind to blue and sun,
Prophesying evil things,
Saddening every one:
Smileless in the smiling air,
Hopeless in the rain,
Influenced by nothing fair,
Like the rusty vane.

Give us, Lord, that hopefulness
Which, made wise in Thee,
When Thy hand is stretched to bless,
Greets it thankfully.
When it storms, as storm it will,
Bravely can endure,
Knowing and believing still
In the promise sure.
Quick to mark Thy guiding sign,
And for doubting eyes
Pointing to the hope Divine
In the brightening skies.
—Susan Coolidge, in S. S. Times.

International Sunday-School Lessons.

FOURTH QUARTER.

Dec. 9—David's Friend—Jonathan	1 Sam. 20:32-42
Dec. 16—David Sparing His Enemy	1 Sam. 24: 1-17
Dec. 23—Death of Saul and Jonathan	1 Sam. 31: 1-13
Dec. 30—Review.

IS CHRISTIANITY DYING IN OUR LAND?

Superficial observers of anti-religious tendencies and Christians inclined to pessimism have talked much about the decadence of the Christian religion in this country. The former, with a few local or partial statistics, or their own imaginings as a basis, write persuasively of the failing influence of the Churches. The latter, regarding the days of the fathers as better than these, can not too loudly bemoan the accommodating spirit of the Churches in suiting themselves to the world at the cost of their spiritual power.

If the Churches were really failing in spirituality, in genuine religion, the results must soon become manifest in decreasing membership, in the breaking up of congregations, and in many other ways. If, on the contrary, they are steadily increasing in communicants, in church-buildings, in contributions for church and benevolent purposes, the conclusion is inevitable that they are gaining in spiritual power; for if men lose confidence in Christianity they will inevitably fall away from its support. The statistics of all our Churches, with only a few insignificant exceptions, easily explained, exhibit a steady growth, either by years or decades. They never did so much for foreign missions as in the past year; they never had so many members, ministers and churches.

Go over the country and you shall find halls, formerly occupied by non-religious societies of one kind or another, now put to other use. One organization after another in secular societies has risen and fallen; but where are our decaying Christian churches? Hinduism and Buddhism are dying religions, and their deserted temples are turned to other and sometimes less sacred uses; but only the movement of population causes a Christian congregation to surrender, in order that they may build another, a consecrated edifice for business purposes.

If the anti-religious prophets of Christianity's doom want intelligent people to believe their statements and prophecies, they must get at the census reports, they must examine the Church year books, and give the statistical grounds of their conclusions. As it is, their conclusions are like Mohammed's coffin; they hang between heaven and earth, resting on nothing. The Evening Post, of this city, furnished an illustration of this sort of reasoning in its remarks last Saturday about the Protestantism of Germany, which, we feel sure, it would have no little trouble to support with the hard facts. It said that the great bulk of those who celebrated on that day the four hundredth anniversary of Luther's birth "have no more faith in his doctrines than he put in Tetzel's, and care no more for his Bible than he cared for the Missal." It added that "there is now but little religious belief of any kind to be found among the educated classes of Protestant Germany." We can give what is to us conclusive proof that Germany, the most inclined of all Protestant countries, we readily grant, to indifference in religious matters, is misrepresented by the Post. Where is the best Biblical and theological literature produced, if not in Germany? Where are the best theological schools, if not in Germany? Are these not by and for the educated classes? If our present purpose warranted it, we could give many facts which are not reconcilable with the Post's statement.

If those who are devoting themselves to the abolition of religious belief as an enslavement of the human mind—which reaches, they would have us believe, its truest nobility and its highest development in utter unbelief—are anxious to get for the first time, perhaps, a glimpse of the task they have assumed with such beneficent purpose, in all its magnitude, we offer them the following table for close study. If those who think we can not sleep with a good Christian conscience until God is recognized by name in the Constitution of the United States wish for a comforting thought against the day of their final disappointment, we give them this table with the suggestion that it shows that God's name is ineffaceably written in the heart of the people. Those who, like Eli, are trembling for the safety of the ark may be reassured and may thank God and take courage from these figures extracted from four pages of statistics carefully prepared for the "Independent Almanac," which is shortly to appear:

GENERAL SUMMARY.

	Churches.	Ministers.	Communicants.
Adventists	1,344	775	91,769
Baptists	27,154	26,545	2,376,553
Congregationalists	3,936	3,723	387,619
Friends	332	[illegible]	96,000
German Ev. Church	550	430	80,000
Lutherans	6,120	3,429	785,387
Methodists	41,271	24,485	3,943,875
Mennonites	500	450	80,000
Moravians	84	70	9,928
New Jerusalem	87	92	3,904
Presbyterians	11,768	8,884	966,437
Protesta't Episcopal	3,169	3,664	351,659
Reformed	1,962	1,330	243,835
Roman Catholic	6,241	6,546	6,832,954
Schwendfeldians	....	....	300
Unitarians	362	434	20,000
Universalists	719	713	36,258
Total in the United States	115,610	81,717	17,267,878

Here we have seventeen million and a quarter communicants, including the Catholic population, in a total population of 50,000,000. If we subtract the Catholic population from the seventeen millions we have in round numbers 10,500,000 Protestant communicants. Three children adherents to each communicant is not a large ratio. It is probably lower than the fact. Upon this basis the Protestant population is 42,000,000, to which add the Catholic population of 6,832,000, and we have a total Christian population of 48,832,000, leaving the Jews, Mormons and other classes besides the non-religious to make up the small balance of 1,000,000. Is not this wonderfully encouraging when the complex character of our population is considered?

It will be observed that there are nearly 82,000 ministers. If they are paid an average of $500 a year the Churches must raise for this one item nearly $41,000,000 yearly. The amounts raised for the running expenses, for repairs, for new churches, for the benevolences, we dare not undertake to compute. The aggregate must be an enormous sum. Now tell us, reader, would a people who had only a superficial attachment to a religion support it with such an amazing generosity?—N. Y. Independent.

Little Things.

Whosoever despises the worth and influence of little things fails to understand the Divine method of working in nature, history and character. In the search for the hiding places of life the microscope discloses the bioplasts, the builders of all organic tissues, working within cells so minute that their diameter is from six to three times less than the edge of a razor's blade. And yet these almost infinitesimal life-forces construct the entire fabric of the vegetable and animal kingdom. Endowed and guided by the power of their Creator, they erect the monarch of the forest trees, fabricate the most exquisite forms of beauty in flower and leaf, or weave the brain of a Shakespeare. One of the most impressive lessons that history teaches is the part that comparatively trivial circumstances have played in directing and changing the course of events that have culminated in epochs that are the tide marks that distinguish the world's progress in civilization as represented in government, art, literature and religion. Failure in the discharge of little duties has often ruined the best laid plans of the wisest statesmen and bravest Generals. Attention to the smallest details is found to be a characteristic of those whose uniform success has been the puzzle and admiration of the world.

It is, however, in the realm of personal experience and character that the influence of little things is most potent for good or evil. This truth is impressively illustrated by the Apostle James, who, in writing of certain rich men, says their "garments are moth-eaten." This pest among insects is diminutive in size, but its capacity for destruction is dreaded by every careful housekeeper. The costly furs that were laid away in the spring, when taken from their place for use again, seem at first glance intact, but, under the light, the first vigorous shake to remove the dust discloses innumerable rents, and the once valuable garment is found to be worthless. Stealthily and in the dark the tiny insects have accomplished their work of destruction.

How often it happens that the community is startled by some story of crime, and the surprise is expressed that such an act should have been committed by one whose outward action had heretofore been decent and respectable. It is only the true character come to light. In a manner concealed from the eyes of the world moth-like sins have been eating into the woof and warp of character, and when an overt act has brought it into the light of truth the real worthlessness is made known. Little sins, or rather, sins often repeated, are the strands that form the chains of habit that enthrall the soul in a bondage worse than death.

On the other hand, noble character and the fruit of its service is the result of faithfulness in little things. There is no realm in experience or period in life where the most trivial circumstances may not prove of vast importance, or where little things do not make up the sum and product of the noblest achievements. Our acts from moment to moment are the shuttle that carries the threads that are weaving the pattern of an immortal life. Care and thought in the little details of the present duty is the true test of character. In the light of this truth every position and service in life is recognized as full of gracious opportunity. Trivial circumstances prove to be turning points in experience. The faithful discharge of little duties leads to the highest promotion, and those who are faithful in the use of their one talent often prove that the "last shall be first."—Rev. E. B. Sanford, in Christian at Work.

—It requires less grace in reality to be a martyr for Christ on a public stage than to be kind and considerate in the familiar intercourse of domestic life, or to maintain a guileless integrity in the ordinary transactions of business. The Christianity that is faithful in that which is least is a more difficult Christianity than that which glows and triumphs on grand occasions. Little love can perform great actions; but it requires great love to present like little children small offerings, and to devote every moment and task of our life to God.—Hugh Macmillan.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL,
Proprietors.

BURLINGTON, KY. DEC. 12. 1883.

ADVERTISING RATES.

1 Column	1 year	$80
1 "	½ "	40
1 "	¼ "	20
½ "	1 "	20
¼ "	½ "	10
¼ "	¼ "	6

For announcing candidates, $5. Obituary poetry, 5 cents per line. Obituary notices 20 lines free; over that number (excepting the announcement of the death) 3 cents per line.

Tributes of respect from lodges, &c., $1 50

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One year	$1 50
Six months	75
Three months	40

HAS the father of time adopted Standard?

LOUISVILLE is considerably annoyed with small-pox.

THE cadaverous office seekers in Washington are as thick as flies in summer.

PAYNE is ahead with the Enquirer in the race for United States Senator in Ohio.

IT is difficult for some people to see the difference between revenue reform and free-trade.

THE present Congress will doubtless legislate that fraud, the Trade Dollar, out of existence.

A MAN in Bourbon county has a crop of tobacco for which he expects to receive forty cents a pound.

INDIANAPOLIS wants both national conventions in 1884. It is very greedy for a town of the third magnitude.

AN earthquake visited Rovender Springs, Arkansas, last week, and gave that locality seven shocks in 40 seconds.

JOHN SHERMAN considers Carlisle the ablest man the Democrats have in Congress, and regards him as the proper man for Speaker.

STANDARD TIME is not gaining popularity very rapidly, and some towns that had adopted it are backing down from their undertaking.

GRANT, Blaine, Sherman, Conklin, Logan, and others of the Republican leaders have adjusted their presidential lightning pursuaders, and are awaiting results.

AFTER all the Courier-Journal's labored editorials in opposition to Federal aid for schools, Congressman Willis of that city will use his influence to bring about that result.

KENTUCKY has fifty-nine tobacco factories, using over 9,000,000 pounds of tobacco annually, making over 8,000,000 pounds plug and 1,000,000 pounds each fine-cut and smoking tobacco.

THE Courier-Journal has notified several of its employes that they will be given the bounce on the first day of January. The Commercial says it is on account of their being Republicans.

HOGGISH—Select butchers and heavy shippers, $5 65@5 85; fair to good packers, at $5 40@5 75; fair to good light, $4 90@5 40; common, $4 10@4 85; culls, $3 00@3 75: stock hogs, $4 00@4 90.

THEY had a doctor at the Anchorage asylum, who was suspicioned of being a little "off" mentally, and he was given the privilege of resigning, which he did. He should have been put under treatment.

THE plans for the building of the World's International Exposition, to be held in a little over a year hence at New Orleans, have been furnished by a Mississippi man. It will be the largest building ever erected in America.

LAST Friday night, James Morrison, one of the notorious Barnett gang was captured in Menifee county, having evaded the officers for the past six months. He will no doubt join his comrades in the pen. John Prophet is the only one of the gang now at large.

JUDGE BARR, sentenced a batch of sixty-seven moonshiners in the United States Court at Covington, last Saturday, their ages ranging from nineteen to sixty-nine. Their punishment ranged from thirty to sixty days imprisonment and one hundred dollars fine, which will furnish them their winter's board and clothing.

THE Farmer's Congress in session at Louisville, last week, passed a resolution demanding that the United States Commissioner of Agriculture be made a Cabinet officer. It is a just demand. The farmers should be recognized by the government in a manner becoming the position they occupy in relation to the country and its institutions.

IN South Carolina they have no divorce laws, and the legislature refuses to pass one.

THERE is such slight change in the quotations of tobacco since last week that we omit the market.

CONGRESS will not get down to work until after the holidays. The Speaker of the Lower House will not have his committees made up before that time.

FANK JAMES will give bond and be released from jail in a few days. It is expected that the government will then arrest him for stopping the mails.

THE Grant county Democrats nominated C. C. Cram for representative. Mr. Cram is a prominent attorney at the Williamstown bar, and will make a live, working member.

CAPT. HENRY has no means of finding out what a high-toned gentleman he is without going off on an occasional drunk, after which many of the State papers join in a chorus of praise for him.

IN the Circuit Court at Mt. Sterling, Mrs. Vaugh Hilton, widow of the man murdered by John Barnett and his gang in Montgomery county last year, has recovered a verdict for $3,000 against Barnett and others for damages. The defendants are all in the penitentiary, but have real estate and other property in the mountains out of which to make the judgment.

DR. CHENAULT, superintendent of the lunatic asylum at Lexington, attempted to remove receiver Reardon and appoint John Marrs; but the the commissioners refused to recognize the new receiver, and Chenault called Governor Knott in to settle the trouble; but the Governor could not reconcile the conflict of authority, which will be referred to the legislature for adjustment.

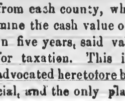
AT the meeting of the Republican National Committee in Washington, to-day, an effort to change the basis of representation in the next National Republican convention, will be made, and, if successful, the Southern States will lose about sixty delegates while the Northern States will gain about one hundred and thirteen. Kentucky will lose seven The present mode does not make a proper distribution of the delegates.

A DELEGATION of Congressman headed by S. S. Cox, of New York, waited upon President Arther the other day, and appealed to him to interfere on behalf of Patrick O'Donnell, a citizen of this country, who has been tried and sentenced to be hung in England on the 17th inst., for the killing of Carey, the informer. The result of the trial of O'Donnell has created much just indignation among his countrymen in the United States.

COUNTY Judge Kinkead, of Fayette, after a study of the State revenue system, is convinced that no great improvement can be effected while the taxable valuation of property is adjusted annually by the Assessors. He suggests a commission from each county, who shall determine the cash value of all lands once in five years, said value to be basis for taxation. This is the principle advocated heretofore by the Commercial, and the only plan by which a fair valuation can be arrived at, and all property be made to bear its proper share of the burden of taxation.—Louisville Commercial.

Subscribe for the RECORDER.

H. KASSEN & CO.
(Formerly of Covington.)
—Dealers in Fine—
BOOTS AND SHOES,
106 W. 5th Street.
CINCINNATI, - - - OHIO.
Custom made work a Specialty. A perfect Fit Guaranteed. dec. 20-1y



AURORA MARBLE AND GRANITE WORKS,
Aurora, Ind
Will have constantly on hand
Marble and Granite Monuments,
Italian & American Headstones, &c.

I am ready to do all kinds of Stone Work on short notice and at low prices Hoping to receive the patronage of Boone County, I am respectfully,
F. W. KASSEBAUM.

For Rent.

85 acres of land adjoining Lewisburg, Kenton county, Ky., 10 acres of which is fine tobacco land. On this land is a pear orchard of about 400 trees, select varieties. This land is all well suited far gardening or, other tillage, and has on it a good house and other suitable conveniencies for a family residence—Enquire of RUFUS LIGHT, on the premises.

Out on the Prairie.
Concerning Something Better than Mrs. Toodles' Wheelbarrow—And the Reasons Why.

When a certain Commissary-General complained to the Duke of Wellington that Sir Thomas Picton had declared he would hang him if the rations for that General's division were not forthcoming at a certain hour, the Duke replied:

"Ah! did he indeed go so far as that? Did he say he'd hang you?"

"Yes my lord."

"Well, General Picton is just the man to keep his word. You'd better get the rations up in time"

But to get rations or anything else up in time one must know when to lay his hand on them. As Mr. Toodles said about the coffin which he had bought at auction and brought home to his wife:

"If anything should happen, my dear, it will be so handy to have in the house."

Being in the great wholesale drug house of William Hart, in Elgin, Ill., one day, Mr. G. H. Sherman, the photographer of that place, remarked, concerning PARKER'S TONIC "I have used it in my family for two years, and I unhesitatingly pronounce it the best medicine we have ever used. It is handy to have in the house, and we are never without it."

Culled from the mass of reasons why Mr. Sherman was right, be good enough to consider these: First, PARKER'S TONIC, is delicious to the palate; second, it invigorates, but does not promote a love for strong drink; third, it cures Coughs and Colds by inciting the torpid organs into healthy action, and opening all the pores of the skin; fourth, it purifies the Blood, thus curing Kidney Liver and Lung diseases and Rheumatism; fifth—

But take it into your house, and it will speak for itself. Once used, will change it for nothing else. Physicians commend it. Price, 50 cents and $1. Hiscox & Co., Chemist, New York.

Posted.

Notice is hereby given that our lands in Boone county, are posted and all persons are warned not trespass thereon.

MRS. E. J. PIATT, JOHN McCONNEL.

For Sale.

Two good work horses, single or double, one is a black 16½ hands high, the other is a bay 15 hands high. For further information call on or address

RICHARD RYLE, Burlington, Ky.

Administrator's Notice,

Those having claims against the estate of W. S Ryle, dec'd., are hereby notified to present the same, proven as by law required, to the undersigned before December 25th, '83. B. H. STEPHENS, Adm'r.

For Sale.

House and lot in Hebron, Boone county, Kentucky. This is a very comfortable house located near the center of the town. The lot contains one acre. For further particulars call on or address LYSTRA AYLOR, Hebron, Ky.

Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned has been duly appointed and qualified as assignee in trust for the benefit of the creditors of Wm. N. Aylor. All persons indebted to said assignor will make immediate payment, and creditors will present their claims duly proven according to law to the undersigned at No. 7 Pike Str., Covington, Ky. R. L. CRIGLER,
5-4t Assignee.

Posted.

We the undersigned hereby give notice that our farms are posted against hunters:

Templeton Gaines,	J C Jenkins,
J E Duncan,	Oscar Gaines,
G C Gaddy,	Ben Clore,
Noah Craven,	Wm. Clore,
C S Balsly,	A S Gaines,
George Gaines,	C S Gaines,
Absalom Aylor,	J. B. Winston,

TWO
Fams for Sale.

One contains 36 acres, 9 acres of which is good creek bottom and 27 acres, hill land. This land is under good fence, well set in grass, has lasting water for stock, fine lot of timber, much of which is locust. It is part of the W. B. Ryle homestead, lies on Gunpowder Creek and joins Leander Setters.

The other farm contains 126½ acres, is 2½ miles southwest of Burlington, has all necessary buildings in good repair, fencing good, has a good well and cistern, besides never failing water for stock, a nice young orchard, and some hedge fence. This land is all in grass except 25 acres which were cultivated in corn this year. For terms apply on the last named premises to

6-2m W. S. WHITE.

PATENTS.

For new inventions and novel designs obtained in the United States, Canada and Europe. Trade Marks and Copyright—Labels secured for Merchants and Manufacturers who wish protection against imitators of their goods, packages or articles of manufacture. We are located opposite the United States Patent Office, have quick access to its records, and can give prompt and reliable answers to inquiries. Of our firm one has had thirteen years' practice in the highest courts, another several years as an Assistant Examiner in the United States Patent Office and many years experience as solicitor of American and Foreign Patents. Fee reasonable and full satisfaction or no fee. Best reference given. Our little book "on patents" sent free on receipt of one cent stamp.
W. A. COULTER & CO., Solicitors of Patents,
23 St. Cloud Building, Washington, D. C.

BACKLOG SKETCHES, our large 16 page paper, filled with charming serials, stories, choice miscellany etc., is sent 3 mos. on trial for 25 cents; and we send EVERY subscriber FREE our new HOLIDAY PACKAGE, consisting of 10 pieces popular music 10 interesting games, 1 pack of age and fortune-telling cards; 1 pack "Hold to Light" cards, 1 pack fun & flirtation cards, 1 set chromo cards, 13 new tricks in magic 5 new puzzles, game of fortune, the mystic oracle, 25 ways to get rich, Heller's wonderful delusion cards, etc., etc. Endless amusement! Agents wanted. Sample paper for stamp. BACKLOG PUBLISHING Co., Augusta, Me.

THE MARVELLOUS WEBBER SINGING DOLL.
A Mechanical Wonder.
"A PRIMA DONNA IN EVERY HOME."

A. L. Brown,

THE HATTER,
Cor. Pike and Washington Streets
COVINGTON, - - KY.
Has always on hand a large variety of Men's, Boys' and Children's Hats, and prices GUARANTEED to be as low as the lowest.
Gents' Furnishing Goods a Specialty.

BOONE HOUSE,
BURLINGTON, KY.
C. L. CRISLER, Prop'r.
No pains spared in the accommodation of guests. The table supplied with the delicacies of the season. Stock well cared far. dec. 20-1y

LUMBER.
Goe. M. Bedinger & Co.,
Erlanger, - - Ky.
We keep constantly on hand all kinds of Lumber, Laths and Shingles. Also Builder's supplies of all kinds.
—Come and see Us.—
may 9-tf

W. J. RICE,
CARPENTER & BUILDER,
BULLITSVILLE, KY.
Is prepared Raise or Move
EITHER LOG or FRAME BUILDINGS
On Short Notice,
And at the Lowest Possible Figures.
38-tf Your orders respectfully solicited

INSURE AT HOME
The Farmers' Mutual Fire
INSURANCE COMPANY
Of Boone County
Is now completely organized and receiving applications for insurance.
Its Rates are Lower
Than those of any other Company, and it gives the farmers of Boone County a
HITHERTO UNKNOWN ADVANTAGE
In keeping their property insured.
EVERY FARMER IN THE COUNTY
should take a policy at once,
N. S. WALTON, President, Petersburg, Ky.
J. H. WALTON, Secretary, Constance, Ky.
R. RANDALL, Treasury.
DIRECTORS.
LEGRAN GAINES, Jeff Utz,
JNO. M. MOODY.

WANTED BOOK Canvassers.
MALE and FEMALE
To engage in the sale of our new and important works of standard character, large profits and immense selling qualities. We offer a permanent and lucrative business. Address The CINCINNATI PUBLISHING CO. 174 W. Fourth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Free! Cards and Chromos.
We will send free by mail a sample set of our large German, French, and American Chromo Cards, on tinted and gold grounds, with a price list of over 200 different designs, on receipt of a stamp for postage. We will also send free by mail as samples, ten of our beautiful Chromos, on receipt of ten cents to pay for packing and postage; also enclose a confidential price list of our large oil chromos. Agents wanted. Address F. GLEASON & Co., 46 Summer Street, Boston, Mass.

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS
FOR THE LIVER
And all Bilious Complaints
Safe to take, being purely vegetable; no griping. Price 25 cts. All Druggists.

High Prices All Sat Down On and Crushed Out of Existence!

COLTER'S Shoe Department is turning out stacks and piles of good solid Boots and Shoes, and the best all-Leather solid Goods. This house now shows the best and double the amount of stock that was ever kept in Rising Sun, is doing a strictly cash business, and selling Boots and Shoes at the same low per cent. that Dry Goods are sold at. People are getting tired of paring exclusive shoe dealers' prices for Boots and Shoes when they can go to COLTER'S general store and get the best of goods at the same profits that Dry Goods are sold at [illegible] LTER'S. I told you that you could get good solid goods at Colter's, and at reasonable prices. Here I have toiled day after day to get a little money ahead, and you went to ——— and paid the regular shoe dealers' prices for those boots, and now look at them. Three dollars and twenty-five cents gone, and look at those boots. If you had gone to Colter's, as I told you to you would have got a better pair for Two Dollars and Fifty cents."

"Well, Father, I went to Colter's and they were so busy I went out, expecting to go back. But seeing a shoe store that wasn't busy, I just got them there. Next time I'll go to Colter's and wait till my turn comes."

CLOTHING AND OVERCOATS.

Over Twenty five Hundred Full Suits of Ready Made Clothing and ove Fifteen Hundred Overcoats to select from and get a fit

At COLTER'S MAMMOTH CHEAP CASH STORE
—Rising Sun, Indiana.—

Men's Full Suits, commencing at $4 a suit and up to $6, $7, $10, $12, and as high as $22. Grand snaps in

OVERCOATS.

Men's Overcoats, commencing at $2 25 and up to $5 for a real good, warm and durable Coat; next grade at $6 to $9; next $10 to $16. Always try COLTER'S for Clothing.

CLOAKS
AND JACKET

OLMAN
AND
lsterettes

"Well Mary, I am glad you had supper ready when I came home. When a person goes to town and is busy buying goods all day, she comes home feeling very tired and hungry." Yes, indeed, Jane, I expected you would feel tired and need refreshments, so I had tea ready for you. Where did you trade?" "Where did I trade?" "Yes." "Why, at Colter's; yes, indeed, every time, and I guess nearly everyone else trades there too, from the way the store was jammed to-day. I tell you, Mary, there were no less than 100 people in that store trading this day. The first room we go in was full, the Cloak room was jammed full and the Millinery room was crowded the Boot and Shoe room had a rush, and I was surprised when they took me up stairs to get a bit of floor oil cloth. I believe there were more than a dozen persons up there buying Overcoats, Pants, some buying Hats, some a Suit of Clothes and some buying two or three suits. Yes, indeed, they do business in that house, I'm a tellin' you. It kept a nice looking gray whiskered man busy making change." "Well, how are goods selling now?" "Cheaper than I ever saw them. Colter is making an extra effort to sell more goods than they did last year, and is offering extra inducements. I bought good Sheeting at 7 and 8 cents, splendid Canton Flannel at 10 to 11 cents. Thread 4c. Sheefield's Yarn 75c. a pound. Flannels 30, 37 to 40c. all-Wool Blankets $4 and $5. I got a nice Dolman for $9. Jennie's Hat with two Feathers on for $2, Floor Oil Cloth 25c, Jennie's Shoes, custom-made, sewed Calf, for $2, Johnnie's Boots at $2 60, and they are extra. I don't know what all I did get. You should all trade at Colter's

BOOTS AND SHOES
At COLTER'S
Mammoth Cheap Cash Store,
RISING SUN, INDIANA.

Solid Goods at Bottom Prices
IS OUR MOTTO,
And by standing to this rule we gain trade year after year. When we sell one pair of Solid Boots or Shoes, that invites the Customer back again. Patronize
COLTER'S
MAMMOTH
CHEAP CASH STORE,
Rising Sun. - Ind.

INCORPORATED UNDER THE LAWS OF MISSOURI.
CENTRAL MEDICAL & SURGICAL INSTITUTE
ST. LOUIS MO.

[illegible] facilities and an experienced Faculty. [illegible] succeeds to a large practice, which has been established for years, it [illegible] to extend its medical and surgical practice, giving skillful and scientific treatment to
CHRONIC DISEASES of the Head, Spine, Lungs and Air Passages, Heart, Liver, Stomach and Bowels, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Consumption and Asthma.
BLOOD IMPURITIES, Inherited or caused by impure association, Scrofula, Fever Sores, Ulcers, etc.
DEFORMITIES of the Limbs, Spinal Curvature, Wry-Neck, Disease of the Joints, Piles, Fistula, Rupture, etc.
WEAKNESS and wasting diseases in old and young men, also all diseases of the genito-urinary organs.
FEMALE irregularities and weaknesses, ceasing pain in the back or side, etc.
Personal interviews with patients are always preferred. Those unable to visit the Institute will be furnished with blank lists of questions that will assist them in making a full statement of their cases and if not requiring a surgical operation they can be successfully treated by correspondence, and medicines sent by mail or express. To enable us to send proper list of questions applicants should give a brief statement of their trouble.
The Treasurer of the corporation is of Nelson Chesman & Co., Advertising Agents, and refers to the publisher of this or any other newspaper in the United States or Canadas regarding responsibility.
Consultation at Office or by mail free and invited.

AYER'S
Sarsaparilla

cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Rheumatic Gout, General Debility, Catarrh, and all disorders caused by a thin and impoverished, or corrupted, condition of the blood; expelling the blood-poisons from the system, enriching and renewing the blood, and restoring its vitalizing power.

During a long period of unparalleled usefulness, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has proven its perfect adaptation to the cure of all diseases originating in poor blood and a weakened vitality. It is a highly concentrated extract of Sarsaparilla and other blood-purifying roots, combined with Iodide of Potassium and Iron, and is the safest, most reliable, and most economical blood-purifier and blood-food that can be used.

Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured.

"AYER'S SARSAPARILLA has cured me of the Inflammatory Rheumatism, with which I have suffered for many years. W. H. MOORE."
Durham, Ia., March 2, 1882.

"Eight years ago I had an attack of Rheumatism so severe that I could not move from the bed, or dress, without help. I tried several remedies without much if any relief, until I took AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by the use of two bottles of which I was completely cured. I have not been troubled with the Rheumatism since. Have sold large quantities of your SARSAPARILLA, and it still retains its wonderful popularity. The many notable cures it has effected in this vicinity convince me that it is the best blood medicine ever offered to the public. E. F. HARRIS."
River St., Buckland, Mass., May 13, 1882.

"Last March I was so weak from general debility that I could not walk without help. Following the advice of a friend, I commenced taking AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, and before I had used three bottles I felt as well as I ever did in my life. I have been at work now for two months, and think your SARSAPARILLA the greatest blood medicine in the world. JAMES MAYNARD."
520 West 42d St., New York, July 19, 1882.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA cures Scrofula and all Scrofulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Eczema, Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Boils, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin. It clears the blood of all impurities, aids digestion, stimulates the action of the bowels, and thus restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.

PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists; price $1, six bottles, $5.

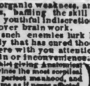
TUTT'S
PILLS
TORPID BOWELS,
DISORDERED LIVER,
and MALARIA.

From these sources arise three-fourths of the diseases of the human race. These symptoms indicate their existence: Loss of Appetite, Bowels costive, Sick Headache, fullness after eating, aversion to exertion of body or mind, Eructation of food, Irritability of temper, Low spirits, A feeling of having neglected some duty, Dizziness, Fluttering at the Heart, Dots before the eyes, highly colored Urine, CONSTIPATION, and demand the use of a remedy that acts directly on the Liver. As a Liver medicine TUTT'S PILLS have no equal. Their action on the Kidneys and Skin is also prompt; removing all impurities through these three "scavengers of the system," producing appetite, sound digestion, regular stools, a clear skin and a vigorous body. TUTT'S PILLS cause no nausea or griping nor interfere with daily work and are a perfect
ANTIDOTE TO MALARIA.
Sold everywhere, 25c. Office, 44 Murray St., N.Y.

TUTT'S HAIR DYE.
GRAY HAIR OR WHISKERS changed instantly to a GLOSSY BLACK by a single application of this DYE. Sold by Druggists, or sent by express on receipt of $1.
Office, 44 Murray Street, New York.
TUTT'S MANUAL OF USEFUL RECEIPTS FREE.

VIGOROUS HEALTH FOR MEN
THE PASTILLE CURE TRADE MARK FOR NERVOUS DEBILITY
TESTED FOR 5 YEARS
by use in thousands of cases. Founded on reliable medical principles. [illegible] while its numerous competitors have invariably failed. The direct application of this remedy to the seat of the disease makes its specific influence felt without delay. The natural functions of the human organism are restored. The animating elements of life which have been wasted are given back. [illegible] NERVOUS DEBILITY, organic weakness, and [illegible] Do not temporize while such an enemy lurks in your system. Take a remedy that has cured thousands, and does not interfere with your attention to business or cause any pain or inconvenience. Send for a Descriptive Pamphlet giving Anatomical Illustrations, which will convince the most sceptical that they can be restored to perfect health, and the duties of life, same as if never affected. Sent free in sea envelope. [illegible]
HARRIS REMEDY CO. MFG. CHEMISTS.
306½ N. 10th St. ST. LOUIS, MO.
One Month's treatment $3. two months $5. three months $7.

PARKER'S
HAIR BALSAM
A beneficial dressing preferred to similar articles because of its purity and richness. It Restores to Gray Hair the Youthful Color & prevents dandruff and falling of the hair. 50c. & $1. Hiscox & Co., N.Y.



FLORESTON
COLOGNE
Excels the finest extracts in richness. Delicate, long lasting. No odor like it. Be sure you get FLORESTON Cologne, signature of Hiscox & Co., N.Y. on every label. 25 and 75 cts. at druggists and dealers in perfumes.

FREE!
RELIABLE SELF-CURE.
A favorite prescription of one of the most noted and successful specialists in the U.S. (now retired) for the cure of Nervous Debility, Lost Manhood, Weakness and Decay. Sent in plain sealed envelope free. Druggists can fill it.
Address DR. WARD & CO., Louisiana, Mo.

PAYSONS INDELIBLE INK
is the BEST. No preparation. Used with any clean pen for marking any fabric. Popular for decorative work on linen. Received Centennial MEDAL & Diploma. Established 50 years. Sold by all Druggists, Stationers & News Ag'ts.

Local News.

Christmas draws nigh.

Saxony Yarn at W. E. Piper's.

We are having elaborate frosts.

Who would desire nicer weather?

Corn is selling at $2 50 per barrel delivered.

The work on the Christmas tree progresseth.

Miss Sallie Rich is visiting her sister at this place.

Considerable sickness in the Florence neighborhood.

F. P. Walton will not prize tobacco at Richwood.

The birds seem to be as cheerful as if it were spring time.

Fill your ice-houses the first time you can get the material.

Tobacco has been coming in pretty lively the past week.

New stone are being put on the Bellevue and Burlington pike.

Mack Aylor and wife have a bran new ten pound boy at their house.

A fresh lot of Prunes, Dried Apples and Peaches at W. E. Piper's.

Cranberries, Raisins, Citron and Dried Currents at W. E. Pipers.'

Some persons have lost meat that was killed during the last month.

Mr. Appleton and wife, of Petersburg were the guest of Mrs. Frances Riddell, Tuesday.

F. Dickey, of Union, was delivering his crop of tobacco at this place last Saturday.

Hon. Elijah Hogan, Representative-elect of Gallatin county, was in town last Saturday.

So far we have had an open winter, which has been greatly to the advantage of the farmers.

T. A. Snyder & Co's., Mince Meat, Apple Butter, Peach Butter and Preserves at W. E. Piper's.

Hall's Hair Renewer turns gray hair dark, removes dandruff, cures scalp humors; an elegant toilet article.

Miss B. C. Wood is teaching a class in elocution in Morgan Academy. She gave the first lesson Monday.

Jim Westbay don't want any more front seats at entertainments when the "Bald Headed Man" is recited.

Jim Conner started the hog market here Monday morning at $5 40, to be delivered by the 25 of this month.

A steamboat load of rabbits has been killed in this section this fall, and still there is no scarcity of that kind of game.

John Reed, of Florence, will give a grand ball in Odd-Fellows' Hall on the night of the 31st inst. Everybody is invited.

Call and see our Prize Doll, Auto., Photo. and Scrap Albums, Writing Desks and Box Paper at Langsdale's Rising Sun, Ind.

Some fellow out of meat has visited Ed Berkshire's flock of sheep. Ed would give the fellow the missing lamb if he knew who he is.

Corn is not of a good, sound quality this fall. A large ear can be twisted half around before the cob will snap. It seems to be spungy.

A communication for the RECORDER, mailed at Florence on Monday of last week, made the trip in exactly three days. Remarkably fast time.

The mails for this place seemed to have some difficulty in getting here last week, not on account of the carrier though, who is always on time.

Johnnie Hoggins, of Walton, recently sold to a New York man, 14 head of cattle that weighed 2,100 pounds each, and for which he realized $147 per head.

Tobacco took quite a fall last week, thought Henly Smith when the tiers gave way in Walton's warehouse and let an avalanch of the weed down on him.

The injuries received by Thomas Rouse's wife and child at Hebron, Sunday week, were more serious than at first thought, but they are both able to be about.

Debating societies properly conducted are both entertaining and profitable, and at this season of the year there should be one at every school-house in the county.

All we ask is for you to examine our stack and know we can sell you at most reasonable rates. We can satisfy any one in price and quality goods. R. G. Langsdale, Rising Sun, Ind.

Some of our young townsmen who like to attend church at Florence, had rather an embarrassing experience with their hats at church there the other evening. We refer the matter Gas Ometer.

B. B. Breed, farmer, of Dakota, and Miss Queen Grubbs, daughter of W. B. Grubbs, of this county will be married to-day. The bride has many friends who wish her a long and happy journey through life.

Our rural friend, T. D. Goodridge, you will always find equipped for a game of croquet. He carries a croquet ball (his white alley) in one pocket and generally walks with a mallet for a cane. He's hard to beat.

Nice tombstones or monuments at the graves of the departed, are marks of respect which should not be neglected. Hurschart & Co., Lawrenceburg, Ind., have just what you want. John Beall of Hebron, is their agent.

We are headquarters for all kinds of Holiday Goods. Our goods are cheaper than ever before. Goods are being sold daily by us. Come early and get a good selection. A fine line of Prose and Poetry and toy books; Old Kris is in our show window, R. G. Langsdale's, Rising Sun, is the place.

Christmas goods for all. We have the largest and best selected stock ever in Rising Sun. Our Dolls are beauties; Hobby Horses, Wagons, Sleds and Doll Wagons, Toilet Sets, Vases, Cups, Saucers and Mugs. An endless variety of cheap toys at R. G. Langsdale's.

W. C. Goodridge brought to town the other day an ear of corn raised by Wm. Walton, which had 1026 grains. It was of a yellow variety, and Mr. G. says it was not the largest ear he could find in the bulk. Wonder if Mr. Walton can produce as large corn in Bates Co., Mo.

Miss B. C. Wood gave a reading in the Court-house last Falday evening. The weather was bad and her audience small. Miss Wood is a very fine elocutionist, and her readings are highly entertaining to those who hear them. We are sorry that she did not have a better house.

G. S. Lozier, of Lawrenceburg, Ind., was in this county last week, and while over here sold to Mr. Abel Carpenter, of Florence, a fine Johnston Organ, and one or two New Home Sewing Machines to other parties. When in Lawrenceburg, and wanting anything in this line give him a call.

The school-house in district No. 51, is the scene every Thursday night, of a lively oratorical display. The denizens of that neck o' woods have a debating society there, and are disposing of numerous questions. After the holidays they will collar the tariff question; so we may expect an early adjournment of the U. S. Congress, it being relieved of the disposition of that perplexing problem.

Peter Nazeras, a citizen of the northern part of the county, was arrested one day last week and lodged in the Cincinnati calaboose, charged with obtaining names to receipts under false pretenses. Some years since he and Lyman S. Cotton, of Cincinnati, had some business transactions, and said receipts are involved in it and are on file in a suit in the Boone Circuit Court between these parties.

Last Wednesday evening between eight and nine o'clock, the residence of Mrs. Ward, of East Bend, was destroyed by fire. Mrs. Ward and family, with the exception of her son-in-law, Chas. Kenner, and two children, were attending church at the time the fire broke out. Very few household articles were saved. The loss will probably reach $2,500 with no insurance. The fire is supposed to have originated from a defective flue.

Taylor & Riggs will give away next Christmas 1 Fine Piano, 2 Gold Watches, 1 Sewing Machine, 1 Breech Loading Shot Gun, 1 Bicycle, 1 Velocipede, 1 Hobby Horse, 1 Rocking Chair, 10 Bolts Muslin. Will give one chance in above presents for every dollars worth you buy. Visit their six stores at Madison and Pike Streets, Covington, Ky. The drawing takes place Christmas week. This paper will publish the lucky numbers.

We learn from the Enquirer that Dominick Rusch, a respectable farmer of Jackson Township, is lying dangerously ill at his home and not expected to live. The cause of his sickness is somewhat peculiar. During last harvest while at work on his farm he opened up a bumble bee's nest, and was stung by the insects in hundreds of places, from the effects of which he was confined to his bed, and has ever since been slowly dying from the effects of the poison injected by the vicious stings of the maddened bees.—Lawrenceburg Register.

Cy's New Lamp-Burner.

Saturday Cy Crisler bought a double-barrel lamp-burner and put it on the lamp in the bar-room at the Boone House, and it came near being a house-burner as well. The double wick in that style burner produces a considerable degree of heat which was not provided against when the new "rig" was placed in the position occupied by its predecessor, which was too near the ceiling to insure safety, and at a late hour that night the oder of burning pine attracted the attention of Cy and Mr. Welsh, one of his boarders, who were in the bar-room, and upon investigation the ceiling above the lamp was found to be on fire and a considerable hole burned therein. This timely discovery and a few buckets of water nipped in the bud what, in a few minutes, would have developed into a conflagration beyond the control of our fire department.

He Wanted to Bleed the Town.

Last week a fellow named Roswell, who lives down on Woolper, came to town, and took on a cargo of fighting whisky which created within him a desire to cut the town loose and let it float off in its own blood. He made an assault on Henry Mallory with an angry looking pocket knife, which left an extensive opening in Henry's coat just under the left arm. The work of getting blood at that point being too slow, he closed in on Mallory, who was not in a condition to defend himself, and was in the last act of serving a jugular, when by-standers interfered and stopped further proceedings. Shortly after the attack on Mallory, Ira Marshall stepped into the bar-room at the Sandford House, when Roswell commenced interviewing him with his knife, giving him a slight cut across one wrist. Ira poured a powerful broadside into his forecastle, and Roswell fell in a heap on the floor, but was soon coming to his feet to renew the assault, when Marshall commenced smashing bar-room furniture, such as chairs, over his head, knocking him completely out of time. At the close of the second act, Constable Sandford took charge of the would-be annihilator and lodged him in the county cooler, where he remained till morning, when he was brought out very penitent, disavowing any knowledge of what had happened the day before, and plead for mercy, which Esquire Baker gave him in the shape of a $5 fine, and informed him that the next time he gives a like performance in Burlington the dose will be much larger. Roswell declared he would not repeat.

NGEIHBORHOOD NEWS.

Bullittsville.

John Cropper weighed 40 hogs here last week, which averaged 375 pounds.

Geo. Kreylich and Sam Kyle, of Kenton county, were visiting in this neighborhood last week.

Miss Lou Kendall entertained quite a number of her young friends one night last week.

Mex Cleveland, of Kenton county, made our town a flying visit last week.

A large crowd assembled at the Christian church last Sunday to hear the farewell sermon of Rev. Lockhart.

Constance.

Last Wednesday night thieves entered Jeff Clayton's shop and stole a brace and bit. Same night Will Souther's chicken roost was visited and a chicken taken. The night following this raid an attempt was made to break into Davis Bros. store at this place. The brace and bit taken from Clayton's shop was brought into use for the purpose of boring through the door. Several holes were made but as an entrance was not gained it is supposed the burglars were frightened off from the fact that they left Clayton's tools on the scene of action.

We prophecy a nice winter. January will be cold. Mark that.

The toll-gate at this place is still manipulated by Will Souther, who never loses his grip on the cord until the weary traveler ponies up the sheckles.

Normansville.

Born—To Mr. J. L. Johnson and wife, a son—Chas. Frederick.

On last Friday the Rev. Taylor of the Christian Church, had an appointment to preach for us, but owing, we suppose, to the inclemency of the weather, he failed to come.

Our Sunday-school is thinking of having a Christmas tree on the evening of the 25th inst.

The primary department of the Normansville and Hamilton school will give an entertainment at the School-house on Christmas eve. All persons, patrons and friends of the school especially, are invited to attend.

J. L. Johnson a few nights ago had the misfortune to lose a very nice and valuable horse. The cause of its death is unknown.

There is much sickness in this vicinity at present.

Hebron.

As Speaker, J. G. Carlisle is giving our people entire satisfaction, and they would like to see him made President.

Our pastures look fine.

Much of the fodder is damaged.

Wheat is doing well.

Jim Conner gave Legrand Utz $20 for a pair thinrind pigs.

Turkeys are scarce now. Elijah Tanner is paying 8 cents a pound for them on foot.

Will Batterson was in our town several days last week, and he was so well pleased that he talked of sending for his family and taking up his abode here.

Rev. Shwick preached a fine sermon to a very large congregation in our church Sunday night.

Our pike is on another strike. Friends, have patience.

John Killgore sold 8 hogs that averaged 411 pounds, being the boss hogs at this place.

Abe Clore is buying all the hogs in this locality.

Petersburg.

The meeting at the Christian church still in progress, with large attendance every night.

Rev. Geo. Frob has been preaching at East Bend for several days past

Hon. N. S. Walton and Col. Charles Gaines, of the Bullittsville neighborhood, were in attendance at the Christian church last Saturday night.

J. A. Davis, of Hebron, was here last Thursday.

The Oil Fever still rages in this locality.

Robt. Sandford is the guest of G. Robert Berkshire this week.

Ed Smith has the rheumatism.

Manlius Cave says he has sold his crop of tobacco for $18, $15 and $12 per cwt.

W. E. Grant and wife, of Carroll county, were visiting friends here last week.

Frank Colcher returned home last Monday.

Will Snyder has gone to Tennessee to work at the cooper's trade.

Elijah Parker sold his hogs at $5 40.

Mrs. M. F. Wingate has the measles.

Florence.

The most notable events of late were the celebration of thanksgiving day and the marriage nuptials of Mr. Henry Meyers and Miss Minnie Ferneding, both of this place. The latter incident was consumated Wednesday the 28th ult., at the Catholic church, Father Burke officiating. Some time before the appointed hour, 4 o'clock p. m., a train of carriages were drawn up in front of the Florence Hotel in which the nervous couple were arranging their attire for the occasion that was to make them one through life. Dame Rumor and gossip had called together a mixed crowd of men, women and children which were stationed upon the corners and at the doors, and windows of such places as afforded a good view, all eager to get a glimpse of the new pair as they would appear equipped for the journey. Your correspondent took a rear seat. We don't mean a seat at the back of the house, but that my extreme modesty forced me to a position less conspicuous. We were not long in waiting, and at a few minutes after the appointed hour the bride and groom emerged from their covert and occupied a carriage. The bride was tastefully arrayed in green silk with heavy brocade velvet trimmings, the groom, in neat plain black, and to use an "Old Virginny" expression, looked "As keen as a guinea fowl." The near relatives and invited guests filled up the remaining vehicles and all moved hastily to the church. The crowd of watchers hurried around the corners, through the alleys and across the lots to the same destination. The hitherto noisy assemblage now assumed an orderly air, which they well understand to be one of the characteristics of the Catholic services. The happy pair were not kept long in suspense, the marriage now being duly solemnized and sealed with the wedding ring.

The appointed day of Thanksgiving is o'er and if our people are to be measured in their devotion by the number of turkeys slain, and the sweetmeats and delicacies consumed, surely we are a thankful community. If there is a live gobbler in this district, I must be one that is marked by the frosts of many winters and set aside as an unclean fowl.

Pap Clore's snow-bird theory is gaining votaries. The argument now is that the snow-bird is like a black horse which turns brown by the action of the sun in summer, and assumes his dark color as winter approaches. The sparrows that are noticed in winter with the snow-birds are merely sunburnt snow-birds that are too old to cast their plumage.

Constable O. H. Conrad met with an accident which may result in the loss of an eye. While out with a party hunting a few days ago, a stray shot from one of the sportsmens guns struck him in the left eye, inflicting a painful, if not a serious, wound.

Mrs. Maggie Finch, of the Grant House, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Susie Carpenter, in Saline county, Mo.

Col. Hansford, of Crab Orchard, Ky., stopped here for a day with his brother-in-law, T. H. Stephenson, on his return from Clarksville, W. Va., where he has been attending upon legal business. The Col. is a great talker and entertained us with some laughable anecdotes of the great and excentric Kentucky preacher, Raccoon John Smith, who received his peculiar name in his neighborhood.

In our article last week which didn't get to headquarters in time for publication, we, under the excitement of the moment, stated that Mr. Abel Carpenter was burglarized of a nice turkey left over from Thanksgiving. The facts are Mr. C. had that turkey covered with his old musket which he had prepared for the occasion, and the rogues were forced to take a live one from the roost.

We are not certain about Uncle Noah's bird question, but one thing we do know is, that he laid the biggest egg on Tom Swetnam's scales last Saturday, that we have seen. Weight, 5½ ounces. We don't know, but we think it was a "hard shell."

Rev. John Smith, second adventist, from Cincinnati, preached Sunday, at the Christian church. After the sermon two converts from the Hebron neighborhood were baptized. It seems to us to be a propitious time for such preachers to spread their doctrines while the horizon is presenting such remarkable phenomana evening and morning, and everything let lose generally. I would take advantage of these things if I were a sensational preacher.

Miss Delia Grogan and Miss Oceola Yager, the belles of Florence, spent a few days, last week, with friends in Cincinnati.

Capt. H. T. Snyder and wife started, last Thursday, for the Old Dominion, where they intend to spend the winter with relative and friends.

GAS OMETER.

Sheriff's Sale for Taxes.

By virtue of Taxes due the Sheriff of Boone County for the years 1882 and 1883 I, or one of my deputies, will, on Monday, January 7th, 1884.

between the hours of 12 o'clock m., and 2 p. m., at the Court House door in Burlington, Boone County, Ky., expose to Public Sale, to the highest bidder, for cash in hand the following property, or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy the amount of taxes due, aforesaid and cost, to wit:

A tract of land containing 32 acres and bounded by the lands of Webb Bros., Mrs. Annie Foulke, Milton Gaines and the Ohio River.

Amount of taxes and costs to be raised by sale $12 69 and levied on as the property of Peter Urton. J. R. CLUTTERCUCK, S. B. C.
By W. T. GERMAN, D. S.

5

LIVER diseases, headache, and constipation, caused by bad digestion, quickly cured by Brown's Iron Bitters.

LEWIS, IOWA.—Dr. M. J. Davis says: "Brown's Iron Bitters give the best of satisfaction to those who use it."

GARFIELD, IOWA.—Dr. A. T. Henack says: "Once using Brown's Iron Bitters proves its superiority over all other tonic preparations."

Stop Thinking

What you shall buy for a Christmas Present for your friends, and go to

W. E. Piper's,

and see his display of elegant and useful articles suitable for

The Holidays.

Presents for Parents. Presents for Young People. Toys for the Children, Presents for Young Men and Ladies. Presents for Everybody.

Come And Be

Satisfied that SANTA CLAUS cannot beat us when it comes to making the CHILDREN happy.

Ask for a Farmers and Mechanics Almanac, for 1884, which we are giving AWAY. YOURS TRULY,

W. E. PIPER.

HEYN AND BRO,

Rising Sun, Indiana.

Great reduction in prices of all Seasonable Goods.

DON'T FAIL TO SEE THE BARgains offered in Overcoats And READY MADE CLOTHING To Suit Everybody.

All Prices Marked Down.

A full line of Ladies' Black and Light Colored

Cloaks,
Dolmans,
Newmarkets,
and Jacke

In all grades, at prices that will make them sell.

Owing to the advance of the season we are making sarrifices in order to reduce Stock, as it is our aim not to carry any goods over for next year. We are selling BLANKETS, SHAWLS, FLANNELS, and JEANS at astonishingly low prices

Our Stock of Domestic Cotton Goods at wholesale prices: Canton Flannel commonly sold at 10c. at 7½c. and other grades in proportion. See our Calicos at 5c. and you will buy them. Indigo Blue Calico, commonly sold at 9 and 10 cents, now 7½ cents. A full line of Ladies' and Gents' Furnishing Goods and Knit Goods, to dispose of. We mean and do business, and it will be to everybodys advantage to give us a call.

HEYN & BRO.

Rising Sun, Ind.

FALL FALL FALL FALL
AND
Winter Clothi'g

Clothing of the best goods, well trimmed, in the latest styles, made under my direct supervision and sold at lower prices than are asked for badly made, shoddy goods at other places. Call and be assured.

A splendid line of Suitings. Suits MADE to order on short notice.

H. F Blase,

540 Madison St, - COVINGTON, KY

UNDERTAKING.

We keep Constantly on Hand all sizes of

Burial Cases and Caskets.

And having just received a beautiful

NEW HEARSE,

Which can be had at a reasonable price when desired.

PRICES GUARANTEED LESS THAN CITY PRICES.

DAVIS BROS., - - HEBRON, KY.

M.L. SWETNAM. HUBERT NEED.

SWETNAM&NEAD,

(SUCCESSOR TO ALONZO GRAVES)

LIVERY AND BOARDING STABLE

AND TRANSFER LINE.

79 Pike Street, Covington, Ky.

Horses Kept by the Day, Week or Month.
Horses and Buggies for Hire.
Stock of all kinds Bought and Sold.
Best Care Taken of Horses entrusted to our Keeping.

All Orders for Hauling Promptly Attended to.

City Flouring Mills

RISING SUN, INDIANA.

FLOUR EXCHANGED FOR WHEAT OR CASH. THE HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR GOOD WHEAT.

mar7-tf23 J. W. Talbott.

JAMES S. WAYNE, President. JNO. L. SANDFORD, Cashier

CAPITAL $300,000.

FARMERS AND TRADERS

NATIONAL BANK.

Covington, Kentucky.

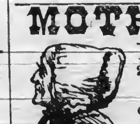
DIRECTORS.

James S. Wayne, M. C. Motch, Sam Hind, E. J. Hickey, E. J. Green
J. S. Matson, J. H. Mersman, J. L. Sandford, L. H Dills, F. P. Helm
L. C. Stephens.

The general operations of banking transacted upon the most favorable terms, collections made on all points in the United States.

The Business and Accounts of Farmers are Especially Solicited by this Bank.
dec. 20-6m

MOTHER NOBLE'S



TRADE MARK.

HEALING SYRUP.

20 Million Bottles sold in 10 years. A certain Cure for Dyspepsia, all Diseases of the Kidneys, Liver, Stomach, Blood, Skin and Bowels.

Can Produce Thousands of Letters proving its Curative Powers.

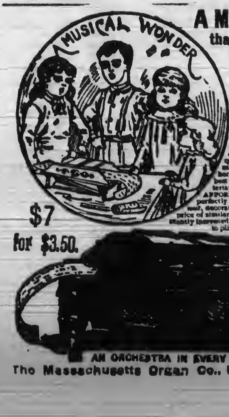
AN OLD AND LONG TRIED REMEDY.

LABORATORY 77 AMITY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.

FOR SALE BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

Cornease.--The King of Corn Killers. The most desperate Corns, BUNIONS, WARTS &c., SPEEDILY cured. Price 25 Cents.

Footease.--An Unfailing Remedy for Hot, Swollen and Tender Feet, Chilblains, &c. Price 25 Cents.
Cornease Manuf'g Co., 236, 5th Ave. Place, N. Y. City.
For Sale by Agents, Druggists and Shoe Dealers.



MUSICAL WONDER
$7
for $3.50.
AN ORCHESTRA IN EVERY HOME.

A MUSICAL INSTRUMENT

that will play any tune, and that any one, even a child, can operate.

The Organette has gained such a world-wide reputation that a lengthy description of it is not necessary. It will be sufficient to say that it is a PERFECT ORGAN that plays mechanically all the sacred airs, popular music, songs, dances, etc. etc. It consists of three strong bellows and set of reeds with EXPRESSION box and SWELL. A strip of perforated paper represents the tune, and it is only necessary to place the paper tune in the instrument, as shown in the picture, and turn the handle, which both operates the bellows and propels the paper tune. The perforations in the paper allow the right reeds to sound and a perfect tune is the result, perfect in time, execution, and effect, without the least knowledge of music being required of the performer: even a little child can operate it; as is shown in the picture, a little girl is playing a song and her playmates are singing the words. It is tuned in the key best suited for the human voice to sing by. It interests and entertains both old and young, assists in training the voice and AFFORDS HOURS OF SOCIAL AMUSEMENT. The Organette is perfectly represented by the picture. It is made of solid black walnut, decorated in gilt, and is both handsome and ornamental. The price of similar instruments has hitherto been $8, and the demand has constantly increased until now there are over 75,000 in use. We are encouraged to place the Organette on the market at this greatly reduced price, believing that the sale will warrant the reduction. The Organette though similar in construction is an improvement upon our well-known Organette, which sells for $8 and $10. It contains the same number of reeds and plays the same tunes. Our offer is this: On receipt of $7 we will send the Organette by express to any address, and include FREE $3.50 worth of music, or on receipt of $5 we will send it with over $1.50 worth of music FREE, or for $3.50 we will send it with small selection of music FREE. The price includes boxing and packing. These are agent's prices, and we will appoint the first purchaser from any town our agent, if he so desires. Address,

The Massachusetts Organ Co., 57 Washington Street, Boston, Mass., U. S. A.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL, Publishers.

BURLINGTON, : : KENTUCKY

A Feathered Shepherd.

In South America there is a very beautiful bird called the agami, or the golden-breasted trumpeter. It is about as large in the body as one of our common barn-yard fowl, but as it has longer legs and a longer neck it seems much larger. Its general color is black, but the plumage on the breast is beautiful beyond description, being what might be called irridescent, changing, as it continually does, from a steel-blue to a red-gold, and glittering with a metallic luster.

In its wild state the agami is not peculiar for anything but its beauty, its extraordinary cry, which has given it the name of trumpeter, and for an odd habit of leaping with comical antics into the air, apparently for its own amusement. When tamed however—and it soon learns to abandon its wild ways—it usually conceives a violent attachment for its master, and, though very jealous of his affection, endeavors to please him by a solicitude for the well-being of all that belongs to him, which may fairly be termed benevolence.

It is never shut up at night as the other fowl are, but, with a well-deserved liberty, is permitted to take up its quarters were it pleases. In the morning it drives the ducks to the water and the chickens to their feeding-ground; and if any should presume to wander, they are quickly brought to a sense of duty by a sharp reminder from the strong beak of the vigilant agami. At night the faithful guardian drives its charge home again.

Sometimes it is given the care of a flock of sheep; and, though it may seem too puny for such a task, it is in fact quite equal to it. The misguided sheep that tries to trifle with the agami soon has cause to repent the experiment; for, with a swiftness unrivaled by any dog, the feathered shepherd darts after the runaway, and with wings and beak drives it back to its place, not forgetting to impress upon the offender a sense of its error by pecks with its beak.

Should a dog think to take advantage of the seemingly unguarded condition of the sheep and approach them with evil design, the agami makes no hesitation about rushing at him and giving combat. And it must be a good dog that will overcome the brave bird. Indeed, most dogs are so awed by the fierce onset of the agami, accompanied by its strange cries, that they incontinently turn about and run, fortunate if they escape unwounded from the indignant creature.

At meal-times it walks into the house and takes its position near its master, seeming to ask for his caresses. It will not permit the presence of any other pet in the room, and even resents the intrusion of any servants not belonging there, driving out all others before it will be contented. Like a well-bred dog, it does not clamor for food, but waits with dignity until its wants have been supplied.—Will Woodman, in St. Nicholas.

Skeleton of Guiteau, the Assassin.

The skeleton of the late Charles J. Guiteau, assassin of President Garfield, having been formally turned over to the Surgeon-General, is exhibited in an upright glass case situated in the north end of the army medical museum hall on Tenth street. A reporter of the Gazette having received a "pointer" to the above effect last evening started off for the museum to investigate the matter. Passing by large cases full of skulls, arms, pickled babies and other curiosities of humanity the upright case was reached. It was perfectly new and glistened under a recent coat of shining varnish. The interior was decorated with four human skeletons, suspended by their skulls and glistening in their snowy whiteness. Two of the largest one of which is Guiteau's bore no labels. The smaller ones were placarded "Negro girl" and "Skeleton of a boy." Of the former, that of the assassin can be easily distinguished by its height. Guiteau was five feet nine inches or five feet ten inches. The skeleton corresponds with these figures. The purpose of putting other skeletons in the case was doubtless to prevent suspicion. A close scrutiny of Guiteau's bones showed that each distinct portion had been marked with a very small letter "D" in indellible ink by the museum authorities, probably as a means of identification in case they are ever stolen Another noticeable feature was a slight stoop of the shoulders, which those who saw the man will recognize at once. The reporter turned to the gentleman who gave him the information and asked where the head was kept.

"The head was skinned after the autopsy," he replied; "it was then stuffed, sewed up and packed in alcohol, and is now in this building. Would you like to see it?"

The reporter answered affirmatively, and was taken to a room in the northern part of the museum, where he was shown the head which planned the second Presidential assassination in the United States. The preservation was remarkable and showed the perfect expression of Guiteau's face as he dropped into eternity, with the final words of the doggerel hymn on his lips.

"What was done with his flesh?" queried the reporter. "Was it thrown into the sewer, as published?"

"No, it was not," he replied. "Guiteau's flesh was cremated in this building at noon of November 27, 1882, after it had been stripped from the skeleton."

"How?"

"It was shoveled into the furnace above, and the ashes now grace some ash heap in the suburbs of Washington.—Washington Gazette.

Nothing Certain.

"You say you bought largely of Northern Pacific preferred?"

"Yes, sir."

"And lost?"

"Of course I lost."

"Then you bought common?"

"I did."

"And lost some more?"

"Yes sir."

"Then you tried Oregon & Trans-Continental?"

"I did."

"And you lost again?"

"Lost again."

"And now you want to know what you can do to get even with Villard?"

"Yes, sir, that's what I came to consult you about."

"H'm! H'm! The only way that suggests itself to me is to watch your chance and pick his pocket, though there is nothing certain that he would have anything in his wallet more valuable than the diagram of an eight per cent. dividend to be declared to bull the stocks again."—Wall Street News.

THE DAIRY.

—One quart of cotton-seed meal, free from husk, one quart of corn meal, and one of wheat and rye bran, fed twice a day, is the ration given by an exchange for a cow in full milk.

—The Homestead says that estimating the butter crop of Iowa at eighty million pounds a year, a loss of five cents per pound means one-twentieth as many dollars as there are pounds, or four million dollars.

—Slow milking of cows never secures the full product. The cow becomes tired of relaxing the udder muscles, and after a time resumes the more natural position of contracting them. This makes much stripping necessary, and a slow milker will never have patience to strip a long time. Partial milking soon dries the cow and greatly reduces her value.

—A Hartford paper makes the charge that there are farmers in the surrounding country who have for years brought into the city butter for dealers and families, who are now, and for a year or two have been, buying oleomargarine in Hartford, molding it over at home, and supplying it to their customers as the genuine product of their own dairies.

—The well-known fact that a cow will give more milk and make more butter on a bright, sunshiny day than during one of a dull, dark character is a strong argument in favor of having our winter stables so arranged that the animals get the benefit of plenty of sunshine. If possible, have the cows on the south side of the barn, and provide plenty of windows.—American Cultivator.

—A cement floor is not the best for a dairy, as it absorbs the drippings of milk and becomes foul in a short time. A good floor is of matched plank, with tight joints and painted, so that it will absorb no moisture. Whatever drippings fall from the churn may be washed off such a floor without leaving any traces. Brick is quite as absorbent as cement. A flagstone floor with close joints set in cement, is the best of all.

—A correspondent writes the Country Gentleman that large quantities of Dutch cheeses are annually imported into this country. They are round as a ball, of uniform size, and weigh about three and a half pounds each. They are generally of excellent quality, not colored, but the outside painted or stained red for protection. They are every year more sought after; for one reason, among others, that they can be kept, especially in summer, in a better state of preservation by so cutting them, with serrated edges, that they can be kept closed tight, except when opened to take out what is from time to time required. They are retailed here at one dollar and ten cents each. Why cannot just such cheese be made here? Surely it can be done and at a large profit, and with a saving to the country of the large sums sent abroad to buy them.

The Advantage of Dairying.

It is a proverb among farmers that dairying enriches the land and the farmer too. We have heretofore shown how it is that the production of milk does not exhaust the soil, and how it must necessarily continually improve it, so long as the dairyman feeds some kind of purchased food to his cows, which all do more or less. But although this may be one result of this business, it is not one that operates by itself without the aid of the dairyman. Plums may fall from a tree into a man's mouth, but he must take care to be there with his mouth open when the plum falls, or it drops without advantage to him. And so the dairyman should have the credit for the result of his business—first, because he has the good sense to choose it; next, because he generally manages it well; then, because the very nature of his business compels him to be a studious man, and lastly, because the nature of his business is such that the study of it makes him thoughful, and this makes him inquiring, and that induces him to gather himself together in meetings to talk over his business and discuss its intricate points, and morever, to seek in papers and books all the possible information he can in regard to the conduct of his affairs. Moreover, all these things make him a sharp business man, and he studies the markets and suits his products to the demand, and so gets the full value for them. Being all this, and being consequently prosperous, the dairyman may very well be studied by the farmer and his ways and methods adopted as far as they may be, for, being sound and practical, and, moreover, successful, these ways and methods will serve the ends of the farmers as well as they have done those of the dairymen.—N. Y. Times.

The Creameries Will Stay.

It was said awhile ago that the creameries had fulfilled their purpose, and "must go." They will not go; they have come to stay, as the Dairy pertinently says, "for the very bottom principle upon which they are based is one that is indispensable for success in any kind of business. The creamery or factory does the work of a hundred pairs of hands and turns out a ton of butter or cheese at the cost of the labor of one-tenth as many. That is, the manufacture of dairy goods, under this system, is reduced ninety per cent. Along with this economy of labor there is a saving of time to an equal extent, for ninety pairs of hands are set free for other useful employment, or if the hands are idle, there are ninety heads at liberty to think and originate valuable new ideas. Moreover, it occupies one special pair of hands and head constantly, and this constant practice soon makes an expert, the more quickly and perfectly as the person may be the more intelligent or apt to learn by experience dexterity gained in this constant practice. So that there is the needed cheapness of product, more effective work by the use of the best machinery, and the best quality of product that is possible with the material used. Again, the creamery or factory, for its own interest, exerts an educational influence by its oversight upon its patrons, and new and better methods of lodging, feeding and milking the cows are very quickly introduced and practiced in the contributary dairies. The factory and the creamery are improvements. Improvements never go backward. The march of improvements is always onward and forward, and until some better device is found to take their place, the creameries have come to stay. But we do not expect they will ever monopolize the dairy. In the very nature of things they can only average their product, and the best class of private dairies, in which capital and the highest skill are available, will always surpass them in the quality of both their butter and their cheese."

* * *

—A saw-mill in Cape May County, New Jersey, is run by wind.

The Mole.

These pretty little creatures are found in all the grand divisions of the earth excepting South America. In appearance they vary somewhat in different lands, but their habits are essentially the same. One often observes long ridges winding across the lawn or meadow, and wonders at their origin. They are made by the mole, in search of food, for he is a voracious little animal, and devours thousands of worms and insects that would prove very pernicious. A better knowledge of natural history would enable us to do justice to many harmless creatures, and prevent much personal annoyance, as well as destruction of property. Annihilate the dragon-fly and you will be tormented with mosquitoes; kill the pretty little lady-bug and your garden will be devoured by the green aphis; slaughter or drive away the wild birds and then wonder why worms and caterpillars swarm upon your fruit and shade trees.

But to return to Mr. Mole. Nature, mindful of her most humble children, while denying acute vision to the mole, has bestowed upon it a quick sense of smell and hearing, thus enabling it to discover the haunts of the earth-worm and grub that it pursues under ground, and also to avoid the presence of its enemies. Mole-catchers, understanding this acuteness of smell, keep a dead mole which they draw through their traps and the adjoining soil to remove the scent of human contact. Its usual habitation is in damp places or near streams. Their fortifications are constructed in a very curious manner, with long, circular galleries and connecting passages. In the middle of the lower gallery is a round chamber or sleeping apartment. The nest of the female is in a separate hillock, much larger, and at some distance from the fortress. The mole is very dainty regarding its personal appearance. The body is dark colored, the feet and tail white. The hair, which is short and very thick, grows straight out from the skin; therefore it is always smooth in whatever direction the animal moves, and does not become filled with particles of earth. In digging they work very rapidly, and soon bury themselves from sight. The fore-paws are extremely large and the bones of the fore-arm very thick and strong. The English peasantry say that the mole works for three hours, then rests for three, laboring and resting alternately through the day.—Humane Journal.

A Story About Senator Williams.

Old Cero Gordon Williams is the handsomest man of his years in Kentucky, not excepting General William Preston, formerly Minister to Spain and at the Court of susceptible Isabella. William is six feet two inches, with grizzled-iron mustache and curled wig, piercing gray eyes, the frame of a giant and a voice of fine, melodious ring. He is as vain as a peacock. While traveling in Southern Russia, when a young man, he alighted at a village where the Emperor Nicholas was hourly expected. Williams was taken for the Emperor. It took the Russians an hour to get over the mistake, but Williams has never entirely recovered. He won his title by gallantry before the walls of Cerro Gordo, a Captain in Scott's army, and he has maintained his fame for prowess by many personal encounters, in all of which he handled himself well. He affects the quality divine to politicians—of an infallible memory for names and faces, and is not above the crudest arts of a demagogue. One evening at Stanford, while he was dining with some friends in an upper room at the town hotel, one of his admirers stumbled across "Buck" Combs, who had been a bugler in Williams' regiment during the war. They had not met since. Combs got his bugle, and, accompanied by an immense crowd, went down to serenade his old comrade with war melodics. Standing under his window he lifted up the old regimental call to "boot and saddle." He repeated it once and again.

"Tom," said old Williams to his host, "where is that stage starting to this time of night, and what is the driver tootin' so much about!"

"Why, Senator," exclaimed his friend, regretfully, "that's "Buck" Combs, your old bugler, serenading you. I told 'em you would remember him and his bugle, and they want a speech."

The old General stepped out of the window on the balcony, and lifting his voice as silence fell on the crowd, said:

"That bugle call," he said, with a choking voice; "that bugle call, my friends, is like a dear echo of memory. If I had heard it in the untrodden wilds of a pathless wilderness, I would have known that old "Buck" Combs was winding its sweet notes. Often has it called the old command to fields of carnage and the thrill of victory. (Cheers.) There is but one bugler in the world that could evoke these sweet notes, and that is "Buck" Combs, of the old —th Kentucky. (Cheers.) I knew it the instant I heard it." (Cheers).—Lexington (Ky.) Cor. Philadelphia Times.

An American Trait.

Why does that gentleman rise from his seat?

Because he gets out at the next station.

But we have not got near the next station yet.

I beg your pardon. From an American point of view, we are very near it. It is less than a mile away.

See, he rushes wildly toward the door; and now he is on the platform. Is he not in danger?

The only danger he dreads is the danger of losing one-quarter of a second.

Ah, we are almost at the station now, Will he not wait until the cars stop?

No, indeed; that would be a waste of precious time.

There he goes. Good heavens! he has fallen! The cars have run over him!

Yes, such things frequently happen in America: but, you know, where one man is killed half a dozen jump off successfully. The chances of death are only one in six or thereabouts.

They have picked him up. His lips move. He is speaking.

Yes, he says: "I die a true American."—Boston Transcript.

* * *

—Eighteen years ago Robert V. Evans, of Berkley County, Virginia, was sentenced to the Penitentiary for a term of three years for horse-stealing, but while on the way to the Penitentiary he escaped, and nothing has been seen of him since that time until one day last week, when he was discovered living near his old home with a wife and three children. A heartrending scene was enacted when the sheriff made his appearance to summon the ex-convict to serve out his sentence, and as he started to go with the officer, with tears in his eyes, he turned to his wife and said: "Wife, this is for an offense committed before I married you. Try and bear up under this affliction, and take care of our children until I return."—Chicago Times.

MISCELLANEOUS.

—Dio Lewis says the Americans eat too much.

—Georgia claims to have statistics to prove that she has a smaller percentage of idiots and insane persons to the total population than any other State.—N. Y. Sun.

—A Kentucky paper has noticed that insane murderers are always sane enough to employ the most celebrated lawyers to defend them.

—A restaurant in London advertises "American buckwheat cakes in every style." It will interest many people to know that there is more than one style of buckwheat cakes.—Buffalo Express.

—Biliousness is not so widely spread a disorder among Americans as it was fifty years ago, according to the statement of a scientific writer who pretends to know all about it.—N. Y. Independent.

—An innovation at fashionable dinner parties is the serving of peanuts with the coffee and fruit. Peanuts are said to be good for dyspepsia, and it may be for this reason that they have been introduced.

—A Massachusetts bride is about to begin housekeeping on $8,000,000. It takes about $8,000,000 for a young woman of these days to keep house during the first three years of her matrimony.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

—Another writer rises to remark that there are more lawyers and physicians than are needed in this country. Those professions would not be overcrowded if parents did not push sons into them who have not the requisite qualifications necessary for success.—N. Y. Times.

—The Shoe and Leather Reporter says the toothpick and needle toes on boots and shoes will probably disappear next spring, and fashionable young men will return to more sensible styles. Sensible people will continue to wear such shoes as they please.

—Captain James Rahns, of the barge Kill Van Kull, of New York, had no further use for Mrs. Rahns, and putting her into a yawl set her adrift on the outgoing tide of the ocean outside of Sandy Hook. The boat was overtaken by a tug and recovered, with the famished woman fast asleep in it.—N. Y. Herald.

—In a bummers' fight at New York the other day one of the ruffians stuck a dirk into Jim O'Donnell's back, where it stuck so fast that it could not be withdrawn, and the victim walked to a hospital, where three doctors separately undertook to draw the knife, but gave it up. A lever was finally construoted and the weapon thus pried out.—N. Y. Mail.

—The Times, of Eastman, Ga., tells of a Cochran Justice of the Peace who, just as two attorneys were about to argue a case, took up his hat and said: "Gentlemen, you may talk about this case as much as you please; but I've got to go home and set out some potato slips. When you get through you'll find my decision written out there;" and he walked out.

—Mrs. Elizabeth Stedly, of Stony Point, N. J., died recently, and Dr. Cooper having failed to gather from her any of her symptoms, insisted on an inquest. Then it came out that her husband, Joseph, and his brother, George, had beaten her and struck her in the back with an ax because she did not earn money enough to feed them as well as they wanted to live.—Newark Register.

—A New England editor thus writes understandingly and with true sentiment: "The fairs are all over, the pumpkins are gathered into the barns and the apples in the bins, the nuts stored in the garrets and the cider ripening in the barrels, and it would seem as if there was a round lot of prospective comfort amid the snows of winter."

—A Jacksonville (Fla.) paper records the death of Miss Kittie Worrall from grief and prostration. The young girl was to have been married. The bridegroom and all the friends were assembled at the house and the hour for the ceremony fast approaching, when the young man excused himself from the company on the plea of having forgotten the wedding ring and left the house and has never been seen since.

Boston Bloods.

Mr. C. S. Hollis, Veterinary Surgeon, Boston, Mass., certifies that he has made the great pain-cure, St. Jacobs Oil, the sole remedy in his practice for horse ailments, and considers it superior to any cure he has known in forty years. He tried the same great pain-banisher on himself for rheumatism and by which he was completely cured.

"Yes," said Miss Penn, "I rejected Mr. Hogg. Nice fellow, but I couldn't have the announcement of my marriage appear in the paper under the head-line Hogg-Penn." Chicago Inter Ocean.

Favoritism

is a bad thing, but Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" deserves its name. It is a certain cure for those painful maladies and weaknesses which embitter the lives of so many women. Of druggists.

It must be a wonderful rest to a multitude of old clocks to have new time.—Boston Post.

THE MARKETS.

CINCINNATI, December 7, 1883.

LIVE STOCK—Cattle—common	$2 00	@ 3 00
Choice butchers	4 25	@ 4 85
HOGS—Common	3 90	@ 4 60
Good packers	5 00	@ 5 34
SHEEP	3 75	@ 4 25
FLOUR—Family	4 60	@ 5 00
GRAIN—Wheat—Longberry red	1 10	@
No. 2 red	1 05½	@
Corn—No. 2 mixed	58	@
Oats—No. 2 mixed	31½	@
Rye—No. 2	61	@
HAY—Timothy No. 1	10 00	@10 50
HEMP—Double dressed	8½	@
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	13 50	@
Lard—Prime steam	8 25	@
BUTTER—Fancy Dairy	24	@ 25
Prime Creamery	25	@ 34
FRUIT AND VEGETABLES—
Potatoes per bar. from store	1 25	@ 1 30
Apples, prime, per barrel	2 50	@ 3 00
NEW YORK.
FLOUR—State and Western	$2 80	@ 3 40
Good to choice	3 60	@ 6 50
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 spring	1 08	@
No. 2 red	1 11¼	@ 1 12¼
Corn—No. 2 mixed	63½	@ 65
Oats—mixed	35½	@ 38½
PORK—Mess	14 00	@14 50
CHICAGO.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 50	@ 4 25
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	96¼	@ 98
Corn—No. 2	57	@ 57¾
Oats—No. 2	31½	@ 32¾
Rye	57	@
PORK—Mess	12 95	@13 50
LARD—Steam	8 35	@ 8 50
BALTIMORE.
FLOUR—Family	$5 00	@ 5 75
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 07¾	@
Corn—mixed	60½	@
Oats—mixed	38	@ 39
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	14 50	@
Lard—Refined	9¼	@
LOUISVILLE.
FLOUR—A No 1	$4 00	@ 4 50
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red, new	1 02	@
Corn—mixed	54¼	@
Oats—mixed	32½	@ 33
PORK—MESS	14 50	@
INDIANAPOLIS.
WHEAT—No. 2 red, new	$1 02	@
CORN—mixed	54	@
OATS—mixed	31	@
LIVE STOCK—Cattle
Butchers' stock	2 75	@ 3 00
Shipping cattle	5 25	@

It must be a wonderful rest to a multitude of old clocks to have new time.—Boston Post.

Being entirely vegetable, no particular care is required while using Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets." They operate without disturbance to the constitution, diet, or occupation. For sick headache, constipation, impure blood, dizziness, sour eructations from the stomach, bad taste in mouth, bilious attacks, pain in region of kidney, internal fever, bloated feeling about stomach, rush of blood to head, take Dr. Pierce's "pellets." By druggists.

What is the difference between a dull razor and a dull boy? None; for they both get strapped.

A gentleman from Orwell, Pa., called my attention to Ely's Cream Balm as a remedy for Catarrh, Hay Fever, etc. He was so earnest in asserting it to be a positive cure (himself having been cured by it) that I purchased a stock. The Balm has already effected cures. P. F. Hyatt, M. D., Bordentown, N. J.

A sea-captain is a good deal of a vagabond when he beats his way up a harbor.

If bilious, or suffering from impurity of blood, or weak lungs and fear consumption (scrofulous disease of the blood), take Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" and it will cure you. By druggists.

Erie has a colored post-office clerk. Of course, then, he's a black-mailer.

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer

Is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from dandruff, restore gray hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which Sulphur, Sugar of Lead and Nitrate of Silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. John D. Park & Sons, Wholesale Agents, Cincinnati, Ohio, and C. N. Crittenton, N. Y.

For burns, scalds, bruises, chapped hands, sores or piles, use St. Patrick's Salve.

Skinny Men. "Wells' Health Renewer" restores health and vigor, cures Dyspepsia, $1.

$10,000 would not purchase from me what Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) has effected in my case. It has cured me of Malarial Rheumatism. Archie Thomas, Springfield, Tenn.

Durang's Remedy will cure any case of rheumatism on the face of the earth. It is taken internally and cures quickly and thoroughly. If your druggist does not keep it, write for free pamphlet to R. K. Helphenstine, Washington, D. C.

"Mother Swan's Worm Syrup," for feverishness, worms, constipation, tasteless. 25c

Redding's Russia Salve has genuine merit, as all who use it will testify. Price 25c. Try it.

"Rough on Corns." 15c. Ask for it. Complete cure, hard or soft corns, warts, bunions.

I have taken Swift's Specific (S.S.S.) for Rheumatism, and found perfect relief. It is the best tonic and Blood Remedy known to science. D. P. Hill, Attorney at Law, Atlanta, Ga.

"Buchu-paiba." Quick, complete cure, all annoying Kidney and Urinary Diseases, $1.

Bronchitis is cured by frequent small doses of Piso's Cure for Consumption.

For Throat Diseases, Coughs, Colds, etc., effectual relief is found in the use of "Brown's Bronchial Troches." Price 25 cts.

"Rough on Coughs," 15c., at Druggists. Complete cure Coughs, Hoarseness, Sore Throat.

Glenn's Sulphur Soap.

Use it when your skin breaks out in pimples. Hill's Hair Dye, black or brown, 50 cents.

ST. JACOBS OIL

TRADE MARK

[1] THE GREAT GERMAN REMEDY FOR PAIN.

CURES

Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica

Lumbago, Backache, Headache, Toothache, Sore Throat, Swellings, Sprains, Bruises, Burns, Scalds, Frost Bites, And All Other BODILY PAINS and ACHES. Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere. Fifty Cents a bottle. Directions in 11 Languages.

THE CHARLES A. VOGELER CO., (Successors to A. VOGELER & CO.) Baltimore, Md., U.S.A.

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS

As an invigorant, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has received the most positive endorsement from eminent physicians, and has long occupied a foremost rank among standard proprietary remedies. Its properties as an alterative of disordered conditions of the stomach, liver and bowels, and a preventive of malarial diseases are no less renowned. For sale by Druggists and Dealers, to whom apply for Hostetter's Almanac for 1884.

CATARRH ELY'S CREAM BALM

when applied by the finger into the nostrils, will be absorbed, effectually cleansing the head of catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions. It allays inflammation, protects the membrane of the nasal passages from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores taste and smell. A few applications relieve. A thorough treatment will positively cure. Agreeable to use. Send for circular. Price 50 cents by mail or at druggists. Ely Brothers, Druggists, Owego, N.Y.

HAY-FEVER

NEVER BEFORE SEEN IN THIS COUNTRY. ONLY A SMALL QUANTITY OFFERED. London Colored Christmas and New Year's Cards. Size, seven inches long, four inches wide. Ten cents each, three for twenty-five cents. Sold in England for double the money. Mailed, postage free, on receipt of price. UTILE DULCE PUBLISHING CO., Box 2,354, New York P. O.

THE BEAUTIFUL IN ART PICTURES, the beautiful in literary gems, and the beautiful in everything that makes our homes attractive, illustrated in the successive numbers of DEMOREST'S MONTHLY MAGAZINE. Price, 20 cents. Sold everywhere. Yearly, $2. Do not fail to see this model magazine. Now is the time to subscribe. Address, W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, 17 E. 14th St., N. Y.

"THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST." SAW MILLS, ENGINES THRESHERS, Horse Powers, (For all sections and purposes.) Write for Free Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

PATENTS NO PATENT, NO PAY! R. S. & A. P. LACEY, Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C. Full instructions and Hand-Book of Patents sent free.

PATENTS promptly procured in all countries. American Patent Agency, 185 Fifth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

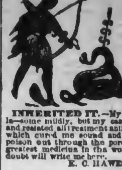
PILES CURED in two to three days. Send for circular. Price, 50c per box. A. BAFFENSPERGER, Springfield, O.

GROCERS My immense success in SELLING CRACKERS has been in making only the best. Once used always used. Send for samples. A. L. BAUMAN, Dayton, O.

Sure Cure for Epilepsy or Fits in 24 hours. Free to poor. Dr. Kruse, 2844 Arsenal St., St. Louis, Mo.

$72 A WEEK. $12 a day at home easily made. Costly outfit free. Address True & Co., Augusta, Me.

Swift's Specific



Is a complete antidote to all kinds of Blood Poison and Skin Humor.

INHERITED IT.—My family all have Scrofula—some mildly, but my case was of the worst type, and resisted all treatment until I used Swift's Specific, which cured me sound and well by forcing all the poison out through the pores of the skin. It is the greatest medicine in the world, and I hope any who doubt will write me here. E. C. HAWES, Jr., Clarksville, Ga.

After suffering twenty-five years with a painful Dry Tetter, and trying many physicians, I was at last relieved by the use of Swift's Specific, and I cheerfully commend it to all similarly afflicted. REV. L. R. BRANHAM, Macon, Ga.

Our treatise on Blood and Skin Diseases mailed free to applicants. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Drawer 3, Atlanta, Ga.

DR. HORNE'S ELECTRIC BELT Cures Nervousness, Rheumatism, Paralysis, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Kidney, Spine and Liver diseases, Gout, Asthma, Heart Disease, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Erysipelas, Catarrh, Piles, Epilepsy, Impotency, Prolapsus Uteri, Diabetes, etc. RUPTURE CURED BY ELECTRICITY. Only Electric Truss in the world. Agents wanted in every town. Send for Circular. Dr. W. J. HORNE, Inventor, 191 Wabash Av. Chicago, Ill.

I CURE FITS! When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again, I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post-Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you. Address DR. H. G. ROOT, 183 Pearl St., New York.

ABSOLUTELY THE BEST, WILSON'S LIGHTNING SEWER! Two thousand stitches a minute. The only absolutely first-class Sewing Machine in the world. Sent on trial. Warranted 5 years. Send for Illustrated Catalogue and Circular. Agents Wanted. THE WILSON SEWING MACHINE CO., Chicago or New York.

Rupture! "WHITE'S PATENT LEVER TRUSS" is a perfect instrument for the cure of Hernia. The use of steel springs, so hurtful, is avoided. An inward and upward power is obtained at the Spot where it is needed. No pressure on the back. Pamphlets free. Special rates to the trade. Address WHITE'S PATENT LEVER TRUSS CO., 711 Broadway

CONSUMPTION. I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., New York.

AGENTS WANTED To sell the PIONEER HISTORY OF AMERICA, by A. L. Mason and Prof. J. C. Ridpath. 1062 Imperial Octavo pages, 100 magnificent illustrations. Specimen Pages FREE. JONES BROS. & CO., Pub., Cincinnati, O.

AGENTS WANTED EVERYWHERE to sell the best Family Knitting Machine ever invented. Will knit a pair of stockings with HEEL and TOE complete in twenty minutes. It will also knit a great variety of fancy-work for which there is always a ready market. Send for circular and terms to the Twombly Knitting Machine Co., 163 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

PATENT Or No PAY! Interferences conducted. Assignments prepared. Copy of any patent issued since 1866 sent for 50 cents. Illustrated book of patent law FREE. W. T. FITZGERALD, Attorney at Law, 1006 F Street, Washington, D.C.

PILES "Anakesis" gives instant relief, and is an infallible cure for Piles. Price $1 from druggists, or sent prepaid by mail. Samples free. Ad. "ANAKESIS," Makers, Box 2416, New York

VIRGINIA FARMS & MILLS For Sale and Exchange. Write for free REAL ESTATE JOURNAL. R. B. CHAFFIN & CO. Richmond, Virginia

DYKE'S BEARD ELIXIR Forces luxuriant Mustache, Whiskers, or hair on bald heads in 20 to 30 days. No Injury. Easily used. Beats the world. Three or 3 Pkgs does the work. Will prove it or forfeit $100.00. Price per Package with directions sealed and postpaid 25 cents, 3 for 50 cts., stamps or silver. L. A. L. SMITH & CO., Agents, Palatine, Ill.

CINCINNATI COLLEGE OF MUSIC and School of Oratory, 305 Race. Home comforts, parental care, best instruction, boarding department. For circulars add. Mrs. D. N. Geppert, Cincinnati, O.

Young Men learn Telegraphy here and we will give you a situation. Circulars free. VALENTINE BROS., Janesville, Wis.

Good Pay for Agents. $100 to $200 per mo. made selling our fine Books & Bibles. Write to J. C. McCurdy & Co., Cincinnati, O.

OPIUM and WHISKY HABITS cured at home without pain. Book of particulars sent free. B. M. WOOLLEY, M.D., Atlanta, Ga.

AGENTS Coin Money by selling Dr. Chase's Family Physician and Second Receipt Book. $2. Address A. W. HAMILTON & CO., Ann Arbor, Mich.

$65 A MONTH and BOARD for three live Young Men or Ladies, in each county. Address P. W. ZIEGLER & Co., Philadelphia.

HAIR Wholesale and retail. Send for price-list. Goods sent C. O. D. Wigs made to order. E. BURNHAM, 71 State Street, Chicago.

FREE By return mail. Full Description Moody's New Tailor System of Dress Cutting MOODY & CO, Cincinnati, O.

$250 A MONTH. Agents Wanted. 90 best selling articles in the world. 1 sample FREE. Address JAY BRONSON, Detroit, Mich.

TWO CENTS for new coin catalogue just published. Chas. Endres, Jr., 51 Sheriff St., New York.

$5 to $20 per day at home. Samples worth $5 free. Address Stinson & Co., Portland, Me.

Loss and Gain.

CHAPTER I.

"I was taken sick a year ago With bilious fever."

"My doctor pronounced me cured, but I got sick again, with terrible pains in my back and sides, and I got so bad I

Could not move!

I shrunk!

From 228 lbs. to 120! I had been doctoring for my liver, but it did me no good. I did not expect to live more than three months. I began to use Hop Bitters. Directly my appetite returned, my pains left me, my entire system seemed renewed as if by magic, and after using several bottles I am not only as sound as a sovereign but weigh more than I did before. To Hop Bitters I owe my life."

Dublin, June 6, '81. R. FITZPATRICK.

CHAPTER II.

"Malden, Mass., Feb. 1, 1880. Gentlemen—I suffered with attacks of sick headache."

Neuralgia, female trouble, for years in the most terrible and excruciating manner.

No medicine or doctor could give me relief or cure until I used Hop Bitters.

"The first bottle

Nearly cured me;"

The second made me as well and strong as when a child.

"And I have been so to this day."

My husband was an invalid for twenty years with a serious

"Kidney, liver and urinary complaint,

"Pronounced by Boston's best physicians—

"Incurable!"

Seven bottles of your bitters cured him and I know of the "Lives of eight persons"

In my neighborhood that have been saved by your bitters.

And many more are using them with great benefit.

"They almost

Do miracles?" —Mrs. E. D. Slack.

How to Get Sick.—Expose yourself day and night; eat too much without exercise; work too hard without rest; doctor all the time; take all the vile nostrums advertised, and then you will want to know how to get well, which is answered in three words—Take Hop Bitters!

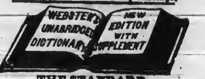
INVALIDS Suffering with obstinate Nervous, Chronic and Blood Diseases, desiring to learn of the Great Modern Discovery,

DR. SCOTT'S Coca, Beef and Iron (With Phosphorus,)

So successfully used after all other methods have failed in the curing of Brain, Heart and Nervous Diseases, should send stamp for The Messenger of Health. Address CHAS. W. SCOTT, M. D., Kansas City, Mo.

THE GREAT NERVOUS ANTIDOTE. Coca, Beef and Iron (With Phosphorus.) Is sold by all Druggists at $1.00 per Bottle.

WEBSTER'S UNABRIDGED In Sheep, Russia and Turkey Bindings.



THE STANDARD. GET Webster—it has 118,000 Words, a New Biographical Dictionary and 3000 Engravings. THE Standard in the Gov't Printing Office. 32,000 copies in Public Schools. Sale 20 to 1 of any other series. BEST HOLIDAY GIFT Always acceptable to Pastor, Parent, Teacher, Child or Friend; for Holiday, Birthday, Wedding, or any other occasion. "A LIBRARY IN ITSELF." The latest edition, in the quantity of matter it contains, is believed to be the largest volume published. It has 3000 more Words in its vocabulary than are found in any other Am. Dict'y, and nearly 3 times the number of Engravings. G. & C. MERRIAM & CO., Pub'rs, Springfield, Mass.

CANCER INSTITUTE. AURORA ILL. Established, 1872; Incorporated, 1880. For the Cure of Cancers, Tumors, Ulcers, Scrofula and Skin Diseases, without the use of knife or Loss of Blood, and little pain. For INFORMATION, CIRCULARS AND REFERENCES, address DR. F. L. POND, Aurora, Kane Co., Ill.

PISO'S CURE FOR CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists. CONSUMPTION 25 cts.

$102,400.00 GIVEN AWAY!

The Enormous Amount of $102,400 Actually Given Away to the Consumers of

SPEAR-HEAD PLUG Chewing Tobacco.

THE ARRAY OF GIFTS WE PROPOSE GIVING OUR PATRONS:

1920 Acres of Land in Dakota, Nebraska and Kansas $28,800.00
12 Weber style 2 Grand Upright Pianos 9,600.00
120 Solid Gold Watches 15,000.00
500 The Wilson No. 3 Oscillating Shuttle Sewing Machines 25,000.00
12 Elegant Burdett Organs $2,400.00
120 U. S. Government Bonds 6,000.00
80 Silver Watches 2,800.00
1200 Meerschaum Pipes 4,800.00
2000 5 lb. boxes Spear-Head Tobacco 8,000.00
TOTAL AMOUNT, $102,400.00

Ask your Dealer for SPEAR-HEAD PLUG and Circular fully explaining our Plan of Distribution.

P. J. SORG & CO., Middletown, Ohio.

CHEW SPEAR-HEAD AND GET A FARM!

It is a well-known fact that most of the Horse and Cattle Powder sold in this country is worthless; that Sheridan's Condition Powder is absolutely pure and very valuable. Nothing on Earth will make hens lay like Sheridan's Condition Powder. Dose, one teaspoonful to each pint of food. It will also prevent and cure CHICKEN CHOLERA, Hog Cholera, &c. Sold everywhere, or sent by mail for 25 cents in stamps. Also furnished in large cans, for breeders' use, price $1.00; by mail, $1.20. Circulars sent FREE. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass. MAKE HENS LAY

Foot and Ankle. The EDSON ELECTRIC GARTER develops the FOOT and ANKLE into perfect form, supports and strengthens the limbs, adds marvellous grace and elasticity to the step.

It gives great ease and comfort in walking, riding or dancing, maintains and excites healthful circulation, dispels gout, rheumatics and neuralgic pains, subdues all cramps and stiffness of joints, relieves diseased limbs and feet.

Edsons' Electric Garter.

This matchless invention wholly supersedes every other form of Garter for Ladies, Gentlemen or Children's wear. They are worn with all the comfort of the best known garters, and are NOT MORE EXPENSIVE.

PRICE, in Finest Silk Webbing (usual colors), Stud and Buckle Clasp, 12, 13½, 15 inch, $1.50; 17 inch, $2.00 per pair. Mailed to any address on receipt of money. Send for circular. LONDON ELECTRIC FABRIC CO., 81 Beekman St., New York.

HOP PLASTER This porous plaster is famous for its quick and hearty action in curing Lame Back, Rheumatism, Sciatica, Crick in the Back, Side or Hip, Neuralgia, Stiff Joints and Muscles, Sore Chest, Kidney Troubles and all pains or aches either local or deep-seated. It Soothes, Strengthens and Stimulates the parts. The virtues of hops combined with gums—clean and ready to apply. Superior to liniments, lotions and salves. Price 25 cents or 5 for $1.00. Sold by druggists and country stores. Mailed on receipt of price. Hop Plaster Company, Proprietors, Boston, Mass. A GREAT SUCCESS

The best family pill made—Hawley's Stomach and Liver Pills. 25c. Pleasant in action and easy to take.

FREE TO F. A. M. Graphic Colored Engraving of an Ancient Initiation Scene from a newly discovered Egyptian Tablet; also, the large new illustrated Catalogue of Masonic books and goods, with bottom prices; also, an offer of very lucrative business to F. A. M. REDDING & CO., Masonic Publishers and Manufacturers, 731 Broadway, New York.

$66 A WEEK in your own town. Terms and $5 outfit free. Addr's H. Hallett & Co., Portland, Me.

A. N. K.—E. 955

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOLUME IX. BURLINGTON, KY., WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 19, 1883. NUMBER 8.

A SAD VIEW OF LIFE.

I knew a man and knew his wife;
Great learning had they from the schools;
Yet candor forces me to say
They were a pair of ——.

They had a son who early drank
From hard Experience's pool,
Who knew much more than older folks,
And also was a ——.

These parents bought this boy a gun,
With little bullets, hard and cool.
Upon the gun was sweetly carved,
"To our beloved ——."

Our grave old fogy shook his head
And thereby gained much ridicule—
The boy went hunting with a friend,
Another precious ——.

Two walked away, and one ran back,
Says he: "That gun was very cru'l."
The startled neighbors shrieked and cried:
"Where is the other ——?"

Last night I viewed a marble slab,
All graven with a practiced tool,
And read thereon these stony words:
"Here lies a lifeless ——."

—Boston Globe.

A BUNCH OF CHRISTMAS HOLLY.

It still wanted three weeks of Christmas, but the Hollands' little unpainted cottage, on the edge of a beautiful old wood, was redolent with the sweet, spicy odor of pine, hemlock and laurel, great bunches of which were heaped in one corner of the tiny kitchen, and which ten-year-old Katy and twelve-year-old Phil were rapidly and skilfully transforming into graceful wreaths and festoons, while their mother busied herself over the fire, preparing the simple dinner for her young family. For well they knew there would soon be a call from the great city for Christmas greens, to deck its homes and churches; and that upon the sale of these garlands their mother depended to pay the rent for the wee house and small patch of land they called "home." The summer had been an unusually cold one, and the crops had failed, so the wolf stood closer to the door than ever before, while Phil's only coat was thin and threadbare; Katy had had to make her three-year-old hat last another season, and the twins, Nelly and Nolly, had run through their shoes until their feet were almost on the ground on account of the holes.

"I wish we had some holly!" exclaimed Katy, as she held up a large wreath of rich, heavy ground-pine; "the red berries look so pretty, mingled with the green."—"I have hunted everywhere for some," said Phil, "but, like the potatoes and cabbages, the holly crop seems to have failed this year. It is a pity, too, for it brings the highest price of any greens."—"And we want all the money we can get," sighed Mrs. Holland, stirring the bean-soup that was bubbling merrily in the iron pot; "poor children, you are helping to make Christmas bright and merry for others, and will have none yourselves, for I shall not have a penny to spare this year for sugar-plums."—"Never mind, mother," said Phil, cheerfully; "we can be happy without sweet things." But Katy looked grave, and her lip quivered, as she thought of the disappointment of the dear little twins, should they wake on Christmas morning and find their stockings empty.

At that moment there was heard the patter of footsteps outside of the house, and two childish voices cried: "Open the door! open the door!"

Phil flew to do so, and, panting and breathless, in rushed Nelly and Nolly, their eyes sparkling, and their small arms clasping tightly huge bundles of dark, glossy holly, plentifully dotted with the much-prized scarlet berries. "There; isn't that fine?" asked Nolly, as she threw the burden at her sister's feet; "though I have 'most scratched my hands off gathering it." "Lovely! but where did you find it?" exclaimed Katy. "Away over in Bramble Hollow," said Nelly. "Mr. Pillsbury told us of it; and Noll and I went and got as much as we could carry, to surprise you. It is the only bush near here, and it's dreadful prickly," and both children displayed their mutilated hands. "You are a dear, smart little pair," said Phil, patting the curly heads; at which praise from their big brother the six-year-olders blushed with delight. "I hope Santa Claus will think so, and bring us some skates," said Nolly, as she sat down to dinner; "for it is cold as Greenland, and the pond is freezing hard." "And some new shoes, and candy, and oranges," added Nelly. "Oh! I wish it was Christmas now!" at which words the kind mother turned aside to wipe away a tear, and Katy and Phil at once became strangely silent.

That night the two older children sat up long after the others, by the fire of pine knots which served them for both fuel and lights; for it was cold in the attic, where they slept, and they dreaded to leave the warm, comfortable kitchen. The old clock on the mantel shelf ticked fifteen minutes away without a word being spoken; then Katy threw a fresh knot on the fire, and, as it blazed up, said: "Phil, I have an idea!" "Well, what is it?" "The children must have a taste of Christmas, somehow!" "Presents, do you mean?" "Yes." "But where are they to come from?" "I don't know; but I have been thinking of something. Suppose we write a letter!" "To whom, Santa Claus?" "Yes; or some other kind-hearted person; and hide it away in that bunch of holly," and Katy pointed to a bouquet of scarlet and green that she had just carefully arranged, placing a rare piece of mistletoe in the center. "Perhaps something may come of it."

Phil whistled, which with him was expressive of deep astonishment. "You are a queer girl!" he said at last. "I never should have thought of such a thing; but it will do no harm, if it does no good." Then, let us try it!" cried Katy, and hurried to bring the fly-leaf of an ancient arithmetic, and a stump of a pencil, they being the only writing materials the house afforded; but with these, bending low in the ruddy firelight, the brother and sister composed the very first letter they ever wrote, badly spelled and worse written, but filled with a sort of simple, childish pathos.

"Will the one who gets this bunch of holley please remember the little twins, Nolly and Nelly, who hurt their fingers so badley, trying to pick it; for Krismas is not cuming to our house this yeer, because pa is dead, and ma is so very poor. They are six yeers old, and want sum shoes and skaits; please be so kind as to send them. This is written by their brother and sister.

"Phillip & Kate Holland,
"Bushville, M— Co., Mass." "12 & 10 yrs old."

This epistle they read over and over; with much pride, and then tied it securely in the very middle of the thorny holly sprays, where it was quite hidden from sight; and, unknown to their mother, it was next day packed in a barrel with hundreds of wreaths and yards of festooning, and shipped by rail to New York, where a week later it adorned a window of a fashionable shop on Broadway.

In a richly furnished room, by a blazing coal fire, that lit up with its rosy light the rare paintings on the walls and the handsome surroundings, all of which bespoke both wealth and comfort, sat a lady, dressed in heavy black, trying to shut her ears to the holiday mirth in the street without; for, only one short year before, childish feet had danced gaily up and down the broad staircase, and merry voices resounded through the stately halls. But now the little feet were still, the two sweet voices hushed, and the mother sat alone in her childless home, finding little joy in the holy, happy Christmastide. "Poor Mrs. Howard! how sorrowful she looks," thought a kind-hearted sewing-girl, who had brought home some work, and received a generous gift in addition to the money due her. "I wish I could cheer her up a little," and so thinking, came to a standstill before a florist's store, the windows of which were gay with fragrant evergreens and bright-hued flowers. "Oh! what pretty holly! and how Christmaslike it looks! I wish Mrs. Howard could see this, for I know she is fond of it." So, on kind deed intent, the girl entered the shop and inquired the price of the bunch of holly. It came within her slender means, and with a glowing face she hastened back to the darkened house, and with a courtesy and a "Pardon me, ma'am, but I have just brought you a bit of Christmas," laid the messenger from the pine woods on her lap.—"Oh! thank you, Maggie; this is really beautiful!" said Mrs. Howard; and, glad to see her smile ever so faintly, the girl left with a lighter heart. But a moment later, tears were falling among the scarlet berries, and sparkling like dew-drops on the dark-green leaves, as slowly the lady untied the bunch, intending to decorate her children's portraits with the humble gift. Her thoughts had wandered far away into the sad land of memory, when suddenly something rustling beneath her fingers brought her back to the present, and with surprise she drew forth from its green bed and read the little note sent by Katy and Phil from their mountain home in New England.

The holly messenger had done its mission, and done it well, for with a new and happier look on her face than it had worn for mouths, Mrs. Howard laid down the letter exclaiming: "Poor little ones! they shall have a merry Christmas, if I can give it them." and hastily donning hat and cloak, she joined the laughing, hurrying throng without. On his return home that evening, Mr. Howard was both surprised and delighted to find his wife bright and interested, busily packing a large box with clothing, toys, and sweetmeats, to which she even added a little gown that had belonged to her own little Helen, who was just the age of wee Nelly. The holly had proved a blessing to both sender and receiver.

It was Christmas eve, cold and frosty; the snow falling in large flakes, quietly and gently, around the lonely little cottage on the border of the pine forest. But, within, it looked quite gay and festal, for the children had covered the old cracked walls with garlands of green, and stood great hemlock branches in the corners, while the pine knots burned as though they knew it was Christmas; and close to the chimney hung two little striped stockings, fastened up there by Nelly and Nolly, who were now fast asleep in an adjoining room, "while visions of sugar-plums danced through their heads."

"I am afraid the holly messenger has failed," whispered Phil to Katy, as he carefully shaped a small wooden boat he was whittling out for Nolly. "Yes." sighed Katy, glancing up from the bag she was filling with beans, "is it getting very late," "Here is all there is to put in the stockings," said Mrs. Holland, emerging from the cupboard with two red apples, a doughnut man and woman, and some handfuls of chestnuts. "Poor dots! I am afraid they will be disappointed, not to find even a stick of candy."

At that moment a thundering rap-tap-tap sounded through the house, and made them all jump. "Who can that be, this time of night?" said the mother, starting to open the door; but Katy was before her, and ushered in a neighboring farmer, covered with snow, and bearing a huge box, which he set down with a thump, saying: "There, Mrs. Holland, I found that down to the village, directed to you, so I jist brought it up." "Thank you very much, though I don't know what it can be." "A Christmas-box, may be!" laughed the man; "but I must hurry along," while Phil and Katy seemed to have suddenly lost their senses, as they went dancing wildly around the room, clapping their hands, and crying: "It's the holly! the holly! and Christmas has come after all!" greatly to the mystification of their mother, until, while Phil ran for a hatchet, Katy told her of the letter they had sent in the barrel of greens. She could hardly believe her ears, and still less her eyes, when the cover having been knocked off, they drew forth the contents of that wonderful Christmas-box. "Here are the skates, and the shoes, and the candy, and the oranges! everything the children wished for!" cried Katy, in ecstacy; "and a beautiful hat and thick, warm dress for both Nell and Noll. Oh! won't they be pleased!" "And you older ones are not forgotten," said Mrs. Holland, holding up two packages, addressed to "Miss Kate and Master Philip Holland," and which were found to contain the prettiest suits they had ever seen, together with various articles dear to the hearts of girls and boys, and which they declared to be just what they wanted; while even the mother was not neglected, for a warm blanket shawl, and a kind letter enclosing a ten-dollar bill, sent the grateful tears welling to her eyes, as she called down many blessings on the generous lady in her far-off city home, who had so liberally responded to the prayer of the holly-berries. So the stockings were filled, and filled to overflowing; and it was a merry sight that the sun peeped in upon next morning, and caught two little white-robed figures capering over the floor and shouting with delight, as they declared it to be the very best Christmas they had ever known; while Katy, in her new plaid dress, and Phil, in his natty blue suit, smiled upon the children's joy.

And not only to the Holland family did the bunch of holly bring a merry Christmas, for many a poor city home was made glad and cheery that day, by the visits and gifts of the sad-eyed lady, who, having once tasted the joy of giving, was not willing to stop, but scattered her bounties far and wide, becoming herself much happier in so doing.

From amidst rich wreaths of glossy holly shone the sweet, pictured faces of the little lost Helen and Robbie Howard; but the Christmas angels of Charity and Good-will reigned in the saddened home, and the mother's heart was comforted.—Agnes Carr, in American Agriculturist.

Carelessness of Safe-Depositors.

A friend of mine, who keeps her valuables in one of our safe-deposit vaults, lost six bonds of $1,000 each the other day, and did not discover her loss until after she had left town; so she asked me if I would inquire at the vault [illegible] see if, by any possibility, she could [illegible] left them in the little room [illegible] cut off her coupons. I made [illegible] but the bonds had not been seen. [illegible] Miss —— not to worry," said the manager; "they are probably in her box with the others. I have seen so much of this sort of thing that I never think a thing has been lost until it is found again." With this encouragement my friend came down and made a search of her papers, and, sure enough, found the missing bonds tucked away under a pile of another denomination. "I supposed you would," said the manager; "they are never lost. Do you see that vault?" and he pointed to one of the larger of the vaults. "Well, that is as full as it will hold of things that have been dropped around here by careless people; and even people who could hardly be called careless do careless things occasionally. In that safe there are a gold watch, a pair of diamond earrings, bundles of bonds, envelopes of coupons, and various other things, and that is only one of several safes we keep for such articles." "Do you know who owns them?" "Some, yes; and we have informed the owners. Others are waiting claimants. Since you have been here a gentleman has been in; cut off several envelopes of coupons, and left them here in his overcoat pocket. We know who he is, as his name is on the bank-book. He was evidently just going to make a deposit, for his pocket-book is filled with checks and bills. Whenever any one goes in one of those little rooms to cut off coupons we go in and make a regular search when he goes out. One man left a tin box full of bonds the other day. He thought he put it in his safe, which he was very careful to lock. When we sent for him he could hardly believe it possible that he had been so careless. Another thing people do: they cut off their coupons, put them in a envelope and put the filled envelope back in the rack and the empty one in a pocket. I picked $1,000 out of the spittoon the other day. A man cut his coupons and put them in an envelope. He directed it wrong, tore it in two and tossed it, coupons and all, away, directed a new one and put it in his pocket. We have restored $1,000,000 worth of property to its owners in the fifteen years that I have been here. All left around through carelessness. Yours is not an exceptional case at all; on the contrary, it is one in a thousand."—N. Y. Letter.

Proof Readers.

Almost every week the office of the editor or the publisher is besieged by some hungry college graduate who is sure there must be a great deal of proof waiting to be read. He is aspiring to an editorial or legal or clerical position, but is unfortunately reduced to such straits that he is obliged to ask for such "mechanical" (almost "manual") labor as correcting proofs. Of course he can do that, and when he wishes, he can drop it and go on to something higher. A great mistake. No profession requires a longer period of apprenticeship. A proof-reader learns something new almost every day of his life. To be successful, he or she must be able to co-ordinate a large number of forces or qualifications, and focus them upon the work. The reader must not only be a walking encyclopedia of knowledge, but, in an age of cheaply and rapidly printed literature, he must be a person of bottom, stomach, endurance. The constitution must be sound and vigorous as to occasionally endure the strain of cramming two days' work into one. The proof-reader must have a falcon eye, trained to pounce upon an error with intuitive certainty. "One must have the eyes of a lynx or the thousand eyes of Argus, if one purposes to get a book through the press without a lie in it." The corrector must also have a clear, lucid understanding—alert, unclouded by dissipation. He must be methodical in his habits, and, to avoid suicide or insanity, must take care to get plenty of exercise, as well as recreation in the shape of soothing music and laughter-provoking comedy. And finally, he must know how to keep the mind and the body permanently in such a condition of vigor that day after day, year in and year out, he can stick to his desk, and go through the mountains of work that keeps piling upon him. Indeed, the widening of the curriculum of life-knowledge, with the diffusion of science through a thousand popular channels, has put a great strain upon the faculties of the proof-reader, and so highly are the services of experienced members of the profession valued that, at the end of fifteen or twenty years' work, they are as independent of rivals and of employer as are other first-class artists and artisans, the only rivalry connected with them being that of the different publishers to secure their work for themselves.—Boston Herald.

—Probably the worst disgusted crowd in Texas was a mob which went to lynch a man and discovered that he had already been hanged by a previous party.

Our Young Folks.

SLY SANTA CLAUS.

All the house was asleep,
And the fire burning low,
When, from far up the chimney,
Came down a "Ho! ho!"
And a little, round man,
With a terrible scratching,
Dropped into the room
With a wink that was catching.
Yes, down he came, bumping,
And thumping, and jumping,
And picked himself up without sign of a bruise!

"Ho! ho!" he kept on,
As if bursting with cheer,
"Good children, gay children,
Glad children, see here!
I have brought you fine dolls,
And gay trumpets and rings,
Noah's arks, and bright skates,
And a host of good things!
I have brought a whole sackful,
A packful, a hackful!
Come hither, come hither, come hither and choose.

"Ho! ho! What is this?
Why, they all are asleep!
But their stockings are up,
And my presents will keep!
So, in with the candies,
The books and the toys;
All the goodies I have
For the good girls and boys.
I'll ram them, and jam them,
And slam them, and cram them;
All the stockings will hold while the tired creatures snooze.

"Ho! ho! How they'll laugh
When they open their eyes?
Ha! ha! How I wish
I could see their surprise!
But I'll give one a kiss,
And I then must be off!
He! he! Little puss,
Does my breath make you cough?
Don't worry; I'll skurry,
Be off in a hurry;
So you all may sleep on while I finish my cruise."

All the while his round shoulders
Kept ducking and ducking;
And his little, fat fingers
Kept tucking and tucking,
Until every stocking
Bulged out, on the wall,
As if it were bursting,
And ready to fall.
And then, all at once,
With a whisk and a whistle,
And twisting himself
Like a tough bit of gristle,
He bounced up again
Like the down of a thistle,
And nothing was left but the prints of his shoes.

Mrs. S. C. Stone, in N. Y. Independent.

THE STORY OF A CHRISTMAS-TREE.

At the very tiptop of a very long hill stands a big white house; and at the foot of the hill stands a little house which the winds and rain and sun have painted black.

Mrs. Deane, who lives in the big white house, has one little girl, and Mrs. Day, who lives in the little black house, has three.

Every Monday morning the three little Days tug a big basket up the long hill to the white house, after the weekly "wash;" and every Thursday afternoon they tug it up again, filled with clothes as sweet and clean as sweet and clean can be. For Nora and Nannie and Bess have no papa, and their mamma has to work early and late to earn clothes for their growing bodies, and bread enough to fill their hungry little mouths. Sometimes there isn't enough.

Now I have come to the story.

It was the week before Christmas, and little May Deane, in the pretty sitting-room of the house on the hill, was chatting to her mamma and Dicky, the canary, about Santa Claus, and what she was sure he would bring her, when there came a knock at the door.

It was Thursday afternoon, and Nora and Nannie and Bess had brought home the clothes.

Mrs. Deane asked them in to wait for the basket; and when they were in Dicky sang for them, and May kept up her chatter, tipping her head sideways, and looking almost like a canary herself, with yellow curls and bright eyes.

"What do you suppose Santa Claus will bring you?" asked she.

The little Days stared very hard at each other and at May. Nora answered; she is the oldest:

"We don't know who he is."

It was May's turn to stare. In all her life she had never before found anybody who didn't know Santa Claus.

"Then who gives you things Christmas?" asked she.

"We don't have any," answered Nora, "'thout's sometimes we get our winter shoes then."

"Why, don't you hang up your stockings?"

"No," said Nora.

"Nor have any Christmas tree ever?" May asked.

"No," said Nora, again; and then Mrs. Deane came back with the basket, and the three little Days made three little curtsies and went away.

May stood at the window and watched them go down the snowy road. Her face was very sober.

"Mamma," she asked, "why don't Santa Claus ever go to their house?"

"Perhaps the chimney's too small for him," answered mamma, with a smile.

"It isn't a chimney at all; it's a stove-pipe," said May. "May be it is too small."

She looked out of the window for a long time, without speaking. At last she said:

"Don't you s'pose he'd go there this year if I wrote him a letter and asked him to?"

"Perhaps," mamma answered, "if he had gifts enough in his pack."

"If he hadn't mamma, he needn't come here."

Mamma smiled. "Then I think he might," she said. "But the stove-pipe —how could he manage that?"

May thought a moment. Then she clapped her hands and whirled about like a live top, spinning right up to her mother's side at last.

"O mamma, mamma!" she cried, "let me be their Santa Claus and make 'em a tree, like the one Aunt Bella made for me last year, and I looked in the parlor and caught her tying on the oranges! O mamma, can't I, please? —with strings of pop-corn and candy horns and apples? And then I won't care if Santa Claus, the really-truly Santa Claus, mamma, doesn't come here. Can't I, please?"

And mamma kissed her little daughter's lips. "I think you can," said she. "You may ask papa about it."

"I just the same's know he'll say I can!" cried May. And so he did, pinching her round cheeks red, and teasing her a good deal about getting sooty going down Mrs. Day's stove-pipe.

What fun it was! May went about the house with dancing eyes. You see she had a secret, and I'd like to know if there ever lived a little girl who didn't enjoy a secret—such a beautiful secret, too! It was just the best sport to peep into parcels which papa brought home from the village. Then there was the corn to pop and string, and the apples to get ready; and of course this work would take a great deal of time if you wanted it to (so to bring Christmas quicker), and string a good deal of corn and tied a good many apples, just as May did.

So Christmas came, or the day before Christmas, which is almost as much fun; and May's papa went to the wood-lot and brought home the tree, a trim little fir, with dark green, glossy boughs. He planted it straight and firm in a tiny tub, filled with sand, which May stuck full of twigs and bits of evergreen.

"So nice for Nannie to wash her doll's clothes in," said she. "It's just big enough." She meant the tub.

Then she hung the apples and candy horns on the branches; and the strings of pop-corn, like little snow-wreaths, and the gifts.

There was a warm shawl for Mrs. Day, a dress for each of the three little girls, a doll, with real hair, for Nannie, a tea-set for Bess and a pretty work-box for Nora.

That night, when the stars began to come out, May's papa took her on the big hand-sled, with the tree, and away they flew down the long hill to the little black house. Papa set the tree on the step. Then he knocked gently, and whisked May away from the door.

What do you suppose Nora and Nannie and Bess said and did when they peeped out and saw the tree?

"They just hollored and hollered, and hopped up and down!" cried May to mamma, when papa had drawn her home again. "And then they all took it in and shut the door. O, mamma, I'm so glad I did!"

And, after all, Santa Claus paid the big white house a visit; of course, he did. For it wasn't really he who made the Days' Christmas-tree, you know—it was only little May Deane.—Ada Carleton, in Youth's Companion.

A Boy's Composition on Turkey.

In the geography we read about Turkey in Asia and Turkey in Europe, with the capital city, Constantinople, near the strait called Bosphorus. But we now write regarding a turkey in the United States, and he is the boss for us.

He is a very fine fowl, and is just as anxious to go headlong into a fight as the country for which he is named.

Two years ago last summer, when I was a little boy (I am not so very big yet), I was in Ohio visiting some relatives.

One day, when playing in the barn-yard, I saw a very large turkey-gobbler. People call them gobblers, not because they gobble everything they can eat, but because they talk way down in their throats, and the only word they can say is "gobble," and that word they say over and over again with a great flourish of their wings and tail.

Well, I had on short trousers, long red stockings, and a red neck-tie. The turkey did not see me at first, but I saw him, and said "gobble" once or twice. I do not know exactly how many times I did say it, but am sure it was not more than twice, for, when he heard me and saw my red stockings, he made for me with all sails spread.

His face grew as red as fire, and he gave me to understand that that word "gobble" was his word. I believe he was bigger than a baby-carriage, and about the shape of one, too.

I was scared, and I fairly flew to a corn-crib close by, ran in, and shut the door behind me. Then a man came and drove him away.

The saddest part of this true story is that I did not get to stay and help eat that old gobbler on the next Christmas Day.

As soon as I got safely out of that corn-crib, I went to the house and changed my stockings and neck-tie. Red was an unhealthy color to wear in that barn-yard.

The first settlers of this country did not have Thanksgiving Day very regular; but when they did, they also had roasted turkey.

There were a great many wild turkeys in those days, and they were fatter and nicer in November than any other month in the year. One turkey and a few pumpkin pies would make a meal for a family.

The turkey could be found in the woods, and the pumpkins in the corn-field.

I sometimes feel sorry for the turkeys about this time of the year. But I would rather be a turkey-gobbler than a goose. It is hard to tell which has the ugliest voice. Both have a sad time of it in November and December.—Lorin W. Reid, in Golden Days.

'Tributin' to de Cause.

Old Simon went around to collect money for the church. Meeting old Jasper he said:

"Bruder Jasper, de church am in a sort o' strait, an' we wants yer ter 'tribute a leetle suthin' ter de cause."

"Yer's a good man, ain't yer, Brudder Simon?"

"Tries ter be, bruder; tries ter be."

"Wall, I'se mighty willin' ter hep de cause, but I ain't got no money wid me. Would yer 'cept o' a order on a good man?"

"Sartinly I would."

"Wall, I'll gin yer an order on yerse'f fur five dollars. Thought I'd dun forgot de time when yer cotch me drunk, an' borried dat money frum me, eh?"

"W'y, brudder—"

"W'y, brudder, nuthin'. Go on away frum heah, yer ashy lookin' rascal, ur I'll frail yer wid a lim' till yer kain't holler," and when Simon had gone, Jasper added to himself: "Fooled dat nigger, sho. It was me what borried five dollars frum him, when we was bof drunk. A man's got ter hussel outen bed soon in de mornin' ef he pulls de wool ober dis chicken's eyes."—Arkansaw Traveller.

—The editor of the Yonkers (N. Y.) Record, in announcing the suspension of his paper, said: "Warm as the weather is, it is a cold day for the Record.

Religious.

A PRAYER FOR CHRISTMAS-EVE.

O Lord, there sit apart in lonely places,
On this, the gladdest night of all the year,
Some stricken ones with sad and weary faces,
To whom the thought of Christmas brings no cheer.
For these, O Father, our petition hear,
And send the pitying Christ-child very near.

Lord, there be toiling ones on whom life's burden
Presses so ceaselessly, they have no time
To snatch for a brief hour rest's blessed guerdon,
Or swell by one faint note our Christmas chime.
For these, O Father, our petition hear;
Send Thou the lowly Christ-child very near.

And there be tempted souls this night, still waging
Such desperate warfare with all evil powers:
Anthems of peace, while the dread strife is raging,
Sound but as mockery through their midnight hours.
For these, O Father, our petition hear,
And send the tempted, sinless Christ-child near.

O Lord, some sit by lonely hearthstones, sobbing,
Who feel this night all earthly love denied;
Who hear but dirges in the loud bell's throbbing,
For loved ones lost, who blessed last Christmas-tide.
For these, O Father, our petition hear,
And send the loving Christ-child very near.

For those who, from disease of body, languish,
For those who weep for children gone astray,
For those whose sore hearts hide in secret anguish
Some grief which shrinks from the clear light of day;
For all who suffer, our petition hear,
And send Thou Christ, the Comforter, most near.

—Ella Beecher Gittings, in Chicago Advance.

CHRIST'S COMING.

The church year, which brings the world every twelve months face to face with the great facts and events in the history of the Savior's earthly life, finds in each annual recurrence some new hearts to be touched, some new experiences to be sanctified by the Divine Spirit and illuminated by the Divine truth. We are always rediscovering the truth which Christ taught eighteen centuries ago, because the power of entering into it depends so largely on our own personal unfolding of heart and life. We never approach the great events in the Christian Calendar in the same attitude; each year some change of mind, body or estate makes a new approach inevitable. And so it is that the yearly recital of that sublime history which brings the Divine life within the circle of human knowledge, instead of weakening by familiarity the impressions of those solemn scenes, gives new and deeper views of their significance by throwing over them the lights and shadows of a growing experience.

In Christ the riddle of man's life is solved; in Him is disclosed that "open secret" of the universe which Carlyle was all his life long striving to read from his own standpoint. Before His coming there had been glimpses of the mind of God, but in Him alone the heart of God was opened to men. Christ came into a world which men had striven with a passionate but unavailing earnestness to comprehend. Philosophy had made a sublime effort to reach the Eternal One back of the armies of images into which art had put its thought; but the search had failed, and the Master, had He taught in the centers of intellectual movement, would have found the noblest minds painfully living on the husks of stoicism. The universe and man's life bound up within it were hopeless problems until He came who was Truth itself. In Him all life found significance and value, and, read in the light of His words, history fell into order and answered His penetrative declarations with facts that repeated and emphasized them.

And in all the world no individual life is comprehensible or true until His presence shines upon its darkness. Before His coming there is no key to read its experiences. They conflict the one with the other, and are but the accidents of an existence which is the prey of circumstances. Event follows fast upon event, and one is caught in a sea whose tides answer no law from above, but sweep irresistibly on to the shores which they have strewn with wrecks since time began. Before His coming sorrow is only a bitter and barren agony. It strikes the things that were best, it scatters the flowers and leaves the weeds luxuriant along the smitten ways. No wisdom guides its coming, no love directs its shafts, no hope shines over its path. Clouds and darkness, anguish and despair, are its only companions. Before His coming death drops the curtain, and the drama, which was only a poor show at the best, is over; the spectators go their way to other plays as meaningless. The golden promise of youth, the fitful energies of maturity, the gathering shadows of age, the impenetrable and final darkness of the grave—the story is briefly told. Dust to dust and ashes to ashes is all the wisest can say over the grandest life.

But now for the individual, as once for the race, a Divine life is born in that poor shelter, the heart; a star breaks out of the darkness; a chorus of angels unheard by men breathe out upon the upper air a song of thanksgiving over a son that has found his Father; and straightway the broken and shattered life gathers purpose and is full of meaning, the onrushing experiences become ministries of Heaven to a nature that needs the molding of a stronger and truer hand, the overwhelming sorrows after they are overpast leave behind a peace that passeth understanding and a hope that fadeth not away, and over the gate of death it is written: "This is the way to everlasting life."—Christian Union.

The Reticence of the Bible.

This reticence is a mark of genuineness. It attests the Divine origin of the Bible. If men, unaided and undirected by the Holy Spirit had written this book, they would have told both much less than it tells and a great deal more. No false revelations have the self-control and sanity of this true revelation. The apocryphal writings of the early Christian centuries are examples. "The Gospel of the Infancy" tells ridiculous stories of the boy Jesus working insignificant marvels. In the second place, the reticence of the Bible checks that wild and fruitless speculation on the unseen and the unknown which otherwise would draw off human attention and energies from the real concerns of life. The revelation that tells of the Son of God incarnate, suffering and dying, and rising again victorious out of death, all because God loves and seeks to save fallen man, is to be trusted as the communication of One who would tell more if it were best for us. The mercy which saves withholds the premature disclosure of unneeded, and perhaps perilous, secrets. In the third place, the reticence of the Bible as to questions that lie outside of the domain of practical present life concentrates attention on present duty. It is more important that men should believe in God and practice righteousness than that they should read the dark riddle of evil's genesis, or start and wonder over the uncovered mysteries of another world. The true life for man is a life of faith, lived by the day in conscious communion with a present Holy Spirit and conscious obedience to a present Divine command. Hence so much of the Bible concerns itself with to-day. It is not important that we should know the secrets of the spirit world. It is supremely important that we should live and serve God and do with all our might the holy work which our hands find to do. It is not important that we should know the mathematical quantity of Heaven's population. It is infinitely important that we should be saved ourselves, and thus put into the way and into the enterprise of saving others. It is not important that we should know the day and hour when the Son of Man shall come in the clouds of heaven. It is vastly important that we should be so living that it will not matter to us how soon He comes except as it shall be an occasion for unspeakable joy. Is the Bible silent on these things we desire to know? The Bible is not God's last words to His children. He will not always be silent. His time will come, meanwhile, this is his message: "Be thou faithful unto death, and I will give thee a crown of life."—From a Sermon by Rev. P. S. Moxom.

Who Are the Happy?

"Young gentlemen," said the Professor of Mental Philosophy in —— University to his class, one day, "at the next recitation I wish each one to hand in a definition of true happiness, suggested by his personal experience."

Among the definitions handed in by these thoughtful young men were the following:

"True happiness is satisfaction with one's own self."

"True happiness is the enjoyment of life with the consciousness that no one is pained by it."

"True happiness is the possession of a sound body, in which is a sound mind, using its powers for the good of mankind."

"Happiness is a state of mind in which there is perfect harmony between one's self and others."

"True happiness does not exist in this world. Relative happiness is the result of having done right."

"Happiness to one man is misery to another. The happiest moment I ever experienced was when I gave my last dollar to a poorer man than myself. I would define it, then, as a feeling of self-approval at having done right."

"Happiness is the joy we feel without any effort made to obtain it."

"The truest happiness springs from conscious rectitude. It is the consciousness of perfect peace with God."

It would be hard to find a better definition than the last one.—Youth's Companion.

Gems of Thought.

—All along the pathway of life are tombstones, by the side of which we have promised to strive for Heaven.—D. L. Moody.

—This world is simply the threshold of our vast life; the first stepping-stone from nonentity into the boundless expanse of possibility. It is the infant school of the soul.—T. Starr King.

—Watching and praying, we are safe on the verge of temptation, if there in the way of duty; but it is the height of wisdom to drive as far away from this precipice as possible, like the prudent coachman. Failing to be prudent and careful here has caused thousands to fall.

—It sometimes seems to the child of God, that his burden of trial or sorrow is greater than he can bear. But there was never yet a burden laid on any child of God which was heavier, by a single atom, than could be upborne by the sustaining grace which was proffered with it. He who knows us better than we know ourselves considers our strength in every trial which He permits to us.—S. S. Times.

—Through sufferings we learn patience. It can not be learned in any other way. It is not inborn, but is an exotic, and must be cultivated with great care. Many Christian people do not cultivate patience, but on the other hand they often let impatience govern their actions. We gain nothing good without an effort, and even then we must often wait patiently for results. Those who are not willing to labor and wait are unworthy of the best things of this life. Wisdom, labor, love and patience will give us the victory.

—I would not give one moment of Heaven for all the joy and riches of the world—even if it lasted for thousands and thousands of years. Good works do not make a Christian, but one must be a Christian to do good works. The tree bringeth forth the fruit, not the fruit the tree. The best name by which we can think of God is Father. It is a loving, deep, sweet, heart-touching name; for the name of father is, in its nature, full of inborn sweetness and comfort. It is not for me to determine whether the danger to the Gospel be greater or less by my life or death. The truth of God is a rock of fear, placed for the falling and rising of many in Israel. The Lord takes up none but the forsaken, makes none healthy but the sick, gives sight to none but the blind, makes none alive but the dead, sanctifies none but sinners, and to all these He is precious.—Martin Luther.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL,
Proprietors.

BURLINGTON, KY. DEC. 19. 1883.

ADVERTISING RATES.

1 Column	1 year	$80
½ "	1 "	40
¼ "	1 "	20
1 "	½ "	20
½ "	½ "	10
¼ "	½ "	6

* For announcing candidates, $5. Obituary poetry, 5 cents per line. Obituary notices 20 lines free; over that number (excepting the announcement of the death) 3 cents per line.

Tributes of respect from lodges, &c., $1 50

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One year	$1 50
Six months	75
Three months	40

THE Republican national convention will be held in Chicago next year the first week in June.

ON and after the 31st of this month the State will be afflicted with an excrescence in the shape of a legislative body.

TRADERS say that stock is uncommonly scarce in this county. This is evidently the result of the drouth last summer.

CARLISLE's home is very near the center of population, and probably that was the reason of such feeble opposition to his election as Speaker.

BASIL DUKE's name is being mentioned in connection with the next race for Governor. It is rather early to commence making up the race for Governor.

A Jessamine county farmer worth $50,000 has been arrested for stealing hogs from a negro. The meat was found in his garret and identified by the negro.

DUDLEY C. HASKILL, a prominent Republican leader in the Lower House of Congress, died at his room in Washington, last Sunday. His remains were taken to Kansas for interment.

HOGGISH—Select butchers and heavy shippers, $5 70@5 90; fair to good packers, at $5 40@5 75; fair to good light, $4 90@5 45; common, $4 15@4 85; culls, $3 00@4 00: stock hogs, $4 25@5 25.

THE Police Judge of Danville has issued seventy-five warrants for the arrest of parties who have been violating the local option law. The authorities are determined to try what virture there is in the law.

O'DONNELL, who killed Carey, the murderer of Burke and Cavendish, was hung at Newgate, London, last Monday, at 8:02 a. m. The execution was announced by the Cincinnati papers published at 4 a. m. Monday.

THE race for Speaker has commenced warming up, and there are about twenty candidates, and of course each one is in the lead. By the time the Legislature assembles a majority of its members will be in pursuit of the gavel.

THE Agents Herald, published at Philadelphia, is waging a righteous war on the frauds who make their living by dead-beating newspaper publishers. The exposition of those scamps places the press of the country under lasting obligations to the Herald.

THE Speaker will give Randall the Chairmanship desired by J. C. S. Blackburn, who now declares that he will not accept any appontment tendered him by Mr. Carlisle. Guess the government can be administered without Mr. Blackburn's services on a committee.

CONGRESS will adjourn next Friday or Saturday until after the holidays. Mr. Carlisle will report his committees before the adjournment, and those members who are disappointed about Chairmanships, will have time to become reconciled to their disappointment.

IN Shelby county a young man went home late at night and attempted to frighten his mother by trying to break in to tho house. His mother hearing him thought he was a bona fide robber, and calling a black boy, she directed him to take the shot gun and go out and shoot the supposed robber. The negro obeyed and the son was soon identified. He was served just right.

ISAAC CALDWELL, of Louisville, wants to be United States Senator. As to Mr. Caldwell's ability, there can be no question, but just previous to the nomination of the Hon. J. Procter Knott for Governor, at Louisville, he aided and abetted a little transaction which gave him a notoriety as a Chairman of State Conventions, and on that account many are of the opinion that he ought to be retained at home.

THE OLD JAIL BUILDING.

Not Fit to Keep Hogs In—How the Committee Will Do—What They Should Do—The Duty of the Court, &c., &c.

To the Editors of the Recorder:

The Grand Jury at the last term of the Circuit Court did, in discharge of its duty, examine and make report to the Court as to the condition of the public buildings—Court-house, Clerks' Offices and Jail. That report, so far as the Jail is concerned, struck the attention of the Court of Claims with sufficient force as to impress upon it the necessity and importance of taking steps as speedily as possible to remedy the evils pointed out, and to abate a public nuisance and remove a county disgrace.

The public may be somewhat astonished at the announcement of the grand jury when the cost of the present structure, and the short time since it was erected are considered—something at least moderately suitable for the purpose of a modern Jail was expected by the County. But a few years have passed, and they have demonstrated, not only that the building is wholy insecure, but that it is a nuisance and a disgrace to the County, meriting the criticism of the grand jury and the just condemnation of every good citizen.

Now, what will the committee do? We are not prepared to answer; but if we are to judge by the past, we may say it makes but little difference what they do, unless the power holding the purse-strings of the County can, for once, loosen its grip with a liberality approximating the advanced public spirit of the times.

The committee knew when appointed, and the Court knew then as well as now, and as well as it will ever know, that the present Jail building is in no particular a fit place in which to confine human beings. No decent man would permit the meat of swine fed in so filthy and sickening a pen to be brought to his table. No farmer would stable his dumb brutes in such a pen, except it were for the purpose of testing by experiment what amount of foul air, noxious gasses and poisonous vapors might be inhaled by them and life continue to dwindle along.

The Committee may and ought to suggest to the Court all necessary improvements and repairs required to convert the present building into one of sufficient size and safety, with such arrangments as will secure the health and comfort of those who may be confined there, and what the cost will be; that is if they find it possible and expedient to improve the present building at all. Then the Court will assume the responsibility, and to it the people look for relief. And will not complain when the work is done if a fair showing presents itself for the expense incurred. But suppose they should complain, what of it? It would not be the first time.

The Court is charged with the duty to provide a suitable Jail for the County, and then to keep it suitable. That duty is as important as any other imposed upon it, and is a most important one to the public.

We believe the members of the Court desire to do their duty to the County in this matter, and will only hesitate, if they do hesitate, because of the cost involved. Some may think that the cost will be so great as to excuse action at this time. To all such we would say, go to the Jail, either room, and put your head in. If you can stand that then walk in, look around and go out quickly. Then gather up all the cruelty and brutality you have and all you can borrow from your neighbors, and then say to yourself whether you can ever consent to see a parent, child or human being confined in so loathsome a dungeon.

In such a case economy has its place, and its proper demands will be headed by good business sense, but it never demands the continuance of an unmitigated evil, nuisance or disgrace, in order to save a pittance for the present at the expense of the comfort, health and lives of such, though they may be guilty of no offense, yet for the time must be deprived of their liberty and comfort and confined. Economy and humanity are not at war on this subject. Stinginess, short-sighted and cruel, valuing a dime to self more than a life of comfort to another always complains of, and denounces the public officer who has the courage the more to do his duty on any occasions that a tax is rendered necessary. We hope the Court will go at this business with a determination to correct the evil, and furnish the County with a suitable building, even if to effect that object it be necessary to tear down the present structure and erect a larger and proper one on a more elligible spot. Put on the tax necessary for all necessary public purposes with good sense and good economy, and appropriate with good judgment, and if any tax payer complains, let him do so—that is his privilege.

* * *

THE Frankfort correspondent of the Courier-Journal maps out the following work for the Legislature which meets on the 31st of this month.

"The first and greatest will be the revision of the assessment and revenue laws. Both the Governor and Auditor will suggest improvements, according to their wisdom, information and experience."

"The question of the seat of Government, and the appropriation of money to build a State-house sufficient to meet the growing demands for proper accommodation and preservation of valuable public records, and thereby forever put an end to a hitherto fruitless struggle and contention which has cost the State, in time wasted by the Legislature, more money than would have completed the present building."

"The question of how to provide a remedy against the annual killing of nearly $30,000 worth of sheep by dogs."

"Should the system of leasing convicts on work outside the penitentiary be abolished."

"A house of reform for youthful offenders, who ought neither be turned loose by pardon nor confined in the penitentiary among the hardened and vicious criminals."

"The question of how to insure the safety of the lives of good citizens, when the bad citizens, having no fear of the law, make themselves a walking arsenal."

"The question of how to lower the average of illiteracy in Kentucky by providing more and better common school facilities. On this subject the Governor, Superintendent of Public Instruction and a committee appointed by the last Assembly will offer such suggestions as they deem wise and practicable."

MISSOURI LETTER.

BUTLER, MO., Dec., 10th, 1883.

To the Editors of the Recorder:

I do not know that a short letter from this part of the country will be interesting to any of the citizens of Old Boone, but perhaps if they were out here and see the lay of the country, or a part of it, it might be interesting to them.

So far, we have had one of the finest falls we ever saw or heard of. It has been warm most of the time, and laboring men go without their coats. There have been but four light freezes, this fall, and we have had but two rains since we arrived here. One rain lasted during a day and the other during a night, so you see we have no mud in this part of the continent at present, but expect that the mud will be along in the spring.

Last Saturday a party of us took a tour of about 20 miles through the country to view the sights. The land is very rich and in beautiful ridges, and we could see for miles in every direction. Immense fields of corn stretched out before us and the quantity of corn seen was tremendous, and is selling at 25 cents a bushel all over the country.

The price of land ranges from $20 to $50 per acre, and is rapidly advancing in price, and we have land buyers here every day from distant parts of the United States looking for locations.

The minerals imbedded in this county will, in the near future, make it one of the wealthiest in the State. There are vast coal fields near Rich Hill and Walnut, and coal is selling at the bank at 4 cents a bushel. Near Rich Hill is a rich bed of zinc, and large quarries of sand-stone which is very valuable for building purposes, and marble works. The sand-stone quarries exist in various parts of the county.

From what we have seen and can hear we don't think this country can be excelled for fruit. What we have seen of the growing wheat looks fine.

We have churches of all denominations here, and no one can stand back on that account, and when the new railroads now in progress are completed the county will be well supplied with conveniences.

One word to the fox-hunters in Old Boone. Come out and bring your dogs and we will have a wolf chase, as there are plenty of them, and there is more small game here than a man can have any use for.

The RECORDER is looked for every Friday, and the reading of it is listened to with extreme silence. Here is to the RECORDER. Success now and for ever. Very Respectfully,

EVERETT WALTON.

Subscribe for the RECORDER.

For Rent.

A good hotel, paying bar attached. Also a good stable. This is the J. P. Snyder property in Florence. Call on Mrs. S. Snyder, Florence, Ky. 7-4t

For Sale.

Fine tobacco land. I have for sale, cheap from One hundred to Six hundred acres of No. 1 tobacco land, lying on the Beaver Lick and Union T. P. road in Boone county, Ky. For particulars call on L. H. Dills at Burlington, Ky., or the undersigned on the prmises or address me at Union P O.
7-4t F. DICKEY.

Out on the Prairie.

Concerning Something Better than Mrs. Toodles' Wheelbarrow—And the Reasons Why.

When a certain Commissary-General complained to the Duke of Wellington that Sir Thomas Picton had declared he would hang him if the rations for that General's division were not forthcoming at a certain hour, the Duke replied:

"Ah! did he indeed go so far as that? Did he say he'd hang you?"

"Yes my lord."

"Well, General Picton is just the man to keep his word. You'd better get the rations up in time."

But to get rations or anything else up in time one must know when to lay his hand on them. As Mr. Toodles said about the coffin which he had bought at auction and brought home to his wife:

"If anything should happen, my dear, it will be so handy to have in the house."

Being in the great wholesale drug house of William Hart, in Elgin, Ill., one day, Mr. G. H. Sherman, the photographer of that place, remarked, concerning PARKER'S TONIC: "I have used it in my family for two years, and I unhesitatingly pronounce it the best medicine we have ever used. It is handy to have in the house, and we are never without it."

Culled from the mass of reasons why Mr. Sherman was right, be good enough to consider these: First, PARKER'S TONIC, is delicious to the palate; second, it invigorates, but does not promote a love for strong drink; third, it cures Coughs and Colds by inciting the terpid organs into healthy action, and opening all the pores of the skin; fourth, it purifies the Blood, thus curing Kidney Liver and Lung diseases and Rheumatism; fifth—

But take it into your house, and it will speak for itself. Once used, will change it for nothing else. Physicians commend it. Price, 50 cents and $1. HISCOX & CO., Chemist, New York.

Posted.

Notice is hereby given that our lands in Boone county, are posted and all persons are warned not trespass thereon.

MRS. E. J. PIATT, JOHN MCCONNEL.

For Sale.

Two good work horses, single or double, one is a black 16½ hands high, the other is a bay 15 hands high. For further information call on or address
RICHARD RYLE, Burlington, Ky.

Administrator's Notice,

Those having claims against the estate of W. S Ryle, dec'd., are hereby notified to present the same, proven as by law required, to the undersigned before December 25th, '83. B. H. STEPHENS, Adm'r.

For Sale.

House and lot in Hebron, Boone county, Kentucky. This is a very comfortable house located near the center of the town. The lot contains one acre. For further particulars call on or address LYSTRA AYLOR,
Hebron, Ky.

Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned has been duly appointed and qualified as assignee in trust for the benefit of the creditors of Wm. N. Aylor. All persons indebted to said assignor will make immediate payment, and creditors will present their claims duly proven according to law to the undersigned at No. 7 Pike Str., Covington, Ky. R. L. CRIGLER,
5-4t Assignee.

For Rent.

35 acres of land adjoining Lewisburg, Kenton county, Ky., 10 acres of which is fine tobacco land. On this land is a pear orchard of about 400 trees, select varieties. This land is all well suited for gardening or other tillage, and has on it a good house and other suitable conveniencies for a family residence—Enquire of RUFUS LIGHT, on the premises.

BACKLOG SKETCHES, our large 16 page paper, filled with charming serials, stories, choice miscellany etc., is sent 3 mos. on trial for 25 cents; and we send every subscriber free our new HOLIDAY PACKAGE, consisting of 10 pieces popular music 10 interesting games, 1 pack of age and fortune-telling cards; 1 pack "Hold to Light" cards, 1 pack fun & flirtation cards, 1 set chromo cards, 13 new tricks in magic 5 new puzzles, game of fortune, the mystic oracle, 25 ways to get rich, Heller's wonderful delusion cards, etc., etc. Endless amusement! Agents wanted. Sample paper for stamp. BACKLOG PUBLISHING CO., Augusta, Me.

Sheriff's Sale for Taxes.

By virtue of taxes due the Sheriff of Boone county, Ky, for the years 1882-83 I, or one of my deputies, will, on

Monday, January 7th, 1884,

between the hours of 12 m, and 2 o'clock p. m, at the Court-house door in Boone county, Ky. expose to Public Sale, to the highest bidder, for cash in hand, the following property, (or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy the amount of taxes due aforesaid and cost,) to wit:

A tract of land on Gunpowder Creek, containing about 30 acres, more or less, bounded by the dower of Mrs. J A Kendall, E A Hughes, Gunpowder Creek, &c Levied on as the property of Church Deer, decd. Am't to be made by sale $12 53.

J R CLUTTERBUCK, S B C
By W T GERMAN, DS

Sheriff's Sale for Taxes.

By virtue of taxes due the Sheriff of Boone county, Ky. for the years 1882-83 I, or one of my deputies, will, on

Monday, January 7th, 1884,

between the hours of 12 m, and 2 o'clock p. m, at the Court-house door in Boone county, Ky, expose to Public Sale, to the highest bidder, for cash in hand, the following property, (or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy the amount of taxes due aforesaid and cost,) to wit:

Six town lots in Burlington, Boone county, Ky, and numbered 111, 112, 115, 116, 119 and 120—see plat of Burlington for further description. Levied on as the property of Hamilton heirs. Amount to be made by sale $4 21. J R CLUTTERBUCK, S B C
By W T GERMAN, D S

Sheriff's Sale for Taxes.

By virtue of taxes due the Sheriff of Boone county, Ky, for the years 1882-83 I, or one of my deputies, will, on

Monday, January 7th, 1884,

between the hours of 12 m., and 2 o'clock p. m, at the Court-house door in Boone county, Ky, expose to Public Sale, to the highest bidder, for cash in hand, the following property, (or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy the amount of taxes due aforesaid and cost,) to wit:

A tract of land in Boone county, Ky, containing 195 acres, bounded by the Ohio river and the lands of Morgan Rice, Willis Heirs, &c. Levied on as the property of C. D. Piatt. Am't to be made by sale $61 43.

J. R. CLUTTERBUCK, S B C
By W. T GERMAN, D

Sheriff's Sale for Taxes.

By virtue of taxes due the Sheriff Boone county, Ky. for the years 1882 83. I or one of my deputies, will, on

Monday, January 7th, 1883,

between the hours of 12 o'clock M., and 2 o'clock p. m, at the Court-house door in Boone county, Ky., expose to Public Sale, to the highest bidder, for cash in hand, the following property, (or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy the amount of taxes due, aforesaid and cost, to wit:

A tract of land on Woolper Creek in Boone county, Ky., containing 20 acres, bounded by the lands of Pat Finn, G. C. Vosbell, &c. Levied on as the property of Sam'l. Hensley. Amount to be made by sale $12 16. J. R. CLUTTERBUCK, S.B.C.
Dec.17 '83. By W. T. GERMAN, D. S.

ROBERT B. REED
Attorney at Law.
OFFICE AT - UNION, KY.

F. RIDDELL,
ATTORNEY at LAW
BURLINGTON, KY.
Office over Dudley Rouse's Store.

ALBERT W. GAINES,
Attorney and Counselor at Law,
LAWRENCEBURG, - - - IND.
Will practice in the courts of Boone county, Ky., Cincinnati, Ohio, Dearborn and adjoining counties, Ind. dec-6-82

W. E. VEST,
COUNTY SURVEYOR
WALTON, KY.
Is prepared to do all kinds of surveying. All orders sent him through the mail to Walton, will receive his prompt attention.

E. E. IGOE,
Resident Dentist,
Rising Sun, Ind.
WITH
J. P. Ulrey.
Monday and Tuesday at Rising Sun. Ind.

J. J. Landram. G. G. Hughes.
LANDRAM & HUGHES.
ATTORNEYS at LAW.
Will practice in the Boone Circuit Court and Court of Appeals. Prompt attention given to Collections, on application to G. G. Hughes, Burlington, Ky.

DR. A. B. HARRY AN
RESIDENT DENTIST.
Aurora, Indiana.
(Office Over Postoffice)
With J P. ULREY.
Dr. ULREY'S days, Wednesday and Saturday. Office open at all hours. 8-1y

L. C. NORMAN. E. I [illegible]
NORMAN and STEPHENS,
ATTORNEYS at LAW.
UNION, BOONE CO., KY.
Will practice in the Courts of Boone Kenton and adjoining counties. Collections solicited and made throughout the State. 24 tf 81

S. W. TOLIN,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
BURLINGTON, - - - Y
Office in Court-house on 2d floor.
Will manage litigation in any of the Courts of the State, contracts and other legal instruments drawn up at reasonable rates. Prompt an studious attention given to business intrusted to my care. A trial solicited. 12-1y

TWO Farms for Sale.

One contains 36 acres, 9 acres of which is good creek bottom and 27 acres, hill land. This land is under good fence, well set in grass, has lasting water for stock, fine lot of timber, much of which is locust. It is part of the W. B. Ryle homestead, lies on Gunpowder Creek and joins Leander Setters.

The other farm contains 126½ acres, is 2½ miles southwest of Burlington, has all necessary buildings in good repair, fencing good, has a good well and cistern, besides never failing water for stock, a nice young orchard, and some hedge fence. This land is all in grass except 25 acres which were cultivated in corn this year. For terms apply on the last named premises to 6-2m W. S. WHITE.

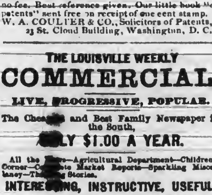
PATENTS.

For new Inventions and novel designs obtained in the United States, Canada and Europe. Trade Marks and Copyright—Labels secured for Merchants and Manufacturers who wish protection against imitators of their goods, packages or articles of manufacture. We are located opposite the United States Patent Office, have quick access to its records, and can give prompt and reliable answers to inquiries. Of our firm one has had thirteen years' practice in the highest courts, another several years as an Assistant Examiner in the United States Patent Office and many years experience as solicitor of American and Foreign Patents. Fee reasonable and full satisfaction or no fee. Best reference given. Our little book "on patents" sent free on receipt of one cent stamp.
W. A. COULTER & CO., Solicitors of Patents,
23 St. Cloud Building, Washington, D. C.

THE LOUISVILLE WEEKLY
COMMERCIAL.
LIVE, PROGRESSIVE, POPULAR.
The Cheapest and Best Family Newspaper in the South,
ONLY $1.00 A YEAR.
All the News—Agricultural Department—Children's Corner—Complete Market Reports—Sparkling Miscellany—Thrilling Stories.
INTERESTING, INSTRUCTIVE, USEFUL,
To Old and Young alike. Subscribe for it.

A SPLENDID OFFER
THE



ONLY $3.50.

The New Waterbury Watch, Stem Winding, Nickle Case, handsome, durable and warranted to keep perfect time. RETAIL PRICE THE WORLD OVER, $3.50.
THE COMMERCIAL FOR ONE YEAR AND THIS WATCH FOR ONLY $3.50, THE TWO FOR THE PRICE OF ONE.

The Waterbury Watch Company has a National reputation for making the best cheap Watch in the World, not one is sent from the Factory without having been run for six days and carefully regulated. It runs 27 hours with one winding, and will last for years.

This is the Farmer's Watch, the Miner's Watch, the Laborer's Watch, the Boy's Watch, the School Girl's Watch—in fact, everybody's Watch.

Upon receipt of $3.50 by registered letter or money order, the Watch will be forwarded by mail or express with charges prepaid, and the COMMERCIAL will be mailed regularly for one year, postage free.

ANOTHER OFFER.

For a Club of twelve Subscribers to the WEEKLY COMMERCIAL and $12.00, the getter up of the Club will be presented, all charges prepaid, with one of the Watches, which will cost $3.50 anywhere and everywhere. Send for sample copies and go to work.
Address
THE COMMERCIAL,
LOUISVILLE, KY.

A. L. Brown,

THE HATTER,
Cor. Pike and Washington Streets
COVINGTON, - - KY.
Has always on hand a large variety of Men's, Boys' and Children's Hats, and prices GUARANTEED to be as low as the lowest.
Gents' Furnishing Goods a Specialty.

H. KASSEN & CO.
(Formerly of Covington.)
—Dealers in Fine—
BOOTS AND SHOES,
106 W. 5th Street,
CINCINNATI, - - - OHIO.
Custom made work a Specialty. A perfect Fit Guaranteed. dec. 20-1y

BOONE HOUSE,
BURLINGTON, KY.
C. L. CRISLER, Prop'r.
No pains spared in the accommodation of guests. The table supplied with the delicacies of the season. Stock well cared for. dec. 20-1y

W. J. RICE,
CARPENTER & BUILDER,
BULLITSVILLE, KY.
Is prepared Raise or Move
EITHER LOG or FRAME BUILDINGS
On Short Notice.
And at the Lowest Possible Figures.
33-tf Your orders respectfully solicited

LUMBER.
Geo. M. Bedinger & Co.,
Erlanger, - - Ky.
We keep constantly on hand all kinds of Lumber, Laths and Shingles. Also Builder's supplies of all kinds.
—Come and see Us.—
may 9-tf

AURORA
MARBLE
AND GRANITE
WORKS,
Aurora, Ind.
Will have constantly on hand
Marble and Granite Monuments,
Italian & American Headstones, &c
I am ready to do all kinds of Stone Work on short notice and at low prices. Hoping to receive the patronage of Boone County, I am respectfully,
F. W. KASSEBAUM.

INSURE AT HOME
The Farmers' Mutual Fire
INSURANCE COMPANY
Of Boone County
is now completely organized and receiving applications for insurance.
Its Rates are Lower
Than those of any other Company, and gives the farmers of Boone County a
HITHERTO UNKNOWN ADVANTAGE
In keeping their property insured.
EVERY FARMER IN THE COUNTY
should take a policy at once.
N. S. WALTON, President, Petersburg, Ky.
J. H. WALTON, Secretary, Constance, Ky
R. RANDALL, Treasury.
DIRECTORS.
LEGRAN GAINES, Jeff U[illegible]
JNO. M. MOODY.

WANTED BOOK Canvassers.
MALE and FEMALE
To engage in the sale of our new and important works of standard character, large profits and immense selling qualities. We offer a permanent and lucrative business. Address THE CINCINNATI PUBLISHING CO., 174 W. Fourth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Free! Cards and Chromos.
We will send free by mail a sample set of our large German, French, and American Chromo Cards, on tinted and gold grounds, with a price list of over 200 different designs, on receipt of a stamp for postage. We will also send free by mail as samples, ten of our beautiful Chromos, on receipt of ten cents to pay for packing and postage; also enclose a confidential price list of our large oil chromos. Agents wanted. Address F. GLEASON & Co., 46 Summer Street, Boston, Mass.

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS
FOR THE LIVER
And all Bilious Complaints
Safe to take, being purely vegetable; no griping. Price 25 cts. All Druggists.

INCORPORATED UNDER THE LAWS OF MISSOURI.
CENTRAL MEDICAL & SURGICAL INSTITUTE
OF ST. LOUIS, MO.
SUCCESSORS TO Dr. BUTTS' DISPENSARY. OFFICE & ROOMS, No. [illegible] [illegible] ST.
CHAS. L. LABAT [illegible] M.D., Pres't & Physician in Charge.
NELSON CHEESMAN, Treas. & Business Manager.

This Institute has ample facilities and an experienced Faculty. While it succeeds to a large business, which has been established for years, it will aim to extend its medical and surgical practice, giving skillful and scientific treatment to
CHRONIC DISEASES of the Head, Spine, Lungs and Air Passages, Heart, Liver, Stomach and Bowels, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Consumption and Asthma.
BLOOD IMPURITIES, Inherited or caused by impure association, Scrofula, Fever Sores, Ulcers, etc.
DEFORMITIES of the Limbs, Spinal Curvature, Wry-Neck, Diseases of the Joints, Piles, Fistula, Rupture, etc.
WEAKNESS and wasting diseases in old and young men, also all diseases of the genito-urinary organs.
FEMALE irregularities and weaknesses, causing pain in the back or side, etc.
Personal interviews with patients are always preferred. Those unable to visit the Institute will be furnished with blank lists of questions that will aid them in making a full statement of their cases and if not requiring a surgical operation they can be successfully treated by correspondence, and medicines sent by mail or express. To enable us to send proper list of questions applicants should give a brief statement of their trouble.
The Treasurer of the corporation is of Nelson Cheesman & Co., Advertising Agents, and refers to the publisher of this or any other newspaper in the United States or Canada regarding responsibility.
Consultation at Office or by mail free and invited

AYER'S PILLS.

A large proportion of the diseases which cause human suffering result from derangement of the stomach, bowels, and liver. AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS act directly upon these organs, and are especially designed to cure the diseases caused by their derangement, including Constipation, Indigestion, Dyspepsia, Headache, Dysentery, and a host of other ailments, for all of which they are a safe, sure, prompt, and pleasant remedy. The extensive use of these PILLS by eminent physicians in regular practice, shows unmistakably the estimation in which they are held by the medical profession.

These PILLS are compounded of vegetable substances only, and are absolutely free from calomel or any other injurious ingredient.

A Sufferer from Headache writes:

"AYER'S PILLS are invaluable to me, and are my constant companion. I have been a severe sufferer from Headache, and your PILLS are the only thing I could look to for relief. One dose will quickly move my bowels and free my head from pain. They are the most effective and the easiest physic I have ever found. It is a pleasure to me to speak in their praise, and I always do so when occasion offers.
W. L. PAGE, of W. L. Page & Bro."
Franklin St., Richmond, Va., June 3, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S PILLS in numberless instances as recommended by you, and have never known them to fail to accomplish the desired result. We constantly keep them on hand at our home, and prize them as a pleasant, safe, and reliable family medicine. FOR DYSPEPSIA they are invaluable. J. T. HAYES."
Mexia, Texas, June 17, 1882.

The REV. FRANCIS B. HARLOWE, writing from Atlanta, Ga., says: "For some years past I have been subject to constipation, from which, in spite of the use of medicines of various kinds, I suffered increasing inconvenience, until some months ago I began taking AYER'S PILLS. They have entirely corrected the costive habit, and have vastly improved my general health."

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS correct irregularities of the bowels, stimulate the appetite and digestion, and by their prompt and thorough action give tone and vigor to the whole physical economy.

PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists.

YOUNG, OLD, AND MIDDLE-AGED. All experience the wonderful beneficial effects of
Ayer's Sarsaparilla.
Children with Sore Eyes, Sore Ears, or any scrofulous or syphilitic taint, may be made healthy and strong by its use.
Sold by all Druggists; $1, six bottles for $5.

TUTT'S
PILLS
TORPID BOWELS,
DISORDERED LIVER,
and MALARIA.
From these sources arise three-fourths of the diseases of the human race. These symptoms indicate their existence: Loss of Appetite, Bowels costive, Sick Headache, fullness after eating, aversion to exertion of body or mind, Eructation of food, Irritability of temper, Low spirits, A feeling of having neglected some duty, Dizziness, Fluttering at the Heart, Dots before the eyes, highly colored Urine, CONSTIPATION, and demand the use of a remedy that acts directly on the Liver. As a Liver medicine TUTT'S PILLS have no equal. Their action on the Kidneys and Skin is also prompt; removing all impurities through these three "scavengers of the system," producing appetite, sound digestion, regular stools, a clear skin and a vigorous body. TUTT'S PILLS cause no nausea or griping nor interfere with daily work and are a perfect
ANTIDOTE TO MALARIA.
Sold everywhere, 25c. Office, 44 Murray St., N.Y.

TUTT'S HAIR DYE.
GRAY HAIR OR WHISKERS changed instantly to a GLOSSY BLACK by a single application of this DYE. Sold by Druggists, or sent by express on receipt of $1.
Office, 44 Murray Street, New York.
TUTT'S MANUAL OF USEFUL RECEIPTS FREE.

VIGOROUS HEALTH FOR MEN
THE PASTILLE CURE TRADE MARK FOR NERVOUS DEBILITY.
TESTED FOR 5 YEARS
by use in thousands of cases. Founded on scientific medical principles, it has been growing in favor and reputation while its numerous competitors have invariably failed. The direct application of this remedy to the seat of the disease makes its specific influence felt without delay. The natural functions of the human organism are restored. The animating elements of life which have been wasted are given back. The buoyant energy of the brain and muscular system renders the patient cheerful; he gains strength with rapidity.
NERVOUS DEBILITY, organic weakness, and numerous obscure diseases, baffling the skill of best physicians, result from youthful indiscretion, too free indulgence, and over brain work.
Do not temporize while such enemies lurk in your system. Take a remedy that has cured thousands, and does not interfere with you attention to business or cause any pain or inconvenience.
(Send for a Descriptive Pamphlet giving Anatomical Illustrations, which will convince the most sceptical that they can be restored to perfect manhood, and fitted for the duties of life, same as if never effected. Sent free to any one. Remedy sold ONLY by the)
HARRIS REMEDY CO. MF'G. CHEMISTS.
306½ N. 10th St. ST. LOUIS, MO.
One Month's treatment $3. two months $5. three months $7

PARKER'S
HAIR BALSAM

A beneficial dressing preferred to similar articles because of its purity and rich perfume. It Restores to Gray Hair the Youthful Color [illegible] prevents dandruff [illegible] falling of the [illegible]

FLORESTON
Exceeds the finest flower extracts in richness. Delicate, very lasting. No odor like it. Be sure you get FLORESTON Cologne, signature of Hiscox & Co., N. Y., on every label. 25 and 75 cts., at druggists and dealers in perfumes.
COLOGNE

[illegible]
RELIABLE SELF-CURE.
A favorite prescription of one of the most noted and successful specialists in the U. S. (now retired) for the cure of Nervous Debility, Lost Manhood, Weakness and Decay. Sent in plain sealed envelope free. Druggists can fill it.
Address DR. WARD & CO., Louisiana, Mo.

PAYSON'S INDELIBLE INK
Is the BEST. No preparation. Used with any clean pen for marking any fabric. Popular for decorative work on linen. Received Centennial MEDAL & Diploma. Established 50 years. Sold by all Druggists, Stationers & News Ag'ts.

Local News.

One week till Christmas.

Tim put on his duster Friday.

Sleigh-bells had a rusty ring Sunday.

The turkey tribe is getting nervous again.

The time for turning new leaves is near at hand.

Winter came to hand Friday without ceremony.

The days are about as short as they will get this year.

Our local merchants had a very busy day last Saturday.

Most of the schools close Friday till after the holidays.

The croquet season has continued with us this winter.

Cy Crisler took another cargo of turkeys to the city Monday.

James Westbay was the first man to bring out his sleigh this winter.

Mrs. Cy Cowen, who has been quite sick for several weeks, is much better.

A large eagle has recently been seen in the neighborhood of H. C. Wingate's.

The English sparrows have enjoyed the winter thus far. Their rations have been abundant.

Take Ayer's Pills for constipation, and for all the purposes of a purgative medicine. Safe and effectual.

Piper opened up his Christmas managgerie last week, and the juvenile portion went into ecstacies at once.

The comet now visible is said to be the one that appeared in 1812. Be that so its visits are few and far between.

Colonel Crisler, our wagon-maker, occupies a position at or near the head of the class of working men in Burlington.

Prof. Gallagher is making arrangements for a musical and literary festival in the Morgan Academy during the holidays.

Miss Wood's class in elocution will give a selection called "Christmas Chimes" at the Christmas tree in the Baptist church.

Call and see our Prize Doll, Auto., Photo. and Scrap Albums, Writing Desks and Box Paper at Langsdale's Rising Sun, Ind.

A grand ball will be given in the Hebron Town Hall next Tuesday night. All those who enjoy that kind of amusement are invited to attend.

Dr. Smith has suddenly developed into a crack shot, and he honestly believes he can hit the side of a barn at the distance of twenty-five yards.

In this issue F. Dickey, of Richwood, advertises his farm for sale. It is one of the finest bodies of land in the county, and has a very desirable location.

Last pressday this office was honored with a call by Miss Lottie Reed, of Cincinnati, and Miss Kate Bradford, of Florence, two charming young ladies.

Viola Park, as a place for the congregation of the votaries of terpsichore, is no more, Mr. Winston, the owner of the land, having razed the platform.

A strange huckster wagon drove into town the other day, and upon investigation whom should we find in the cab but Perry Rice. This is a new departure for Perry.

Two balls at Florence, one at Hebron and a Teachers' entertainment at the Morgan Academy, are on the boards for the holidays, to say nothing about the numerous turkey dinners.

All we ask is for you to examine our stock and know we can sell you at most reasonable rates. We can satisfy any one in price and quality goods. R. G. Langsdale, Rising Sun, Ind.

The cholera is playing havoc with the hogs in the Bullettsville neighborhood. G. T. Gaines has lost over 30; Abe Clore several and Fletcher Clore, a few. Most of the hogs that have died were stock hogs.

J. Frank Grant, Grand Master of the I. O. O. F., of this State, assisted by brethren from Indiana, Petersburg and Florence, organized an Odd-Fellows' Lodge at this place Saturday night, with a membership of ten.

Nice tombstones or monuments at the graves of the departed, are marks of respect which should not be neglected. Hurschart & Co., Lawrenceburg, Ind., have just what you want. John Beall of Hebron, is their agent.

Uncle Billy Rouse captured two very large hawks, last week, in a steel-trap. One of the hawks measured 4½ feet from tip to tip, the other, 8½ feet. We hear it intimated that he and Willis Clore are going to start a zoo.

Christmas goods for all. We have the largest and best selected stock ever in Rising Sun. Our Dolls are beauties; Hobby Horses, Wagons, Sleds and Doll Wagons, Toilet Sets, Vases, Cups, Saucers and Mugs. An endless variety of cheap toys at R. G. Langsdale's.

We are headquarters for all kinds of Holiday Goods. Our goods are cheaper than ever before. Goods are being sold daily by us. Come early and get a good selection. A fine line of Prose and Poetry and toy books; Old Kris is in our show window, R. G. Langsdale's, Rising Sun, is the place.

Mr. G. T. Gaines was besieged with sewing machine agents last week, no less than 8 being there during the six days, and at one time agents were running three different machines for the edification of his wife. Gabe threatens to post his premises against these fellows.

The other day the County Clerk received a letter from Flemingsburg, stating that Judge Wm. Botts was dead, and enquiring if the Judge had any heirs in this county; that it was desired to ascertain the names of all the heirs in order to settle his estate. As there are several Bottses in this county we give publicity to the above statement for their benefit.

In its report of the sales of paintings by the young Ladies' Art Union, of last Friday evening, the Enquirer says:

"The sale of the evening was the elegant picture by Miss Mary Light, which brought $200 even up, and was well worth it, as Miss Light is a connoisseur in the art line, and even shows grace in excess of the rules of art. The picture is of sufficient color to appear deceptive in richness and grandeur, and represents the return of the fishing boats at Venice at sunset."

Taylor & Riggs will give away next Christmas 1 Fine Piano, 2 Gold Watches, 1 Sewing Machine, 1 Breech Loading Shot Gun, 1 Bicycle, 1 Velocipede, 1 Hobby Horse, 1 Rocking Chair, 10 Bolts Muslin. Will give one chance in above presents for every dollars worth you buy. Visit their six stores at Madison and Pike Streets, Covington, Ky. The drawing takes place Christmas week. This paper will publish tho lucky numbers.

Last Wednesday morning, desiring to catch a fox J. J. Berkshire and I went down on that noted stream Brandywine, and in a short time that celebrated dog, Norman Botts, came in with one. We put in more dogs, and after making about a five mile circle they put him in a sand bank, from which, by the help of some of the neighbors he was soon taken. It was the largest fox I ever saw, its tail, which I now have, measures something less than three feet. All that was wanting to make the chase a success, was the presence of William Walton. G. D. T.

Next Saturday Night

Miss B. Combs Wood and her class in elocution, will give an entertainment in the Presbyterian church at this place. Owing to the character of the entertainment it will be one of the most interesting with which our town has been favored for a long time. Admission 10 and 15 cents. Her class is composed of the following pupils: Misses Maud and Pearl Kirkpatrick, Misses Mattie, Annie and Katie Winston, Miss Nellie Blythe, Mr. Joseph Reed, Mr Charles Winston and Master Robbie Foster. Miss Wood proposes to teach another class in elocution at this place, twenty lessons for the same price that she gives her present class fifteen lessons, $1 per scholar.

Bennie Rue and George Wood, two handsome young men, neither of whom is quite old enough to be legally licensed to marry without the consent of their father or guardian, were among the guests at the party given at Mr. Rus Stephens' on Monday night of last week. They tripped the light fantastic all evening, neither one indicating in any manner that he harbored a desire to exterminate the other till "breaking up time" came, when these two young men suddenly developed into deadly enemies, and proceeded to settle their differences in that manly way peculiar to our fore-fathers. George was the aggressor, and left Bennie's features with an appearance of having come in contact with a healthy hedge fence. Bennie's father swore out a warrant for the arrest of George who was tried before Esquire Baker and a jury at this place last Saturday, and fined $13 and cost.

It seems that George W. Griffin, late of unenviable notoriety in this community, has succeeded in winning fresh laurels in his chosen profession of ruining himself and everyone else who ever had anything to do with him. An account of his various escapades would fill the entire paper, but we will only give a synopsis of them. Some years ago he was in business in Memphis, Tenn., where he became acquainted with a Mrs. Mary Hughes, the widow of a wealthy physician of that city. She was highly respectable, and worth between $30,000 or $40,000. Shortly after meeting her, Griffin married Mrs. Hughes and then commenced a life of dissipation. He soon ruined himself in business in Memphis, and having squandered all of his own means and most of his wife's means they moved to West Point, Mississippi. There he soon became bankrupt, and in 1871 he and his wife came to Aurora. Here he engaged in buying up old metal, rags, &c., and it was not long until the grand jury indicted him for receiving stolen property. He had a close shave for the penitentiary, but was acquitted, and soon after skipped out for California to avoid arrest on the more serious charge of forgery, his wife still clinging to him and going West with him. In 1882 they returned to Aurora, Griffin's aged father being thought to be on his death bed. While here he met a Miss Jennie Stephens, whom he knew before his marriage at Split Rock, Ky., but who at the time was living with her parents at Newport, Ky. Leaving his wife here in November, 1882, he again started for California, but going up to Newport, he took Miss Stephens over to Cincinnati, and telling her his wife was dead, a mock marriage was performed, and they started together for the Pacific slope. About three months ago it seems he pocketed what money he had, and leaving wife No. 2 penniless and among strangers, came back to Aurora, and remained concealed at his father's house until Thursday night of last week, when he took the mail boat to Louisville. The parents of wife No. 2 have had her brought home to Newport, and are able to take care of her, but wife No. 1, bereft of everything, will have to spend the balance of her days as best she can.—Aurora Independent.

NGEIHBORHOOD NEWS.

Florence X-Roads.

Snow plentiful.

Some of our boys intended to have a surprise party at Sum Houston's last Wednesday night, but they were surprised when they went that evening and were informed that the party was had the night before. Too slow, boys.

Bullittsville.

Ben Stephens likes his new clerk. Kels is a good one.

J. L. Riley has laid is a large stock of Christmas goods.

Beautiful weather for butchering last week, and there was a great many hogs died with sore throat.

Mr. Henry Quick one of our boss base ball players will go to Michigan in the spring to catch for the Grand Rapids.

Hebron.

Monday the snow was five inches deep, and the thermometer 11 above zero.

The sweet music of the sleigh-bells, and the merry boys and their belles are heard on the streets again.

Rev. Keene preached in the Hebron Hall Saturday night.

There were three additions to the Lutheran church last Sunday.

Charles Clore's horse frightened at a dog and capsized the sleigh, but no damage resulted.

Scattersville.

Again we try to find something to say in regard to the times, but cannot promise a great deal.

Mr. John Rue delivered his crop of tobacco to Esq. Baker last week.

Everybody has killed their hogs, and now Mr. Editors, take a stroll through the country and eat hearty.

The dogs have been getting in their work again in the last few weeks. They made a raid on Chas. McCrandey's flock, crippling a good many but did kill any outright. They also visited O. P. Conner's flock, for which his dog paid the penalty, and if all reports be true, there is still one living.

It is time for the pike fever to make its appearance in our little burg. Where are the leaders?

Mrs. Prof. Bell has gone to Evansville, Ind to see her brother who got crippled in a lumber yard of which he was boss.

Uncle Noah Utz has company from Ghent, Ky. visiting at his house.

What has become of our prayer meeting? is the question asked by a good many who love to attend. Something wrong we fear.

Geo. Aylor has been hauling corn to Burlington, where he got 50c per bushel.

We noticed the smiling and handsome face of R. A. Brady peeping through the bushes, last week, hunting birds. We did not learn the names of the other parties with him.

Rabbit Hash.

Hearing so many complaining of no news in your valuable paper from this place, we concluded to drop you a few local items which we thought might appease their appetite for news.

The weather of the past week has enabled the farmers to gather most all the corn in the neighborhood, which was a large yield.

Bros Bristow and Froh have been carrying on a large protracted meeting at the East Bend M. E. Church, with 4 additians.

Miss Lou Allen, of Bellevue, is now the guest of Mrs. B. H. Ryle.

Wilson & Riddell have laid in a large supply of Christmas goods.

Rabbit Hash is now improving in the way of two new buildings. Steve Mock is putting up a commodious store-room 40 by 30, and Dr L. C. Cowen is building an office 26 by 20 which will be real handsome.

Mr. R. T. Stephens, son of Mr. Solon Stephens, left for New Orleans, last Wednesday, to spend the winter.

The parties last week at J. R. Stephens' and Fillmore Ryle's were quite a success. Everybody had a splendid time.

M. G. Riggs has moved into town.

Fish Willit, of Utah, is visiting his sister, Mrs. Jas. H. Lawell.

John McConnell left last Wednesday on a corn-boat as supercargo for the southern country.

Mrs. C. Ward and daughter, Miss Rachel will leave in a few days, for Xenia, Ohio. They will make it their future home.

Dame rumor says we are going to have one or two weddings during the holidays.

Bucktown was the scene of a regular stand-up-and-knock-down fight one day last week.

Will McConnell has returned from his trip to New Orleans.

Ben Ryle says he did not bet two dollars; but Dave says he did. Ben, please rise up and explain.

R. S. Ryle and wife, of Burlington, spent last week in our midst.

Clay Pearson, of Utah, is now in the neighborhood.

Z. T. Kelley has bought some more land from the Merrick heirs, which makes his farm among the first in the neighborhood.

Florence.

The snow is coming; Christmas is coming, and Old Santa Claus, with his precious freight is coming; and everybody is getting ready for the coming. The farmer is busily arranging his stock convenient to feed and shelter, else husking the heaps of corn or piling high the loads of fuel. The sleighs are brought from their resting places and cleared for actions. The merchants are looking over their stocks of warm goods and wishing for a lower temperature. Their stores are teeming with all the good things that are edible and the show windows alive with things to make the little ones rejoice in the event of Old Santa's breaking down. The gay belles are at the mantau makers with their laces and velvets and trimmings, arming for the conquest. The old maids have laid in a fresh supply of cologne and bloom of youth, the widows having their lives insured. The youth who has just merged out of his teens and can sport a fuzzy mustache thinks he'll marry this Christmas, sure. Grand Pap and granny are smoking in the corner by the cheerful fire, while visions of happy days are flitting before them. Mamma is darning the stockings to keep the surgar-plum from running out. The little ones are counting the days, while their imaginations see away up the road to the moon, the leaders of St. Nick's gallant team of raindeers, heading for the earth with the precious burden.

The paper called our attention to a hat disaster, that befell some of the Burlington beaux while visiting us last week, and attended religious services, &c. We have endeavored to give the case an impartial investigation, but the hat question presents so many different phases that we have been unable to come to a conclusion. A couple of hats were picked up between Barney's and Finch's, but were so distorted as to be beyond recognition. Whether their peculiar shape partook of the head or was produced by a brick we cant determine at present.

The Baptist church was the scene of quite a sensation Sunday evening a week ago. Two of the good sisters, who are more zealous in religion than toilet, made their appearance in the audience, the one with hat hindpart before, the other with black dress inside out, with light colored linings. The parson thought that playing charades was well enough during the holidays, but he could not approving of it during devine services.

Our town is considerably excited over the strange apparition in the shape of a man, and representing one of our citizens, seen every night sitting on the top of the carriage shop of Bradford Bro's. and facing across the street. GAS OMETER.

WANTED—A pair of good, stout socks with legs 11 feet long. Will buy or rent till after New Year. Want them to hang up by the chimney. J. W.

This is not paid for.

Miss Sadie Miles, a handsome Cincinnati belle, was the guest of Miss Carrie and Miss Pussie Smith last week.

Those indebted to me must come forward and settle by the 1st of January. I need my money. R S. CRISLER.

Those owing us must come forward and settle at once, as we are out of money and must have that owing to us.

RICE & WESTBAY.

Jno. Conner, of Erlanger, was in town Saturday. He reports his business as very brisk since he has prepared to keep stock and entertain drovers over night, Boone county people should stop with John when they want their stock to receive special care.

Joe Morrison, the blacksmith near Big Bone Church, came to town last Saturday, and when he started home his horse ran off and threw him, breaking one of his legs between the knee and ankle. He was taken to the Sandford House where Dr. Furnish attended the broken bone.

Sheriff's Sale for Taxes.

By virtue of Taxes due the Sheriff of Boone County for the years 1882 and 1883 I, or one of my deputies, will, on

Monday, January 7th, 1884,

between the hours of 12 o'clock m., and 2 p. m., at the Court House door in Burlington, Boone County, Ky., expose to Public Sale, to the highest bidder, for cash in hand the following property, or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy the amount of taxes due, aforesaid and cost, to wit:

A tract of land containing 32 acres and bounded by the lands of Webb Bros., Mrs. Annie Foulks, Milton Gaines and the Ohio River.

Amount of taxes and costs to be raised by sale $12 69 and levied on as the property of Peter Urton. J. R. CLUTTERCUCK, S. B. C.

By W. T. GERMAN, D. S.

6

"Nervous debility, the curse of the American people, immediately yields to the action of Brown's Iron Bitters."

KEOKUK, IOWA.—Dr. E. E. Fuller says: "I have used Brown's Iron Bitters in my own family with excellent results."

ELM GROVE, N. C.—Dr. G. N. Roberson says: "I prescribe Brown's Iron Bitters, and find it all it is recommended to be."

Stop Thinking

What you shall buy for a Christmas Present for your friends, and go to

W. E. Piper's,

and see his display of elegant and useful articles suitable for

The Holidays.

Presents for Parents. Presents for Young People. Toys for the Children, Presents for Young Men and Ladies. Presents for Everybody.

Come And Be

Satisfied that SANTA CLAUS cannot beat us when it comes to making the CHILDREN happy.

Ask for a Farmers and Mechanics Almanac, for 1884, which we are giving AWAY. YOURS TRULY,

W. E. PIPER.

HEYN AND BRO,

Rising Sun, Indiana.

Great reduction in prices of all Seasonable Goods.

DON'T FAIL TO SEE THE BARgains offered in Overcoats And READY MADE CLOTHING To Suit Everybody.

All Prices Marked Down.

A full line of Ladies' Black and Light Colored

Cloaks,
Dolmans,
Newmarkets,
and Jackets,

In all grades, at prices that will make them sell.

Owing to tho advance of the season we are making sacrifices in order to reduce Stock, as it is our aim not to carry any goods over for next year. We are selling BLANKETS, SHAWLS, FLANNELS, and JEANS at astonishingly low prices

Our Stock of Domestic Cotton Goods at wholesale prices: Canton Flannel commonly sold at 10c, at 7½c. and other grades in proportion. See our Calicos at 5c, and you will buy them. Indigo Blue Calico, commonly sold at 9 and 10 cents, now 7½ cents. A full line of Ladies' and Gents' Furnishing Goods and Knit Goods, to dispose of. We mean and do business, and it will be to everybodys advantage to give us a call.

HEYN & BRO.

Rising Sun, Ind.

FALL FALL FALL FALL

—AND—

Winter Clothi'g

Clothing of the best goods, well trimmed, in the latest styles, made under my direct supervision and sold at lower prices than are asked for badly made, shoddy goods at other places. Call and be assured.

A splendid line of Suitings. Suits MADE to order on short notice.

H. F Blase,

540 Madison St. - COVINGTON. KY

UNDERTAKING.

We keep Constantly on Hand all sizes of

Burial Cases and Caskets.

And having just received a beautiful

NEW HEARSE,

Which can be had at a reasonable price when desired,

PRICES GUARANTEED LESS THAN CITY PRICES

DAVIS BROS., HEBRON, KY.

M. L. SWETNAM. HUBERT NEED.

SWETNAM & NEAD,

(SUCCESSOR TO ALONZO GRAVES)

LIVERY AND BOARDING STABLE

AND TRANSFER LINE.

79 Pike Street, Covington, Ky.

Horses Kept by the Day, Week or Month,
Horses and Buggies for Hire,
Stock of all kinds Bought and Sold,
Best Care Taken of Horses entrusted to our Keeping.

All Orders for Hauling Promptly Attended to.

City Flouring Mills

RISING SUN, INDIANA.

FLOUR EXCHANGED FOR WHEAT OR CASH. THE HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR GOOD WHEAT.

mar7-tf28 J. W. Talbott.

JAMES S. WAYNE, President, JNO. L. SANDFORD, Cashier

CAPITAL $300,000.

FARMERS AND TRADERS

NATIONAL BANK.

Covington, Kentucky.

DIRECTORS.

James S. Wayne, M. C. Motch, Sam Hind, E. J. Hickey, E. J. Green
J. S. Matson, J. H. Mersman, J. L. Sandford, L. H. Dills, F. P. Helm
L. C. Stephens.

The general operations of banking transacted upon the most favorable terms. collections made on all points in the United States.

The Business and Accounts of Farmers are Especially Solicited by this Bank.

dec. 10-6m

MOTHER NOBLE'S

HEALING SYRUP.

20 Million Bottles sold in 10 years. A certain Cure for Dyspepsia, all Diseases of the Kidneys, Liver, Stomach, Blood, Skin and Bowels.

Can Produce Thousands of Letters proving its Curative Powers,

AN OLD AND LONG TRIED REMEDY,

LABORATORY 77 AMITY STREET, NEW YORK CITY,

TRADE MARK.

FOR SALE BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

Cornease.—The King of Corn Killers. The most desperate Corns, Bunions, Warts &c., SPEEDILY cured. Price 25 Cents,

Footease.—An Unfailing Remedy for Hot, Swollen and Tender Feet, Chilblains, &c. Price 25 Cents,

Cornease Manuf'g Co., 236, 5th Ave. Place, N. Y. City.

For Sale by Agents, Druggists and Shoe Dealers.

Subscribe For The

BOONE COUNTY

RECORDER.

And begin with the New Year.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL, Publishers.

BURLINGTON, : : KENTUCKY

English Hats and Bonnets.

The latest imported bonnets and hats from London show a variety of straight-trimmed, square-crowned hats, high turbans with rolling brims, boat-shaped hats and tiny close-fitting bonnets. Many of the ladies' hats sent over from Oxford street are extremely severe in style. A wide hat band of heavy corded Ottoman ribbon, ending near the front in a bow and many hoops and cords, forms the only trimming of the hat, which is bound on the edge with hatter's corded binding. These hats are shown in solid color in mineral smoke gray and dust brown grades, and are worn on the promenade with plain tailor suits of the same color, or with dresses of dark blue or chestnut brown diagonal goods and gloves of the color of the hat.

The most elegant hats are more ornate, though severely plain in style and finish. A straight brimmed, high-crowned gray felt hat recently imported is trimmed at the side with a close puffing of smoke gray velvet with brownish hues. This fold is caught down by several tiny silver cock's heads. A full breast of golden pheasant plumes in natural browns and grays finish the hat at the side. A stylish high English turban is of chestnut brown felt faced with the darkest shade of brown velvet, bound with a plain inch-wide velvet binding and trimmed around the crown with a double twist of chestnut brown and pearl gray velvet, and two doves wings set at the side.

A tiny black felt princess bonnet is shown, with trimmings of maroon velvet. Two bright green paroquets are nestled among the dark velvet folds on top of the bonnet. Ornaments of burnished steel catch down the folds of velvet trimming, and a stiff made bow of velvet, which is worn under the chin, in the fashion introduced by the Princess of Wales, finishes the bonnet. A stylish Gainsborough hat in chestnut brown velvet, has a straight crown, which is surrounded by a narrow folded velvet band, like a gentleman's cravat and tied in front in a small cravat bow, which is fastened by an English harvester's sickle in burnished style. A cluster of golden brown tips, in the shade known as marron d'or and a long plume in dark chestnut brown completes the trimming of the hat. A little turban for a young lady with the short curled hair affected by English girls is of fine black felt, faced on the rolled brim with black velvet and bound with a deep velvet fold an inch and a quarter wide. A soft scarf of hunting red velvet is arranged in set folds around the crown and caught by two small breasts of tropical birds, shaded from deep, brilliant hues of green to the yellow-red shades of hunter's red.

An elegant carriage hat with a straight brim and square high crown is shown in velvet in brilliant ox-blood red. The high smooth crown of the hat is trimmed with a plain fold of red velvet caught at the side with a buckle of cut jet and finished with a large cluster of heavy ostrich tips, which nod over the brim in front. Some of the most costly breasts on imported English hats are set at intervals with the tiny brilliant breasts of South American humming-birds, which gleam like jewels. Large clusters of heavy tips, which fall over the brim neatly in front of many of the English hats, are extremely becoming. A charming bonnet, modelled after one worn by the Princess of Wales, is of chestnut-brown velvet, with that long crown which fits so comfortably over the coiffure. The crown of this bonnet is shirred on heavy ropes to form the stylish rope crown, and the puffed brim is trimmed with a wreath of autumnal leaves shading from dark chesnut brown through all the golden-brown hues of the dying foliage, and finished at the side by clusters of brown burrs. A made princess bow under the chin completes the bonnet.—N. Y. Mail.

The Telephone.

The telephone business is one that has assumed large proportions lately and is rapidly gaining and spreading all over the country, and there are very few business places now who have not a telephone. In speaking on this subject a few days ago a gentleman who always has his eye open for a good business chance said to a Leader reporter: "The thing that astonishes me more than anything else now is that the gentlemen who are running the telephone business do not endeavor to enlarge it, and bring it into still more general use, and the way it can be done will be by bringing down the yearly rental, and naturally force everybody to contribute toward its sustenance, as is the case now. There is scarcely a day that you won't have three or four parties run into a man's place of business and say: 'May I use your telephone a moment?' But if the prices were brought down to a reasonable price there is no man who would be without one. Suppose for instance that I could get a telephone in my house and one in my office for say five dollars per year. Don't you think I would do it? Why of course. I would not be the only one, either, but every man who is in business down town or over in Pittsburgh would have one at home and one at his office. And then look at the great convenience. If a man desired to take a friend home to dinner or supper all he would have to do would be to call his wife and give her a notice of an hour or so, and she would feel better and so would you, because while the ordinary home fare would suit you she would not like to set strangers down to a meal prepared for your family. And in a thousand ways it could be made useful, until we would wonder how we had gotten along without them; but at the present time very few men can afford to keep up a luxury of that kind, and for a long time I thought a company organized for that purpose would be a paying investment, and if a stock company of that kind was started I would certainly take stock, for there is no telling where the usefulness of the telephone will end. Ten years ago had any one told us that we could talk twenty-five or fifty miles and be understood we would have thought he was an idiot, but the other day I was writing a letter to a gentleman in Rochester when another party came in and asked me why I did not telephone him, and imagine my astonishment when he replied and called me by name. He was then lying in bed with a broken leg, and was directing the work of 300 men over a mile away. I was then struck more forcibly than ever before that the telephone would sooner or later become an absolute necessity in every business man's house, and that the parties who would introduce that feature in the business had an independent fortune in their hands, of course, provided the yearly rental rates were reasonable."—Pittsburgh Herald.

FOREIGN GOSSIP.

—Cows are still used to drag the plow in Central Germany.

—There are 2,700 births on an average each week in the city of London.

—Roast elephant is a sacred dish in Tonquin and Anam, as are also bird's nest pies, made of esculent swallows with a plate of insects.

—A paper recently read before the Glasgow Sanitary Congress attributed nearly all the ill-health of women in the Scotch weaving districts to the abuse of tea.

—O'Connell told a story of an usher in an Irish court one day being anxious to thin the courts, and who called out: "All ye blackguards that isn't lawyers, quit the coort."

—A well-known actress in Vienna, Mathilde Singer, has hit upon a brilliant idea, which even the versatile Sarah Bernhardt has not yet tried. She has opened an oyster bar, over which she presides herself, with the result that the Austrian beaux flock in crowds to do homage at her shrine, consume her delicacies and bring their golden ducats to her coffers.

—Japanese "tsunoki," or camphor, is collected throughout the year, but the best results are obtained in winter. When the camphor collectors find a spot having several tsunoki trees in the vicinity they migrate thither, build a hut to live in, and construct a rude furnace for making the camphor. When that place is exhausted the hut is torn down and carried to another place.

—Fishes now living in the Suez Canal have formed the subject of a paper by Dr. C. Keller. Up to the beginning of the present year eleven species from the Mediterranean have penetrated the canal as far as Suez. The Red Sea, on the other hand, gave no fewer than twenty-five species, which, however, have only for the most part scarcely reached half-way toward the northern entrance.

—The following curious advertisement appears in a recent issue of a Pesth newspaper: "To please my wife, I, the undersigned, declare that from henceforth I will not put my foot in a cafe or brasserie, and I beg my friends and acquaintances never to ask me to frequent these haunts of perdition, and I authorize any one finding me in a cafe immediately to demand from me the sum of 50 florins, which will be given to some public charity."

—It is wonderful what novel and curious information we can sometimes pick from unexpected quarters, when we fall in with persons who may be deemed experts in their specialties of business and work. A haircutter recently had under his scissors the abundant locks of Mr. Lloyd, of London, a famous lawyer, and complimented his customer on his fine head of hair. "It's the brain that does it," he said. "You see, sir, the brain is in the skull, close to the roots of the hair. The brain is a soft substance, and nourishes the hair." "Ah, indeed: is that so? Well, you are of course an expert in hair, and you ought to know." "Yes, sir; it percolates through the skull and nourishes the roots. That's what it's for, sir."

Summer in India.

Only those who have experienced the heat of a summer on the plains of India can have any conception of the fiery ordeal through which the dwellers here are called to pass; and to neglect to make such provision as is possible for the alleviation of the fierce heat would be reckless in the extreme. Taking up the morning paper one day since the commencement of the present hot season, I saw noted therein the death of a European lady in one of the hotels of the city. She had arrived by a train from Bombay, and had declined the use of any cooling apparatus for her room. In the morning when a servant took in her early breakfast she was found lying upon the floor near the door, quite dead, a victim of heat apoplexy.

We rise early during the hot season in India, for the morning gives to us the only refreshment which the day furnishes; and even at that time we often pant for a cool breath. The early morning is the time for action. The missionary with his helpers goes forth to bazaar or village to tell to all who will listen the wondrous story of a Savior's love; the pastor visits the members of his flock, the physician his patients in home or hospital; the Government official repairs to his office to do duty there; the laborer goes forth to his toil. The seeker of health or pleasure, too, is abroad, and nurses are out with pale-faced children in charge, but not infrequently more intent upon their own pleasure than upon their appropriate duties, chatting with chance acquaintances, and shielding themselves from the sun, while their helpless charges sit in their little carriages, unprotected from the dazzling light and heat.

By nine or ten o'clock the "white foreigners" are seen hastening home, and through the remaining hours of the day the European in India is a prisoner within the walls of his habitation, as glad of protection from the burning heat as he would be for shelter from a winter's storm. But though confined within doors he need not be idle. The student has uninterrupted hours for study, translation or other literary work; the pastor has leisure for the preparation of sermons; the man of business can devote himself to his ledgers, and the invalid can secure quiet hours for rest.

Since the introduction of railways into India, a large proportion of the Government officials, as well as many others who can afford the indulgence, have a residence for the summer months in some Himalayan retreat. These mountain resorts which the railways have made easily accessible, are a great blessing to the invalid; and in these delightful spots, where the air is fresh and bracing, the pale-faced children of the plains grow plump and rosy.

Through April and May the heat continues to increase, and reaches its maximum in June or July, when the rainy season opens. During these sultry months the sun burns its way through the heavens day after day. The skys are brass and the earth stone, with a fiery atmosphere between.

Several years ago, while taking a railway journey in the month of May, we suffered greatly from the heat, though we had made use of such means as were at our command for our relief. We left the train at the close of a long, glowing day, and when the compartment adjoining our own was thrown open, the only occupant, a gentleman, was found in an unconscious state, a sufferer from heat apoplexy. Is it any marvel that such seizures are frequent when during the heated term the mercury in the sun reaches 172 deg. and even 178 deg., and 115 deg. or 116 deg. in the shade? The air at this season is not only hot, but dry. From the 1st of January to the 10th of June but 8½ inches of rain had fallen.

The monotony of the hot season is relieved by frequent dust-storms, which, though not pleasant in themselves, purify the air. We see a yellow cloud rising out of the west and advancing swiftly until the whole heavens become lurid. The clouds of dust and sand borne on the wind darken the air as they approach, until the blackness of night sometimes settles down upon the earth; while through every crevice the driving sand finds its way, leaving books, furniture, everything in a condition exceedingly trying to a tidy housekeeper. Great trees are sometimes uprooted in such storms.

During the hot season the nights are excessively trying, for there is little abatement of the heat, and worn with the long conflict, attended by so few alleviations, no wonder that the cheeks grow pale, the step languid, and labor which once would have been a delight, becomes a burden. Even the people of the land are affected by the great heat, and while the hot winds are blowing we frequently see those who are necessarily exposed, with the head muffled, and even with the mouth covered, as a protection from the burning air. But the degree of heat the people of India can endure is marvelous. During the month of April, when the heat was very great, natives were employed in repairing the thatched roof of our bungalow. Through the long burning day, except a short rest at midday, they were engaged in this work, sitting upon the roof, and quite unprotected from the heat; but from morning until night they chatted and laughed in great good humor, with no appearance of suffering; on the principle, I suppose, that a degree of heat which would be torture to an Icelander, would not be unpleasant to an inhabitant of the temperate zone. —Cor. N. Y. Observer.

Disinterested Benevolence.

The question of disinterestedness has been very much discussed, not alone in schools and debating clubs, where the inquiry has been raised whether there was such a thing as disinterested benevolence, but also as a question of casuistry, in public and in the closet; and persons have taken sides variously respecting it, though I think it is generally thought there is no such thing as disinterested benevolence—in other words, that there is no man that acts benevolently who does not act with a foreknowledge and under the influence of the fact that what he is doing will make him happier, and who does not so act because he knows it will make him happier, thus acting from a selfish consideration.

Now, I believe there is such a thing as disinterested benevolence; that is to say, I believe there are people who act all the time as absolutely for the good of other people irrespective of their own good, as it is possible for the human mind to act. A man, for instance, walking on the bank of a river, sees a fellow-being struggling in the water, and without a thought plunges in and brings him to the shore. A person who witnesses the deed says: "Well, it was done quickly, to be sure; but that man must have thought, before he did it, what people would say." Absurd! Do you suppose the man risked his life because he thought somebody would praise him, and he would be a hero for it? He did it from the spontaneity of humanity that urged him on; and if, before he got the drowning man out of the water, he had time to think of other things, well and good; the prompting motive was no worse for that. Do you suppose a mother is all the time, for months and years, acting disinterestedly for the babe? "But it is her babe," it is said. Of course it is her babe, but it is not herself. She is pouring out, lavishly as wine is poured from a flask or goblet, her health, her strength, her waking thought and her sleeping anxiety, into that child's life; and do you suppose she stops and reckons and says: "I shall be miserable if I do not, and happy if I do?" She does it first; and if afterward she sometimes thinks that the way of spontaneous love is the way of enjoyment, the motive which actuates her is no worse for that. The cause of her devotion to the child is not the prospect of remuneration, but the necessity of acting according to her strongest feeling, which is love for that child, and which makes all service and sacrifice not only easy but inevitable. Do you suppose a benevolent man who sees want which he has the means of relieving relieves it because, after making a calculation in his mind, he comes to the conclusion that it will be a pleasure to him?

That which misleads young reasoners on this subject is the fact that a man can not use any faculty rightly without having some pleasure in its use. God has so constituted us that every right action which we perform is pleasurable. No person can act or feel right through conscience, or benevolence, or taste, or imagination, or any other faculty, without receiving pleasure. You can not use the mind aright without deriving pleasure from the act. You might as well say that a man is selfish because an apple tastes good to him when he eats it, as to say that he is selfish because he experiences pleasure when he performs a right deed. It is owing, not to any forethought on his part, but to a constitutional arrangement that he experiences pleasure under such circumstances. If a man, when a call for charity or benevolence or self sacrifice comes up, refuses to respond to it, saying: "I know there are moral grounds for it; but I will not heed them;" and if, after thinking it over, like the unjust judge he says: "Lest by its continual coming it weary me, I will," then his course is selfish, and there is no disinterested benevolence about it; but if, when an object of right and duty is presented which is beautiful and attractive, a man's mind responds to it without hesitation or resistance, though thoughts of the pleasure which it will afford him may come in, it does not follow that he does not do it disinterestedly. And it can not be denied that there are many benevolent things done without any thought of receiving pleasure in return; for there is not a day in which multitudes of persons do not do things because they think they ought to do them, which are apparently against their interest. We are all the time taking pains that others may be benefited. We are continually holding ourselves back from things that we would like to do in order that others may not be put to inconvenience. The courses of common politeness and common friendship are full of disinterestedness.—H. W. Beecher, in Christian Union.

—We have always known that the fragrant weed induces blissful reverie; that a good cigar comes to the tired man after the day's work is over like a benediction, and that even the clay pipe in extremity is not altogether void of merit, though it is too aromatic for general use; but we are glad to learn from Mr. Walter Parke an historic fact which we shall hereafter bear in mind very gratefully. He has put it into verse, but it is none the worse for that:

There was an old witch of Malacca
Who smoked such atrocious tobacco,
When tigers were near
They trembled with fear,
And didn't attempt to attacca.

—N. Y. Herald.

HOME AND FARM.

—The Leghorn, or white Spanish hens, lay a great many eggs, but the eggs are small.—N. Y. Herald.

—Keep the celery dry. It is moisture more than frost that injures it. Cover the trench with boards so that the water will run off.—Exchange.

—We believe that the upturning of the soil in autumn is worth as much to the farmer as a coat of manure in the spring. American farming lacks in tilth. Turning the soil is the need of agriculture.—Troy Times.

—A delicious hard sauce for puddings is made by shaving some maple sugar just as thin as possible, and mixing it with butter in the proportion of two tablespoonfuls of sugar to one of butter. Serve with hot puddings by putting a spoonful on the top of the saucerful of pudding.—N. Y. Post.

—Buckwheat intended for seed should be hand thrashed. In thrashing by machine many of the grains are so bruised and broken that they will not germinate. As buckwheat is very easily hand thrashed it makes a job for men in winter when other work is scarce, and it is good policy to save it for them.—Prairie Farmer.

—Snowball Cake: Cream one-half cup of butter, add one cup of sugar, then the white of four eggs—one at a time—and beat until thoroughly light. Flavor with one teaspoonful of lemon; then add one-half cup of milk, alternately with two cups of flower, having previously mixed one large teaspoonful of Royal baking powder in the flour. Bake in a square pan.—Boston Post.

—My rule, says a correspondent of the Elmira (N. Y.) Farmers' Club, on all my grass lands, both meadow and pasture, is to sow ten bushels of lime to the acre once in five years, and to sow 200 pounds of German potash salts to the acre every year, and my experience is with this treatment, after two or three of the first years, that every acre will pasture its cow or cut two tons of hay.

—A writer in an exchange says:—"Some twenty years since I had a piece of pasture land badly infested with wild carrots. To restore the white clover which had run out I sowed one hundred and fifty to two hundred pounds of Nova Scotia plaster to the acre. The next year the white clover was there, but the carrots had disappeared, and although the land had been plowed since no trace of carrots has been found, although they are plenty near by. Did the plaster kill the carrots? If so people have an easy remedy for them."

—The proper method of forming the width or height of the instep in stocking knitting is always by regulating the length of heel, says an English correspondent. A man's heel is three inches deep, that is, after the rounding of the heel and the last rows. I am speaking of the "manufacturer's heel." The round and Dutch heels must be two and one-half inches in length before you begin to form the heel (two inches is the size of a child's heel); and it depends upon the width of the gusset in the round heel if two and a half inches will make it sufficiently deep.—The Household.

Does It Pay?

This is the test to apply to all enterprises on the farm. And it well becomes any one who has managed a farm for the past three or five years, in grain, grass or stock to seriously investigate whether his operations have paid. Labor is high, but in view of all the surroundings, no higher than good labor out to be. But much of it is ignorant, awkward, indolent and careless—destroying, or by neglect injuring, more than he earns. Farmers have no reason to complain of the price of labor, but the quality is wretched. It is hard to tell how so many young men come up to man's estate so totally ignorant of the ways of life. Governor Kirkwood the other day said no girl should be allowed to marry until she could make good bread, a good cup of coffee and broil a beef-steak correctly. But what would he do with the thousands of young men in all departments of life totally ignorant of how to do anything correctly?" They are crowding into our towns. They are on our farms and everywhere. But it is far worse on the farm than any other place. It is with young men as it is with a large part of mankind. If they do not know anything, it is the general verdict that they must go to farming. A few years ago a schoolmaster editor at Prairie City advocated higher wages for school-teaching, for the reason that it took two or three years to prepare for a teacher, while any green dolt is just as good as any as a farm hand." And yet it requires more natural brightness, and twice the training, to make a good farm hand that it does to constitute a good teacher.

But the question is: Does it pay to farm in the way it is mostly done at present? Let every farmer count up carefully the cost of producing the crop of the past or any year. What the cost of his corn, his oats, his potatoes, or his wheat. Count every item of work, allowing a reasonable price for teams, board of hands, seed, cost of implements, rent of ground, plowing, planting, cultivation, harvesting, threshing, storing in bins and cribs, and marketing. Then compare this with the income. Do not be discouraged at the result shown. Only let it set you to studying out a better way. How to farm without so much help—whether more stock and less grain can not solve the problem. By no means allow the scrutiny to tempt you to sell the farm and move to town, and set up a green grocery or to go to peddling apple-trees. Farming can be made to pay. We know from fair trial. It is the surest and safest way to make life comfortable of any industry or device under the sun. But it must be wisely done. Investigation must demonstrate whether the outlay is not more than the income. If it is, a better way must be sought out. And it is the object of this article to induce every farmer to search out the best way, and not go blindly forward without knowing what he is doing. We have passed by farms for the past twenty-eight years, where the first sight convinced us that the owner did not know his own business. And to-day he is not worth as much as he was a score of years ago, notwithstanding his land is worth twenty times as much as it was at the beginning of the period named. The trouble with him, and thousands like him, is that he does not know how to farm—nor know what it costs to farm, nor the value of the products of his farm. In his case he does not know whether it pays. And with the carelessness and the ignorance he applies to his farm he has no right to expect it to pay.—Iowa State Register.

—Miss Emma V. Pitkin, of New York, has youth, beauty and three-quarters of a million dollars, but all these could not keep her mind in balance, and she has become a raving maniac.—N. Y. News

—Paid in his own coin: "Don't you think she's pretty?" said the fond mother to the father as she stroked the baby's silken hair. The father was in a sulking mood (something had disagreed with him), and he replied somewhat curtly: "Oh, all babies are about alike. They look like little monkeys." Just then a neighbor entered, and, taking the baby on her lap, said: "Mercy on us! How like its father that child is!" —Sumerville Journal.

—A Louisville man having found a board on which a house was painted was wont to limber his brushes and try his colors, is trying to sell it as a landscape by one of the old masters.—Chicago Herald.

The Wide, Wide World.

LIMA, REPUBLIC OF PERU.—Senor A. de La E. Delgado, L. L. D. and Counsellor, Tribunal of Justice, Lima, Republic of Peru, says: One single application of St. Jacobs Oil cured me completely of rheumatic pains in my left arm. I recommended it to two of my friends, the Mrs. Dona Juana Garcia, widow, and Mr. D. Herman Decker, a German gentleman. Madam Garcia was relieved entirely by the pain-cure from terrible neuralgic pains of ten months standing. Mr. Decker was cured of inexplicable pains by a single application of the cure. My brother used the great remedy for a species of paralysis of the arm. He was entirely relieved from his ailment by one or two applications, after having tried numberless other remedies without effect.

BUFFALO has a dumb Alderman. He can not debate and therefore has to content himself with making motions.—Lowell Citizen.

A Dead Shot

May be taken at liver and bilious disorders with Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets." Mild yet certain in operation; and there is none of the reaction consequent upon taking severe and drastic cathartics. By druggists.

THE successful physician is one who is able to hit an ail on the head every time.—Whitehall (N. Y.) Times.

YOUNG men or middle aged ones suffering from nervous debility and kindred weaknesses should send three stamps for Part VII. of World's Dispensary Dime Series of books. Address WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOC'N, Buffalo, N. Y.

JOKING about her nose, a young lady said: "I had nothing to do with shaping it. It was a birthday present."

"Woman and Her Diseases"

Is the title of an interesting treatise (96 pages) sent, post-paid, for three stamps. Address WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y.

THE man who thinks a big necktie will hide a dirty collar must think people are collar-blind.—Hartford Times.

FROM Col. C. H. Mackey, 32nd Iowa Infantry: I have derived more benefit from Ely's Cream Balm than anything else I have ever tried. I have now been using it for three months and am experiencing no trouble from Catarrh whatever. I have been a sufferer for twenty years. C. H. MACKEY, Sigourney, Iowa, Feb. 22, 1882.

"I AM at your service, madam," said the polite burglar, when caught with his arms full of silverware.

"I HAVE BEEN AFFLICTED with an Affection of the Throat caused by diphtheria, and have used various remedies, but have never found anything equal to BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES.—Rev. G. M. F. Hampton, Piketon, Ky. Sold only in boxes.

I HAVE been entirely cured of a terrible case of Blood Poisoning by the use of Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) after trying everything known to the medical people without relief. JNO. S. TAGGART, Salamanca, N. Y.

THE only remedy sold in the United States to-day that actually cures rheumatism is Durang's. It never has and never can fail to cure the worst case. Write for free pamphlet. R. K. Helphenstine, druggist, Washington, D. C.

NOTHING better for Asthma than Piso's Cure for Consumption. 25c. per bottle.

Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar
Has the largest sale of any cough medicine. Pike's toothache drops cure in one minute.

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer
Is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from dandruff, restore gray hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which Sulphur, Sugar of Lead and Nitrate of Silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. JOHN D. PARK & SONS, Wholesale Agents, Cincinnati, Ohio, and C. N. CRITTENTON, N. Y.

SWIFT'S SPECIFIC (S. S. S.) has cured me entirely of bad Blood Poison. I went one hundred miles to get it, and it made me as sound as a new dollar. J. W. WEYLES, Meadville, Pa.

If afflicted with Sore Eyes, use Dr. Isaac Thompson's Eye Water. Druggists sell it. 25c.

THE MARKETS.

CINCINNATI, December 14, 1883.

LIVE STOCK—Cattle—common	$2 00	@ 3 25
Choice butchers	4 00	@ 5 00
HOGS—Common	4 10	@ 4 75
Good packers	5 00	@ 5 35
SHEEP	3 75	@ 4 25
FLOUR—Family	4 65	@ 4 90
GRAIN—Wheat—Longberry red	1 12¼	@
No. 2 red	1 04	@ 1 50
Corn—No. 2 mixed	54	@
Oats—No. 2 mixed	34	@
Rye—No. 2	61	@
HAY—Timothy No. 1	10 00	@10 50
HEMP—Double dressed	8½	@
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	14 50	@
Lard—Prime steam	8½	@
BUTTER—Fancy Dairy	24	@ 25
Prime Creamery	25	@ 34
FRUIT AND VEGETABLES—
Potatoes per bar. from store	1 25	@ 1 40
Apples, prime, per barrel	2 50	@ 3 00
NEW YORK.
FLOUR—State and Western	$2 80	@ 3 50
Good to choice	4 10	@ 6 75
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 spring	1 08	@
No. 2 red	1 12¼	@ 1 14
Corn—No. 2 mixed	67⅜	@ 69¾
Oats—mixed	38	@ 41
PORK—Mess	14 00	@14 87½
CHICAGO.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 50	@ 4 35
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	98¼	@ 1 00
Corn—No. 2	59⅛	@ 61⅛
Oats—No. 2	35¼	@ 36½
Rye	58½	@
PORK—Mess	14 75	@15 25
LARD—Steam	8-85	@ 8-90
BALTIMORE.
FLOUR—Family	$5 00	@ 5 75
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 07⅞	@ 1 08¼
Corn—mixed	61	@ 62⅛
Oats—mixed	38	@ 40
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	14 50	@
Lard—Refined	9¼	@
LOUISVILLE.
FLOUR—A No 1	$4 00	@ 4 50
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red, new	1 05	@
Corn—mixed	57	@
Oats—mixed	35½	@ 36
PORK—MESS	14 50	@
INDIANAPOLIS.
WHEAT—No. 2 red, new	$1 01½	@
CORN—mixed	54	@
OATS—mixed	32½	@
LIVE STOCK—Cattle—
Butchers' stock	2 75	@ 3 00
Shipping cattle	5 25	@

DR. HORNE'S ELECTRIC BELT
Cures Nervousness, Rheumatism, Paralysis, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Kidney, Spine and Liver diseases, Gout, Asthma, Heart Disease, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Erysipelas, Catarrh, Piles, Epilepsy, Impotency, Prolapsus Uteri Diabetes, etc. RUPTURE CURED BY ELECTRICITY. Only Electric Truss in the world. Agents wanted in every town. Send for Circular. Dr. W. J. HORNE, Inventor, 191 Wabash Av. Chicago, Ill.

PATENTS NO PATENT, NO PAY! R. S. & A. P. LACEY, Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C. Full instructions and Hand-Book of Patents sent free.

St. Jacobs Oil
THE GREAT GERMAN REMEDY
For Pain!
Relieves and cures
RHEUMATISM,
Neuralgia,
SCIATICA, LUMBAGO,
BACKACHE,
Headache, Toothache,
SORE THROAT,
QUINSY, SWELLINGS,
SPRAINS,
Soreness, Cuts, Bruises,
FROSTBITES,
BURNS, SCALDS,
And all other bodily aches and pains.
FIFTY CENTS A BOTTLE.
Sold by all Druggists and Dealers. Directions in 11 languages.
The Charles A. Vogeler Co.
(Successors to A. VOGELER & CO.)
Baltimore, Md., U. S. A.

A Year's Subscription
TO
THE CENTURY.
Such an array of brilliant features is included in the plans for the coming year of THE CENTURY, that it seems safe to say that $4.00 will pay for
NO BETTER HOLIDAY GIFT,
Nor one which will bring more satisfaction to the recipient, than a subscription to that Magazine. Have you not some friend to whom a first-class periodical is a treat which can not often be afforded? Remember, too, that this will be a monthly reminder of the giver for a whole year. New subscriptions should begin with the November Number, that remarkable issue, rich with the contribution of CABLE, JAMES, WARNER, ALPHONSE DAUDET, BURROUGHS, MRS. OLIPHANT, and many other writers, and containing some of the most beautiful engravings ever published in a Magazine. PRICE, $4 a year; an additional ten cents will pay for the pamphlet containing the chapters published before November, of that famous anonymous Novel, "The Bread-Winners." All dealers and the publishers take subscriptions.
THE CENTURY CO., New York.

HOSTETTER'S CELEBRATED STOMACH BITTERS
As an invigorant, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has received the most positive endorsement from eminent physicians, and has long occupied a foremost rank among standard proprietary remedies. Its properties as an alterative of disordered conditions of the stomach, liver and bowels, and a preventive of malarial diseases are no less renowned.
For sale by Druggists and Dealers, to whom apply for Hostetter's Almanac for 1884.

CATARRH ELY'S CREAM BALM
ELY'S CREAM BALM CURES COLD IN HEAD CATARRH ROSE-COLD HAY-FEVER DEAFNESS HEADACHE PRICE 50 CENTS ELY'S CREAM BALM CO. OWEGO N.Y. U.S.A.
when applied by the finger into the nostrils, will be absorbed, effectually cleansing the head of catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions. It allays inflammation, protects the membrane of the nasal passages from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores taste and smell. A few applications relieve. A thorough treatment will positively cure. Agreeable to use.
HAY-FEVER
Send for circular. Price 50 cents by mail or at druggists. Ely Brothers, Druggists, Owego, N. Y.

PISO'S CURE FOR
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS.
Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good.
Use in time. Sold by druggists.
25 CONSUMPTION 100

PATENT Or No PAY!
Interferences conducted. Assignments prepared. Copy of any patent issued since 1866 sent for 50 cents. Illustrated book of patent law FREE. W. T. FITZGERALD, Attorney at Law, 1006 F Street, Washington, D. C.

CHICAGO SCALE CO.
151 South Jefferson Street, Chicago, Ill.
2-Ton Wagon Scale, $40; 4-Ton $60; "Little Detective," $3. Send for Price List

PATENTS promptly procured in all countries. American Patent Agency, 188 Fifth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

HAIR Wigs & Waves sent C.O.D. anywhere. Wholesale & Retail. Price-list free. Goods guaranteed. B. C. STREHL, 157 Wabash-av., Chicago

$4,444 a Year at home. Terms and costly outfit free. Address H. A. ELLS & Co., Chicago.

AGENTS WANTED Entirely NEW. The Brightest Thoughts, Choicest Selections and Biographies of over 1100 of the best Authors. Words That Burn, or TRUTH & LIFE ILLUSTRATED. J. H. CHAMBERS & CO., St. Louis, Mo.

DIPHTHERIA
CROUP, ASTHMA, BRONCHITIS, Neuralgia, Rheumatism. JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT (for Internal and External Use) will instantly relieve these terrible diseases, and will positively cure nine cases out of ten. Information that will save many lives sent free by mail. Don't delay a moment. Prevention is better than cure. JOHNSON'S ANODYNE LINIMENT CURES Influenza, Hoarseness, Hacking Cough, Whooping Cough, Diarrhœa, Dysentery, Cholera Morbus, Kidney Troubles, and Lame Back. Sold everywhere. Circulars sent FREE. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

$102,400.00!
THE ENORMOUS AMOUNT OF $102,400.00! ACTUALLY GIVEN AWAY!
TO THE CONSUMERS OF
SPEAR-HEAD PLUG CHEWING TOBACCO!

THE ARRAY OF GIFTS WE PROPOSE GIVING OUR PATRONS.

1920 Acres of Land in Dakota, Nebraska and Kansas	$28,800 00
12 Weber Style 2 Grand Upright Pianos	9,600 00
12 Elegant Burdett Organs	2,400 00
120 Solid Gold Stem-Winding Watches, Elgin Movement	15,000 00
500 The Wilson No. 8 Oscillating Shuttle Sewing Machines	25,000 00
120 U. S. Government Bonds $50 each	6,000 00
80 Silver Stem-Winding Watches, Springfield Movement	2,800 00
1200 Meerschaum Pipes	4,800 00
2000 Five lb. boxes Spear-Head Tobacco	8,000 00
Total Amount,	$102,400 00

To secure the most equal distribution of the gifts we have divided the country into districts. The following articles will be distributed in your district to consumers of "Spear-Head" Plug Chewing Tobacco, on June 1st, 1884:

160 Acres of Land	$5,400 00
1 Weber Style 2 Grand Upright Piano	500 00
1 Elegant Burdett Organ	200 00
10 Solid Gold Stem-Winding Watches, Elgin Movement	1,250 00
105 Wilson No. 8 Sewing Machines	2,250 00
10 U. S. Government Bonds, $50 each	500 00
20 Silver Stem-Winding Watches, Springfield Movement	700 00
300 Meerschaum Pipes	1,500 00
500 Five lb. Boxes Spear-Head Tobacco	2,000 00
Total Value, -	$14,300 00

PLAN OF DISTRIBUTION.
To the consumer sending to our address the greatest number of "Spear-head" Tags, will be given a Deed for the 160 acres of Land. To the next, a Weber Style 2 Grand Upright Piano, and to the next, an Elegant Burdett Organ. Then to the ten next greatest number of Tags, a Gold Watch each, and so on, until the 845 Gifts are all distributed. Save the Spear-head Tags and return to us from May 15 to June 1, 1884, and get your present.
P. J. SORG & CO., Middletown, Ohio.
Chew SPEAR-HEAD and Get a Farm!

LIST OF DISEASES
ALWAYS CURABLE BY USING MEXICAN MUSTANG
LINIMENT.

OF HUMAN FLESH,	OF ANIMALS
Rheumatism,	Scratches,
Burns and Scalds,	Sores and Galls,
Stings and Bites,	Spavin, Cracks,
Cuts and Bruises,	Screw Worm, Grub,
Sprains & Stitches,	Foot Rot, Hoof Ail,
Contracted Muscles,	Lameness,
Stiff Joints,	Swinny, Founders,
Backache,	Sprains, Strains,
Eruptions,	Sore Feet,
Frost Bites,	Stiffness,

and all external diseases, and every hurt or accident. For general use in family, stable and stock-yard, it is
THE BEST OF ALL
LINIMENTS

Beware.
of the continued use of mercury and potash for the treatment of Blood and Skin diseases—they never cure, and nearly always injure or totally ruin the general health.
A WELL-KNOWN DRUGGIST.
I have seen a great many cases cured with Swift's Specific—some who had tried all sorts of treatment. In fact, I have never known it to fail when taken properly. I sell a large quantity of it, and for all diseases that are dependent on blood poison or skin humor. It cures PIMPLES AND BLOTCHES ON THE SKIN, and makes the complexion fair and rosy. As for blood taint, there is no such word as fail. It cures cases that have long withstood other sorts of treatment, and without any of those recurring troubles that generally follow mercurial and other so called cures.
T. L. MASSENBURG, Macon, Ga.
Our treatise on Blood and Skin Diseases mailed free to applicants. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Drawer 3, Atlanta, Ga.

Sawing Made Easy
Monarch Lightning Sawing Machine!
Sent on 30 Days Test Trial. A Great Saving of Labor & Money.
A boy 16 years old can saw logs FAST and EASY. MILES MURRAY, Portage, Mich., writes: "Am much pleased with the MONARCH LIGHTNING SAWING MACHINE. I sawed off a 3-inch log in 3 minutes." For sawing logs into suitable lengths for family stove-wood, and all sorts of log-cutting, it is peerless and unrivaled. Illustrated Catalogue, Free. AGENTS WANTED. Mention this paper. Address MONARCH MANUFACTURING CO., 163 E. Randolph St., Chicago, Ill.

SHARP PAINS
Crick, Sprains, Wrenches, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Pleurisy Pains, Stitch in the Side, Backache, Swollen Joints, Heart Disease, Sore Muscles, Pain in the Chest, and all pains and aches either local or deepseated are instantly relieved and speedily cured by the well-known Hop Plaster. Compounded, as it is, of the medicinal virtues of fresh Hops, Gums, Balsams and Extracts, it is indeed the best pain-killing, stimulating, soothing and strengthening Porous Plaster ever made. Hop Plasters are sold by all druggists and country stores. 25 cents or five for $1.00. Mailed on receipt of price. Hop Plaster Co., Proprietors and Manufacturers, Boston, Mass.
HOP PLASTER

Coated tongue, bad breath, sour stomach and liver disease cured by Hawley's Stomach and Liver Pills, 25 cts.

REMINGTON
Standard Type-Writer.
No one having much writing to do can afford to be without it.
Send for new Illustrated Pamphlet with testimonials.
Wyckoff, Seamens & Benedict,
NEW YORK, CHICAGO, BOSTON,
PHILADELPHIA, WASHINGTON, ST. LOUIS.

ST. PATRICK'S SALVE
TRY IT USE IT
It relieves at once Burns, Piles, Chapped Hands or Lips, Corns, Bunions, Scalds, Bruises, Soreness of feet, hands, eyes, etc.; Itching from any cause. 25c. Ask your druggist, or send to 89 Fulton Street, N. Y.

DEMOREST'S MAGAZINE COMBINES every element necessary to make a Model Family Magazine; beautiful oil pictures and steel engravings, together with illustrations, stories by the best English and American authors, discussions on national, social and art topics. Now is the time to subscribe. Sold everywhere. Yearly, $2. W. JENNINGS DEMOREST, Publisher, 17 E. 14th Street, N. Y.

CONSUMPTION.
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address.
DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., New York.

CANCER AND TUMORS Treated scientifically and cured without the knife. Book on treatment sent free. Drs. Gratigny & Norris 304 W. 4th St., Cincinnati, O.

PILES "Anakesis" gives instant relief, and is an infallible cure for Piles. Price $1 from druggists, or sent prepaid by mail. Samples free. Ad. "ANAKESIS," Makers, Box 2416, New York.

"THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST."
SAW MILLS, ENGINES THRESHERS, Horse Powers,
(For all sections and purposes.) Write for Free Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

WE will send WATERBURY STEM-WINDER on receipt of $3.10 post paid. CHAS. MEYER & Co., R 4, 377 Fulton St., Brooklyn, N. Y.

ASTHMA, Neuralgia Cured. FREE to poor. Add. Dr. Ralston, Cape Girardeau, Mo.

INVALIDS
Suffering with obstinate Nervous, Chronic and Blood Diseases, desiring to learn of the Great Modern Discovery,
DR. SCOTT'S
Coca, Beef and Iron
(With Phosphorus,)
So successfully used after all other methods have failed in the curing of Brain, Heart and Nervous Diseases, should send stamp for The Messenger of Health. Address
CHAS. W. SCOTT, M. D., Kansas City, Mo.
THE GREAT NERVOUS ANTIDOTE,
Coca, Beef and Iron
(With Phosphorus,)
Is sold by all Druggists at $1.00 per Bottle.

$250 A MONTH. Agents Wanted. 90 best selling articles in the world. 1 sample FREE. Address JAY BRONSON, DETROIT, MICH.

COLEMAN BUSINESS COLLEGE, Newark, N. J. Terms $40. Positions for graduates: write for circular.

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.

BOONE COUNTY RECORDER.

VOLUME IX. BURLINGTON, KY., WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 26, 1883. NUMBER 9.

THE NEWSPAPER ENGLISH OF THE FUTURE.

Picked up a paper here to-day,
And, by my conscience, I must say
That they do write in the funniest way.

Some time ago, over my cup,
Went sound asleep—just woke up;
Must have been—well, let me see—
Eighteen hundred sixty-three.
Cows came along—bells would tinkle—
Roused me up—a second old Winkle;
Fell asleep by their say-so,
Nine and thirty years ago.

About that paper? I was struck
All in a heap, sir; just my luck;
"Miss Susan Smiller will elocute
Next Thursday evening." I stood mute:
Never, in all my life, had heard
Of such an outlandish, barbarous word.
Elocute? Elocute? I declare!
I bit my whiskers and pulled my hair;
Looked in my Webster, it wasn't there.
Gave the thing up in wild despair—
Said to myself—"It's mighty quair."

Pretty near choked myself with rage;
Paper set forth on another page—
Wonderful piece of local news—
"People up town are going to enthuse."
And then this thing gets worse and worse—
"To-morrow the citizens anniverse."

"July Fourth, happy to state Folks are all going to declarate."
Think I'd better shut up shop—
"Mr. A. B. is a philanthrop!"
And then, look here, why bless my eyes,
What in the world is "bismarckize?"
Eyes of mine, can you be trusted?
"Coal-oil factory all combusted!"
"Circumtrench your favorite fruits!"
"Mexican Empire revolutes!"
And since the days I went to school,
What sort of a thing's a "perpendicule?"

Reading along, why, bless my fate,
Here's a man who is going to orate.
Why, what on earth's this paper about?
I'll go stark mad if I don't find out.
Must be French, and yet I vow
I never heard of the word till now.
Folding the paper, undecided,
Bless me, some one's homicided,
Oh, my coevals, show to me
The good old English of '63.

Laid down the paper right away,
For, by my conscience, I must say
That they do write in the funniest way.
—N. Y. Graphic.

SCENES IN A MADHOUSE.

A Talk with a Billionaire—A Greeting from the King of Ireland—A Young Man Who Thinks he Can Put a Suspension Bridge Across the Atlantic—The Violent Maniacs.

"Here you will see the people who own the world and everything in it." This is what Dr. Troutman, of Ward's Island, told me as he led me to the first ward of the insane asylum one Wednesday not long ago. Dr. Troutman is the assistant superintendent there, and he was very polite to me. The Doctor put a polished brass key into the big oaken door, and, admitting me into a long corridor with a floor scrubbed until it shone like wax, quietly locked the door again and dropped the key into his pocket. Groups of men, nearly all dressed alike in grayish clothes, were walking about aimlessly. Some were talking to their fingers in an animated fashion; others were having an earnest debate with the blank wall; two were talking to each other simultaneously, but what in the world they said I couldn't make out. An orderly in a blue uniform walked about among them. Two keys dangled below his waistcoat. They were fastened to a stout cord tied around his waist. This was done to prevent the patients from taking the keys from the orderly to use as weapons. What particularly struck me as I surveyed the strange scene was that nearly all the lunatics had high foreheads. It forcibly impressed me with the truth of the saying of a certain anonymous modern philosopher, that it requires the possession of brains to become a lunatic.

"These men," the Doctor said to me, "are the paralytics. There is no hope for them. Their disease is fatal. It is general paralysis. Here you see, for example, one of our billionaires."

The Doctor stopped to shake hands with a little man with a thoughtful look.

"Yes, yes," he cried, in an animated tone, "I'm worth just one hundred thousand millions of dollars, and the fortune is increasing day after day."

"You see," remarked the Doctor, in a kindly tone, "our friend here is laboring under one singular disadvantage. He possesses all this vast wealth, and yet a power holds him back so that he can't get at it. But he is perfectly happy in the consciousness that it is increasing steadily. Every yacht that passes here he will tell you is his, and all the vast shipping of the ocean is operated in his interest."

The lunatic gazed at the Doctor with a look of real gratitude, and shook hands heartily with me as we passed on, stopping now and then to note other interesting examples of mental hallucination.

"How old are you to-day, my friend?" the Doctor asked one patient with a strikingly prominent forehead.

"Now, it's difficult to estimate that," said the patient with a smile. "My methods are different from the ordinary world's. I have been here long, very long. I find by careful computation that I am three times the circumference of the world old."

"But I am the Spirit of God," cried another, running up lest we should miss him. "Don't forget that, please. All the women of the world are my wives. I am going to have more, too. I have lived thousands of years as a spirit. I can see you all, but you can't see me. I have wings and I fly through the air seeking to better the condition of mortals. Yes, yes, we're having a beautiful day, a beautiful day, but not half so beautiful as the Spirit of the Good. I wish you farewell," and he ran off.

A brooding lunatic caught me by the hand as we passed further on by the neat and airy rooms. "How do you do? how do you do?" he cried heartily. "You are my old friend. You see I am King of Prussia now and you are all my subjects."

"Who else are you to-day?" inquired the Doctor, patting the patient on the back encouragingly.

"Ah! yes, the King of Ireland, too."

"And something else?"

"The Rock of Truth."

"Now, what else are you to-day?"

The lunatic appeared annoyed. He frowned and exclaimed: "The King of Prussia, King of Ireland, and the Rock of Truth; for pity's sake, ain't that enough for one day?"

We went to the opposite end of the ward, and the Doctor turned and bid the patients all good day, and they returned his salute courteously, all smiling and full of glee. Then he opened the door, and locked it behind him carefully and quickly.

"They will all be that way until they die," he said, as we were ascending the stone steps leading to another ward. "It is the happiest form of the disease. They gradually lose all control of themselves, so far as the power to talk and walk and think is concerned. Then they die. Life goes out like a flickering candle. The next ward will show you types of what are known as chronic cases. They, too, have hallucinations."

We went through the ward as before. One of the most interesting patients was a young man whose brain had got tangled up hopelessly about the Brooklyn Bridge. He consumes an amazing quantity of foolscap paper and lead pencil daily figuring out his plans for bridging the Atlantic by a suspension bridge. He will sit down and demonstrate its possibility by figures whenever a visitor will listen.

Another patient was an elderly man, who had once been a professor in Columbia College. Since he has been in the asylum he has written a work on art, and is now daily occupied on a text book on the calculus. The ex-professor talked with perfect clearness and sanity upon learned subjects, but he was possessed with the idea that both the Doctor and myself were what he called dogs in the manger, and keeping him from his freedom.

A one-legged patient seemed overjoyed when he caught sight of me. He bowed low, held out his hand, and cried: "Ha! welcome to our home." The next instant the man was hopping up and down the corridor in his one rubber boot, frantically waving a pair of crutches. He seemed in a delirium of delight, but it was not over pleasant to watch his antics. The Doctor waited until he had locked the door behind him and we were once more upon the stairway, and then said:

"That man is shod with rubber because he has an unpleasant habit of kicking people. He killed his father-in law in a fit of frenzy and has been here ever since."

As we continued our journey each succeeding case presented features of more and more violent mania. It was getting decidedly uncomfortable and it needed the Doctor's cool, unconcerned demeanor and the presence of orderlies to keep the spirits from sinking. The lunatics crowded around me with an eagerness and interest that was absolutely oppressive in its strain upon my nerves. I shall never forget the terrible glare of their restless, glittering eyes. One man fastened his eyes upon me the moment I entered and never took them off while I remained in the ward. He followed me everywhere, and I could feel his eyes, almost, even when my back was turned to him. Before we left this ward the Doctor went into a workshop in an alcove of the corridor and displayed rugs, mats and brooms. The workmanship was very good, indeed.

"The lunatics make all these themselves," said he. "It gives them relief to have occupation. The rugs are made from bits of their own old clothes. They use knives to cut the brooms with. We allow them knives to work with."

I breathed easier when the door was locked on the lunatics.

By the time we had been through seven or eight wards I had seen all of the insanity I wanted to see. The remembrance of it will last for years. I begged to be excused from further sightseeing.

"You have not seen the really violent cases," said the Doctor quietly. "In one of the upper wards we have to go along the wall sideways and keep our eyes upon the lunatics, lest they should steal up behind us unawares and strike us. It is a life of constant watchfulness on our part. The patients sometimes secrete the spoons they are given to eat with. Then they grind the handle down to a fine edge when they get into the cells. A spoon becomes a very ugly dagger after this operation. We can never tell when a patient will be seized with a homicidal mania. Three physicians were killed here within a year. The physicians never carry arms. We all carry whistles and blow them when attacked. The orderlies come to our aid at the alarm. No one is ever allowed to use violence toward the patients. Some months ago a patient seized my hand with his teeth and tried to bite it off. I only saved myself from severe injury by pressing his head back and holding my hand against his teeth until the orderly came to my assistance."

When I had got back once more to the office the Doctor said:

"We are receiving more and more patients here every week. As civilization advances it is found that insanity increases. Some of the queerest things the mind of man ever could conceive of get into the twisted brains of these unhappy people. They are truly to be pitied."

I looked out at that moment upon the rather pleasing prospect that forms a picture which the lunatics may watch from the corridor windows. Twenty or thirty men were busy with picks, shovels and wheelbarrows laying a new pathway along the greensward.

"We let them work as you see," continued the Doctor. "These men are all inmates, but they are the quieter patients."

Afterward I saw the types I had left behind all duplicated in the Emigrant Asylum on another part of the Island. In one part female lunatics were confined. To get to the asylum I had to pass the lunatics at work on the walk. I made the journey in time which I felt would do credit to a professional pedestrienne. I didn't stop to view the scenery.

"You were foolish to be frightened," said Mr. Peek, the Superintendent. "By exhibiting fear or uneasiness you give a lunatic an immense advantage over you. If you look them straight in the eye and show by your bearing that you mean to have no nonsense, you can control them. They are really very cowardly."

"Yes," said another official, "in an outbreak of massed men I would rather face the lunatics here than the men over there at the Penitentiary. The lunatics lack concentration of purpose. If one becomes violent and attacks a keeper, it is a hundred to one that the others will fall to and help the keeper." While the keeper was talking I heard that a quiet, inoffensive, melancholic patient had nearly cut his head off with an old razor he found in a heap of rags in a cellar. I waited for no more, but started for the Commissioners' boat. The last view of lunacy I got was the spectacle of a grinning man, who shouted good-by to me over the wide expanse of a huge necktie, on which he had fastened the brass cover of a square inkstand which had an agate set in its center.

As I got in the elevated cars, homeward bound, two white-haired sages with very intellectual faces sat down opposite me, and by a singular coincidence began to discuss the proposition that the white human race is composed simply of the victims of hallucination.

"Why," said one to the other, "there are philosophers who assert that people who think they live are deluded. The idea that there is any such thing as life is simply a wild flight of the imagination."

"Yes," remarked Mr. Diogenes, when he joined me at supper and I told him what the man said, "that philosopher is more or less correct. We are all crazy on some things. I have seen a man who saw three Kings get mad. It is notorious that plumbers' bills drive people crazy. Careful students have also found that women are crazy on the subject of dress. But we'll not discuss that, for the lodge meets to-night and I must go at once."

That is the kind of lunacy I have to put up with seven days in the week. Oh, yes, if it really requires brains to make a man a bona-fide loon, nature has saved Mr. Diogenes all danger of ever becoming the inmate of an asylum.
—"Mrs. Diogenes," in N. Y. Sun.

A Chapter on the Newly Married.

After the honeymoon is over, in which each lives in the seventh heaven of bliss, and is blind to all outward surroundings, there comes a day when the mere matter-of-fact duties begin, and they settle down to the realities of life. The habits, the manners and the tempers are things that neither knows anything about in the other, and that which was long concealed in an engagement for months is quickly revealed in the close relationship of married life. Some little habit that the bachelor or maiden has formed rasps to rawness the nerves of the other, and the determinations on either side to break the other of the fault only chafes and frets both without attaining the object. He thinks that home life should fill their every thought. She thinks a little society and gayety would be preferable. He is tired when he comes home at night, tired of seeing people, tired of talking to them; he has been in a whirl all day. She has moped by herself through the same long hours in the "love of a cottage" that seemed so poetical to talk about, or has spent a dreary time, solitary and alone, through a cheerless winter day in her room at their boarding house, and is only kept from downright rebellion by the thought that when "Charlie" comes home they will go to the theater, or to see "ma." Then there is disappointment on both sides. She thinks he is "real mean" because he does not indorse her plans, and he thinks she is downright silly to wish to leave such a cozy fireside and such a comfortable little home place for any other spot on earth.

She has always found her "I wills" and "I won'ts" the law and the gospel, and ten chances to one Charlie yields to her imperial highness, and is forever after a hen-pecked husband. But if that same Charlie is wise, and can convince his "little wife" without wounding her, he has forever won, not only her heart, but her judgment; and she looks up to and respects him for his firmness.

It is very seldom the case that the first months of married life are the happiest, and it takes a big stock of love and good sense to launch a couple over the breakers into a smooth, open, matrimonial sea. The faults that are discovered, the weaknesses that are shown, the foibles that are betrayed, can only be met with forbearance, if a pair hope for a blissful future; then every after year confirms their oneness of heart, of sympathy and of purpose, and any couple of this kind long married will tell you they are happier after all those years than they were the day they were married.—Detroit Post and Tribune.

Oh, Mamma.

"Mamma," said a pretty young woman of Clifton, "I have been reading an interesting article on the wearing of the hair among Japanese women and its significance."

"What does it say?"

"Well among other things, it says much may be read from the arrangement of a woman's hair—"

"I think it is different in America," interrupted the mother.

"Why, mamma?"

"Ahem, daughter; I should say, judging from the way you looked after Henry went away last night that much may be read in the dis-arrangement of a woman's hair."

"Oh, mamma!"—Merchant Traveler.

—Bob Burdette has invented a capital screen against the widow-opening fiend. It is this: When the party in front of you on a railroad car opens a window on a cold day just twist a newspaper into a semi-funnel shape and hold it at such an angle that you will be protected and the draught be directed against the back of the neck of the window-opener.—N. Y. Graphic.

—The following is vouched for as a word-for-word copy of a notice posted upon a patent gate exhibited at the Louisville (Ky.) Exposition: "Evry, wun, should, see, and, try, this, lovely, gate, it, is, just, what, you, want, dont, you, Morne, five, hundred, solde, in, this, state, every, one, thinks, its, the, best, gate, they, ever, heirn, tell, on, git, wun."—Buffalo Express.

—Jackson County, Florida, boasts among other curiosities a natural well, formed by the sinking of earth near Greenwood a few months ago; a natural bridge of limestone across the Chipola River, about three miles above Marianna, formed by the river sinking for the distance of half a mile, and unexplored caves too numerous to mention. —Detroit Post.

—The average in Texas is one hanging to thirty murders.—Chicago Herald.

Our Young Folks.

THE NEW YEAR.

Little children, dont you hear
Some one knocking at your door?
Don't you know the glad New Year
Comes to you and me once more—

Comes with treasures ever new
Spread out at our waiting feet?
High resolves and purpose true
Round our lives to music sweet.

Ours to choose the thorns or flowers,
If we but mind our duty;
Spend aright the priceless hours,
And life will glow with beauty.

Let us, then, the portals fling,
Heaping high the liberal cheer;
Let us laugh, and shout and sing—
Welcome! Welcome, glad new year!
—Elizabeth A. Davis.

A SERMON FOR THE NEW YEAR.

"Grandpa, when does a man have three hands?"

This question was put by a child to her grandfather, in the midst of the family circle on Christmas evening. They were all merry with innocent fun and chit-chat. Giving and guessing riddles was one of the entertaining pastimes of the hour. The grandfather repeated the child's question slowly, and, after thinking a moment, he said: "I give it up." The bright child in great glee cried out: "A man has three hands when he has a right hand and a left hand and gets a little behind hand."

All hands laughed heartily at grandfather's failure to guess, and he looked so grave over it they laughed the more merrily.

But the "head of the house" did not seem to join very heartily in the amusement, and they rallied him by asking if it was not a fair conundrum.

"Certainly: not only fair, but excellent: the play on the word is very neat, but it has set me thinking of what comes of getting a little behindhand, and some other time, when you want to hear it, I will give you a little sermon or lecture on the subject."

"Now—now—let us have it now!" they all exclaimed; but he knew children too well for that, and, saying that his sermon would keep, he told them to go on with their riddles and stories.

The next Sabbath evening, when they were all in the parlor, the bright little girl, who had puzzled her grandfather with the conundrum, looked up from the book she was reading, and said, with a smile:

"Grandpa, are you not getting a little behindhand with that sermon you promised us?"

"You shall have it now, if you wish;" and all sat still and attentive while the good man began:

"To-morrow will be the first day of a new year, and a good time to take a fresh start. To begin well is half the doing, whatever it is. The habit of being on time, never a minute behindhand, is one of the greatest helps to success in life. While, on the other hand, to get into the way of delaying, keeping others waiting, not being prompt, punctual and ready, is the secret cause of failure in ten thousand cases, many of which I have seen in the course of my life. We notice it in children. What you are in the morning, you will be at noon, and probably at night. 'The child is father of the man,' 'just as the twig is bent,' etc. The family meet in the morning for worship and breakfast; one child is late. She is usually late, the same one. She was behindhand in getting herself ready; the rest waited for her a few moments and then went on without her, and presently she came, disturbing all and making herself disagreeable and them uncomfortable. The boy with such a disposition is late at school, not prepared with his lessons, always just a little behindhand in everything. Perhaps he goes to college or into business, trade or profession, and if he is dependent on his own exertions he makes a failure in everything.

"Forty years ago I knew two smart boys, helpers in a grocery store. They were brothers. They seemed to be made of steel springs, so quick, prompt and decisive were they in filling every order. They were poor boys, apprentices then. But they worked as if the concern was their own, and success depended on their energy, push and faithfulness. Now they live on one of the fashionable avenues of New York in their own large mansions, retired from the grocery business in which they made their fortunes. Holding important trusts, they are useful and respected citizens and Christians. They owe their success solely, under God, to their own promptness in performing every promise, in being always ahead rather than behind time. And there are mechanics and tradesmen with whom I once had dealings and now have deserted, because they would never fulfill an order in season, would not send a thing home to me when they promised and invariably kept me waiting whatever might be my distress to be served. This vice runs in the blood sometimes, and whole families are distinguished by taking it easy, 'time enough yet,' being their motto and rule. They drop behind in the race of life. They would be run over if some one did not pick them up and help them on. Half the world has this work to do, besides doing its own. In the absence of positive crime, this habit of taking it easy causes the poverty and failure of the greater part of the human family. With the same chances, with equal health and wits, in the same field, one man succeeds and another makes a dead failure. And why? Because one took time by the forelock, was ever prompt, and therefore prosperous. The other was always a little behindhand, and by-and-by so far behind as to be counted out as of no account.

"When you are old enough yourselves to meet and move with men and women in business and good works of life, you will soon find some who are late at the appointed time, who come bustling in, ten or fifteen minutes after the hour, saying: 'I had no idea it was so late;' 'My watch never deceived me before;' 'I am very sorry to keep you waiting.' All such managers are poor timber to make boards of. If they had the grace of resignation, they would make room for somebody not always a little behindhand.

"The train starts at nine in the morning, and they reach the station two minutes late, and are left. The boat goes at five, and they arrive in time to be laughed at by the passengers who see them wiping the perspiration from their heated brows. I knew a Georgia preacher who was holding forth in an asylum to a congregation of the Insane. He described a man on a scaffold about to be hung, while in the distance comes a messenger on horseback bringing a pardon. But the hour of fate was just at hand; a minute or two and it would be too late. The preacher drew out the agony, by talking and talking, till one of his crazed hearers cried: 'Can't you hurry up a little? They'll hang that man if you don't.' And when I see people dilly-dallying, wasting precious time in doing nothing, I long to tell them to hurry up, for life, soul, salvation may be lost if they are only a little behindhand. It is so in every relation, calling and duty in life. It is the one principle on which the prize of success in this world depends, and immortal glory beyond. Now is the accepted time.

"There, children dear, you have had the the sermon I promised. The New Year begins to-morrow, and the resolution I want you to make is this, 'With God's good help, for which I will daily pray, I will always be on hand, at the moment, ready for every duty, and will do with my might what I am called to do.'"

While the sermon was in progress, the child who gave the conundrum had quietly climbed into her grandfather's lap. She was one of the irrepressible sort of children, and could hardly wait for him to make an end, when she exclaimed: "Grandpa, it's just the other way, isn't it? If a man never gets a little behindhand, he has three hands or four, and does more work and better than the lazy fellow who is always behindhand."

"That's so," said the old man, and, "if you had said that at the beginning, you might have been spared the sermon."

"Yes," said John, the oldest boy, "but that would have been a great loss to us, and for one I promise not to be a little behindhand, If I can help it, as long as I live."

"Good-night, all," said the grandfather. "God bless you all with a happy New Year!"

"Happy New Year to you, grandpa," they cried in chorus, and went off to bed.—"Irenæus," in N. Y. Observer.

Mary and Dog Carlo.

Little Mary and her great black Newfoundland dog, Carlo, were a very familiar picture to me.

I often stopped to look at them as they ran about the yard. If it is a warm afternoon, they lay asleep under the large evergreen trees. Mary's light curls made a lovely contrast to Carlo's shaggy black sides. His loving gentleness made him seem as good as he was handsome.

Little Mary had a naughty habit of running away from home. Carlo would not leave her for a moment. He seemed to try to get her home again. He ran before her, keeping her from getting off the walks, and trying to coax her to turn about. Sometimes he would succeed, and then I heard his joyful bark when he saw her once more safely in the yard. If he could not get her home, he would never desert her. When she was tired out she laid her curly head against his neck, ready to go wherever he led. Then you may be sure he led her home just as straight as he could go.

One day, when I came out of the gate, Carlo met me, barking and jumping about in a most anxious manner. He ran a little way and then came back to me, as if coaxing me to follow him. I thought him too wise a dog to be mistaken, so I followed him, though a little slowly. He seemed to notice this and to beg me to hasten. In a moment more I saw dear little Mary toddling along the railroad track.

I felt sure that the dog's quick ears must have heard the train, which was coming around the curve. I hurried fast enough, I can tell you. Carlo had never before allowed me to pick her up, even for a moment. Now he seemed fairly wild with joy when I caught her in my arms. He led me home in a perfect dance of delight.

After that I was a privileged friend, for Carlo never forgot that morning. To the day of his death he thanked me in his mute, loving way every time he saw me.—Mrs. Frances Smith, in Our Little Ones.

A Jealous Little Horse.

Mr. N. G. Lynch, Superintendent of Sheepshead Bay Race Course, related an incident that occurred while he was connected with a Massachusetts battery during the rebellion, showing the strong jealousy of a horse. He rode a little horse that was equal to all emergencies and possessed of remarkable strength and staying powers. He had become attached to the animal, and, although frequently requested to change his horse for a larger one that would appear more warlike and more in proportion to his own great size, he invariably refused to part with his faithful an tried companion.

At last his superior officer commanded him to take a charger which he named and retire the lighter horse. The rules of war obliged him to obey the order. When he first appeared with the battery on the new horse the little fellow was picketed near by. Falling back on his haunches he pulled himself loose, galloped alongside the fresh arrival, and wheeling around planted both hind hoofs in his rival's side, just missing his master's legs.—N. Y. Sun.

—An Excise Commissioner in Albany County, N. Y., signed the following document: "Whereas Frank E. McCullock has this day purchased of me five hundred cigars for $12.50, and whereas said McCullock is indebted to the Board of Excise for excise license, now, therefore, I, as one of the Commissioners, in consideration of the purchase from me of the above-mentioned cigars for the cash price above stated do hereby extend the time of payment of said license until such time as said McCullock shall have succeeded in selling said cigars in his store."—Albany Express.

Religious.

A PSALM FOR NEW YEAR'S EVE.

Oh New Year, teach us faith!
The road of life is hard:
When our feet bleed and scourging winds us scathe,
Point thou to Him whose visage was more marred
Than any man's: who saith:
"Make straight paths for your feet," and to the oppres:
"Come ye to me, and I will give you rest."

Yet hang some lamp-like hope
Above this unknown way,
Kind year, to give our spirits freer scope,
And our hands strength to work while it is day.
But if that way must slope
Tombward, oh, bring before our fading eyes
The lamp of life, the hope that never dies.

Comfort our souls with love—
Love of all human kind;
Love special, close, in which like sheltered dove
Each weary heart its own safe nest may find;
And love that turns above
Adoringly; contented to resign
All loves, if need be, for the love Divine.

Friend, come thou like a friend,
And whether bright thy face
Or dim with clouds we can not comprehend,
We'll hold out patient hands, each in his place,
And trust thee to the end.
Knowing thou leadest onwards to those spheres
Where there are neither days, nor months, nor years.
—Dinah Maria Mulock, in Christian Union.

Sunday-School Lessons.

FOURTH QUARTER.—1883.
Dec. 23	—Death of Saul and Jonathan	1 Sam. 31: 1-13
Dec. 30	—Review.
FIRST QUARTER—1884.
Jan. 6	—The Conference at Jerusalem	Acts 15: 1-11
Jan. 13	—Hearing and Doing	James 1: 1-27
Jan. 20	—The Power of the Tongue	James 3: 1-13
Jan. 27	—Living as in God's Sight	James 4: 7-17
Feb. 3	—Paul's Second Missionary Journey	Acts 15: 35-41 & 16: 1-10
Feb. 10	—The Conversion of Lydia	Acts 16: 11-24
Feb. 17	—The Conversion of the Jailor	Acts 16: 25-40
Feb. 24	—Thessalonians and Bereans	Acts 17: 1-14
Mch. 2	—Paul at Athens	Acts 17: 22-34
Mch. 9	—Paul at Corinth	Acts 18: 1-17
Mch. 16	—The Coming of the Lord	1 Thess. 4: 13-18, & 5: 1-8
Mch. 23	—Christian Diligence	2 Thess. 3: 1-18
Mch. 30	—Review; or Missionary, Temperance, or other lesson selected by the school.

RELIGIOUS DOUBT AND MODERN POETRY.

The fatal narrowing tendency which attends the intellectual processes of skepticism is nowhere seen in a more startling light than in its action upon poetry. The freshness and spontaneity of song is lost, the lyrical cry becomes a lyrical wail, simplicity and fullness of emotion become unknown, and the imagination, having lost courage for anything like colossal effort, is frittered away, and wastes itself in spasmodic and often morbid creation. There is no clearer lesson taught us by the history of human thought and action than that the greatest deed and utterance are impossible without the serenity and courage which spring from living faith with God. The great poet must, like Milton, ever live in his great taskmaster's eye, and then he will not fail to make his own life a true poem. There is no compensation for the loss of faith in poetry. Doubt may sometimes lift its cup full of the wine of misery to the poet's lips, and he shall drink and find a certain bitter exhilaration in the draught which fires the mind with brief poetic fervor, but that throb of short and daring effort is all too dearly purchased. The world asks that its poets shall be prophets; that its singers shall be believers; that their inspiration shall be drawn from above, else it were better that their gift died in them, and their song were never sung.

The keystone in the arch of life is God. If once the poet pluck that down, what wonder is it that all his life falls straightway into illimitable despair and ruin? What wonder that the stars fade one by one above him, until at last he sits in cities of dreadful night, and bows his head, and only asks to die? In poetry, as in philosophy, it is needful to insist upon the abiding power and presence of the religious instinct. All outrage done to that is outrage upon that which is noblest in humanity. It brings its revenges with it, and the Nemesis which follows skepticism in poetry is confusion and paralysis of power and effort. Nor is it possible, as Tennyson has shown us, for any man to be even indifferent to the religious instinct, and yet be a great poet. It is not given to the mightiest genius to > Sit as god, holding no form of creed,

> But contemplating all.

In attempting to shun the most solemn problems of the universe, and work out for himself a 'perfect intellectual culture, such a poet simply builds a palace of art, whose splendid corridors ring at last with his despair, and all whose glory he is glad to barter for a cottage in the vale where he may mourn and pray. The religious instincts of the race have always been the secret springs which have fed the great poetry of the world; and the iconoclast who would propose to himself the daring programme of eliminating faith in God from the poetic literature of England would speedily discover that his proposition meant the destruction of everything which the common consent of four centuries has voted best worth preserving.

From Robert Browning we may take one line which should be the first article in any poet's creed: "Earth changes, but thy soul and God stand sure."

From the verse of him "who uttered nothing base" we may quote what seems to us as beautiful a conception of the poet as poet ever uttered, and one which our generation were wise in laying to heart. The true poet is

> One in whom persuasion and belief
> Have ripened into faith, and faith become
> A passionate intuition.

—Rev. W. J. Dawson.

Two Scenes.

An extraordinary scene presented itself one night last October, in the city of New York, a scene which would be possible in no other country than our own. It was the opening of a magnificent place of amusement, built expressly for the accommodation of the millionaires of that city. The stockholders were, almost without exception, men of enormous fortune, and men who had made their fortunes by their own efforts. On the opening night they filled the boxes. The dresses of the women were of imperial splendor. The diamonds surpassed those in the regalia of many European dynasties. Over six hundred millions of dollars, it was estimated, were represented in one tier. None of the men who had amassed these fabulous riches had any ancestry to boast of, in fact, their pride was that they had carved out their own fortunes by shrewdness and energy. It was a superb success. In no other country are the chances for such unlimited triumph open to shrewdness and energy; and in no other country would the possession of huge wealth be able to constitute a distinctive society apart from any considerations of education or birth.

On the same night, in the neighboring city of Philadelphia, was assembled a great Council of ministers of one of the Christian Churches. There were men of every age; white men, negroes and Indians. They came from all quarters of this country, from Alaska to Mexico; from China, Japan and Africa. Many of them with the refined faces of scholars and gentlemen bore marks of extreme poverty. They were ill-fed and scantily clothed. These were the missionaries who traversed the wilder parts of the country, and supported their wives and children on less than the wages of a day-laborer. Their yearly income would not have bought one of the fans which finished the dress of the money-queens in the New York Opera-house.

To this council there entered a man bent with age, from one of the Southern States, who for more than half a century had gone up and down its waste places, in want and sickness, preaching the Gospel of Christ to the poor. He was known as one of those holy and humble men of heart, for whom we are bidden to thank God that they are among us. The whole assembly rose and stood while he bade them farewell.

"I shall never be present at another general convention," he said. "I was one of the Council of 1823. Of all the members of that Council, clergymen, bishops and laymen, there is but one man living, and I am he. The others are all dead. Since that Council met we have carried the message of Christ into every hill and valley of the Union. We have had hardships to bear, poverty, want and discouragement. But, brethren, ours has been a great success—a great success! Farewell."

Then while the majestic music of the opera was sounding for the successful speculators, these other men, red, black and white, sang a hymn together; rejoicing that they could yet go on with their lives of work and deprivation and self-sacrifice, and achieve the great success of lifting human souls nearer to God.—Youth's Companion.

The Past and the Future.

How much easier it is for a thoughtful mind to brood over the past year than to plan earnestly and hopefully for the new year. The old year we know all about; it is a positive reality in our experience; but the new year is yet an untried experiment, at the best but a shadowy possibility. It is hard to have such a living interest in that which may be, as in that which is, or which has been. And here is one of our hindrances and dangers on the borderline between the past and the future:

"We know not the future; the past we have felt—
Its cherished enjoyments the bosom can melt:
Its raptures anew o'er our pulses may roll,
When thoughts of the morrow fall cold on the soul."

This is the way it seems to us; yet as a practical matter the future is a great deal more real than the past. In fact, that which is before us is alone the possible to us. The past can not be ours. The future may be. Bounding forward to that which is still attainable, in the providence of God, is therefore wiser and better than brooding over that which is forever beyond our grasp. And to the child of God the best things are always before him, not behind. It is in recognition of this truth that every disciple can say, or ought to be able to say, as a new year opens before him: "Forgetting the things which are behind, and stretching forward to the things which are before, I press on toward the prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."—S. S. Times.

Wise Sayings.

—If we can not live so as to be happy, let us at least live so as to deserve happiness.—Fichte.

—In the dark cloud of a great sorrow the beautiful bow of God's promise is often seen if we look up.

—The power of man's virtue should not be measured by his special efforts, but by his ordinary doings.—Pascal.

—Death makes a beautiful appeal to charity. When we look upon the dead form, so composed and still, the kindness and the love that are in us all come forth.—Chapin.

—There is a power in real godliness which commands the reverence of those who hate us, and this the proudest sinners often so far feel as to be unable to carry on their violent opposition against it.—Robinson.

—What are your boys and girls reading? What are they going to read this winter? What are you doing in the way of directing their reading? To answer these questions as intelligent and Christian parents ought to calls for much thought—earnest and practical thought. It is very unwise for parents not to know what books their children read, and also not to direct them in their reading. And it is peculiarly unfortunate for bright boys and girls, surrounded by so many good books, to get a taste for trash. By a little forethought and wise planning, fathers and mothers may select such books as will both interest and instruct their boys and girls, and in due time lead to a love for solid reading. And here is a province in which the teacher may accomplish incalculable good. Give the children a talk, occasionally, on reading. Tell them of books most worth reading. Make up a list in history, biography, poetry, general literature, etc., and offer premiums for reading so many volumes along the indicated lines, or for the best essay on a given volume.—Golden Rule.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL,
Proprietors.

BURLINGTON, KY. DEC. 26. 1883.

ADVERTISING RATES.

1 Column	1 year	$80
½ "	1 "	40
¼ "	1 "	20
1 "	½ "	20
½ "	½ "	10
¼ "	¼ "	6

For announcing candidates, $5. Obituary poetry, 5 cents per line. Obituary notices, 20 lines free; over that number (except the announcement of the death) 3 cents per line.

Tributes of respect from lodges, &c., $1 50

RATES OF SUBSCRIPTION.

One year	$1 50
Six months	75
Three months	40

THE cause of education seems to be growing in every section of the State.

NEXT Monday the Legislature meets. Frankfort will then be in its glory.

THE Louisiana Democrats have nominated Governor McHenry for a reelection.

A CONGRESSMAN'S sulking because he did not get the Chairmanship of a committee is very childish, and poor evidence of a statesman.

THE Yeoman will publish a daily edition during the session of the Legislature, giving, in full, the daily proceedings of the Legislature.

NEXT Friday night a caucus will be held in Frankfort at which it will be determined who the Legislature will honor with the next seat in the United States Senate.

THE Louisville Commercial, as well as many others, thinks that the authorities at the Anchorage Asylum have been outrageously neglectful of duty in the Tom Buford matter.

THE Lexington Asylum muddle continues to muddle, and nothing short of an adjustment by the Legislature will send peace and harmony across the threshhold of that institution.

HOGGISH—Select butchers and heavy shippers, $5 70@5 90; fair to good packers, at $5 40@5 75; fair to good light, $4 90@5 45; common, $4 15@4 85; culls, $3 00@4 00: stock hogs, $4 25@5 25.

THERE are about a dozen ladies who are candidates for State Librarian. Librarian is the only State office to which ladies are elligible, but it illustrates that the females also have a slight hankering after office.

EVERY few days we receive a circular from some firm announcing a press that just suits the country newspaper. The country newspaper fraternity is not hard to please with a press, but the prices are what stumps them.

A CONVICT who died in the Jeffersonville, Indiana, penitentiary confessed the murder of Richard Nagel in Louisville two years ago, and for which a Robert O'Neol was convicted and sent to the Kentucky penitentiary for life.

OWING to the large stocks of coal and the low prices at all points between Pittsburg and New Orleans, the operators have decided upon a general suspension of work in the river pits, and before January 1 over two thousand men will be thrown out of employment.

LOUISVILLE is sorely puzzled over a very large decrease in the amount of its taxable property. The city has been enjoying a very prosperous period, and why its taxable property should not increase correspondingly is what the Mayor and other officers do not understand.

THE Court of Appeals affirmed the judgment for $12,775 against the Louisville and Nashville railroad and in favor of Ben Turner, of Edmonson county, who was knocked down and run over by one of their cars while crossing a street, and from which he lost his left arm. A very handsome Christmas gift.

IT is repeatedly suggested that our Legislature meets too often, but when a proposition is made to reconstruct the State Constitution, whereby all such defects in our system of State government may be remedied, the proposition is repeatedly defeated, and the State continues to be subjected to many inconveniencies.

THE JUDGES of the Court of Appeals are getting nervous since Col Thomas Buford made his way across the Ohio river, last week, and appeared in Henry county. The Colonel is in deep distress financially, and still charges that the Court of Appeals robbed him. Mr. Buford will please take notice that the RECORDER never spoke disrespectfully of him.

MR CARLISLE has declined to allow his name used any further in connection with the Senatorship. This leaves the field in a shape that Judge William Lindsay should by all means be called to that high position. He towers far above any of the other aspirants for that office in every essential, necessary to properly fill such an honorable and responsible position.

FEW people reflect upon the fact that the Indians are the richest landholders in the United States. We have 237,066 of them, exclusive of the Alaska Indians, holding 151,307,768 acres of land. Some of the tribes own 3,000 acres per Indian. The average is about one square mile to each Indian, while a white man is not allowed to pre-empt more than 160 acres of the public land.—Ex.

The press all over the State is going for the rubicund hero of Duluth in a style that will either force him to overhaul affairs at Anchorage or make him appear inconsistent in his management of our Asylums. Here he turned out a competent gentleman who did not support him, and put in a competent gentleman who did support him in his Gubernatorial canvass. At Anchorage he is leaving in a man who supported him in his candidacy, but who has shown his fitness for the position by alleged cruelties and letting Tom Buford escape.—Lexington Transcript.

THE Court of Appeals has decided the important question of the constitutionality of the present State Railroad Commission and the validity of the tax which the railroads refuse to pay. The Cincinnati, New Orleans and Texas Pacific, the Cheaspeake, Ohio and Southwestern railway companies paid a part of the taxes due by them for 1882, but left a part unpaid, that a test suit might be maintained. The roads contended that the Legislature could not confer absolute power on the Board of Commissioners, and thereby leave them no appeal in the matter of assessments. The Franklin Circuit Court decided in favor of the Commonwealth, and that judgment was affirmed, Judge Pryor delivering the opinion.

THERE has been much complaint in the past, of our Legislatures, on account of protracted sessions and the disposition of such a small amount of work of general interest. The principal cause of the prolonged sessions of our law-makers is the numerous local bills that are presented immediately after the meeting of the Legislature. Nearly every member goes to Frankfort with a grip-sack full of local bills he wants passed, and the result is that general legislation is seriously retarded and the sessions prolonged. Long sessions of the Legislature can not be avoided as long as so much time is devoted to the consideration of local bills, such as those incorporating turnpike road companies, and others of about the same degree of importance. But this rush of business will continue in its present channel till the State constitution is modified so as to open another avenue leading to a more proper and less expensive body to which these unimportant local bills can be referred for consideration and disposition.

Tobacco Items.

Joseph McClelland and Col. Clayton, of Bracken, offered Horace Miller 17c for his entire crop.

Tol. Dickerson, of Grant county, has bought nearly a half million pounds of tobacco.

In Owen county, J. V. Smith bought of W. Dunn his crop of 8,000 pounds, at 15 cents.

The Midway Clipper says Thomas Parish raised 35,000 pounds of tobacco on 30 acres, and sold it at an average of 13 cents per pound.

The Outlook says James C. Hamilton, of Bath county, is preparing to build 20 tobacco barns, and will raise 200 acres of tobacco next year.

C. B. Lindsay, of Carroll county, sold in Cincinnati, four hogsheads, the remnant of his crop of 1882, at about $17 per 100 pounds all round.

Moore & Dickens, of Franklin county, sold in Louisville, five hogsheads of new Burley at $23, and $17 25, $17 75 and $25, an average of $21 25—the highest price reached this season.

Lucas & Foeman, purchased two crops of tobacco of Alvin Mothershead one crop of 2,500 lbs. at 15c, with 200 lbs. off, for which he received 5c; the other crop, 8,000 lbs. at 14c with 2,500 off, at 5c. Tilford & Smith refused 16½c for their crop. John Maston sold 6,000 lbs. to the Owenton dry-house at 16½c—Owen News.

FOURTEEN negroes will occupy seats in the Mississippi Legislature.

STATE NEWS.

—Mrs. Johanna Lipp, aged one hundred years and five days, is dead at Maysville.

Tobacco is selling for fifteen cents all round in the vicinity of Minerva, Mason county.

—The small-pox is spreading at Minorsville, a village in this county. There are seven cases in the family of Mr. Bramlette, and Jos. Gardner has it.—Georgetown Times.

—Bourbon News: Last week we drew on a citizen of Lexington through the banks, and the draft was returned with the following: "Can't find him; the grand jury is in session."

—The frost has decided the vexed question of whether the stones bein put into the new court-house at Lexington would stand freezing or not. Several long stones ready to go into the building bursted into pieces from the effects of the frost.

SOUTHERN NEWS.

[Courier-Journal.]

—Florida farmers are importing German labor.

—The Prohibition movement in Little Rock has collapsed.

—The City Council of Nashville have voted water free to the poor.

—Chas. Harris, of Belleville, Tex., has invented a machine for washing dishes.

—Mr. Ball, a wealthy citizen of Galveston, intends building a $50,000 school-house for the city.

—The Hessian flies are reported in great numbers along the Monroe and Barren county lines.

—Fifty thousand acres of fraudulently entered land has been discovered in Usaldo county, Texas.

—Within four weeks this fall Arkansas, Florida, Louisiana and Texas doubled their railroad mileage.

—Over thirty different specimens of oil have been secured in the "finds" in Overton county, Tenn.

—A log cut in Suwannee county, Fla., required sixteen mules to haul it, and it made fifty thousand feet of lumber.

—The last spike has been driven and trains are running through from Owensboro to Adairville on the Owensboro and Nashville railroad.

—Fishing along the Gulf coast is at a standstill. Cedar Key fish dealers are salting their fish because there is no market for them at present.

—Gwinnette county, Ga., has a magistrate who grants divorces to parties who will swear they can't live peaceably together, and pay the cost of the proceedings.

—There is a one-legged Confederate soldier in Georgia, who has never drawn any pension, because all of his command were killed and there is no one to certify to his having been in the army.

—Forrest Radford, a colored mail carrier on the Hopkinsville and Cadiz route, has been arrested, charged with robbing the mail, and $140 of the $200 in money orders and registered packages has been recovered, and Radford confesses.

—The Macon Telegraph says immense quantities of sugar will some day be produced in Florida and Southern Georgia, and that it ought not to be long before the people in those sections awake to a full realization of the capabilities of their soil in that direction.

Subscribe for the RECORDER.

COMMISSIONER'S SALE.

Boone Circuit Court, Ky.

Virginia M. Huey, &c. Plfts. } Notice vs } of sale in
Laura Huey, Deft. } Equity.

By virtue of a judgment and order of sale of the Boone Circuit Court, rendered at the Oct., term thereof, 1883, in the above cause, the undersigned will, on Monday, the 7th day of Jan. 1884, at 1 o'clock p. m., or thereabout (being County Court day) proceed to offer for sale at public auction, to the highest bidder, on a credit of 6,12 & 18 mos. at the Court-house door in the town of Burlington, the property mentioned in the judgment to wit: 101 acres of land being the farm upon which William S. Huey resided at the time of his death and now occupied by John Humphrey and bounded by the lands of T. P. Marshall, the Bradfords, J. T. Ryle, Geo. Smith, &c.

The purchaser will be required to give bonds with approved security, for the payment of the purchase money, to have the force and effect of a judgment, bearing legal interest from the day of sale, according to law. Bidders will be prepared to comply promptly with these terms.

Bonds payable to the undersigned.

W L RIDDELL, M C B C C.

For Sale.

A dwelling with 6 rooms, and 15 acres of land at Rabbit Hash, Ky. On this land is a good orchard, barn and other conveniences. Also a never failing well. Address B. F. BELL, Rabbit Hash, Ky.

For Sale.

Pure Jersey Cattle, Bronze Turkeys and Plymouth Rock Chickens; also eggs in season. HENRY TUCKER, Union, Ky.

PATENTS

MUNN & CO., of the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, continue to act as Solicitors for Patents, Caveats, Trade Marks, Copyrights, for the United States, Canada, England, France, Germany, etc. Hand Book about Patents sent free. Thirty-seven years' experience. Patents obtained through MUNN & CO. are noticed in the SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN, the largest, best, and most widely circulated scientific paper. $3.20 a year. Weekly. Splendid engravings and interesting information. Specimen copy of the Scientific American sent free. Address MUNN & CO., SCIENTIFIC AMERICAN Office, 261 Broadway, New York.

For Sale.

Fine tobacco land. I have for sale, cheap from One hundred to Six hundred acres of No. 1 tobacco land, lying on the Beaver Lick and Union T. P. road in Boone county, Ky. For particulars call on L. H. Dills at Burlington, Ky., or the undersigned on the prmises or address me at Union P O.
7-4t F. DICKEY.

Out on the Prairie.

Concerning Something Better than Mrs. Toodles' Wheelbarrow—And the Reasons Why.

When a certain Commissary-General complained to the Duke of Wellington that Sir Thomas Picton had declared he would hang him if the rations for that General's division were not forthcoming at a certain hour, the Duke replied:

"Ah! did he indeed go so far as that? Did he say he'd hang you?"

"Yes my lord."

"Well, General Picton is just the man to keep his word. You'd better get the rations up in time."

But to get rations or anything else up in time one must know when to lay his hand on them. As Mr. Toodles said about the coffin which he had bought at auction and brought home to his wife: "If anything should happen, my dear, it will be so handy to have in the house."

Being in the great wholesale drughouse of William Hart, in Elgin, Ill., one day, Mr. G. H. Sherman, the photographer of that place, remarked, concerning PARKER'S TONIC "I have used it in my family for two years, and I unhesitatingly pronounce it the best medicine we have ever used. It is handy to have in the house, and we are never without it."

Culled from the mass of reasons why Mr. Sherman was right, be good enough to consider these: First, PARKER'S TONIC, is delicious to the palate; second, it invigorates, but does not promote a love for strong drink; third, it cures Coughs and Colds by inciting the torpid organs into healthy action, and opening all the pores of the skin; fourth, it purifies the Blood, thus curing Kidney Liver and Lung diseases and Rheumatism; fifth—

But take it into your house, and it will speak for itself. Once used, will change it for nothing else. Physicians commend it. Price, 50 cents and $1. HISCOX & CO., Chemist, New York.

Posted.

Notice is hereby given that our lands in Boone county, are posted and all persons are warned not trespass thereon.

MRS. E. J. PIATT, JOHN MCCONNEL.
Miss Julia S. Dinsmore.

For Rent.

A good hotel, paying bar attached. Also a good stable. This is the J. P. Snyder property in Florence. Call on Mrs. S. Snyder, Florence, Ky. 7-4t

Administrator's Notice,

Those having claims against the estate of W. S. Ryle, dec'd., are hereby notified to present the same, proven as by law required, to the undersigned before December 25th, '83. B. H. STEPHENS, Adm'r.

For Sale.

House and lot in Hebron, Boone county, Kentucky. This is a very comfortable house located near the center of the town. The lot contains one acre. For further particulars call on or address LYSTRA AYLOR, Hebron, Ky.

Notice.

Notice is hereby given that the undersigned has been duly appointed and qualified as assignee in trust for the benefit of the creditors of Wm. N. Aylor. All persons indebted to said assignor will make immediate payment, and creditors will present their claims duly proven according to law to the undersigned at No. 7 Pike Str., Covington, Ky. R. L. CRIGLER,
6-4t Assignee.

For Rent.

35 acres of land adjoining Lewisburg, Kenton county, Ky., 10 acres of which is fine tobacco land. On this land is a pear orchard of about 400 trees, select varieties. This land is all well suited for gardening or other tillage, and has on it a good house and other suitable conveniencies for a family residence—Enquire of RUFUS LIGHT, on the premises.

BACKLOG SKETCHES, our large 16 page paper, filled with charming serials, stories, choice miscellany etc., is sent 3 mos. on trial for 25 cents; and we send EVERY subscriber FREE our new HOLIDAY PACKAGE, consisting of 10 pieces popular music 10 interesting games, 1 pack of age and fortune-telling cards; 1 pack "Hold to Light" cards, 1 pack fun & flirtation cards, 1 set chromo cards, 13 new tricks in magic 5 new puzzles, game of fortune, the mystic oracle, 25 ways to get rich, Heller's wonderful delusion cards, etc., etc. Endless amusement! Agents wanted. Sample paper for stamp. BACKLOG PUBLISHING CO., Augusta, Me.

Sheriff's Sale for Taxes.

By virtue of taxes due the Sheriff of Boone county, Ky, for the years 1882-83 I, or one of my deputies, will, on

Monday, January 7th, 1884,

between the hours of 12 m, and 2 o'clock p. m, at the Court-house door in Boone county, Ky, expose to Public Sale, to the highest bidder, for cash in hand, the following property, (or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy the amount of taxes due aforesaid and cost,) to wit:

A tract of land on Gunpowder Creek, containing about 30 acres, more or less, bounded by the dower of Mrs. J A Kendall, E A Hughes, Gunpowder Creek, &c. Levied on as the property of Church Deer, decd. Am't to be made by sale $12 53.

J R CLUTTERBUCK, S B C
By W T GERMAN, D S

Sheriff's Sale for Taxes.

By virtue of taxes due the Sheriff of Boone county, Ky. for the years 1882-83 I, or one of my deputies, will, on

Monday, January 7th, 1884,

between the hours of 12 m, and 2 o'clock p. m, at the Court-house door in Boone county, Ky, expose to Public Sale, to the highest bidder, for cash in hand, the following property, (or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy the amount of taxes due aforesaid and cost,) to wit:

Six town lots in Burlington, Boone county, Ky, and numbered 111, 112, 115, 116, 119 and 120—see plat of Burlington for further description. Levied on as the property of Hamilton heirs. Amount to be made by sale $4 21. J R CLUTTERBUCK, S B C
By W T GERMAN, D S

Sheriff's Sale for Taxes.

By virtue of taxes due the Sheriff of Boone county, Ky. for the years 1882-83 I, or one of my deputies, will, on

Monday, January 7th, 1884,

between the hours of 12 m., and 2 o'clock p. m, at the Court-house door in Boone county, Ky, expose to Public Sale, to the highest bidder, for cash in hand, the following property, (or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisty the amount of taxes due aforesaid and cost.) to wit:

A tract of land in Boone county, Ky, containing 195 acres, bounded by the Ohio river and the lands of Morgan Rice, Willis Heirs, &c. Levied on as the property of C. D. Piatt. Am't to be made by sale $61 48.

J. R. CLUTTERBUCK, S B C
By W. T GERMAN, D S

Sheriff's Sale for Taxes.

By virtue of taxes due the Sheriff of Boone county, Ky. for the years 1882-83, I or one of my deputies, will, on

Monday, January 7th, 1883,

between the hours of 12 o'clock M., and 2 o'clock p. m, at the Court-house door in Boone county, Ky., expose to Public Sale, to the highest bidder, for cash in hand, the following property, (or so much thereof as may be necessary to satisfy the amount of taxes due, aforesaid and cost, to wit:

A tract of land on Woolper Creek in Boone county, Ky., containing 20 acres, bounded by the lands of Pat Finn, G. C. Voshell, &c. Levied on as the property of Sam'l. Hensley. Amount to be made by sale $12 16. J. R. CLUTTERBUCK, S.B.C.
Dec. 17 '83. By W. T. GERMAN, D. S.

ROBERT B. REED
Attorney at Law.
OFFICE AT - - - UNION, KY.

F. RIDDELL,
ATTORNEY at LAW
BURLINGTON, KY.
Office over Dudley Rouse's Store.

ALBERT W. GAINES,
Attorney and Counselor at Law,
LAWRENCEBURG, - - - IND.
Will practice in the courts of Boone county, Ky., Cincinnati, Ohio, Dearborn and adjoining counties, Ind. dec-6-82

W. E. VEST,
COUNTY SURVEYOR
WALTON, KY.
Is prepared to do all kinds of surveying. All orders sent him through the mail to Walton, will receive his prompt attention.

E. E. IGOE,
Resident Dentist,
Rising Sun, Ind.
WITH
J. P. Ulrey.
Monday and Tuesday at Rising Sun, Ind.

J. J. Landram. G. G. Hughes.
LANDRAM & HUGHES.
ATTORNEYS at LAW.
Will practice in the Boone Circuit Court and the Court of Appeals. Prompt attention given to Collections, on application t G. G. Hughes, Burlington, Ky.

DR. A. B. HARRY AN
RESIDENT DENTIST.
Aurora, Indiana.
(Office Over Postoffice)
With J P. ULREY.
Dr. ULREY'S days, Wednesday and Saturday. Office open at all hours. 8-1y

L. C. NORMAN. [illegible]
NORMAN and STEPHENS,
ATTORNEYS at LAW,
UNION, BOONE CO., KY.
Will practice in the Courts of Boone Kenton and adjoining counties. Collections solicited and made throughout the State. 24 tf 81

S. W. TOLIN,
ATTORNEY AT LAW
BURLINGTON, - - - Y
Office in Court-house on 2d floor.
Will manage litigation in any of the Courts of the State, contracts and other legal instruments drawn up at reasonable rates. Aprompt an studious attention given to business intrusted to my care. A trial solicited. 12-1y

TWO Farms for Sale.

One contains 36 acres, 9 acres of which is good creek bottom and 27 acres, hill land. This land is under good fence, well set in grass, has lasting water for stock, fine lot of timber, much of which is locust. It is part of the W. B. Ryle homestead, lies on Gunpowder Creek and joins Leander Setters.

The other farm contains 126½ acres, is 2½ miles southwest of Burlington, has all necessary buildings in good repair, fencing good, has a good well and cistern, besides never failing water for stock, a nice young orchard, and some hedge fence. This land is all in grass except 25 acres which were cultivated in corn this year. For terms apply on the last named premises to 6-2m W. S. WHITE.

PATENTS.

For new inventions and novel designs obtained in the United States, Canada and Europe. Trade Marks and Copyright—Labels secured for Merchants and Manufacturers who wish protection against imitators of their goods, packages or articles of manufacture. We are located opposite the United States Patent Office, have quick access to its records, and can give prompt and reliable answers to inquiries. Of our firm one has had thirteen years' practice in the highest courts, another several years as an Assistant Examiner in the United States Patent Office and many years experience as solicitor of American and Foreign Patents. Fee reasonable and full satisfaction or no fee. Best reference given. Our little book "on patents" sent free on receipt of one cent stamp.
W. A. COULTER & CO., Solicitors of Patents,
23 St. Cloud Building, Washington, D. C.

THE LOUISVILLE WEEKLY
COMMERCIAL.
LIVE, PROGRESSIVE, POPULAR.
The Cheapest and Best Family Newspaper in the South,
ONLY $1.00 A YEAR.
All the News—Agricultural Department—Children's Corner—Complete Market Reports—Sparkling Miscellaney—Thrilling Stories.
INTERESTING, INSTRUCTIVE, USEFUL,
To Old and Young alike. Subscribe for it.

A SPLENDID OFFER
THE

ONLY $3.50.
The New Waterbury Watch, Stem Winding, Nickle Case, handsome, durable and warranted to keep perfect time. RETAIL PRICE THE WORLD OVER, $3.50.
THE COMMERCIAL FOR ONE YEAR AND THIS WATCH FOR ONLY $3.50, THE TWO FOR THE PRICE OF ONE.
The Waterbury Watch Company has a National reputation for making the best cheap Watch in the World, not one is sent from the Factory without having been run for six days and carefully regulated. It runs 27 hours with one winding, and will last for years.
This is the Farmer's Watch, the Miner's Watch, the Laborer's Watch, the Boy's Watch, the School Girl's Watch—in fact, everybody's Watch.
Upon receipt of $3.50 by registered letter or money order, the Watch will be forwarded by mail or express with charges prepaid, and the COMMERCIAL will be mailed regularly for one year, postage free.
ANOTHER OFFER.
For a Club of twelve Subscribers to the WEEKLY COMMERCIAL and $12.00, the getter up of the Club will be presented, all charges prepaid, with one of the Watches, which will cost $3.50 anywhere and everywhere. Send for sample copies and go to work.
Address
THE COMMERCIAL,
LOUISVILLE, KY.

A. L. Brown,

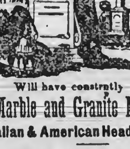
THE HATTER,
Cor. Pike and Washington Streets
COVINGTON, - - KY.
Has always on hand a large variety of Men's, Boys' and Children's Hats, and prices GUARANTEED to be as low as the lowest.
Gents' Furnishing Goods a Specialty.

H. KASSEN & CO.
(Formerly of Covington.)
—Dealers in Fine—
BOOTS AND SHOES,
106 W. 5th Street,
CINCINNATI, - - - - OHIO.
Custom made work a Specialty. A perfect Fit Guaranteed. dec. 20-1y

BOONE HOUSE,
BURLINGTON, KY.
C. L. CRISLER, Prop'r.
No pains spared in the accommodation of guests. The table supplied with the delicacies of the season. Stock well cared for. dec. 20-1y

W. J. RICE,
CARPENTER & BUILDER,
BULLITSVILLE, KY.
Is prepared Raise or Move EITHER LOG or FRAME BUILDINGS On Short Notice,
And at the Lowest Possible Figures.
33-tf Your orders respectfully solicited

LUMBER.
Goe. M. Bedinger & Co.,
Erlanger, - - Ky.
We keep constantly on hand all kinds of Lumber, Laths and Shingles. Also Builder's supplies of all kinds.
—Come and see Us.—
may 9-tf



AURORA MARBLE AND GRANITE WORKS,
Aurora, Ind
Will have constantly on hand
Marble and Granite Monuments,
Italian & American Headstones, &c.
I am ready to do all kinds of Stone Work on short notice and at low prices Hoping to receive the patronage of Boone County, I am respectfully,
F. W. KASSEBAUM.

INSURE AT HOME
The Farmers' Mutual Fire
INSURANCE COMPANY
Of Boone County
Is now completely organized and receiving applications for insurance.
Its Rates are Lower
Than those of any other Company, and it gives the farmers of Boone County
HITHERTO UNKNOWN ADVANTAGE
In keeping their property insured.
EVERY FARMER IN THE COUNTY
[illegible]
should take a policy at once.
N. S. WALTON, President, Petersburg, Ky. | J. H. WALTON, Secretary, Constance, Ky.
R. RANDALL, Treasury.
DIRECTORS.
LEGRAN GAINES, Jeff Utz,
JNO. M. MOODY.

WANTED BOOK Canvassers.
MALE and FEMALE
To engage in the sale of our new and important works of standard character, large profits and immense selling qualities. We offer a permanent and lucrative business. Address The CINCINNATI PUBLISHING CO., 174 W. Fourth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

Free! Cards and Chromos.
We will send free by mail a sample set of our large German, French, and American Chromo Cards, on tinted and gold grounds, with a price list of over 200 different designs, on receipt of a stamp for postage. We will also send free by mail as samples, ten of our beautiful Chromos, on receipt of ten cents to pay for packing and postage; also enclose a confidential price list of our large oil chromos. Agents wanted. Address F. GLEASON & Co., 46 Summer Street, Boston, Mass.

WRIGHT'S INDIAN VEGETABLE PILLS
FOR THE LIVER
And all Billous Complaints
Safe to take, being purely vegetable; no griping. Price 25 cts. All Druggists.

INCORPORATED UNDER THE LAWS OF MISSOURI.
CENTRAL MEDICAL & SURGICAL INSTITUTE
OF ST. LOUIS, MO.
SUCCESSORS TO Dr. BUTTS' DISPENSARY. OFFICE & ROOMS, No. 920 LOCUST ST.
CHAS. L. LARABOR, M.D., Pres't & Physician in Charge.
NELSON CHESMAN, Treas. & Business Manager.
This Institute has ample facilities and an experienced Faculty. While it succeeds to a large business, which has been established for years, it will aim to extend its medical and surgical practice, giving skillful and scientific treatment to
CHRONIC DISEASES of the Head, Spine, Lungs and Air Passages, Heart, Liver, Stomach and Bowels, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Consumption and Asthma.
BLOOD IMPURITIES, Inherited or caused by Impure association, Scrofula, Fever Sores, Ulcers, etc.
DEFORMITIES of the Limbs, Spinal Curvature, Wry-Neck, Diseases of the Joints, Piles, Fistula, Rupture, etc.
WEAKNESS and wasting diseases in old and young men, also all diseases of the genito-urinary organs.
FEMALE irregularities and weaknesses, causing pain in the back or side, etc.
Personal interviews with patients are always preferred. Those unable to visit the Institute will be furnished with blank lists of questions that will aid them in making a full statement of their cases and if not requiring a surgical operation they can be successfully treated by correspondence, and medicines sent by mail or express. To enable us to send proper list of questions applicants should give a brief statement of their trouble.
The Treasurer of the corporation is of Nelson Chesman & Co., Advertising Agents, and refers to the publisher of this or any other newspaper in the United States or Canadas regarding responsibility.
Consultation at Office or by mail free and invited

Rev. Father Wilds'
EXPERIENCE.
The Rev. Z. P. Wilds, well-known city missionary in New York, and brother of the late eminent Judge Wilde, of the Massachusetts Supreme Court, writes as follows:
"78 E. 54th St., New York, May 16, 1882.
Messrs. J. C. AYER & Co., Gentlemen:
Last winter I was troubled with a most uncomfortable itching humor affecting more especially my limbs, which itched so intolerably at night, and burned so intensely, that I could scarcely bear any clothing over them. I was also a sufferer from a severe catarrh and catarrhal cough; my appetite was poor, and my system a good deal run down. Knowing the value of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, by observation of many other cases, and from personal use in former years, I began taking it for the above-named disorders. My appetite improved almost from the first dose. After a short time the fever and itching were allayed, and all signs of irritation of the skin disappeared. My catarrh and cough were also cured by the same means, and my general health greatly improved, until it is now excellent. I feel a hundred per cent stronger, and I attribute these results to the use of the SARSAPARILLA, which I recommend with all confidence as the best blood medicine ever devised. I took it in small doses three times a day, and used, in all, less than two bottles. I place these facts at your service, hoping their publication may do good.
Yours respectfully, Z. P. WILDS."
The above instance is but one of the many constantly coming to our notice, which prove the perfect adaptability of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to the cure of all diseases arising from impure or impoverished blood, and a weakened vitality.
Ayer's Sarsaparilla
cleanses, enriches, and strengthens the blood, stimulates the action of the stomach and bowels, and thereby enables the system to resist and overcome the attacks of all Scrofulous Diseases, Eruptions of the Skin, Rheumatism, Catarrh, General Debility, and all disorders resulting from poor or corrupted blood and a low state of the system.
PREPARED BY
Dr. J. C. Ayer & Co., Lowell, Mass.
Sold by all Druggists; price $1, six bottles for $5.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS
—Best Purgative Medicine—
cure Constipation, Indigestion, Headache, and all Billous Disorders.
Sold everywhere. Always reliable.

TUTT'S PILLS
TORPID BOWELS, DISORDERED LIVER, and MALARIA.
From these sources arise three-fourths of the diseases of the human race. These symptoms indicate their existence: Loss of Appetite, Bowels costive, Sick Headache, fullness after eating, aversion to exertion of body or mind, Eructation of food, Irritability of temper, Low spirits, A feeling of having neglected some duty, Dizziness, Fluttering at the Heart, Dots before the eyes, highly colored Urine, CONSTIPATION, and demand the use of a remedy that acts directly on the Liver. As a Liver medicine TUTT'S PILLS have no equal. Their action on the Kidneys and Skin is also prompt; removing all impurities through these three "scavengers of the system," producing appetite, sound digestion, regular stools, a clear skin and a vigorous body. TUTT'S PILLS cause no nausea or griping nor interfere with daily work and are a perfect
ANTIDOTE TO MALARIA.
Sold everywhere, 25c. Office, 44 Murray St., N.Y.

TUTT'S HAIR DYE.
GRAY HAIR OR WHISKERS changed instantly to a GLOSSY BLACK by a single application of this DYE. Sold by Druggists, or sent by express on receipt of $1.
Office, 44 Murray Street, New York.
TUTT'S MANUAL OF USEFUL RECEIPTS FREE.

VIGOROUS HEALTH FOR MEN
THE PASTILLE CURE FOR NERVOUS DEBILITY. TRADE MARK
TESTED FOR 5 YEARS
by use in thousands of cases. Founded on scientific medical principles, it has been growing in favor and reputation while its numerous competitors have invariably failed. The direct application of this remedy to the seat of the disease makes its specific influence felt without delay. The natural functions of the human organism are restored. The animating elements of life which have been wasted are given back. The buoyant energy of the brain and muscular system renders the patient cheerful; he gains strength with rapidity.
NERVOUS DEBILITY, organic weakness, and numerous obscure diseases, baffling the skill of best physicians, result for youthful indiscretion, too free indulgence, and over brain work.
Do not temporize while such enemies lurk in your system. Take a remedy that has cured thousands, and does not interfere with you attention to business or cause any pain or inconvenience.
(Send for a Descriptive Pamphlet giving Anatomical Illustrations, which will convince the most sceptical that they can be restored to perfect manhood, and fitted for the duties of life, same as if never affected. Sent free to any one. Remedy sold ONLY by the)
HARRIS REMEDY CO. MF'G. CHEMISTS.
306½ N. 10th. St. ST. LOUIS, MO.
One Month's treatment $3, two months $5, three months $7

PARKER'S HAIR BALSAM
A beneficial dressing preferred to similar articles because of its purity and rich perfums. It Restores to Gray Hair the Youthful Color & prevents dandruff and falling of the hair.
50c. & $1. Hiscox & Co., N.Y.

FLORESTON COLOGNE
Excels the finest flower extracts in richness. Delicate, very lasting. No odor like it. Be sure you get FLORESTON Cologne, signature of Hiscox & Co., N. Y., on every label. 25 and 75 cts., at druggists and dealers in perfumes.

NEVER FAILS
FREE! RELIABLE SELF-CURE.
A favorite prescription of one of the most noted and successful specialists in the U. S. (now retired) for the cure of Nervous Debility, Lost Manhood, Weakness and Decay. Sent in plain sealed envelope free. Druggists can fill it.
Address DR. WARD & CO., Louisiana, Mo.

PAYSON'S INDELIBLE INK
Is the BEST. No preparation. Used with any clean pen for marking any fabric. Popular for decorative work on linen. Received Centennial MEDAL & Diploma. Established 50 years. Sold by all Druggists, Stationers & News Agt's.

LOOK! LOOK!
THE AMERICAN FARMER,
—AND—
THE RECORDER
—ONE YEAR—
For $1 75.

We have perfected arrangments with the publishers of the American Farmer, of Fort Wayn, Ind., that enables us to offer our subscribers a first-class Agricultural Magazine at the bare cost of the white paper on which it is printed The American Farmer is a 16 page monthly magazine which is rapidly taking rank as one of the leading agricultural publications of the country. Each number will contain useful information for the farmer, his wife, his sons and his daughters. As it costs you almost nothing, suppose you try it one year.

Local News.

Look to your floors.

Christmas gift. Fork it over.

Christmas plays hob with schools.

The joyous holidays have arrived.

Is the bottom going to fall out of the town?.

Monday was the foulest day under foot ever seen.

Brasier Rouse and wife celebrate their tin wedding to-day.

Several new sleighs have been put on the road this winter.

There will be no paper issued from this office next week.

The fall and winter have been very favorable to small grain.

The snow-shoveling brigade had a feast Sunday morning.

Snow eighteen inches deep does pretty well for the first one.

We trust that our correspondents will have a Merry Christmas.

Deputy Sheriff German is making it lively for delinquent taxpayers.

We wish our readers all a merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Locomotion was greatly impeded by the snow assisted by the rain, Sunday.

Wm. Stephens, son of Henry Stephens, sold his crop of tobacco for $19 all round.

One shed at the Boone House stables went down beneath the weight of snow Sunday night.

All those indebted to me must come forward and settle by the first of Janury. A. M. ACRA.

Ayer's Hair Vigor cleanses and invigorates the scalp: cures dandruff and itching; an elegant dressing.

When you come to town in a sleigh, fill it with hay, and you'll have a good time driving the cows away.

The large prices realized for tobacco this season will induce the producers to increase the acreage next year.

Lots of the country cousins have been in town the past week buying socks to hang up for Santa Claus to fill.

We understand that the Hebron committee sent to Pennsylvania for illuminators for their Jacob's ladder.

There has been some fine weather for pasturing stalk fields this winter, and the farmers took advantage of it.

Those indebted to me must come forward and settle by the 1st of January. I need my money. R. S. CRISLER.

Who ever saw a finer season of sleighing. The mas could not object to their daughters going on account of the cold.

Dr. Grant in attempting to cross Woolper Sunday night narrowly escaped being swamped by running ice.

NOTICE—On and after the first day of January, 1884, I will close the Central Hotel. Mrs. Mary Green.

Cy Crisler lost a caddy of tobacco off his slide coming home from the city one day last week. He thinks it was stolen.

A green Christmas, it is said, makes a fat graveyard, while, on the other hand, a white Christmas makes poor doctors.

Now is the time to subscribe for the RECORDER. It will have the appearance of an entirely new paper the next time it comes to you.

W. C. C. Rouse claims that he has got on to a car-coupling that entirely does away with all the danger that accompanies that work.

James Shannon and Chas. Clore attended a party at Mr. Hood's a few nights since, and some one stole Clore's overcoat and Shannon's sleighbells.

Those owing us must come forward and settle at once, as we are out of money and must have that owing to us.
RICE & WESTBAY.

Some fellow at the party given by James Horton, last week, stole Tom Furlong's new overshoes and cap, and Tom is as mad as a wet hen about it.

The high price of tobacco keeps in progress the skinning process on the Gunpowder hills, and nearly all the timber in that section will have "to go"

Mr. L. D. Houston's children, knowing that their grandfather appreciates a good thing, have made him a Christmas present of the RECORDER for one year.

The superintendent of the weather department gave the farmers a protracted period in which to provide provender and fuel for just such a wintery time as we are now experiencing.

Representative-elect Walton is boxing up his wardrobe this week preparatory to shipment to Frankfort, where he will enlist with the new army of law makers next week.

It is about time to commence taking an inventory of your property, that you may be ready to be interviewed by the Assessor, who is liable to call on you at any time after the tenth of next month.

Christmas always commences cropping out several days previous to the time designated for its appearance, and this one was no exception to the rule. Some people can not help being slightly too previous.

Nice tombstones or monuments at the graves of the departed, are marks of respect which should not be neglected. Hurschart & Co., Lawrenceburg, Ind., have just what you want. John Beall of Hebron, is their agent.

Ed Rice dropped in to see us Tuesday, as he passed through town on his holiday excursion. Ed says that he is putting up a hogshead of tobacco that'll be the finest hogshead produced by any other grower in the county.

A couple of boots or shoes in their peregrination, the other night, found their way to Constable Sandford's corn crib, from which place he tracked them to a house where he supposes there is a couple of feet that occupy them most of the time.

Miss Wood and her class in elocution intended giving a literary banquet in the Presbyterian church last Saturday night, but it was discovered that the church floor is in a badly decayed condition and not safe. The Court-house was used instead.

Last week while out sleighriding Mr. Richard Gordon's horse ran off, throwing him out and breaking his leg between the knee and thigh. Miss Stephens, who was riding with Richard, jumped out when the horse first became frightened, and escaped without injury.

It turns out that friend Goodridge & Co., only secured the caudle ornament of that reynard. Having amputated that member, they cast the remainder of the fox to a host of noted fox-hounds to be devoured, when to their great surprise and humiliation, it made good its escape. Too bad, too bad, boys.

The arrival of Christmas was greeted by the ringing of the church and Court-house bells. Soon after the crack of day, the small boy and the fire cracker and other explosives, came forth, and made the weikin ring till about noon, when they subsided and the town became as quiet as a May morning.

In the city Friday we met J. K. Wandelohr, the popular Circuit Clerk of Pendleton county, at one time editor of the Falmouth Independent, and H. C. Trimble who managed putting the RECORDER office in shape for future usefulness. We also met Drs. Cropper and J. C. Terrill, both loaded to the guard with Christmas toys for the children.

The rain that followed the snow came near suspending business in the city, Monday. The streets and alleys were flooded, and many roofs went down beneath the pressure of the melting snow. Much damage has been done through the country by the water courses, and Monday another flood threatened the Ohio valley, but the timely change in the temperature dispelled all fears of a repetition of last February's flood.

Very few of the ground floors in the brick buildings in Burlington are properly ventilated, and, upon investigation no doubt many of them would be found about ready to give away. A few months since the floor in the Baptist church "let go," and only the other day it was discovered that the floor in the Presbyterian church is not safe, while there is a depression in a portion of the floor of the court-house.

The next issue of the RECORDER will not appear before the 9th of January 1884, when it will be presented with a change which will make it more interesting to our readers, containing the news of the day in an amount equal to any of the large city weeklies. With the report of the proceedings of congress and the proceedings of the Kentucky Legislature it will be of value to every citizen of the county.

Our special artist, this week, presents our readers with the above splendid life size portrait of Joseph C. Hitter's noted French setter "purp" which, getting mixed up with some tobacco haulers' wrappings, was spirited away. If you see it, you will recognize it.

Christmas came and went last year, and the RECORDER heeded it not; the 22d of February glided by and the RECORDER halted not; the 4th of July passed and the RECORDER stopped not to hear the American eagle scream; thanksgiving came and went and no turkey dinner called the RECORDER from labor to refreshments, but Christmas has once more put in its appearance and the weary printer has determined to join in the festivities of the occasion and be merry as other people are; therefore no paper will be published next week.

The entertainment under the auspices of the teachers of Boone County commences at the Morgan Academy today (the 26th). Prof. Gallagher has devoted much time and labor in arranging for the entertainment, and has the promise of Rev. Dunlap and Prof. Geo. Yates, besides that of many of the teachers of the county, to be present. One feature of the "exercises" will be an oyster supper each evening. The programme carried out as arranged will be interesting and instructive. Exercises commence each afternoon at 2 p. m.

A great sensation has been caused in the quiet neighborhood of Hammond's Creek, on the line between Grant and Owen counties, by the discovery on Friday last of the decomposed body of a human being, supposed to be the remains of a man named Rothwell, a native of Tennessee, who had moved to this county some years since, and some time last fall had sold out his possessions, preparatory to returning to his native State.

The effects of his sale accumulated a sum of about $700. He had his baggage brought to Corinth, and was never heard of until the discovery of his body a few days since, at least his wife recognized his clothes, his body being in such a state of decomposition that it was unrecognizable. His body was found in the middle of Hammond's Creek, with a hickory withe tied around it, supposed to have been tied around it for the purpose of sinking the body.

Another remarkable circumstance connected with the whole affair was that Rothwell had a dog that followed him away, and after he was killed the dog never deserted him, but would come to the creek and send up one piteous howl after another until some party, no doubt thinking the actions of the dog would lead to a discovery of Rothwell's body killed it. At any rate it looked suspicious on the part of the party who did the deed.

Blood was found on a tree not far from the creek where the body was found, where, it is supposed, he was murdered for his money.

A party of young men have been arrested on suspicion, whose names are Dodge, Hughes, Ireland, Davis and another, who is said to be well connected. These are the particulars as far as were related to us.—Williamstown Courier.

The Literary Banquet.

The weather Saturday night was very unpropitious, consequently the entertainment given in the Court-house by Miss Wood and her class in elocution was not largely attended, but those who braved the weather enjoyed a well rendered programme—especially when the short time the class had devoted to instructions is taken into consideration. Among the recitations the following deserve especial mention:

The "Farmyard Song," by Miss Pearl Kirkpatrick; the "Bald Headed Man," by Miss Katie Winston, were especially good; "Railroad Matinee," by Miss Nellie Blythe, was a very difficult piece to render, but Miss Nellie had made herself acquainted with the different characters, and did them justice. "Papa's Letter," which is a favorite poem, was given by Miss Annie Winston in good style. "Curfew Must Not Ring To-night," was recited by Miss Maud Kirkpatrick, in a very impressive and affective manner. Miss Mattie Winston's recitation of "Rock of Ages," displayed a splendid control of her vocal powers, while her elocution could not well have been excelled by an amateur. Charlie Winston's "School Master's Guest," was very well recited. "Too Much Waccination," by Robbie Foster, was well received by the audience. David Blythe's declamation, "Liberty," was gotten off in oratorical style. "Little Jim," by Joseph Reed, was very affective, but when Joe delivered "Old Brother Watkins' Farewell," the audience was convulsed with laughter from the first to the last sentence. In this piece Joe laid aside all elocution and substituted the "Old Whandoodie" style. Miss Wood recited the "Creeds of the Church Bells," a very difficult recitation, and which thoroughly demonstrates that she understands the science of elocution.

At the close of the programme Miss Wood made known her desire to secure another class for twenty lessons, and at the close of the session to give an entertainment the proceeds to go to the benefit of, anything the people saw proper to use it for.

Personal Mentions.

[If you have friends from a distance visiting you or expect to be away from home on business or pleasure, let us have the item for this column.]

Ben Sleet ate his Christmas dinner at home.

Mr. Henry Tucker, of Union, made us a call Saturday.

Mrs. R. C. Green has been quite sick with pneumonia for several days.

Sam C. Johnson & Co., of Walton, delivered tobacco here, yesterday and to day.

Joseph McGarvey and family, of Cincinnati, ate Christmas turkey with Jas. Westbay and family.

Wm. Dickens, of Bellevue, returned, last Saturday, from Georgetown, where he is attending college.

David Blythe returned home last Thursday from Hanover, (Ind.) college to spend a vacation of three weeks.

Miss Annie Cowen returned, last Thursday, from a protracted visit at her brother's in Rabbit Hash.

Richard Ryle and wife left Saturday morning for DeKalb county, Missouri, where they expect to make their future home.

Mr. James Botts, of Plattsburg, was in town last Saturday, and gave the RECORDER a boost in the shape of a two years subscription. Next.

The Misses Graham and Miss Maggie McFarland will receive callers New Years day from 2 p. m., to 5 p. m., at the residence of the Misses Graham.

The Christmas Tree.

Notwithstanding the difficulty experienced in getting about, the Baptist church was crowded Monday night by persons to witness the distribution of the presents with which the Christmas tree was decorated. The church was festooned with evergreen and illuminated with chineese lanters. The evening's programme was introduced by singing, and prayer by the Superintendent, Mr. J. O. Roberts, followed by recitations by Miss Mattie Winston, Miss Annie Winston, Mr. Reed and Miss Wood. Then came the distribution of the presents, which, to the juvenile part of the audience, was far the most interesting. The presents were numerous but not expensive, and the committee, had undoubtedly attempted to give every child in the town or that had kin folks here, a present, and be it known to their credit that they succeeded well, and made many a youthful heart go home rejoicing. Among the substantial presents were the following: To Mrs. Dr. Grant, a head of cabbage; Nellie Blythe, do; Mrs. J. M. Conner, a lot of Irish potatoes; Mrs. B. K. Sleet, beans; Mrs. D. Rouse, a large beet; the RECORDER office, a shovel.

NOTES.

Fiddles and stoves were popular presents.

When their names were called some of the little chaps held up both hands and stuck out their tongues.

Dr. Smith's speech of thanks for the pair of overshoes, was deferred.

The basket of artificial flowers presented Mrs. F. P. Walton, were the handiwork of Miss Fannie Rice and were the handsomest present on the tree.

The white dove was mistaken by one person for a harp. The mistake was fatal to neither the person nor dove.

Georgie Piper is equal to an entire fire company when the ornamental lights in a chandelier are doing too much duty.

Johnnie Huey received a mustache cup, now some of his friends ought to make him a New Year's present of a mustache.

NGEIHBORHOOD NEWS.

Waterloo.

Farmers are now resting themselves for spring work.

Thomas Clore and company, of Grant, visited Waterloo one day last week, with their guns and dogs, and killed 60 rabits.

Quite a number of young folks of the neighbordood, met at W. E. Barker's Thursday night, and had a pleasant time.

Joshua Rice, one of our progressive farmers, is making improvements.

Gordon Branch.

W. T. Ryle is to take charge of H. C. Berkshire's farm.

The party at Mr. Sullivan's was largely attended.

W. J. Ryle is Colter's advance agent; salary not known.

On account of the inclemency of the weather the party to have been given by Wm. Barker was a failure.

W. J. Ryle is building a new house for Robert O. Ryle. Your head is level Bob, get the cage and then the bird instead of vice versa.

For some time a strange animal has been frightening the people of an adjoining neighborhood. It has been seen at intervals for three or four years, and has attacked several different parties. James Setters describes it as follows: It is a spotted animal, about the size of a large dog, head very sharp, short ears and long tail. Most of the parties who have seen it were on horseback, and some of their horses became so badly frightened as to be unmanageable. Some think it is only a dog, but it is not probable that a dog would frighten horses so badly. Hunters have been trying, but so far, have failed to discover its tracks.

Hebron.

The snow was 12 inches deep on the 23d, and on the 24th the country was under a flood of snow and water.

There was a land-slide on the river pike on the 24th, just above Dry Creek.

Several of our boys came home from parties last week, minus sleighbells and hats.

Alf Whitlock and the Elijah Creek boys had a big fox chase over in Ohio last week. Wash Tanner's dog, Tilden, was the leader of the pack by a mile After a day's chase and digging till 12 o'clock at night, Jim Riddell and Tom Hafer captured a fox last week.

George Clore, of Illinois, is the guest of Harrison Clore.

The RECORDER is the boss paper in this community, almost everyone reading it; so we will try and give a few items of interest from our little village.

Business is quite brisk at this writing.

Mrs. John Tanner, of Ludlow, is visiting relatives in this section.

Rev. Swick, of Middletown, Ohio, closed his protracted meeting at this place, last Sunday, with four additions.

Hog cholera still rages in this section. Abe clore has lost 30 head. Jimison Aylor also lost a few head from cholera.

Clore, Snyder & Durr, tobacconists, are prizing tobacco. They have received quite an amount of the weed, for which they pay the best of prices.

Joel Clore, Jeff and Johnny Cloud are home from Sprinfield, Ohio, college, spending the holidays.

Last Friday afternoon, Mrs. Hattie Clore, wife of John Clore, was sitting near the fire, when she was taken suddenly very sick and fell in the fire. No one was present, and when she recovered her mind, her left hand was burned to a crisp, while her face was badly burned. Dr. Jonas Terrill, her attending physician, thinks two or three of her fingers will have to be taken off.

Florence.

Christmas gift to everybody, "and don't you forget it." Now don't go to making excuses, such as too late in the day, etc.; and please protect me from a little candy, butter-scotch, peanuts, and the like. These may do well enough to impose upon the juvenile race, but I'm a little to ancient to give my affections away on such transparent charity. Neither do I want shooting crackers, torpedoes and toy pistols; for I'm too nervous and sensitive for such foolishness. Now, if I was a young man, and needed a wife, and had my eye on a gal, and wanted to get a specimen of her voice under excitement, such as we would have to encounter upon washday, some of these explosives thrown at her feet might be the means of approximating to the result. Or, if there is a stray "purp" around on a foraging expedition, a few of these little things, mixed with an old tin pan, and appended to his caudal extremity, will prove a wonderful auxilary in assisting said canine to his home. Nor could I think of accepting doll-babies as a token of friendship, especially crying babies; there's too much human nature about those kind. If some friend will present me with a nice, quiet boy-doll, I will accept for the curiosity of the thing. But who ever heard of a boy-doll? All gals, dolls are mighty nice, but there's a partiality displayed in the making that I don't approve of. I want a fair divide, and if Old Santa don't attend to this I'll supercede him. But to the question. What I want are staple goods, when you come to show your gratitude to me, such as sugar, coffee, flour, beefsteaks, overcoats, rose blankets, Lonsdale muslins, &c., &c.; and if you insist on it you may mix in a fruit cake or two, a few cans of oysters, a little honey and such things that are of a medicinal nature, as I have a bad cold, and will accept upon that ground.

"Do to others as you would be done by;" this is the golden rule, and I want to follow it, but don't want to be too prominent, so you start first. The next things in order after opening the holidays with the exchange of gifts, are parties and big dinners. I like a big dinner, because, like a motion to adjourn a meeting, it is always in order; but don't believe in adjourning the dinner with "business" on the table. I am going to make a big dinner as soon as I get rich writing for the papers. None of your aristocratic dinners, with mostly dishes and ceremonies and wealthy guests; but a real, old fashioned, social feast. I am going to extend my invitations to the highways and hedges, and call in the poor, the lame, the halt and blind, and the editors of the RECORDER and all the contributors, and we'll have roasted turkey, lamb and veal, and mince and chicken pies, and cakes and all the accompanying etc's, "that is the kind of a hairpin I am."

The question about the husk on the corn indicating the temperature of the weather, has been settled by Mr. Abel Carpenter, who has noticed by an experience of many years, that if there is a heavy husk on the corn, it is a sure indication that the winter will be colder than the succeeding summer; and, if a light husk, then the preceding summer will be warmer than the succeeding winter.
GAS OMETER.

TAYLOR & RIGG'S PRIZES

The following are the lucky numbers and draw the prizes set opposite each. The above firm give these articles to their customers, and will deliver them in Covington, Ky., on presentation of the tickets:

Nos.		Prizes.
36,318	1	Fine Piano
10,240	1	Gent's Gold Watch
41,737	1	Lady's " "
32,890	1	Breech Loading Shot Gun
24,824	1	Sewing Machine
28,069	1	Bicycle
36,340	1	Velocipede
31,806	1	Hobby Horse
37,695	1	Rocking Chair
44,948	1	Bolt Muslin
29,993	1	" "
41,881	1	" "
39,667	1	" "
28,815	1	" "
26,357	1	" "
6,678	1	" "
38,459	1	" "
27,615	1	" "
7,788	1	" "

The sun is able to get out again.

The fox hunters meet at Jimmie Riddell's to-day where a large fox will be turned lose. A big time is anticipated by the lovers of the chase.

An immense crowd went to Hebron yesterday to see Jacob's ladder. Some were unable to get in the house, and went home without witnessing the festivities. The ladder was very nice, having on it many valuable and handsome presents.

Of the chairmanships Carlisle gave Kentucky two. It is evident that the committees were made up regardless of how they cast their votes in the race for Speaker. The Speaker put at the heads of the committees those he though the best qualified for the prsitions.

Mr. Quinn, a Government agent arrived here last week and put up at the Central Hotel, where he was visited by several persons who had horses taken by the Government during the late unpleasantness. He was investigating the claims which had heretofore been presented, but remain unpaid.

7
LADIES and sickly girls requiring gentle and reliable stimulant, will find Brown's Iron Bitters beneficial.
ELKTON, KY.—Dr. E. B. Weathers says: "I regard Brown's Iron Bitters as a medicine of unusual worth."
FAYETTEVILLE, ARK.—Rev. T. J. Reilly says: "I used Brown's Iron Bitters for indigestion and chills with entire satisfaction."

County Directory.

OFFICERS.

Assessor—G. M. Riley.
County Surveyor—W. E. Vest.
School Commissioner—D. M. Snyder.
Coroner.—Dr. A. A. Murat, Constance.

COURTS.

CIRCUIT COURT meets the 2d Monday in April and first Monday in October, P. U. Major, Judge; W. L. Riddell, Clerk A. G. DeJarnette, Commonwealths Attorney; W. L. Riddell, Trustee Jury Fund.

COUNTY COURT meets the first Monday in every month. L. H. Dills, Judge; S. W. Tolin, County Attorney. M. T. Garnett, Clerk; J. R. Clutterbuck, Sheriff, T. W. Finch and W. T. German, Deputy Sheriffs.

QUARTERLY COURT meets the first Monday in March, June, September and December. The officers of the County Court preside.

COURT OF CLAIMS meets the first Monday in November.

MAGISTRATES' COURTS are held in March, June, September and December, as follows:

Bellevue—M. B. Green, first Saturday, and T. H. Sutton, third Monday. J. M. Moody, Constable.

Burlington—E. H. Baker, Thursday after first Monday, and Oscar Gaines, fourth Monday. R. H. Sandford, Constable.

Carlton A. G. McConnell, Wednesday after second Monday, and B. H. Ryle, Saturday after third Monday, Walter Ryle, Cornstable.

Petersburg—Jos. Hensley, Wednesday after first Monday, and L. A. Loder fourth Saturday. Geo. Comer, Constable.

Beaver—W. M. Rouse, Friday after the third Monday, and

FALL FALL FALL FALL
—AND—
Winter Clothi'g

Clothing of the best goods, well trimmed, in the latest styles, made under my direct supervision and sold at lower prices than are asked for badly made, shoddy goods at other places. Call and be assured.

A splendid line of Suitings. Suits MADE to order on short notice.

H. F Blase,
540 Madison St, - - COVINGTON, KY

UNDERTAKING.
We keep Constantly on Hand all sizes of
Burial Cases and Caskets.
And having just received a beautiful
NEW HEARSE,
Which can be had at a reasonable price when desired.
PRICES GUARANTEED LESS THAN CITY PRICES
DAVIS BROS., - - HEBRON, KY.

M.L. SWETNAM. HUBERT NEED.
SWETNAM & NEAD,
(SUCCESSOR TO ALONZO GRAVES)
LIVERY AND BOARDING STABLE
AND TRANSFER LINE.
79 Pike Street, Covington, Ky.
Horses Kept by the Day, Week or Month.
Horses and Buggies for Hire.
Stock of all kinds Bought and Sold.
Best Care Taken of Horses entrusted to our Keeping.
All Orders for Hauling Promptly Attended to.

City Flouring Mills
RISING SUN, INDIANA.
FLOUR EXCHANGED FOR WHEAT OR CASH. THE HIGHEST MARKET PRICE PAID FOR GOOD WHEAT.
mar7-tf28 J. W. Talbott.

JAMES S. WAYNE, President. JNO. L. SANDFORD, Cashier
CAPITAL $300,000.
FARMERS AND TRADERS
NATIONAL BANK.
Covington, Kentucky.
DIRECTORS.
James S. Wayne, J. S. Matson, M. C. Motch, J. H. Mersman, Sam Hind, J. L. Sandford, L. C. Stephens, F. J. Hickey, L. H Dills, E. J. Green, F. P. Helm
The general operations of banking transacted upon the most favorable terms. collections made on all points in the United States.
The Business and Accounts of Farmers are Especially Solicited by this Bank.
dec. 20-6m

MOTHER NOBLE'S
HEALING SYRUP.
20 Million Bottles sold in 10 years. A certain Cure for Dyspepsia, all Diseases of the Kidneys, Liver, Stomach, Blood, Skin and Bowels.
Can Produce Thousands of Letters proving its Curative Powers.
AN OLD AND LONG TRIED REMEDY.
LABORATORY 77 AMITY STREET, NEW YORK CITY.
TRADE MARK.
FOR SALE BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

Cornease.—The King of Corn Killers. The most desperate Corns, Bunions, Warts &c., SPEEDILY cured. Price 25 Cents.
Footease.—An Unfailing Remedy for Hot, Swollen and Tender Feet, Chilblains, &c. Price 25 Cents.
Cornease Manuf'g Co., 236, 5th Ave. Place, N. Y. City.
For Sale by Agents, Druggists and Shoe Dealers.

Subscribe For The
BOONE COUNTY
RECORDER.
And begin with the New Year.

THE RECORDER.

RIDDELL & HALL, Publishers.

BURLINGTON, : : KENTUCKY.

Prices of Pearls.

"Although a pearl weighing one grain is worth only about one-eighth of the price of a diamond of the same weight," said a jeweler, "it is very easy to spend a large amount of money for pearl jewelry. There is now in this city a pearl necklace worth $100,000. I have seen another worth $23,000, and one was recently sold for $30,000. These large prices are caused by the difficulty of obtaining particular sizes and colors that may be wanted. The most expensive collection of pearls on record is that owned by the Countess of Dudley in England, which is far more valuable than the celebrated pearls belonging to the Queen. The Countess has a coronet of pearls. The top is composed of pear-shaped pearls. There is a very large one in the center, and the others are graduated in size down to the smallest. In order to get these pear-shaped pearls in the requisite sizes and colors the jewelers were obliged to buy such an enormous quantity of pearls that when the famous necklace was completed with ear-rings, bracelets, brooch and finger rings to match, the jewelers had $300,000 worth of odd pearls left! A pair of matched pear-shaped pearls weighing 110 grains was recently sold in San Francisco for $6,000. I sold one pair of off-color craggy and gibbous pearls for $350, and have one pair worth $1,800.

"When the Princess Royal of England married Frederick William of Prussia she received a necklace of thirty-two pearls costing $93,000. In 1789 the French Government possessed pearls valued at $200,000. One that weighed 108 carats was valued at $37,000. Two that were pear-shaped were valued at $55,800.

"The black pearls bring very high prices at present, but genuine pearls may be bought that are white, pink, or gray. The peculiar color which is called pearl is a sort of transparent drab. There is at present a greater demand for pearls, as there is in fact for all kinds of jewelry, than has been known for a long time. The plentifulness of imitations does not appear to destroy the value of the genuine article. Some idea of the increased value of pearls may be gathered from two estimates made more than 100 years apart. One was made in 1751 by David Jeffries, of London, and the other in 1867 by Mr. H. Emanuel, of London. The following is the table:

Weight, grains.	Value, 1751.	Value, 1867.	Weight, grains.	Value, 1751.	Value, 1867.
4......	$2 00	$7 00	15.....	$24 00	$94 00
5......	3 50	11 00	16....	32 00	140 00
6......	4 50	17 00	18....	40 50	187 00
8......	8 00	36 00	20....	50 00	234 00
10......	15 50	51 00	25....	72 00	337 00
12......	18 00	75 00	30....	112 00	469 00

"The estimate made by Jeffries included pearls at 100 grains, one of which he valued at $1,250. The diseased pearls are not pear-shaped, and are not of the same color all the way through. One of the pearl curiosities is a pearl adhering to the shells. Pearls are often found in oysters and clams that have been cooked. A clam pearl is of a chocolate color."—N. Y. Sun.

Prince Napoleon and the Princess Clotilde.

Prince Jerome Napoleon's resemblance in feature to his illustrious uncle, the great Emperor, is most striking; but no less striking is the difference of expression, which is certainly not to the advantage of Prince Napoleon. All the revelations of that face are confirmed by popular report, and universal sympathy is felt for the admirable Princess Clotilde, forced by necessity to live apart from the husband to whom she had been sacrificed through political considerations. No two individuals could be more ill-matched than the atheistical, dissipated Jerome Napoleon, as celebrated for his immoral life as for his coarse brutality of temper and his supposed—what shall we call it?—personal prudence under fire, and the calm, dignified Italian Princess, fearless, like a true daughter of the house of Savoy; devout, almost to excess: with the tastes and habits of a nun and the ardent faith of a martyr. She did not possess the beauty or the quick, brilliant wit which might have pleased him; she cared little for splendid dress or worldly pleasures. She spent almost too much time in devotional practices, which he abhorred. During the Empire, the home life of the Princess Clotilde was austere, quiet, and, it must be owned, very monotonous; perhaps too much so to be quite judicious, under the circumstances in which she was placed. But everything that surrounded her shocked her feelings so much that she could only take refuge in silence and reserve. Her husband was openly an unbeliever, the enemy of the church to which she was devoted; and his conduct in other respects was such as to be a permanent and cruel insult to his wife.

When the Empire fell, the Princess went to reside at a country-seat in Switzerland, on the Lake of Geneva. There she led the life of a Sister of Charity, tending the poor and the sick with her own hands, and depriving herself of every thing that could possibly be spared, in order to give more to those in need. After the death of the King, her father, she retired, without any opposition from the Prince, her husband, to the palace of Moncalieri, near Turin, which had been left to her; there, at least, she was not obliged to endure the affronts which hitherto had not been spared to her. The sympathy of all went with her, and the unpopularity of Prince Napoleon consequently increased. Notwithstanding his remarkable intelligence, which can not be denied, his eloquence as an orator, and the prestige of that Bonaparte face, so like that of the great Emperor, Prince Napoleon is universally disliked, and despised as much as he is disliked. Even the Bonapartists dare not put forward his claims; their chance of success would be too small.—Miss Bicknell, in the Century.

—The new colored cadet at West Point has not been hazed, and is treated with studied respect by the white cadets. In this connection it may not be improper to remark that the new colored cadet is six feet one inch in height, with long arms and fists like dumb-bells, and the general look of a healthy man who is aching for a fight. Whatever else may be said about the West Point cadets, they know who to haze.—Troy Times.

—Hanlan, the oarsman, says that he owes his success in great part to having hit upon a winning stroke, for it is there he shows his superiority. It is a thing which can not be governed by mathematical calculation, though, but it is rather the result of accident or inborn knack.—Montreal Witness.

HOME AND FARM.

—To strengthen vinegar freeze it and remove the ice which forms on the surface—the water of the vinegar alone freezes, leaving the acute acid in solution in the remaining water.—Troy Times.

—Five acres of oats at forty bushels per acre, and sold at thirty-five cents per bushel, would bring seventy dollars. The same ground planted in potatoes at a safe estimate would bring five hundred bushels, which at fifty cents per bushel would be $250.—Chicago Tribune.

—Batter puffs: Mix half a pound of flour, a pint of milk, five well-beaten eggs and a quarter of a pound of warmed butter. Stir all briskly for ten minutes. Butter small patty pans, fill them half full, and bake a nice yellow. When done strew powdered sugar and cinnamon over them.—Exchange.

—Cigar ashes are said to be an invaluable remedy for the bites of mosquitoes and other insects. Wet the ashes and rub them on the afflicted part and the stinging sensation will be relieved almost immediately. The reason for this is that the ashes contain an alkali which neutralizes the acid of the poison.—The Household.

—A florist advises those who are troubled with little flies about their plants in winter to use separate saucers for the pots, and to water the plants from the bottom by filling the saucers with boiling water. Since beginning this practice, she writes, she is not troubled by the flies, and thinks the plants do much better watered in this way than by pouring the water on the top.—N. Y. Examiner.

—Honey cakes: A pound of honey, a pound of flour, a quarter of a pound of butter, a quarter of a pound of almonds pounded coarsely, a drachm of pounded cloves, the grated peel of a lemon and a half an ounce of carbonate of soda dissolved in water. Let honey and butter come to a boil over the fire, take this off, and in a few minutes stir in the flour and spice by degrees, then the almonds, and lastly the soda. Let the mass stand all night in a cool place. In the morning roll it out half an inch thick, cut it into little square cakes, put half an almond in each corner and a slice of peel in the middle. Bake them in a moderate oven a pale brown.—N. Y. Herald.

Trimmings for Dresses, Cloaks, Etc.

The feather borders used on cloaks during previous seasons are now seen on the skirts of dresses as well. Flat borders of very small coq plumes are made to represent a drooping fringe on the lower edge, with a narrow ruche-like row for a heading; these are handsome in black and very dark green shades for trimming the lower skirt of a velvet walking dress, and there should be a similar row on the long coat, the jacket, or mantle that accompanies it, and also on a muff of the material of the dress. Another feather garniture is made of the fronds of ostrich feathers stripped from their quills and woven into a galloon, instead of being sewed there, and some of these are on rubber bands to make them more durable. There are new fringes of feathers with insertions to match, and separate feather ornaments, in some of which the head, neck, and breast of birds are seen at intervals. Another novelty is a feather material, a fabric three-fourths of a yard wide, made of soft downy feathers taken from under the wings of birds and woven into a soft, pliable background, which is now used for the entire cloak, especially for evening cloaks and small shoulder capes.

Ostrich-feather borders of their natural gray-brown shades are used for trimming Titian red, blue, and gray velvet costumes, and are from three to seven inches wide. The chenille fringes, with each sharply pointed strand tipped with jet, are in great favor for trimming handsome wraps; iridescent beads sometimes take the place of the black jets, and there are also tips of balls or acorns of satin which give a very rich effect, and are not heavy, as they are made over cork. New galloon of chenille in many loops has the appearance of glossy Astrakhan borders, and is woven closely to prevent drawing or falling out. The passementeries are in various combinations for trimming silks, velvets, and cashmere dresses; for instance, the plainest gimps are of twisted cords without beads, then there are others with beads added, also the glossy satin cord gimps with beads or with chenille, or perhaps merely of the satin soft pliable cords, while others are of chenille with jet, or of jets with scarcely anything else visible. For rich black dresses of velvet or satin there are palm-leaf gimps of chenille with satin cords interwoven with jet; for trimming velvet panels are detached flowers entirely of jet or combined with chenille, or else they are plaques or blocks, diamonds or palms, of beads to be applied to the velvet at intervals. For colored garniture are single ornaments of colored pearls in cashmere tints, or all one color, with gilt or silver braid intermingled. Applied flowers of many colors done in floss, chenille, and beads are also much used.—Harper's Bazar.

Feeding Fowls in Winter.

There is no end to the advice as to the proper food for fowls in the winter season, with a view to the production of eggs. Nearly every experienced raiser has a method of his own, and no doubt they all possess more or less merit. That some animal food is necessary in cold weather, is an old idea, and is followed by all who desire a good crop of eggs; and this fact is established from the fondness of chickens for insects when they are in season. That corn is a staple food for fowls in all its forms is well known and is adopted by every experienced raiser. Some make the meal into mush; some soak the whole grains and place it where the fowls can obtain it at all times; and some again burn or char the corn on the cobs and throw it into the poultry house for the fowls to help themselves whenever their health may need it. In cold weather it is a common practice with chicken raisers to give the fowls in the morning a soft, warm feed, say of corn-meal mush, accompanied with an onion chopped up as a preventive of disease. Grease, in the way of drippings, mixed with the mush is excellent and causes the hens to lay and at the same time keeps them well in flesh. In fact, if one expects profit from hens in winter, when eggs generally sell at two prices, they must provide good, comfortable houses, exposed to the southwest, good laying-boxes, plenty of roosting-poles, sand, or soft soil to scratch in, access to lumps of pounded bones, salt, fresh water twice a day that freezing up may not interfere injuriously against a supply of water whenever needed. Corn being the food most relied on, there should at all times be a trough of it of the whole grain in order that the fowls may help themselves whenever in want.—Germantown Telegraph.

How Fitch Proposed.

The story about A. T. Stewart's first love and how he won her from "Gaffer Clinch, the ship-builder," reminds us of the way in which General Sherman answered Mr. Fitch when he addressed Miss Minnie. He was then only a young assistant engineer (a position equal to ensign in the line); but love laughs at locksmiths, rank and fortune, and he was so thoroughly in love he took himself to the general without hesitation, and asked permission to address the daughter.

"Want to marry my daughter, do you? God bless my soul! What do you want to do that for?"

Mr. Fitch modestly urged his affection, adding the pleas usual to such occasions.

The general sat thinking, his face alternately softening and frowning as he thought of his daughter and the presumptuous youth who wanted to take her away from home and kindred. Suddenly he turned on his audience of one, and sternly asked—you can imagine how he did it:

"Young man, what can you do?"

"Make an engine and put it together as well as any man in the country!" He almost shouted in answer, for he was nervous and feared a refusal.

"Good!" said the general. "You can have her, my boy."—Washington Advertiser.

The Game of Baccarat.

At baccarat, half-a-dozen packs of cards are put before the banker. Not to enter into details, the game is this: The banker takes two cards and gives two cards to the players; both banker and players have the right to draw one card. The winner is he whose cards approach the nearest to a certain value. As the banker may see the card drawn by the player before electing to take one or to remain with his original two, he has an advantage of about 5 per cent. Nothing is more easy than to cheat at this game. The banker may be and of course often is, a professional swindler as well as an adept at sleight-of-hand. This latter talent is, however, not necessary. The table at which he sits is surrounded by a crowd, every one of whom can see the cards dealt to the players. One of them has only to make a sign to the banker in order to tell him what is the value of the players' cards, and thus to indicate to him whether he would do well to draw a card or not. That sane human beings should be induced to stake their money under such conditions is proof that human credulity is an inexhaustible fund.—London Truth.

Fire or Food.

It is the fire to which the poor cling with the last clutch of desperation. They would sooner do without food than fire, for the darkness of the winter evening without it is unendurable. We saw one instance of that. Picture a November evening in a dirty back hovel in a Shadwell court; almost all the furniture sold; a bundle of rags to lie upon; filth and dirt about the room, and a woman sitting alone looking at the last half-inch of red expiring in the grate. "Oh, dear, sir," wailed this poor creature to the missionary, "what on earth shall I do? I have parted with every thing; I am half starved, and now the fire is almost out, and the night is coming on!" I saw the missionary turn and fumble in his bag. "I may have one left, Mrs. ——; and if so, you shall have it, and gladly." It was a ticket for groceries or rice—and coals. One heart rejoiced, at any rate, in that filthy little court.—London Telegraph.

—Mrs. Ruth Everett, of Salt Lake City, says that the Utah women who signed the petition to Congress protesting against any further legislation upon polygamy did so under coercion.—N. Y. Sun.

The Latest Bonanza in California.

BIEBER, CAL.—Mr. Thomas P. Ford, editor of the Mountain Tribune, of this place, publishes that the great pain-cure, St. Jacobs Oil, has worked wonders in his family and that he would not be without it. He states that among all the people St. Jacobs Oil is the most popular medicine ever introduced.

"HACKED to death," is suggested as an inscription for the tombstones of visitors who die at Niagara.—Buffalo Express.

IF you feel dull, drowsy, debilitated, have sallow color of skin, or yellowish-brown spots on face or body, frequent headache or dizziness, bad taste in mouth, internal heat or chills alternated with hot flushes, low spirits and gloomy forebodings, irregular appetite, and tongue coated, you are suffering from "torpid liver," or "biliousness." In many cases of "liver complaint" only part of these symptoms are experienced. As a remedy for all such cases Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" has no equal, as it effects perfect and radical cures. At all drug stores.

A GOOD two-foot rule is never to wear tight boots.—Detroit Post.

BAD temper often proceeds from those painful disorders to which women are subject. In female complaints Dr. R. V. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" is a certain cure. By all druggists.

THE chaps who fling the lariat among the wild steers, are the noose boys of the West.—Chicago Herald.

THE MARKETS.

CINCINNATI, December 21, 1883.

LIVE STOCK—Cattle—common	$2 00	@ 3 25
Choice butchers	4 50	@ 5 25
HOGS—Common	4 15	@ 5 00
Good packers	5 56	@ 5 80
SHEEP	4 00	@ 4 75
FLOUR—Family	4 50	@ 4 90
GRAIN—Wheat—Longberry red	1 12	@
No. 2 red	1 05	@
Corn—No. 2 mixed	53	@ 54
Oats—No. 2 mixed	33½	@ 34½
Rye—No. 2	60	@ 62
HAY—Timothy No. 1	10 00	@10 50
HEMP—Double dressed	8¼	@
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	14 50	@
Lard—Prime steam	8¾	@
BUTTER—Fancy Dairy	23	@ 24
Prime Creamery	25	@ 34
FRUIT AND VEGETABLES—
Potatoes per bbr. from store	1 25	@ 1 40
Apples, prime, per barrel	2 50	@ 3 35
NEW YORK.
FLOUR—State and Western	$2 80	@ 3 85
Good to choice	4 00	@ 6 75
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 spring	1 09	@
No. 2 red	1 11¼	@
Corn—No. 2 mixed	64¾	@ 65
Oats—mixed	38	@ 41
PORK—Mess	14 75	@15 00
CHICAGO.
FLOUR—State and Western	$3 50	@ 4 35
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	98¾	@ 1 02
Corn—No. 2	60	@ 62
Oats—No. 2	38	@
Rye	60	@
PORK—Mess	14 75	@15 25
LARD—Steam	8-85	@ 8-90
BALTIMORE.
FLOUR—Family	$5 00	@ 5 75
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red	1 07¾	@ 1 08
Corn—mixed	59	@ 62½
Oats—mixed	38	@ 39
PROVISIONS—Pork—Mess	14 50	@
Lard—Refined	9¼	@
LOUISVILLE.
FLOUR—A No 1	$4 00	@ 4 50
GRAIN—Wheat—No. 2 red, new	1 00	@ 1 02½
Corn—mixed	53	@ 54
Oats—mixed	35	@
PORK—MESS	15 00	@
INDIANAPOLIS.
WHEAT—No. 2. red, new	$1 01	@
CORN—mixed	53	@
OATS—mixed	31½	@
LIVE STOCK—Cattle
Butchers' stock	2 75	@ 3 00
Shipping cattle	5 25	@

YOUNG or middle aged men suffering from nervous debility, loss of memory, premature old age, as the result of bad habits, should send three stamps for Part VII. of Dime Series pamphlets. Address WORLD'S DISPENSARY MEDICAL ASSOCIATION, Buffalo, N. Y.

A STIRRING speech: "Pass me a spoon."—N. Y. Journal.

I WOULD RECOMMEND Ely's Cream Balm to any one having Catarrh or Catarrhal Asthma. I have suffered for five years so I could not lie down for weeks at a time. Since I have been using the Balm I can lie down and rest. I thank God that you ever invented such a medicine. FRANK P. BURLEIGH, Farmington, N. H.

A COLOR of cloth for coats is called "sugar." If the dudes adopt it they will be sugar-coated pills.—N. Y. Herald.

FOR THREE WINTERS I have been afflicted with Catarrh and Cold in the Head. I used Ely's Cream Balm; it accomplished all that was represented. T. F. MCCORMICK (Judge Common Pleas), Elizabeth, N. J.

GILPIN, reading in a paper that "facts are stubborn things," says there's no particle of doubt but that his wife is a fact.—Marathon Independent.

MRS. GENERAL SHERMAN says: "I have frequently purchased Durang's Remedy for friends suffering with rheumatism and in every instance it worked like magic." It cures when every thing else fails. Write for free pamphlet to R. K. Helphenstine, Washington, D. C.

Don't Die in the House. "Rough on Rats." clears out rats, mice, flies, roaches, bed-bugs. 15c.

A TERRIBLE PROPHECY.

The Red Sunsets, Cyclones and Earthquakes Foretelling Coming Disaster—How to Meet It.

The recent mysterious appearances following sunset and preceding sunrise have attracted wide attention from students of the skies and the people generally. During the days of recent weeks the sun seems to have been obscured by a thin veil of a dull leaden hue which, as the sun receded toward the horizon, became more luminous, then yellow, then orange, then red; and, as night settled down upon the earth, a dull purple. At first it was thought these appearances were ordinary sunset reflections of light, but it is now pretty certain that they are either the misty substance of the tail of some unseen comet, in which the earth is enveloped, or a surrounding stratum of world dust or very small meteors. Professor Brooks, of the Red House Observatory, Phelps, N. Y., has turned his telescope upon these objects and discovered what he thinks are myriads of telescopic meteors. If it is unorganised world dust, or decomposed vapors, as the Democrat and Chronicle, of Rochester, N. Y., remarks: "How is this matter to be disposed of? Will it settle and form a deposit upon the earth, or, remain a partial opaque shell about the earth to cut off a portion of the sun's light upon it?"

Whatever the mystery is, there is no denying that some very strange forces are at work in the upper airs. The terrible tornadoes and cyclones which have swept our own country, and the fearful volcanoes and earthquakes which have destroyed so many cities and thousands of people—the tidal waves which mysteriously rise and fall on coasts hitherto unvexed by them—the tremendous activity which is evident in the sun by the constant revelation of enormous spots upon its surface—all indicate unusual energy in the heavenly bodies.

These circumstances recall Professor Grimmer's prophecies that from 1881 to 1887, the passage of the five great planets—Mars, Neptune, Jupiter, Uranus and Saturn—around the sun would produce strange and wonderful phenomena. He says: "The waters of the earth will become more or less poisonous. The air will be foul with noisome odors. Ancient races will disappear from the earth." He attempts to prove his prophecy by the fact that in 1720, when Mars and Saturn made their passage around the sun coincidentally, great destruction and mortality visited all parts of the globe. He also found the same results in previous perihelion passages of the planets, and argues that these circumstances always produce epidemics and destructive diseases which will baffle the skill of the most eminent physicians; that the poor will die by thousands, the weak and intemperate falling first, those whose blood has been impoverished by excess of work or dissipation next, and only those who are in comparative vigor shall escape to enjoy the era of renewed activity and prosperity which will follow the period of destruction.

Inasmuch as the entire world seems subject to the sway of the heavenly bodies no part of the earth, he thinks, can escape scourging. He even predicts that America will lose over ten millions of people; that farmers will be stricken with fear and cease to till the soil; that famine will make human misery more wretched. That hundreds will flee to overcrowded cities for aid in vain. That sudden changes in ocean currents, temperature and surroundings will entirely transform the face of nature and climate of countries; that the air will be so foul with malaria and other noxious gases; that those who survive will be troubled with disorders of the digestive organs. That many who escape other ills will bloat with dropsy and suddenly pass away, while others will grow thin and drag out a miserable existence in indescribable agony for weeks. Neuralgic pains in different parts of the body will torment them. They will easily tire and become despondent. A faint, hot feeling will be succeeded by chilly sensations while hallucinations and dread of impending ill will paralyze all effort. "The birds in the air, the beasts of the field, and even the fish of the sea will become diseased, poisoning the air and poisoning the waters of the globe." We are told on the other hand that those who shall pass through this period of trial will have larger enjoyment of life and health. The earth will yield more abundantly than ever before. The animal kingdom will be more prolific and life prolonged very materially. This prolongation of life will be owing to the healthy electric and magnetic influences that will pervade the atmosphere. It would perhaps seem that the present redness of the sun, and the presence of a belt or veil of cosmic matter, justified, in a measure, the prediction of Professor Grimmer, but disturbing as his prediction may be we are told for our comfort that the strong and pure blooded need have little to fear in these calamities, that those who are delicate or indisposed should adopt means to keep the system well supported and the blood pure and that the most philosophical and effective method of accomplishing this is to keep the kidneys and liver in good condition. From the testimonials of such men as Dr. Dio Lewis and Professor R. A. Gunn, M. D., Dean of the United States Medical college, New York, and thousands of influential non-professional people, it seems almost certain that for this purpose there is no preparation known to science equal to Warner's Safe Cure, better known as Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure. This medicine has acquired the finest reputation of any preparation that was ever put upon the market. It is a radical blood purifier, which soothes and heals all inflamed organs, strengthens the nervous system, washes out all evidences of decay, regulates digestion, prevents malassimilation of food in a philosophical and rational manner, fortifies the system against climatic changes and malarial influences and the destructive agencies which seem to be so abundant in these "evil days."

It is not our purpose to dispute the correctness of Professor Grimmer's prophecies. As we have said, the marked disturbances of the past few years would seem to give a semblance of verification of his theory. It is certain, as above stated, that we are passing through what may be regarded as a crucial period and it is the part of wise men not to ignore, but to learn to fortify themselves against the possibility of being overcome by these evils. It is a duty which each man owes to himself and his fellows, to mitigate as much as possible the suffering of humanity and in no way better can he accomplish this purpose than to see to it that he, himself, is fortified by the best known preparation in the strongest possible manner and that he exert the influence of his own example upon his fellows to the end that they, too, may share with him immunity from the destructive influences which seek his ruin.

Butter Buyers

everywhere are refusing to take white, lardy looking butter except at "grease" prices. Consumers want nothing but gilt edged butter, and buyers therefore recommend their patrons to keep a uniform color throughout the year by using the Improved Butter Color made by Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt. It is the only color that can be relied on to never injure the butter, and to always give the perfect color. Sold by druggists and merchants.

Time is Money.

Time and money will be saved by keeping Kidney-Wort in the house. It is an invaluable remedy for all disorders of the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels and for all diseases arising from obstructions of these organs. It has cured many obstinate cases after hundreds of dollars had been paid to physicians without obtaining relief. It cures Constipation, Piles, Biliousness and all kindred disorders. Keep it by you.

A SLIGHT COLD, if neglected, often attacks the lungs. BROWN'S BRONCHIAL TROCHES give sure and immediate relief. Sold only in boxes. Price 25 cts.

Wells' "Rough on Corns." 15c. Ask for it. Complete, permanent cure. Corns, bunions.

Walnut Leaf Hair Restorer

Is entirely different from all others. It is as clear as water, and, as its name indicates, is a perfect Vegetable Hair Restorer. It will immediately free the head from dandruff, restore gray hair to its natural color, and produce a new growth where it has fallen off. It does not in any manner affect the health, which Sulphur, Sugar of Lead and Nitrate of Silver preparations have done. It will change light or faded hair in a few days to a beautiful glossy brown. Ask your druggist for it. Each bottle is warranted. JOHN D. PARK & SONS, Wholesale Agents, Cincinnati, Ohio, and C. N. CRITTENTON, N. Y.

THE VOICE OF THE PEOPLE. No Family Dyes were ever so popular as the Diamond Dyes. They never fail. The Black is far superior to logwood. The other colors are brilliant. Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt

USE Redding's Russia Salve in the house and use Redding's Russia Salve in the stable. Try it.

Skinny Men. "Wells' Health Renewer" restores health and vigor, cures Dyspepsia.

FOR sore feet, swollen joints, sprains, corns or bunions, use St. Patrick's Salve.

"WE always keep Piso's Cure for Consumption in the house."

ALL pain in the nervous system, wind colic, cramps, &c., cured by Samaritan Nervine.

"YOUR Samaritan Nervine cured my son's fits," writes Mrs. S. M. Parkhurst, of Girard, Mich.

Flies, roaches, ants, bed-bugs, rats, mice, crows, cleared out by "Rough on Rats." 15c.

ONE dozen small bottles of Swift's Specific (S. S. S.) cured me sound and well of a bad Scrofulous affection which had baffled all treatment, including Hot Springs.
J. H. RAIFF, Denver, Col.

Stinging, irritation, all Kidney and Bladder Complaints, cured by "Buchu-Paiba." $1.

Hale's Honey of Horehound and Tar

Relieves coughs very quickly. Pike's toothache drops cure in one minute.

SWIFT'S Specific (S. S. S.) has cured me of a long-standing case of Eczema, which has resisted all sorts of treatment.
REV. W. J. ROBINSON,
N. Ga. Conference.

ST. JACOBS OIL
TRADE MARK

[1]

THE GREAT
GERMAN REMEDY
FOR PAIN.
CURES
Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica
Lumbago, Backache, Headache, Toothache, Sore Throat, Swellings, Sprains, Bruises, Burns, Scalds, Frost Bites, And All Other BODILY PAINS and ACHES.
Sold by Druggists and Dealers everywhere. Fifty Cents a bottle. Directions in 11 Languages.
THE CHARLES A. VOGELER CO.
(Successors to A. VOGELER & CO.) Baltimore, Md., U. S. A.

CATARRH ELY'S CREAM BALM

HAY-FEVER

ELY'S CREAM BALM when applied by the finger into the nostrils, will be absorbed, effectually cleansing the head of catarrhal virus, causing healthy secretions. It allays inflammation, protects the membrane of the nasal passages from additional colds, completely heals the sores and restores taste and smell. A few applications relieve. A thorough treatment will positively cure. Agreeable to use. Send for circular. Price 50 cents by mail or at druggists. Ely Brothers, Druggists, Owego, N.Y.

HOSTETTER'S
CELEBRATED

STOMACH
BITTERS

As an invigorant, Hostetter's Stomach Bitters has received the most positive endorsement from eminent physicians, and has long occupied a foremost rank among standard proprietary remedies. Its properties as an alterative of disordered conditions of the stomach, liver and bowels, and a preventive of malarial diseases are no less renowned. For sale by Druggists and Dealers, to whom apply for Hostetter's Almanac for 1884.

REMINGTON
Standard Type-Writer.
No one having much writing to do can afford to be without it.
Send for new Illustrated Pamphlet with testimonials.
Wyckoff, Seamens & Benedict,
NEW YORK, CHICAGO, BOSTON,
PHILADELPHIA, WASHINGTON, ST. LOUIS.

I CURE FITS!
When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post-Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you.
Address DR. H. G. ROOT, 183 Pearl St., New York.

DR. HORNE'S ELECTRIC BELT
Cures Nervousness, Rheumatism, Paralysis, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Kidney, Spine and Liver diseases, Gout, Asthma, Heart Disease, Dyspepsia, Constipation, Erysipelas, Catarrh, Piles, Epilepsy, Impotency, Dumb Ague, Prolapsus Uteri, Diabetes, etc. RUPTURE CURED BY ELECTRICITY. Only Electric Truss in the world. Agents wanted in every town. Send for Circular. Dr. W. J. HORNE, Inventor, 191 Wabash Av. Chicago, Ill.

OPIUM and WHISKY HABITS cured at home without pain. Book of particulars sent free. B. M. WOOLLEY, M.D., Atlanta, Ga.

AGENTS Coin Money by selling Dr. Chase's Family Physician and Second Receipt Book. $2. Address A. W. HAMILTON & CO., Ann Arbor, Mich.

Young Men learn Telegraphy here and we will give you a situation. Circulars free. VALENTINE BROS., Janesville, Wis.

Sure Cure for Epilepsy or Fits in 24 hours. Free to poor. DR. KRUSE, 2844 Arsenal St., St. Louis, Mo.

Good Pay for Agents. $100 to $200 per mo. made selling our fine Books & Bibles. Write to J. C. McCurdy & Co., Cincinnati, O.

INVALIDS
Suffering with obstinate Nervous, Chronic and Blood Diseases, desiring to learn of the Great Modern Discovery,
DR. SCOTT'S
Coca, Beef and Iron
(With Phosphorus,)
So successfully used after all other methods have failed in the curing of Brain, Heart and Nervous Diseases, should send stamp for The Messenger of Health. Address
CHAS. W. SCOTT, M. D., Kansas City, Mo.

THE GREAT NERVOUS ANTIDOTE.
Coca, Beef and Iron
(With Phosphorus,)
Is sold by all Druggists at $1.00 per Bottle.

SAMARITAN NEVER FAILS. NERVINE
IS UNFAILING AND INFALLIBLE IN CURING Epileptic Fits, Spasms, Falling Sickness, Convulsions, St. Vitus Dance, Alcoholism, Opium Eating, Scrofula, and all Nervous and Blood Diseases.
☞ To Clergymen, Lawyers, Literary Men, Merchants, Bankers, Ladies and all whose sedentary employment causes Nervous Prostration, Irregularities of the blood, stomach, bowels or Kidneys, or who require a nerve tonic, appetizer or stimulant, Samaritan Nervine is invaluable.
☞ Thousands proclaim it the most wonderful Invigorant that ever sustained a sinking system. $1.50 per bottle. The DR. S. A. RICHMOND MEDICAL CO., Sole Proprietors, St. Joseph, Mo.
THE GREAT NERVE CONQUEROR.
Sold by all Druggists.
LORD, STOUTENBURG & CO., Agents, Chicago, Ill. (18)

HOP PLASTER
This porous plaster is absolutely the best ever made, combining the virtues of hops with gums, balsams and extracts. Its power is wonderful in curing diseases where other plasters simply relieve. Crick in the Back and Neck, Pain in the Side or Limbs, Stiff Joints and Muscles, Kidney Troubles, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sore Chest, Affections of the Heart and Liver, and all pains or aches in any part cured instantly by the Hop Plaster. ☞ Try it. Price 25 cents or five for $1.00. Mailed on receipt of price. Sold by all druggists and country stores. Hop Plaster Company, Proprietors, Boston, Mass.
LAME BACK

☞ For constipation, loss of appetite and diseases of the bowels take Hawley's Stomach and Liver Pills. 25 cents.

AGENTS make over ONE hundred per cent. profit selling the Reflecting Safety Lamp which can be sold in every family. Gives more light than three ordinary lamps. Sample Lamp sent for fifty cents in stamps. We have other household articles. Send for circulars. FORBEE & MAKIN, Cincinnati, O.

PISO'S CURE FOR CONSUMPTION
CURES WHERE ALL ELSE FAILS. Best Cough Syrup. Tastes good. Use in time. Sold by druggists.

CONSUMPTION.
I have a positive remedy for the above disease; by its use thousands of cases of the worst kind and of long standing have been cured. Indeed, so strong is my faith in its efficacy, that I will send TWO BOTTLES FREE, together with a VALUABLE TREATISE on this disease, to any sufferer. Give Express and P. O. address. DR. T. A. SLOCUM, 181 Pearl St., New York.

PATENT Or No PAY!
Interferences conducted. Assignments prepared. Copy of any patent issued since 1866 sent for 25 cents. Illustrated book of patent law FREE. W. T. FITZGERALD, Attorney at Law, 1006 F Street, Washington, D.C.

AGENTS WANTED everywhere to sell the best Family Knitting Machine ever invented. Will knit a pair of stockings with HEEL and TOE complete in 20 minutes. It will also knit a great variety of fancy-work for which there is always a ready market. Send for circular and terms to the Twombly Knitting Machine Co., 163 Tremont Street, Boston, Mass.

PILES "Anakesis" gives instant relief, and is an infallible cure for Piles. Price $1, from druggists, or sent prepaid by mail. Sample free. Ad. "ANAKESIS," Makers, Box 2416, New York.

Rupture!
"WHITE'S PATENT LEVER TRUSS" is a perfect instrument for the cure of Hernia. [illegible] Pamphlets free. Special rates to the trade. Address WHITE'S PATENT LEVER TRUSS CO., 711 Broadway

"THE BEST IS THE CHEAPEST."
SAW MILLS, ENGINES THRESHERS, HORSE POWERS,
(For all sections and purposes.) Write for Free Pamphlet and Prices to The Aultman & Taylor Co., Mansfield, Ohio.

PATENTS promptly procured in a manner [illegible] American Patent Agency, 188 Fifth Street, Cincinnati, Ohio.

HAIR Wholesale and retail. Send for price-list. Goods sent C. O. D. Wigs made to order. E. BURNHAM, 71 State Street, Chicago.

FREE By return mail. Full Description Moody's New Tailor System of Dress Cutting. MOODY & CO., Cincinnati, O.

$65 A MONTH and BOARD for three live Young Men or Ladies in each County. Address P. W. ZIEGLER & CO., Philadelphia.

County Rights of a valuable and useful patent almost given away. Send stamp for drawing and particulars. Add. W. A. BRUNNER, Farmersburgh, Ind.

$250 A MONTH. Agents wanted. 90 best selling articles in the world. 1 sample FREE. Address JAY BRONSON, Detroit, Mich.

AGENTS WANTED Entirely NEW. The Brightest Thoughts, Choicest Selections and Biographies of over 100 of the best Authors. Words That Burn, or TRUTH & LIFE ILLUSTRATED. J. H. CHAMBERS & CO., St. Louis, Mo.

It is a well-known fact that most of the Horse and Cattle Powder sold in this country is worthless; that Sheridan's Condition Powder is absolutely pure and very valuable. Nothing on Earth will make hens lay like Sheridan's Condition Powder. Dose, one teaspoonful to each pint of food. It will also prevent and cure
MAKE HENS LAY
CHICKEN CHOLERA, Hog Cholera, &c. Sold everywhere, or sent by mail for 25 cents in stamps. Also furnished in large cans, for breeders' use, price $1.00; by mail, $1.20. Circulars sent FREE. I. S. JOHNSON & CO., Boston, Mass.

An Open Secret.
The fact is well understood that the MEXICAN MUSTANG LINIMENT is by far the best external known for man or beast. The reason why becomes an "open secret" when we explain that "Mustang" penetrates skin, flesh, and muscle to the very bone removing all disease and soreness. No other liniment does this, hence none other is so largely used or does such worlds of good.

Delicate and Feeble Ladies.
Those languid, tiresome sensations, causing you to feel scarcely able to be on your feet; that constant drain that is taking from your system all its former elasticity; driving the bloom from your cheeks; that continual strain upon your vital forces, rendering you irritable and fretful, can easily be removed by the use of that marvelous remedy, Hop Bitters. Irregularities and obstructions of your system are relieved at once, while the special cause of periodical pain are permanently removed. None receive so much benefit, and none are so profoundly grateful and show such an interest in recommending Hop Bitters as women.

Feels Young Again.
"My mother was afflicted a long time with Neuralgia and a dull, heavy, inactive condition of the whole system; headache, nervous prostration, and was almost helpless. No physicians or medicines did her any good. Three months ago she began to use Hop Bitters with such good effect that she seems and feels young again, although over seventy years old. We think there is no other medicine fit to use in the family."—A lady, in Providence.

BRADFORD, PA., May 8, 1875.
It has cured me of several diseases, such as nervousness, sickness at the stomach, monthly troubles, etc. I have not seen a sick day in a year, since I took Hop Bitters. All my neighbors use them. MRS. FANNIE GREEN.

$3,000 Lost.—"A tour of Europe that cost me $3,000, done me less good than one bottle of Hop Bitters; they also cured my wife of fifteen years' nervous weakness, sleeplessness and dyspepsia." R. M., Auburn, N. Y.

High Authority.
Hop Bitters is not, in any sense, an alcoholic beverage or liquor, and could not be sold for use except to persons desirous of obtaining a medicinal bitters.
GREEN B. RAUM, U. S. Com. Intern'l Rev.

SOUTH BLOOMINGVILLE, O., May 1, '79.
SIRS—I have been suffering ten years and I tried your Hop Bitters and it done me more good than all the doctors.
MISS S. S. BOONE.

Baby Saved!
We are so thankful to say that our nursing baby was permanently cured of a dangerous and protracted constipation and irregularity of the bowels by the use of Hop Bitters by its mother, which at the same time restored her to perfect health and strength.—The Parents, Rochester, N. Y.

GAIN
Health and Happiness.
How? DO AS OTHERS HAVE DONE.
Are your Kidneys disordered?
"Kidney Wort brought me from my grave, as it were, after I had been given up by 13 best doctors in Detroit." M. W. Deveraux, Mechanic, Ionia, Mich.
Are your nerves weak?
"Kidney Wort cured me from nervous weakness &c., after I was not expected to live."—Mrs. M. M. B. Goodwin, Ed. Christian Monitor Cleveland, O.
Have you Bright's Disease?
"Kidney Wort cured me when my water was just like chalk and then like blood." Frank Wilson, Peabody, Mass.
Suffering from Diabetes?
"Kidney-Wort is the most successful remedy I have ever used. Gives almost immediate relief." Dr. Phillip C. Ballou, Monkton, Vt.
Have you Liver Complaint?
"Kidney-Wort cured me of chronic Liver Diseases after I prayed to die." Henry Ward, late Col. 69th Nat. Guard, N. Y.
Is your Back lame and aching?
"Kidney-Wort, (1 bottle) cured me when I was so lame I had to roll out of bed." C. M. Tallmage, Milwaukee, Wis.
Have you Kidney Disease?
"Kidney-Wort made me sound in liver and kidneys after years of unsuccessful doctoring. Its worth $10 a box."—Saml Hodges, Williamstown, West Va.
Are you Constipated?
"Kidney-Wort causes easy evacuations and cured me after 16 years use of other medicines." Nelson Fairchild, St. Albans, Vt.
Have you Malaria?
"Kidney-Wort has done better than any other remedy I have ever used in my practice." Dr. R. K. Clark, South Hero, Vt.
Are you Bilious?
"Kidney-Wort has done me more good than any other remedy I have ever taken." Mrs. J. T. Galloway, Elk Flat, Oregon.
Are you tormented with Piles?
"Kidney-Wort permanently cured me of bleeding piles. Dr. W. C. Kline recommended it to me." Geo. H. Horst, Cashier M. Bank, Myerstown, Pa.
Are you Rheumatism racked?
"Kidney-Wort cured me, after I was given up to die by physicians and I had suffered thirty years." Elbridge Malcolm, West Bath, Maine.
Ladies, are you suffering?
"Kidney-Wort cured me of peculiar troubles of several years standing. Many friends use and praise it." Mrs. H. Lamoreaux, Isle La Motte, Vt.
If you would Banish Disease and gain Health, Take KIDNEY-WORT
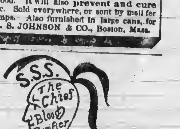
THE BLOOD CLEANSER.

ABSOLUTELY THE BEST. WILSON'S LIGHTNING SEWER!
Two thousand stitches a minute. The only absolutely first-class Sewing Machine in the world. Sent on trial. Warranted 5 years. Send for Illustrated Catalogue and Circular. Agents Wanted. THE WILSON SEWING MACHINE CO., Chicago or New York.

CANCER INSTITUTE.
Established, 1872; Incorporated, 1880. For the Cure of Cancers, Tumors, Ulcers, Scrofula and SKIN DISEASES, without the use of knife or loss of blood, and little pain. FOR INFORMATION, CIRCULARS AND REFERENCES, address DR. F. L. POND, Aurora, Kane Co., Ill.

Free Information About The South-West.
Kansas, Colorado, Utah, New Mexico, Arizona, California and Old Mexico offer the best field for Farmers, Fruit-Growers, Stock Raisers, Capitalists, Merchants, Miners and Mechanics of all trades. Maps, papers and pamphlets, giving detailed information mailed free on application to C. B. SCHMIDT, Commissioner of Immigration, A. T. & S. F. R. R., Topeka, Kansas.



S.S.S.
The Chief Blood Purifier
For full Particulars write
The Swift Specific Co.
Atlanta Ga.

DRY TETTER.
For years I was afflicted with Dry Tetter of the most obstinate type. Was treated by many of the best physicians; took quantities of mercury, potash and arsenic, [illegible] JAMES DUNNING, Louisville, Ky.
Our treatise on Blood and Skin Diseases mailed free to applicants. THE SWIFT SPECIFIC CO., Drawer 3, Atlanta, Ga.

GROCERS My immense success in SELLING CRACKERS [illegible] Send for samples. A. L. BAUMAN, Dayton, O.

PATENTS NO PATENT, NO PAY! R. S. & A. P. LACEY, Patent Attorneys, Washington, D. C. Full instructions and Hand-Book of Patents sent free.

WHEN WRITING TO ADVERTISERS please say you saw the advertisement in this paper.